GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, SEP. 23, 1847. [No. 27 & 28.

"Truth will prevail."

ZION'S REVEILLE,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

TREATISE ON THE SPIRITUAL COVENANT MADE WITH ABRAHAM.

BY JOHN E. PAGE.

(Continued from No. 26.)

NAME IMPLIES PRIESTHOOD.

Having found that the terms "priesthood," "authority" and "sent" are synonymous in their signification, when used in an ecclesiastical sense, we now proceed to notice the term "name" in its bearings in the same sense. We shall offer it as being of the same import and synonymous with the other terms just referred to. In common things the term name is significant of distinction by which one thing is distinguished from another, as mountain, hill, river, creek, brook, &c., &c.; but when used in reference to an official act it signifies the RIGHT, POWER and AUTHORITY by which the act is performed, and from what source it was derived.

For example, suppose Mr. A. was sent by the President of these United States as a national minister to transact business with the Queen of Great Britain, his diplomatic credentials received direct from the President would be his introduction to said Queen, and significant of Mr. A.'s relation to the President by whom he was "sent," and the "authority" by which he would act in discharging the duties of that functionary. Then suppose it should happen in the course of time that Mr. A. should have a successor in that office, could Mr. B. succeed Mr. A. by merely pocketing Mr. A.'s diplomatic credentials? We answer, most emphatically, NO! The immediate act of the President would be as indispensably necessary to authorize Mr. B. as in the case of A.

The above supposed case is sufficiently illustrative of every other official capacity known in the civilized world relative to every civil and military office. No succession in office is considered valid or legal but that which is derived from the same source and by the same means as its predecessor was. If any man or men are appointed to an office of honor or profit by the sovereign or parliament, President or Congress, Governor or assembly, or by the elective franchise, so must their successors be appointed.

So with every private and moral organization known among men. There is no such thing known as an organization of a kingdom without officers, consequently there must be some way adopted to constitute those offices and by the same means keep them up in succession; and to attempt to assume an office in any organization created by the power and will of men is considered an usurpation and an imposition on the community.

So also it is with the church and kingdom of God. It recognizes in its organization a "priesthood," and the different grades of the priesthood constitute the legal "authorities" of said church or kingdom.

As all officers in any kingdom or state exercise authority in the name of the king or state, so all officers in the kingdom of Christ must exercise authority in the name of Christ. As no man can act in the name of any king without an appointment immediately from him or from some authorized officer under him, so no man can act in the priesthood, that is in the name of God, without an appointment immediately from God, like that of Moses, or from an authorized priesthood under him, like that of Aaron, who was called by the mouth of the prophet.

PRIESTHOOD IN THE APOSTOLIC CHURCH.

According to the history of the New Testament, under the apostolic administration, the church authorities were distinguished by the following names: "Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors, Teachers, Bishops and Deacons." As far as the duties of the above named officers of the church required them to act in the "NAME of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost," it becomes necessary that the Father, Son and Holy Ghost should have immediate and direct action in the case in order to qualify those men to act in legal righteousness. The twelve first men that were the first called and "endued" with that legal "priesthood" or "authority" to act in the "name" of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost were Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip, Bartholomew, Thomas, Matthew, James, the son of Alpheus, Lebbeus, Thaddeus, Simon and Judas. Read Mat. x. 2, 3, 4. Judas Iscariot betrayed his Lord into the hands of murderers, and himself came to a dreadful end; the other eleven received the following command and commission:—

Mat. xxviii. 19, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;

20. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen."

Mark xvi. 14, "Afterward he appeared unto the eleven, as they sat at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief, and hardness of heart, because they believed not them which had seen him after he was risen.

15. And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.

16. He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.

17. And these signs shall follow them that believe: In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues;

18. They shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover.

19. So then after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God.

20. And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following. Amen."

I ask, did the commission above quoted fully authorize those eleven above named persons to discharge the duties demanded in the commission? I answer, emphatically, NO. Why? says one.—Because they had only as yet received the sanction of the Son, the sanction of the Father and Holy Ghost had not yet been given.

Acts i. 4, "And (Jesus) being assembled together with them, commanded them that they should not depart from Jerusalem, but wait for the promise of the Father, which, saith he, ye have heard of me.

5. For John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence.

8. But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you: and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth."

Luke xxiv. 46, "And (Jesus) said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day:

47. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name (authority) among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem.

48. And ye are witnesses of these things."

St. John xiv. 15, "If ye love me, keep my commandments.

16. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever;

17. Even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you."

St. John xvi. 13, "How beit, when he, the Spirit of truth is come he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will shew you things to come.

14. He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

15. All things that the Father hath are mine: therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you."

The above texts show clearly by what means those eleven apostles received the sanction of the Father and Holy Ghost as well as the son. For a second person to "receive POWER" from a first person to act in his "name" it is indispensably necessary that the first should communicate such "power" direct of himself by some established precedent ordained of himself.

We have found above that the established precedent by which men are called to the holy priesthood as ministers of salvation to a dying world, is by direct revelation. Here is the precedent:—

Heb. v. 4, "No man taketh this honor (priesthood) to himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."

Aaron was called by revelation. If, then, "the promise of the Father" had not been communicated to the eleven men whom Jesus called to the ministry of the christian religion, they would have died a natural death at Jerusalem. But, acording to the "promise," not many days after the ascension of the Lord Jesus Christ the "baptism of the Holy Ghost" was realized by those to whom it was promised at Jerusalem, it was there and then the "servants" of God began to execute the duties of their high and responsible "priesthood" or "authority;" which had not only been conferred on them by the Son, but by the Father and the Holy Ghost that authorized them to "preach" and "baptize" in the "name" of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. Read Acts ii.

It was at Jerusalem the signs began to follow those that believed the apostles' testimony, as appears in the case of the healing of the lame man.

Acts iii. 11, "And as the lame man which was healed held Peter and John, all the people ran together unto them in the porch that is called Solomon's, greatly wondering.

12. And when Peter saw it, he answered unto the people, Ye men of Israel, why marvel ye at this? or why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?

13. The God of Abraham and of Isaac, and of Jacob, the God of our fathers hath glorified his Son Jesus; (with the high priesthood, Heb. v. 5;) whom ye delivered up, and denied him in the presence of Pilate, when he was determined to let him go.

14. But ye denied the Holy One and the Just, and desired a murderer to be granted unto you,

15. And killed the Prince of life, whom God hath raised from the dead; whereof we are witnesses.

16. And his name, (priesthood,) through faith in his name, (priesthood,) hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know: yea, the faith which is by him, (the lame man,) hath given him this perfect soundness in the presence of you all."

Acts iv. 6, "And Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem.

7. And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name have ye done this?

8. Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel,

9. If we this day be examined of the good deed done to the impotent man, by what means he is made whole;

10. Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name (power, authority or priesthood) of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye crucified, whom God raised from the dead, even by him doth this man stand here before you whole."

Let the reader notice that the term "power," as used in the above texts, is synonymous with the term "name," they being both synonymous with the terms "priesthood," "authority," &c., &c.

FALSE PRIESTHOOD.

Mat. vii. 21, "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22. Many will say to me in that day, (of judgment,) Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity."

The above last quoted texts clearly show that there will be certain characters who, at the day of judgment, will plead that they have done many mighty works in the "name" of Jesus Christ, unto whom the Lord will profess that he "never knew them." In what sense did the Lord not know them? Certainly the Lord knows every man as his own created being as a man. In that case it must be understood that the saying, "I never knew you," only applies to such as the Lord never called to the priesthood by direct revelation.

As we have found clearly that the Lord has not adopted any other means to call any person to the priesthood but by revelation, I ask how much short does the text come of embracing all those who profess to be ministers of Christ, who say that the gift of direct revelation is passed and gone? and by so saying frankly confess that they were never called of the Lord to the important function which they have assumed. Oh! what a scene it will be when the "many" or multitudes of contradictory sectarian heretical ministers stand before Christ, to answer before him for assuming to themselves that which God never conferred on them—themselves being their own accusers by the doctrines they have taught.

SUCCESSION IN THE PRIESTHOOD OF THE APOSTOLIC CHURCH.

Having shown forth in a clear light the signification and bearing of the term "name," we now proceed to show how the succession of the priesthood or gospel "ministry" was kept up as far as the New Testament gives it to us.

The following texts show the calling of Paul to the "holy priesthood;" from whose writings we have selected so many arguments to sustain us in our position relative to "eternal life" through the holy priesthood. It will be recollected that the apostle Paul was not one of the twelve first called, but one of their successors in the apostolic office, as was Barnabas also.

Gal. i. 11, "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man.

12. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ.

15. But when it pleased God, who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,

16. To reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the heathen; immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood.

20. Now the things which I write unto you, behold, before God, I lie not."

1 Tim. i. 12, "And I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that he counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry;

13. Who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief."

Acts ix. 15, "But the Lord said unto him, (Ananias,) Go thy way: for he (Paul) is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name (priesthood) before the Gentiles, and kings, and the children of Israel.

16. For I will shew him how great things he must suffer for my name's (priesthood's) sake.

17. And Ananias went his way, and entered into the house; and putting his hands on him, said, Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost."

The following texts will show how and where Paul and Barnabas received their ordination. They will also prove that Paul and Barnabas did not pocket the credentials of their predecessors to warrant their call to the ministry, as the pretended ministers of the gospel have had to do for many centuries, since the gift of direct revelation has not been known among them.

Acts xiii. 1, "Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2. As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereunto I (the Holy Ghost) have called them.

3. And when they (the prophets) had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, (Saul and Barnabas,) they sent them away.

4. So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus."

Thus we see clearly that it was as necessary that the "Holy Ghost" should have something to say on the subject of Saul and Barnabas' call to the ministry of the gospel as it was for their predecessors; and that the "laying on of the hands" only was not sufficient to constitute them ministers of Christ, to administer in the "NAME of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

We next notice the call of "Timothy" (the "son" of Paul in the gospel) to the ministry in the holy priesthood of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

1 Tim. i. 18, "This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare."

iv. 13, "Till I (Paul) come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee (Timothy) by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery, (assembly of ministers.)

15. Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all.

16. Take heed unto thyself, and unto thy doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

2 Tim. i. 6, "Wherefore I (Paul) put thee (Timothy) in remembrance, that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my HANDS.

7. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

That the gift of prophecy is revelation none will dispute.

We find by the above that both the gift of revelation and the laying on of the hands were employed in the setting apart of Timothy to the ministry, in the "gift" of the holy priesthood, to save himself and others that heard him. We next refer to Titus.

Titus i. 5, "For this cause left I (Paul) thee (Titus) in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee."

There is nothing said of Titus in particular relative to his calling or ordination, but we do learn that Paul authorized Titus to "ordain other elders in every city." It is rational to presume that Titus was called and ordained in the same manner that Timothy was, because Paul says to the Hebrews, that "no man taketh this honor to himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." And as Aaron was called by revelation, so also should Titus and all those whom he should "ordain" to the eldership of the holy priesthood in the christian church be called by direct revelation. That the elders of the christian church were called by the Holy Ghost is evident by the words of Paul to the elders of Ephesus, while assembled at Miletus.

Acts xx. 17, "And from Miletus he (Paul) sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church, (and said unto them,)

27. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.

28. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

29. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

30. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."

For the calling of Matthias to fill the place of Judas, who by transgression fell, read Acts i. 16 to 26 inclusive. For the calling of seven men to minister in things of the tables, read Acts vi. 1 to 6 inclusive.

Much more might be quoted from the scriptures to show that a true and valid succession of the christian ministry was kept up by the gift of prophecy, or in other words, by the gift of revelation and the laying on of the hands of those who were before placed in the holy calling of the priesthood by the same means and measures.

We challenge the whole world of divines to show us a warrant by the word of God to the contrary. The idea of a succession of the true christian priesthood independent of the gift of revelation IS NOT FOUND between the lids of the "HOLY BIBLE."

IMMUTABILITY OF THE GOSPEL PRIESTHOOD.

In order to drive a nail in a sure place and give it an eternal clinch that can neither be drawn or broken, we offer the following remarks: There is not a word in the scriptures to show that the gospel of Christ is in any degree changeable or mutable; but there are many texts to show to the contrary. We give the following for a sample:—

Gal. i. 6, "I (Paul) marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ, unto another gospel:

7. Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10. For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ."

The fact is, there is neither if or and or proviso in the case to show that the gospel of Christ is anything more or less than it was at the beginning for the salvation of mankind. It is, therefore, worth all it presents itself to be to Abraham, Moses, the prophets, Christ and the apostles, and all that should believe on Christ through the preaching of the word by those who are called to the holy priesthood.

If the gift of eternal life is not a knowledge of the Father and the Son by revelation, then the words of Christ, which we quote below, mean nothing to the understanding of mankind. And if they do not mean all they say to us of the nineteenth century, then they did not mean anything in the first century.

John xvii. 1, "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3. And this is LIFE ETERNAL, that they might KNOW THEE the only TRUE GOD, and JESUS CTRIST, whom thou hast sent."

Mat. xi. 27, "All things are delivered unto ME of my FATHER; and NO MAN KNOWETH the SON, but the FATHER: neither KNOWETH any man the FATHER, save the SON, and HE to whomsoever the SON will REVEAL him." Luke x. 22.

The above quotations are the words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who will not change his purposes, and scheme of life and salvation, to suit the caprice or ignorance of any man or community.

Therefore, he that saith—The day of revelation is past and gone—virtually saith that the "gift" of "ETERNAL LIFE" is no longer accessible by man—such, therefore, know not God, but deceive themselves and the world, and are of Anti-Christ, "denying the only LORD GOD, and our LORD JESUS CHRIST." Jude, 4th ver.

Eph. i. 17, "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation in the knowledge of him: (God:)

18. The EYES of your understanding being enlightened; (by revelation;) that ye may KNOW what is the hope of his calling, and what the RICHES of the GLORY of his INHERITANCE in the SAINTS."

By this we find that the Light, Understanding and Knowledge of the Wisdom and glory of the inheritance in the Saints, is only attainable by Revelation.

Therefore, a religion divested of the gift of Revelation, is nothing more or less than a form without power, a shadow without substance; leaving the great family of mankind to be "tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine," got up by the "cunning craftiness" and will of men, who wield a religious influence in the world to feed the few and starve the many, "supposing that gain is godliness."

For the sake of popular opinion men can cringe and crouch to the sayings of men that the day of the calling of christian ministers to the holy priesthood by revelation is entirely passed and gone. Such a course of conduct will pass well before men who love the honor of men more than the honor that comes from God. But at the judgment of Christ let such look for the full demonstration of the following saying of Christ:—

Mat. vii. 21, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

26. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus."

Thus we see clearly that it was as necessary that the "Holy Ghost" should have something to say on the subject of Saul and Barnabas' call to the ministry of the gospel as it was for their predecessors; and that the "laying on of the hands" only was not sufficient to constitute them ministers of Christ, to administer in the "NAME of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost."

We next notice the call of "Timothy" (the "son" of Paul in the gospel) to the ministry in the holy priesthood of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

1 Tim. i. 18, "This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare."

iv. 13, "Till I (Paul) come, give attendance to reading, to exhortation, to doctrine.

14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee (Timothy) by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery. (assembly of ministers.)

15. Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all.

16. Take heed unto thyself, and unto thy doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee."

2 Tim. i. 6, "Wherefore I (Paul) put thee (Timothy) in remembrance, that thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee by the putting on of my HANDS.

7. For God hath not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind."

That the gift of prophecy is revelation none will dispute.

We find by the above that both the gift of revelation and the laying on of the hands were employed in the setting apart of Timothy to the ministry, in the "gift" of the holy priesthood, to save himself and others that heard him. We next refer to Titus.

Titus i. 5, "For this cause left I (Paul) thee (Titus) in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I had appointed thee."

There is nothing said of Titus in particular relative to his calling or ordination, but we do learn that Paul authorized Titus to "ordain other elders in every city." It is rational to presume that Titus was called and ordained in the same manner that Timothy was, because Paul says to the Hebrews, that "no man taketh this honor to himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." And as Aaron was called by revelation, so also should Titus and all those whom he should "ordain" to the eldership of the holy priesthood in the christian church be called by direct revelation. That the elders of the christian church were called by the Holy Ghost is evident by the words of Paul to the elders of Ephesus, while assembled at Miletus.

Acts xx. 17, "And from Miletus he (Paul) sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church, (and said unto them,)

27. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God.

28. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

29. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock.

30. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."

For the calling of Matthias to fill the place of Judas, who by transgression fell, read Acts i. 16 to 26 inclusive. For the calling of seven men to minister in things of the tables, read Acts vi. 1 to 6 inclusive.

Much more might be quoted from the scriptures to show that a true and valid succession of the christian ministry was kept up by the gift of prophecy, or in other words, by the gift of revelation and the laying on of the hands of those who were before placed in the holy calling of the priesthood by the same means and measures.

We challenge the whole world of divines to show us a warrant by the word of God to the contrary. The idea of a succession of the true christian priesthood independent of the gift of revelation IS NOT FOUND between the lids of the "HOLY BIBLE."

IMMUTABILITY OF THE GOSPEL PRIESTHOOD.

In order to drive a nail in a sure place and give it an eternal clinch that can neither be drawn or broken, we offer the following remarks: There is not a word in the scriptures to show that the gospel of Christ is in any degree changeable or mutable; but there are many texts to show to the contrary. We give the following for a sample:—

Gal. i. 6, "I (Paul) marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ, unto another gospel:

7. Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

8. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

9. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.

10. For do I now persuade men, or God? or do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ."

The fact is, there is neither if or and or proviso in the case to show that the gospel of Christ is anything more or less than it was at the beginning for the salvation of mankind. It is, therefore, worth all it presents itself to be to Abraham, Moses, the prophets, Christ and the apostles, and all that should believe on Christ through the preaching of the word by those who are called to the holy priesthood.

If the gift of eternal life is not a knowledge of the Father and the Son by revelation, then the words of Christ, which we quote below, mean nothing to the understanding of mankind. And if they do not mean all they say to us of the nineteenth century, then they did not mean anything in the first century.

John xvii. 1, "These words spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee:

2. As thou hast given him power over all flesh, that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him.

3. And this is LIFE ETERNAL, that they might KNOW THEE the only TRUE GOD, and JESUS CTRIST, whom thou hast sent."

Mat. xi. 27, "All things are delivered unto ME of my FATHER; and NO MAN KNOWETH the SON, but the FATHER: neither KNOWETH any man the FATHER, save the SON, and HE to whomsoever the SON will REVEAL him." Luke x. 22.

The above quotations are the words of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, who will not change his purposes, and scheme of life and salvation, to suit the caprice or ignorance of any man or community.

Therefore, he that saith—The day of revelation is past and gone—virtually saith that the "gift" of "ETERNAL LIFE" is no longer accessible by man—such, therefore, know not God, but deceive themselves and the world, and are of Anti-Christ, "denying the only LORD GOD, and our LORD JESUS CHRIST." Jude, 4th ver.

Eph. i. 17, "That the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of Glory, may give unto you the Spirit of Wisdom and Revelation in the knowledge of him: (God:)

18. The EYES of your understanding being enlightened; (by revelation;) that ye may KNOW what is the hope of his calling, and what the RICHES of the GLORY of his INHERITANCE in the SAINTS."

By this we find that the Light, Understanding and Knowledge of the Wisdom and glory of the inheritance in the Saints, is only attainable by Revelation.

Therefore, a religion divested of the gift of Revelation, is nothing more or less than a form without power, a shadow without substance; leaving the great family of mankind to be "tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine," got up by the "cunning craftiness" and will of men, who wield a religious influence in the world to feed the few and starve the many, "supposing that gain is godliness."

For the sake of popular opinion men can cringe and crouch to the sayings of men that the day of the calling of christian ministers to the holy priesthood by revelation is entirely passed and gone. Such a course of conduct will pass well before men who love the honor of men more than the honor that comes from God. But at the judgment of Christ let such look for the full demonstration of the following saying of Christ:—

Mat. vii. 21, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23. And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

26. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand:

27. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

28. And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine.

29. For he taught them as one having authority, (priesthood,) and not as the scribes;" (who had no priesthood, nor yet the gift of revelation; we having before shown that the terms priesthood and name are synonymous.)

But to the righteous, who have dug deep into the things that pertain to their salvation, and built on the rock of revelation, the following scriptures will most gloriously apply:—

Mat. xvi. 15, "He (Jesus) saith unto them, (disciples,) But who say ye that I am?

16. And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art Christ, the Son of the living God.

17. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon-Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my father which is in heaven.

18. And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon this rock (revelation) I will build my church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, (the rock or revelation.)

19. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven."

Mat. vii. 24, "Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: (not Peter, but revelation.)

25. And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock," (revelation.)

Who is so blind in the eyes of their understanding as not to see that in the present character of the religious world the people are as much puzzled relative to the doctrine of Christ and the plan or scheme of salvation as were the people in the day of Christ to determine who Christ was in person, as is manifest in the following scriptures:—

Mat. xvi. 13, "When Jesus came into the coasts of Cesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

14. And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets."

All of those differences of views and opinions concerning the person of Christ was for the want of a revelation from God on the subject. By this we account for all the differences of views and opinions concerning the gospel of Christ—it is for the want of a revelation on the subject.

(To be continued.)

DISCUSSION.

In the REVEILLE of July 8th (Vol. 2 No. 16) we gave out a CHALLENGE to "the RELIGIOUS WORLD, and the CHAMPIONS of EACH and EVERY SECT," to meet us "in fair open discussion on any and every important point of difference between them and us"—"the Bible being the standard of truth in points of doctrine, and standard historic works in points of fact." With this challenge we stated six negatives and ten affirmatives on which, as well as ANY OTHER important point of difference, we called on them to come forward in defence of their own faith, and give a reason for rejecting ours. From that challenge and the editorial note following it we repeat the following remarks:—

This paper will be open to both sides of every question which shall be a subject of discussion. We call upon our opponents, also, to open the colums of their papers for the investigation of truth, and if they decline doing so we can only attribute it to a fear that they shall be unable to satisfy their own followers of the soundness of their positions.

The tendency of the age is to investigation. Infidelity is triumphing over the follies of man-made systems of religion. It is useless and wicked to attempt to uphold that system which will not stand the test of reason and revelation. The choice of the religious world now lies between an unphilosophic skepticism and primitive unadulterated christianity. There is nothing in all your systems which answers to the sayings of the Bible, and though the true faith stands a bulwark against every form of infidelity, no other can resist it.

Come, now, do you fear investigation? Are you afraid of truth? Is there any danger in a more thorough study of the scriptures?—Leaders, do you fear that you cannot defend your doctrines to the satisfaction of your own followers? When you represent our faith as supremely ridiculous, and your own as the most profound truth, do you fear that a patient investigation will result in the triumph of our cause? Then come forward, and take up the gauntlet for your faith.

Men of small intellect and narrow prejudices may say they will not stoop to debate with a Mormon; but men of intellectual worth, though they may pass by in silence positions they dare not contend against, will give no such reason for it. They know that no man lessens his fame by successfully opposing error.

We have just received the following reply from a Catholic, Mr. CHARLES RAFFERTY. We shall publish Mr. RAFFERTY's letter entire, and our reply to it, and anticipate much good from the discussion. This response proves that he at least believes their doctrines defensible. But do the Catholics dare risk the trial? Will they let our articles go before THEIR PEOPLE? They are willing the Mormons should read their articles against Mormonism. But are they willing for the Catholics to read our articles against Romanism? Will they publish the discussion in their papers? We shall see.

Wellsville, August 30th, 1847.

MESSRS. STRANG AND PAGE:—

Gentlemen,—In looking over the Reveille of the 6th of June [July 8th] I discovered a challenge to the christian world, especially to the ministers of the different denominations. But, Sirs, As I am neither minister nor prophet, but a common layman and an earnest inquirer after truth, I would respectfully propose to your consideration a few serious questions in a spirit of charity. Sirs,—You admit to take the Bible as the standard of truth in points of doctrine, and standard historic works in points of fact.

The church was edified, (that is, established,) walking in the fear of the Lord, and was filled with the consolation of the Holy Ghost. Acts xix. 31. [Acts ix. 31.]

Having received the Holy Ghost, the Apostles boldly ventured to announce the resurrection of Christ to the people of Jerusalem, whom they astonished by their miracles. The effect of St. Peter's first sermon was the conversion of three, that of his second of five thousand souls.

The number of the faithful daily augment; while these same proselytes, regenerated by baptism and renewed by the spirit of God, presented to the world a spectacle of the most disinterested and perfect virtue. The Apostles afterwards preached the word of God with like success throughout Judea, Galilee and Samaria.—From thence they passed into Syria and Asia Minor; into Macedon and Greece, every where publishing the gospel; that is to say, the happy news of man's redemption by the death of Jesus Christ.—St. Peter carried the faith to Rome, at that time the seat of empire and the capital of the world. Out of this variety of nations, so different in manners and habits, was, in a short time, formed a new people—a society of men—united together by the profession of the same faith—by the perpetuation of the same sacraments, and by the communication of the same spiritual treasures—having the same invisible head, Jesus Christ, and the same visible head, St. Peter, first Pope and bishop of Rome.

This society or body is called the church of Christ, which was formed and established in defiance of every obstacle. The Jews opposed the gospel with inveterate obstinacy, and persecuted with rage the disciples of Jesus Christ. The heathens, on the other side, were eager to suppress it. The most distinguished among them, from the beginning, declared themselves its enemies. But in spite of the fury of the Jews, and the opposition of the heathens; in spite of the power of the Emperors, and the still stronger influence of corruptions and prejudice, the Apostles estabished the church of Christ in all the countries of the universe, and sealed with their blood the truths they taught. Those whom they had chosen to succeed them in the functions of their ministry imitated their zeal, and, in like manner, transmitted to their successors the faith intrusted to them, which, by these means, has from age to age been handed down to our days in its original purity. This, Sirs, is the short declaration of the hope which is in us through the faith established by Christ and his Apostles. And now, Sirs, it is not you and I that are at issue, but Jesus Christ and you. To St. Peter alone our blessed Savior said, Thou art Peter, (a rock,) and upon this rock I will build my church, &c. Matt. xvi. 18.

To St. Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, &c. 19.

To Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not; and thou being once converted confirm thy brethren. Luke xxii. 37. [Luke xxii. 32.]

To Peter our blessed Savior proposed three times the following questions: Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? John xxi. 15, 16, 17; and upon Peter's answer in the affirmative, he tells him twice feed my lambs, and the third time feed my sheep.

Now, Sirs, whose testimony are we to rely upon in the nineteenth century? Jesus Christ and his Apostles, or that of Messrs. Strang and Page, who affirm that the Apostolic church is extinct.

And again, Sirs, here you must observe that orders and mission or jurisdiction are two different things; orders only qualifies a man and makes him a bishop or a priest, but a mission or jurisdiction gives him leave and power to make use of the orders which he has received, and without which mission no bishop or priest can lawfully and validly exercise over others that power which they may possess. So necessary is a lawful mission that Christ declares, that he himself was sent by his father, and he hath sent me. John xii. 29. [John viii. 16.] And he gave me a commandment what I should say and what I should do. John xii. 19. [John xii. 49.]

And addressing his Apostles, he says, As my father has sent me, even so I send you. John xx. 21. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations. Matt. xxix. 19. [Matt. xxviii. 19.] In like manner the Apostles sent others to succeed them, with the power also to send others after them. As St. Paul and Barnabas was sent by the pastors of the church to Antioch, and their doing so was declared to be the work of the Holy Ghost, they sent them away. So they being sent by the Holy Ghost, went into Seleucia. Acts xiii. 3. [Acts xiii. 4.] St. Paul sent Titus, and speaking of the Apostles, he says, How can they preach unless they be sent? Rom. x. 15. St. Clement, whose name is written in the book of life, Phil. iv. 3, says that Christ Jesus received his mission from God, the Apostles received their mission from Christ, and after having received the Holy Ghost and preached the gospel they established bishops and deacons, to whom they communicated the charge which they themselves had received from God.

They established a rule of succession for futurity, in order that in each age, at the death of its pastors, their office and ministry might be regularly handed down to others. This, then, is the door by which the true pastors of Christ's flock must enter, that is, they must be lawfully ordained and sent by the lawful pastors of the church, who have received valid orders and lawful jurisdiction from the lawful successors of the Apostles of Christ; for all who take the priestly office upon themselves without entering by this door are declared by Christ himself to be thieves and robbers. And again, you boast of having drawn into your church two hundred thousand in the short space of seventeen years, and those from the different churches of America and Great Britain. Now, pray, let us know how many Catholics from both or either country you have converted by your doctrine. And again, I will give you a short sketch of the countries where Catholicity is prevalent, should you think it practicable to try to convert them.

The Catholic religion is the established of the several States of Italy, of most of the Swiss Cantons, of Piedmont, of France, of Spain, of Portugal, and of the Islands in the Mediterranean, of three parts in the four of the Irish, of far the greater part of the Netherlands, Poland, Bohemia, Germany, Hungary, and the neighboring provinces, and in those kingdoms and States in which it is not the established religion, the Catholics are very numerous, as in Holland, Russia, Turkey, the Lutheran and Calvinistic States of Germany and England. Even in Sweeden and Denmark several Catholic congregations are to be found. All the great families of Europe are Roman Catholics, as the Protestants themselves are ready to confess, when they say that as his late majesty, King George III., could not espouse a Roman Catholic, he was precluded from intermarrying in any of the great families of Europe.

Now, Sirs, I hope you do not think that this is all the evidence I can adduce for the Apostolic successors of the Catholic church, my space being limited. I would earnestly request you to inform me when the Apostolic church became extinct, or in what book or document I may find the same, as the four gospels with all the scripture prove the contrary. I remain, Sirs, your ob't,

CHARLES RAFFERTY.

MR. RAFFERTY:—

Dear sir,—We shall take up all the important parts of your letter separately, and answer them as truth shall require, each answer immediatly following the statement of yonr position or assertion. We are perfectly aware that the Catholic church is the GIBRALTER of CHRISTENDOM, and that with its pretensions fall all the Protestant Churches, because they were derived from it as a common fountain. Unfortunately for the defence of that Gibralter you use much assertion and little proof.

"St. Peter carried the faith to Rome, at that time the seat of empire," &c. "Having the same visible head, St. Peter, first Pope and Bishop of Rome."

This is mere assertion, to sustain which you have not introduced one word of testimony. It is not merely a question of history, but also of ecclesiastical order, and in both views we shall examine it. It being a mere affirmation of yours, the onus probandi rests on you. Still, if you succeed in making good these assertions, you have not progressed one step in sustaining the claims of the bishops of Rome to supremacy. But if these affirmations cannot be proved, there is a full end of the pretensions of the Romanists. The fountain of their pretended authority is dried up, and the stream must be alike dusty.

Will Mr. Rafferty please tell us where is the proof that Peter was bishop of Rome? Is it in the scriptures? We think they will not prove that he ever visited Rome at all; though it is not improbable that he wore a chain and suffered martyrdom there. It is clear from the scriptures that Peter did not preside over any church in gentile countries till after the council at Jerusalem, A. D. 50. One or two years after that he was at Antioch, Gal. ii. 11, where Paul met him and rebuked him. Long before this the church was planted in Rome. Strangers of Rome received the gospel at Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost. Acts ii. 10. These men must have carried the faith and established the church here on their return. In the year 60, when Paul wrote his epistle to the Romans, that church was famous throughout the world for its faith. Rom. i. 8. Was Peter then its bishop? Assuredly not; for almost the entire sixteenth chapter of that epistle is devoted to personal salutations, and Peter is no where mentioned. Surely Paul could not thus pass by the Pope while he saluted so many. Again: In that epistle Paul acts as an instructor, a RULER set in AUTHORITY over the church. What business had Paul at Corinth to send such an epistle to the Metropolitan church, under the personal presidency of Pope Peter? Can the traveling elders in distant countries thus dictate to the church, which is at the city of Rome, under the immediate presidency of the Pope? Paul visited Rome at a late period of his life, A. D. 64 or 65. Acts xxviii. 16. Writing from Rome to Timothy, he says, "Only LUKE is with me. Take MARK and bring him with thee, for he is profitable to me for the ministry. 2 Tim. iv. 11. Consequently Peter was not at Rome at that time, and surely he was not when Paul was brought before Nero, for he tells us, ver. 16, "at my first answer NO MAN stood with me, but ALL men FORSOOK ME: I pray God that it may not be laid to their charge."

If Peter ever visited Rome at all (which no authentic history shows) it could not have been till about the year 66 or 67, nor till after the date of Paul's epistle to Timothy.

So much for the pretence that Peter presided over the church at Rome, or was bishop or Pope of Rome. Now, what is the evidence that PETER was BISHOP at all? Do you hold the office of BISHOP and APOSTLE the same?

We find that Judas Iscariot was a bishop. Acts i. 20. He was overseer of the temporal concerns of the Apostles, "and had the bag, and bare what was put therein." John xii. 6. By transgression he fell from his "bishopric;" Matthias took his place. Acts i. 26.

No where do we find that St. Peter or any other Apostle was a BISHOP. If you assume that all the APOSTLES were BISHOPS by virtue of their APOSTLESHIP, you assume that there were TWELVE BISHOPS at one and the same time. You say "the Apostles established the church of Christ in all the countries of the universe," and "those whom they had chosen to succeed them in the functions of their ministry IMITATED their zeal, and in like manner transmitted to their successors the FAITH INTRUSTED to them, which, by these means, has from age to age been handed down to OUR days in its original purity." Then, of course, you will assert that, according to the "pure original" on-

DER, there has been twelve Apostles or Bishops at the "visible head" of the Catholic church from the days of St. Peter to this day, or frankly give up the point and openly confess you have transgressed the "pure original" order that was "established" by the first twelve Apostles.

True, Peter received the "keys of the kingdom." Did this constitute him a Bishop, apart from the rest of the Apostles? Why then was Judas Iscariot a Bishop? did he receive the "keys of the kingdom" equal with Peter? if so, where is the proof! Our Lord Jesus Christ told Peter that to him was given power (keys) "to bind on earth and in heaven; to loose on earth and loose in heaven." If twelve Bishops were necessary to bear this authority at one and the same time, it is equally as necessary that twelve Bishops should bear that power or authority in these "our days," in order to keep up a succession in the church in its "original purity." We will press this point until you prove that St. Peter alone, of the twelve Apostles, was Bishop or Pope.

But if we concede to you, what you cannot prove, that Peter was BISHOP, and that he did preside over the church at ROME, you have not yet made the least progress in logically proving that his successors IN THE BISHOPRIC are supreme, or in any sense stand at the head of the CHURCH. What is the Episcopal office? What PRIESTHOOD, or, if you prefer the word, ORDERS does a Bishop hold? A LOCAL PRESIDENCY over the church or churches within some jurisdiction.—Such I believe is the office of a Bishop in every church where it exists at all, except the American Methodist church, which hardly pretends to Apostolic authority or precedent either in order or doctrine. Such certainly is the use of the office of BISHOP in the CATHOLIC church; and with this interpretation, if not a still more limited one, agrees the testimony of scripture.

What is the nature of the APOSTOLIC office? What priesthood or authority does an Apostle hold? A general superintendence of the churches, and a travelling authority throughout the world. The commission to the Apostle Peter and the rest of the eleven was, Go ye into ALL THE WORLD and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark xvi. 15. Matt. xxviii. 19. Luke xxiv. 47. In fulfilling the duties of this commission they did not in any instance stop with the permanent presidency of one church, as do the Bishops of the Roman church in general, and the Pope of Rome in particular. Their lives were spent in traveling from city to city, and from country to country. And though they exercised jurisdiction in ALL the churches, there is not a case on record where any one of them had the particular or local presidency of any.

Paul, as an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, not as Bishop, sent epistles containing instruction and COMMANDMENTS to seven different churches, besides an occasional commandment to the Bishops he had ordained in the churches. Peter also wrote two epistles, by way of COMMANDMENT, 2 Peter iii. 2, to those who were scattered abroad; in each of which he states his authority so to do, not as a Bishop or Pope, but as an Apostle. He is very particular in stating his authority, thus to dictate to the churches. 1 Peter i. 1. 2 Peter i. 1. But he NO WHERE mentions the PAPAL OFFICE as his authority.

Consequently, if we concede to you that Peter both planted the church at Rome and was its Bishop, you have not gained one step in making out that his successors IN THE BISHOPRIC are at the head of the church. And if it be true that the Apostles transmitted to their SUCCESSORS, from age to age till this present time, the faith and order of the church IN ITS ORIGINAL PURITY, then the SUCCESSORS of St. Peter as Bishops of Rome (conceding that the Bishops of Rome are his successors) are subject in THIS AGE to the epistolary COMMANDMENTS of the SUCCESSORS of ST. PETER and ST. PAUL in the APOSTLESHIP. You cannot get over the fact that the church at Rome and its Bishop, Pope or presiding officer by whatever name you please to call him, WAS SUBJECT to the APOSTOLIC AUTHORITY of Peter, Paul and the other Apostles, and not SUPREME. What pertained to the predecessors, both in prerogative and disability, also pertains to the successors.

Peter, as an APOSTLE, held the keys of the kingdom, A. D. 32, Matt. xvi. 19, some two years at least before the church at Rome existed. The exact time of the planting of that church is unknown; but A. D. 60 it was among the most famous churches in the world, and of course must have had a Bishop, Pope or presiding officer.—Not till A. D. 66, if ever, did Peter visit Rome. Consequently, if he ever became Bishop of Rome, he, by virtue of that office, held simply the same mission, jurisdiction and prerogatives as HIS PREDECESSORS in that office held; and transmitted the same, and no more, to his successors in the Bishopric: retaining and TRANSMITTING, UNIMPAIRED and ENTIRE to his SUCCESSORS IN THE APOSTOLIC OFFICE, the KEYS OF THE KINGDOM and the superior prerogatives and priesthood of the Apostleship, which he held LONG BEFORE HE BECAME BISHOP. From this conclusion you cannot escape. Your bands are made strong and writhing is vain.

If you say the Apostolic office has ceased, as do the Protestants, then upon that saying we will nail you like base coin to the wall, that your worthlessness may be known to all men. If the Apostolic office has ceased, then the Apostles DID NOT "transmit the functions of their ministry" and "the faith intrusted to them" "to their successors," "from age to age" "down to our days." If Apostles have ceased to be in the church, then successors of Apostles have ceased to be; for a successor of an Apostle is an Apostle. It is vain to attempt to confound the office of an Apostle with that of Bishop, for they both existed in the church at the same time; possessed different prerogatives, exercised different jurisdiction, and the BISHOPS were subject to the APOSTLES; the Apostle Peter holding the keys of the kingdom while an Apostle, without being Bishop, and Judas at that time being Bishop without holding the keys.

Therefore, it is historically untrue that Peter was "first Pope and Bishop of Rome," if he ever held that office at all, of which there is not the remotest probability. And more: it is theologically untrue that Pope Peter was the visible head of the church; for the Apostle Peter was visible head of the church before Rome had Pope, Bishop, or church. And the visible head remains and continues in the Apostolic, not the Episcopal succession. It is vain to talk of the Apostolic authority of the Bishops or Popes of Rome. Their office is merely Episcopal, not Apostolic. Show us such an officer in the church as PETER was when he received the keys of the kingdom, or you need not talk about a "visible head."

No. 2.

"To St. Peter alone our blessed Savior said, Thou art Peter, (a rock,) and upon this rock I will build my church, &c. Matt. xvi. 18.

To St. Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, &c. 19.

To Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not; and thou being once converted confirm thy brethren. Luke xxii. 37. [Luke xxii. 32.]

To Peter our blessed Savior proposed three times the following questions: Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? John xxi. 15, 16, 17; and upon Peter's answer in the affirmative, he tells him twice feed my lambs, and the third time feed my sheep."

We will concede to you, Mr. Rafferty, some truth in this motley combination of assertions. You have certainly proved that a man may speak much truth and come to no result. You have not so much as told us what conclusion you was looking to, but have left us to infer what you sought to prove; and were it not for your subsequent allusion to our statement, that the "ancient Apostolic church has become extinct," no one could suspect that by these affirmations and references you intended to show the indestructibility of the ancient Apostolic church, or its present existence on earth.—I am perfectly aware that the Romanists constantly quote the saying of Christ, "thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," as full and perfect evidence that the church was founded on Peter, and that it should stand during all time; neither of which propositions are contained in it.

Matt. xvi. 13, "When Jesus came into the coasts of Cesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

14. And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets.

15. He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

16. And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God.

17. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

18. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

19. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsosver thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven."

"Now, had Jesus said, I will build my church upon you, Peter, or, upon you, whose name is Rock," you might well claim that Peter, the man, not the Apostle, much less the Bishop or Pope, was the foundation of the church; and as truly, that he should never die: for Christ tells us expressly that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, (the foundation.) If Peter was the foundation, then, according to the promise of Christ, the gates of hell have not prevailed against him and his faith has not failed; HE IS THE FOUNDATION NOW, and all this talk about successors is nonsense.

"But Jesus, by one of the most demonstrative terms in language, contradistinguishes Peter from the Rock on which his church is built. His words are, 'You are called Rock; and upon this Rock [distinguished from you] I will build my church.' The Greek original is still, if possible, more explicit,—Su ei Petros, kai epi tautee tee Petra; literally, 'Thou art Peter, (Rock,) and upon this the Rock' This, demonstrative of something Peter had said, and contradistinguished from him, not only in construction, gender and case, but by a pronoun alluding to what Peter had said—upon this—what you have declared." Had Christ intended to build the church on Peter, his words would have been, 'Thou art Peter, (Rock,) and upon that Rock will I build my church.'

With this analysis and construction of the language of Christ agrees all scriptural analogy and the fundamental principles of theology. Rock or stone is the proper foundation upon which to erect any building. Now, what is the true foundation of the church?—The REVEALED WORD OF GOD; of which rock, from its imperishability, is a most apt symbol. And by a use as universal as language itself of substituting the producer for the thing produced, all who receive revelations of the word of God for the edification, government, order and doctrine of the church, are called Rocks or stones. In this sense Paul wrote to the Ephesian church, ye "are built upon the foundation of the APOSTLES and PROPHETS, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone." Eph. ii. 20. In like manner Peter not only calls Christ a living stone and a chief corner stone, but others, who received the word, lively stones, a spiritual house and a holy priesthood. 1 Peter ii. 2, 4, 5, 6. Acts iv. 11. Jacob also prophesied of a "shepherd and stone of Israel," who should arise of the tribe of Joseph in the latter days. Gen. xlix. 24. By which scriptures it appears that not only Peter was a stone, (figuratively, the producer being put for the thing produced,) on which the church was built, but that the holy priesthood, who receive the sincere milk of the word; all the Apostles; all the prophets, and the shepherd who shall lead Israel (when God sets his hand a second time to gather them) as Moses led them in days of old, are in like manner stones in the foundation of the church. And Christ is the chief stone among them; the head of the corner in this foundation. These men are all called stones or rocks in the foundation of the church, not because they are individually a proper support for all the other members of the church, but because they are the revealers or producers of the WORD and AUTHORITY of GOD, on which only the true church is built.

Consequently, when Peter received from God a great and important revelation—the grand fundamental fact of that dispensation—not before known among men—Matt. xvi. 17—that Jesus was "the Messiah, the Son of the living God," Christ replied to him, 'Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: my Father who is in heaven hath revealed this to thee: thou art called Peter; and upon this rock (the revelation, not that rock, Peter,) will I build my church.'

This interpretation is further sustained by the words that immediately follow:—"and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."—There is nothing on earth immutable but the law of God. Nought else over which the power of Satan does not prevail. Abraham, the faithful; Moses, who walked with God in the flames; Solomon, whose wisdom triumphed over the nations; Peter, to whom Christ gave the keys of the kingdom of heaven, all sinned; all died.—Even Christ himself, in whom was no sin, stood not against the destroyer. Death, which cometh forth of the gates of hell, prevailed against him. Not till he had gone down to the grave did he obtain the keys of hell and of death. But the word of God standeth forever; against it the gates of hell cannot prevail. It is immutable, unchangeable and eternal. It shall not die.

Such is the foundation which God has laid by the mouth of Apostles and Prophets. On this foundation he has sent the priesthood; from Christ the King, prophet and high priest, after the power of an endless life, down to the youngest lad, to build his church.—And they build thereupon gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, and stubble; but let them take heed how they build thereon: for their work shall be tried as by fire, and the fire shall reveal it. 1 Cor. iii. 10 to 15.

But this foundation standeth sure, and it shall remain when the creeds of men are forgotten, and the churches that adopted them are numbered with things that were, and are not; when the books that contained them have perished, and the language of their writing is spoken no more; "when the Lord shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, (by revelation, Matt. xi. 27, Luke x. 22;) and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ;" 2 Thes. i. 7, 8; when "the inhabitants of the earth shall be burned and few men left;" Isa. xxiv. 6; and they that "have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broken the everlasting covenant," (v. 5,) by perverting the gospel and making it another, shall "be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power;" 2 Thes. i. 9; yea, when 'the heaven shall depart as a scroll when it is rolled together, and every mountain and island shall be moved out of their places;' and the 'great families of Europe into which king George could not marry because they were Catholics,' and the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief men, and the mighty men, and every bondman, and every freeman shall hide themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; crying to rocks and to mountains, fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb;' Rev. vi. 14, 15, 16; then shall that foundation stand unmoved and unshaken; for it is the word of God and it standeth forever.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

NOTE.—Mr. Rafferty is requested to forward his replies as soon as prepared. From the great distance we shall doubtless be ready to publish them as soon as they can arrive. We also request all papers copying or noticing to send us an exchange. [ED.

☞ A large amount of tract printing and a disappointment in getting paper of proper quality, has delayed our issue a few days. By getting out a double No. we are now even with our time.

☞ The Catholic discussion, which we commence in this No., renders it necessary to delay for the present our answer to W.——, as well as "the Social Relations." The next No. will finish what we intend to publish on the "Priesthood," when we hope to resume them.

☞ The press of business at the approach of Conference compells us to omit a proper notice of letters, &c.

☞ The printing of our Hymn Book has been delayed a few weeks to obtain better paper, which we now have, and shall print immediately.

☞ We learn by the Western papers that the persecutions of the saints have been renewed in Lee Co., Iowa. Come here in obedience to the word of God; keep the law of the land, and enjoy peace as God hath promised. A persecution cannot be got up here. A great gang of Apostates backed by the Elkhorn Star, tried the experiment faithfully and made no show at all.

MUSINGS.

Well, reader, how do you like our new head? We think it quite an improvement. We never liked such a break jaw French word as "Reveille." Doubtless a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but some names would not sound well, and we should not like to call a rose by them. Besides, we took an extra dislike to that name in consequence of the bad management of the paper when first called by it. Our little list of excommunications and suspensions will rid us of such work for the future. The clique which Bennett and McLellin together brought into the church, first to quarrel among themselves and then with the church, are departed.

By the way, reader, it is a curious fact that the clique which we recently cut off were constantly accused last fall and winter of a black catalogue of crimes by the Pseudoes who apostatized at that time, but though they had every opportunity they would not bring them to trial or bring any evidence against them. It is equally curious that the two apostacies are now joined in one.

PSEUDOS.

We do not use this name to designate any particular sect of Mormons, but as a common cognomen for all the small parties which have never gained any particular designation. Such of them as we have known have generally accused the church of all common sins, the prophets of many more, and God most of all, for they accuse him of breaking his covenant, appointing false prophets and joining in a conspiracy with wicked men to deceive the people.—Now if these men make good all their accusations, what does it prove? Does it help their pretensions any? Not a whit.

BRIGHAMITES.

The Brighamites first accused Rigdon, and tried him before his inferiors and cut him off. As soon as the movements of Pres. Strang became formidable they commenced accusing him, and have not ceased to accuse him and all who are associated with him.—Last year O. Hyde went to England and published to the saints there that Strang was the associate and friend of Sharp and Williams, the murderers of the prophet, men he has never seen or received a communication from. Simultaneously Sharp published a threat to take the life of Pres. Strang, and when Hyde read it he said, "AMEN." We are not sorry that we never returned their vindictive spirit. Knowing their wickedness better than most others do, we still deprecate the persecutions they suffer. Though they are guilty of many faults, they have a right to be lawfully dealt with. God may use the gentiles as a lash to chastise them for their violation of his word as he did Babylon against Israel of old, but he must punish them in the end for their high handed outrages.

Correspondence of the Rochester Daily Democrat.

THE MORMONS.

FOX LAKE, Dodge Co., W. T., July 8, 1846.

We hear a great deal said now-a-days about the Mormons, and the new Mormon Prophets, and perhaps your readers would be interested with a description of Strang, the person who claims to be the successor to Joe Smith, and who is now building in this Territory a new Mormon City, and collecting a good many followers about him.

Being at Southport last February, I fell in with him there, and heard him preach and had an interview with him, from which I learned that he was formerly a lawyer in Chatauque or Cattaraugus county, N. Y., and removed to Illinois several years ago to take charge as contractor, engineer or something of the kind, of a portion of the Illinois canal; but as its construction was soon suspended, he went to Nauvoo, where he became acquainted with Joe Smith. At that time he was an unbeliever and opposer of the Mormon faith, and contended with Smith for a considerable time, but was at last converted to the faith; and a short time before Smith's death was baptized by him and sent to Wisconsin to select a suitable place for a new Mormon City, as a branch of Nauvuo. While Strang was executing this mission Smith was killed, leaving Strang as his successor. While here he pretends to have had a vision, and a revelation direct from God, confirming his authority as a prophet, and directing him where to establish the new City, and pointing out to him a certain tree, under which were buried three brass plates, on which was written the history of the people who had inhabited this country many years ago and were true believers, but had passed away, to be revived again in the persons of the Latter Day Saints, or Mormons. He says he was commanded to take with him faithful witnesses, and go to the spot indicated and dig up the said brass plates; and as none were 'faithful' but Mormons, he took three or four of them who dug up the plates, while he stood at a little distance from them, and all testify that the plates must have been there a long time, as they examined very carefully and found no indications of the earth having been recently removed, and that Strang did not throw them in while they were digging, and moreover, that he could not have put them there, as they were enclosed in an earthen box, about three feet from the surface of the ground, under a large tree whose roots were all interwoven about it and had never been disturbed, and that on taking said earthen box, which was covered over with a flat stone, out into the open air the stone crumbled and fell to pieces. The plates consist of three small pieces of brass about 2½ inches long by 1¼ inches wide, and about the thickness of a piece of tin, fastened together at one corner by a ring passing through them. One of them is covered on both sides with writing, and the other two on one side only; and having on the other side, one of them a representation of Christ and other devices, and the other a landscape representation of Gardner's prairie, the spot where the plates were found, and the site of the new City. It is near the line between Racine and Walworth counties about 25 miles west of Southport and Racine, and near the village of Burlington.

The writing on the plates resemble a mixture of Hebrew and short-hand or stenography, and is unintelligible of course, though Strang claims to be able to translate it. The location of the new City is a very suitable one, having a tolerable water power, I believe, on White river, a small but very pretty stream—and is in the heart of the country. It is called Voree. I am informed there are now something like a thousand Mormons congregated there, and the number is increasing—many of them coming from Nauvoo.—The greater portion of the Mormons deny Strang's authority, and prefer going to California with the Twelve. Strang says if they refuse to join him, and persist in going to California, they will never reach there, but that 'their bones shall bleach on the plains.'

He teaches a little different doctrine from the Brighamite faith in some respects, and disapproves of their practices, and says they should not feel themselves exempt from our laws because they are God's elect, but should strictly obey them.

In person Strang is rather below the ordinary size, very plainly dressed, red face, bold, prominent forehead, large eyes and mouth, and cheek bones; possesses considerable talent, great shrewdness, an earnest, energetic manner, is very loquacious, speaks very fast and loud when preaching. When preaching he appears like a man trying with all his might to convince others that he had something very important to tell them, and that it was absolutely necessary they should believe it. He is perfectly familiar with the Bible, and very persevering in his efforts to convince others of the truth of particular passages.

On the whole, I should think him well calculated to make converts and get together a large body of people and control them, as he possesses talent, energy and shrewdness, is very pertinacious in argument, and has ready wit. They appear to be an honest, inoffensive people. Yours, &c., MONROE.

"IT IS TRUE IN THEORY, BUT IT CAN NEVER BE PRACTICED."—There is nothing new broached in the moral or physical world, but is met by this rebuff: It is very true in theory, but it is idle to expect it to come into practice. To admit that a thing is true in theory, is to say that it has its foundations in the principles of eternal truth, and then to say it can never be practiced, is to say that human life and human practice are forever to be a lie. Has God made truth but to cheat the senses—to hold up to us a beautiful delusion, which is forever to lure us on, and forever to elude us. It is only cowards who doubt the practicability of truth. Bonaparte said, tell me not that a thing is impossible—nothing is impossible to the mind that dares encounter it. So with these theories. The man of mind and courage never says they are impracticable. He seeks to eradicate the error and the falsehood which prevail in all society around him, and the existence of which is what alone makes the impracticability. To say that these true theories cannot be made practicable, is to say that falsehood is forever to prevail over truth—is to say that evil is forever to prevail over good—and to say that the contest which commenced in Heaven when the world commenced, and which yet continues, between the author of truth and the father of lies, is finally to be won by the latter. Who believes so? Every man who says that a thing is true in theory, but can never be practiced, says so, whether he believes it or not. O, ye of little faith and less consistency, what miserable stumbling blocks you are in the way of progress and reform! When you admit a thing to be true in theory, then rest assured that it is practicable. You must make one of the two great armies which have been striving since the world began; which captain will you enlist under, the Father of truth, or Him of lies? Rest assured, when you will not seek to reduce to practice those theories which you admit to be true, the latter is your Captain, and it is against the former you contend.—Southport Tel.

OCTOBER CONFERENCE.

The semi-annual Conference of the Church will be held at Voree from Wednesday, Oct. 6th, till the following Sunday. Preaching and the administration of the ordinances daily during the sitting of the Conference. It is also expected that the commencement of the Temple of our God will then be made.

Sept. 2d, 1847. JAMES J. STRANG.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, OCT. 7, 1847. [No. 29.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

TREATISE ON THE SPIRITUAL COVENANT MADE WITH ABRAHAM.

BY JOHN E. PAGE.

(Concluded.)

PRIESTHOOD OF MODERN CHRISTENDOM.

We have before us some lengthy articles written on the subject of the succession of the christian priesthood by the church of England, in which they have attempted to show that they enjoy the "exclusive" right to that function.

And how, pray, do they make that appear? Why, by asserting that the English church descended down to the present day from Paul, in England, distinct and aside from the Popes of Rome. And not even once have they appealed to gift of revelation as continuing with them, to give warrant to their claims; they have appealed to the laying on of the hands only for the succession of their claim to the priesthood.

We have before us a lengthy treatise by the Roman Catholic church, in which they make an exclusive claim to the same function as do the English church. And there is no doubt but the Greek church makes the same pretensions.

As for the Methodists, Presbyterians, and many other denominations, we know not that they make any claim to a succession of the priesthood as unbroken from the ancient apostles; so that they do not even deserve a passing notice, as far as the subject of priesthood is concerned. So we will leave them mired in their own ignorance and wilful folly.

And as the world is demanding of us a sign to show that the priesthood is renewed to us, can we not with equal propriety demand of the Catholics, Greek church, and the church of England the same to prove to us that the priesthood has continued with either or all of them. Who will answer?

We have found that the Melchisedec priesthood is one of the most important points in the "spiritual covenant" made to Abraham, and that it was in force in his day; through which he received the sign of circumcision of the heart as its seal, and that too before he received the circumcision of the flesh.

Rom. iv. 11, "That he (Abraham) might be the father (spiritually) of all them that believe, (in Christ and his priesthood, and obey the gospel of Christ, through his authority.)

12. And the father of circumcision (of the heart) to them who are not of the circumcision (of the flesh) only, but (those of the circumcision of the flesh also) who also walk in the steps of that faith of our father Abraham, which he had being yet uncircumcised, (in the flesh.)

13. For the promise, that he (Abraham) should be the heir of the (whole) world, was not to Abraham, or his seed, through the law, (of circumcision of the flesh,) but through the righteousness of faith.

14. For if they (only) which are of the law (of the circumcision of the flesh) be heirs, faith is made void, and the promise made of none effect, (to the gentiles.)

15. Because the law (of circumcision in the flesh) worketh wrath: (to those to whom it belongs, if they do not obey it:) for where no law is, there is no transgression.

16. Therefore it (the promise of the heirship of the world) is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the (spiritual) seed: not to that only which is of the law, (of the circumcision of the flesh,) but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all," (Jews and gentiles who become the spiritual seed of Abraham through the priesthood of the gospel of Christ, the power and strength of the spiritual covenant.)

CONCLUSION.

We have in this brief work shown by the mouth of Christ, Moses, prophets and apostles that priesthood is authority to act in the name of God; that the Melchisedec is the higher priesthood; that it alone holds the power to administer all the ordinances necessary for salvation; that the gospel is the law of the Melchisedec priesthood; that the Melchisedec priesthood is a royal priesthood, and holds the governing power among men by right divine, and that no man can lawfully exercise any of the functions of the priesthood except he is set apart thereunto, not merely by the laying on of hands of those who are in the priesthoood, but by REVELATION OF GOD.

Ho all ye HIRELING PRIESTS! Ho all ye pretenders to the AUTHORITY of God! Ho every one that climbeth up some other way, and cometh NOT into the priesthood BY THE GATE that God hath appointed! Ho all ye SECTARIAN SHEPHERDS who were NOT called by REVELATION! Ho all ye whom Christ denominates THIEVES and ROBBERS! John x. 1: Repent and be baptized for the REMISSION of your SINS, or ye shall all be damned. Had you acted in the NAME of your fellow man, without his word to authorize you, as you have acted in the NAME OF GOD WITHOUT HIS WORD authorizing you, you would ALL be shut up in PRISON as FORGERS and SWINDLERS. Ye who have called PROPHETS and APOSTLES IMPOSTERS for testifying that they were called by revelation, be ashamed; for the God to whom ye pray and the Lord whom you acknowledge are their own witnesses that ALL who are NOT THUS CALLED ARE IMPOSTERS.

Therefore repent of all your evil speaking and all your accusations of God's servants, and all your USURPATIONS of the priesthood; believe the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ as he revealed it and be baptized in the NAME of the FATHER, and the SON and the HOLY GHOST, by one who has RECEIVED AUTHORITY FROM THEM to baptize in THEIR NAME, or God will say unto you, depart from me ye workers of iniquity, I NEVER KNEW YOU.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 3.

(Continued from last week.)

"They established a rule of succession for futurity, in order that in each age, at the death of its pastors, their office and ministry might be regularly handed down to others."

"They must be lawfully ordained and sent by the lawful pastors of the church, who have received valid orders and lawful jurisdiction from the lawful successors of the Apostles of Christ."

I repeat these points or assertions in your letter, not so much to controvert what they do contain as to show what essential particulars they are defective in. To the end, that, having ascertained the whole law, we may try the Roman Catholic church by that standard.

I shall agree with you that a rule of succession in the priesthood was established, not by the Apostles alone, but by Prophets and Apostles in all ages, which rule is eternal and immutable, having originated in the decree of God and been in use both during and before the Apostolic age.

And in ascertaining and applying that rule, I believe all men will agree in subscribing to the following axioms:—

1st. The successor of an Apostle, is an Apostle. The successor of a Prophet, is a Prophet. The successor of a High Priest, is a High Priest. The successor of a King, is a King. The successor of a Bishop, is a Bishop. The successor of an Evangelist, is an Evangelist. The successor of a Deacon, is a Deacon; and in general, that the successor to him who holds any particular priesthood or office, holds the same priesthood or office as the predecessor.

2d. That whatever pertained to the predecessors in any priesthood or office, both in prerogative and disability, pertains also to the successors.

3d. That whatever acts were requisite to confer the priesthood on the predecessors, the SAME ACTS are requisite to CONFER IT on the SUCCESSORS.

4th. That whatever amount and kind of authority was necessary to confer the priesthood on the predecessors, the same is requisite to confer it on the successors, ad infinitum.

I do not intend in this number to take up your distinction between "orders" and "jurisdiction," nor at any time to question the existence of a real difference between priesthood and jurisdiction, though I conceive you have failed altogether of truly stating it; but shall now proceed to ascertain from the scriptures what that rule of succession in the priesthood is.

Heb. v. 4, "No man taketh this honor (the priesthood) unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.

5. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he (the Lord) that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee," (glorified him, that is, appointed him to the high priesthood.) And,

iii. 2, "Christ was faithful to him that appointed him, as also Moses was faithful," (to him that appointed him.)

John xx. 21, Christ says, "MY FATHER hath SENT me."

Mr. Rafferty will perceive by these scriptures that he stated but half the rule when he said they must be lawfully ordained by the pastors. For as Aaron was called of God by the mouth of Moses, who held as high authority as that to which he called him, being both Prophet and High Priest, after the order of Melchisedec; so no man lawfully taketh the priesthood unto himself, but he that is called by REVELATION OF GOD, by the mouth of one lawfully in the priesthood and holding as high authority as that to which he calls. Because of this rule Christ was called of God himself, who said unto him, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." It is in accordance with this fact that he says, "My Father hath sent me," and that Paul says of him, "Christ glorified not himself to be made an high priest." And all they that assume to act in the priesthood or to administer any ordinance in the name of God without being called by revelation as was Aaron, (as well as ordained by the hands of those who have the authority,) do what CHRIST himself did not and DARE NOT do.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

POST OFFICE ABUSES.

PONTIAC, MICH.—We recently had occasion to notice a shameful transaction in the return of one of our papers from Pontiac, with such facts as to bring the abuse directly home to that post office.—(See No. 24.) We have since received from the P. M. at that place the following explanation:—

Post Office, Pontiac, Oakland Co., Mich., Sept. 11, 1847.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ZION'S REVEILLE:"—

SIR,—My attention has been direected to an article in your paper of the 2d inst., in which you state that a copy of the Reveille of date July 8, bearing the post mark of this office of July 1, had been returned to you "with some most scurrilous stuff written thereon," which you suspect was the work of "some very large boy in this office." In answer, I can only say that I have no knowledge of the matter of which you complain. If the facts are as you represent, and you will return the paper and envelope to this office, I pledge you my honor that every effort shall be made to ascertain and prosecute the person who placed it in the office. It is possible it was done by or with the knowledge of a young man who was then clerk in this office, but who has since left. At all events it was such a violation of law as will subject the author, if ascertained, to the penalty of five dollars.

Very respectfully,
Your ob't serv't,
S. W. DENTON, P. M.

We have not returned the paper and envelope for the reason which appears below. If any such "young man" has left Pontiac, we wish first to ascertain his name and present residence and obtain a specimen of his hand writing. We wrote to Mr. Denton for this information Sep. 17th, and as yet have got no answer. Does he fear he has written once too often? The paper returned contains, among other things, not fit to print, the following: "from one that was once in high standing with you, but has made a fortune out of you, and noughs enough to leave you." We find by looking over the old records that one S. W. Denton was once an elder. It is said that he did make a pretty little fortune out of the saints, and settle in Michigan. Laying the P. M.'s letter and the returned paper side by side, we perceive a curious likeness in the hand writing. Whether the P. M. has disguised his hand, but left the most perfect likeness in some few particulars, as every disguise does, or the "young man" has attempted to counterfeit it, and succeeded but partially, as counterfeiters usually do, we leave for the future to disclose. It evidently lies between the two.

SMITHBORO,' N. Y.—We regularly send two papers to Smithboro,' Tioga Co., N. Y., directed to Isaac Dudley and Josiah Howell, who have both paid in advance and would not therefore be very apt to refuse them. Recently these papers were returned by the P. M. at Smithboro, the day they arrived there, with the notice, "these papers are not taken out of the office," but no reason given, as the post office regulations require in such cases. On one of the papers was written, in the same hand writing, "keep these damb things to home, you damb Mormons." We have reported these matters to the Post Office Department, and if the rule adopted in all like cases is carried out in this, the P. M. at Smithboro' will receive notice that the Department have no further occasion for his services.

We send copies of this No. to the public officers at Pontiac, as well as the post masters in the principal villages in Oakland Co., Mich. Also to every post master in Tioga Co., N. Y., and intend to follow up the matter till the guilty are exposed effectually, and the innocent clearly exonerated. [ED.

EXTRACTS OF LETTERS.

Pittsburgh, June 27th, 1847.

PRES. STRANG:—

RESPECTED BROTHER,—I take this occasion to address a few lines to you, as I thought it important that you should know that "Scrutator's" angel has recently favored this region of country with a visit, professedly to confirm the appointment of one David Whitmer to the successorship of Joseph Smith in the Seer's office; but really to boost himself into notoriety, and get subscribers to the Ensign of Liberty. I will give you some specimens of his statements here and in Brighton, that you may judge of his work and its probable influence upon the minds of the saints here—premising that in Brighton as well as in this place he had the privilege of saying all that he would to the saints. We gave up our meeting to him in both places, that he might deliver his message. I have not room to give but a few of the many queer and contradictory statements of the immortal "Rigdonite Hushi."

I cannot be mistaken (said he) about the history of the church, for I have a good memory. But when asked how he came to join G. M. Hinkle, and afterwards, by special revelation, go 500 miles to join S. Rigdon, if he witnessed the appointment and ordination of David Whitmer to the Seer's office? his answer was—I forgot it.

June 28.

DEAR BRO.—Having a few moments to write this morning, I will conclude by giving a brace of examples of what we call tall teaching, —"Joseph Smith had no power or authority to lead the church after 1834."

"No man can understand the Book of Doctrine and Covenants unless familiar with all the circumstances under which it was written."

The above are fair samples of his teaching. The effect of such teaching with the brethren of this place has been only to strengthen and confirm them in the truth. There is an old saying that, "Give the Devil rope enough and he will hang himself." We gave McLellin all the rope he asked for, and he has snarled himself up so badly that Oliver's revelations about Voree will never be able to straighten him up. I would advise the saints, whenever Mc. or any of the "immortal trio" at Kirtland visit them, to keep them talking. Only encourage them to talk and they will talk the "truth all to pieces."

I had almost forgotten to tell you something that will amuse you not a little. Mc. brought B. Winchester up to prove that S. Rigdon had been a great scoundrel and the principal instigator to fraud in Kirtland, &c., &c. Benjamin quite innocently fell into the trap, and testified for Mc. as to Rigdon's rascality, and to David's appointment, &c. Now all the brethren here had heard Ben. testify in the hall on 6th street that he had lived in R.'s family for years, and knew him to be a man of most scrupulous virtue, &c.; he also had to forget, so Mc. said, D. W.'s appointment, which he had witnessed; when reminded by the brethren of his connection with S. Rigdon —— —— The whole farce was worth going to see. The brethren have had a hearty laugh at Benjamin's and the great "Hushi's" expense. This reminds me that the little "Hushi"—Frazier, of Elizabeth—is writing a book which he says will astonish this generation.

I meet with the branch here once in two weeks. All the old valuable members except 2 or 3 are with us heartily. We have the gifts and spirit among us richly. God bless you. Amen.

J. M. GREIG.

Knoxville, Ill., September 20, 1847.

Brother Strang,—I have thought some time of writing to you, but not knowing how to write myself I am dependent on others, which has caused this delay.

I had thought of coming to Voree in the spring and make bricks, and build you a house and brother John E. Page also. I expect I shall bring a yoke of cattle, cart, horse and wheelbarrows and all the implements for making brick. Thompson A. Rude and Rebekah love the saints and long to be with them, and being old and well stricken in years seems to be a great preventative; but hope the way will soon open for us to enjoy the society of the saints.

I send you in this letter $3,00 to pay for the paper, and want you to send me a hymn book and any other writing which you think I ought to have, and I will send you the money for the same. Write to me if you have time, and I give me your mind on the things which I have mentioned and anything else which you think profitable for me to know. Give my respects to Bro. Page and all inquiring friends.

I am yours with respect,

THOMPSON A. RUDE.

This letter shows the right spirit, and the plan which Bro. Rude has devised is a good one, and by faithfulness he cannot but be prospered. Brick making, like every honest business, is good here. We will not, however, ask him to build two houses for his brethren, but as the rich have generally apostatized, it would be a great charity if he would help build one for elder Page, who has labored long, and has not where to lay his head.]Ed.

Boston, September 8th, 1847.

Pres. Strang:—

My Dear Brother,—I received your very kind letter of Aug. 16th, and I am happy. I have come to a firm conclusion. I shall unfurl the banner of the cross. Spread, by God's help, the glorious principles connected with it, and will never desert it until the kingdom is established; until I see the beautiful fabric raised in all its grandeur, majesty and simplicity; until I see the last stone brought up and raised before all the people with rejoicings and shouts of grace, grace unto it.

I long to be with you, and, if necessary, suffer with you, that I may also reign with you. I am determined to nail the flag to the mast and never give up, but to seize hold of the work at once and live.

The whole tenor of your letters please me much. I like them.—I love the kind spirit that is breathed in them. Believe me.

I remain your friend and brother,

G. J. ADAMS.

P. S. Bro. Wm. Skimmings wishes to be remembered to you. He is a fine and true man. One upon whom you can rely through sunshine or through clouds. Amid thickest darkness and hardest troubles he is true as the needle to the pole. If I forget him may my right hand forget her cunning. He expects not earthly praise. his hopes, his aims are higher. He looks for a better reward.

Yours, &c., G. J. A.

Antwerp, September 12th, 1847.

Dear Brother,—I once more attempt to write a few lines to you. The saints are very stupid in this branch. I have seen elder Brownson and he says that the saints in other places are getting into the spirit of the Lord, and have glorious meetings. Here is one dollar for you, Bro. Strang. I want you should write me a letter. Your paper states that we must send food for your family if we want you to write to us.

Respectfully yours,

James J. Strang, Pres. of the church. HYRUM G. HALL.

This must be from a poor man. The rich do not understand such things. They know not what it is to go hungry, in order to get a little paper to write a letter, as we do. God bless brother Hall.—We shall certainly write him. [Ed.

Brush Hill, Ill. Sep. 22d, 1847.

Mr Editor:—

Sir,—I send you one dollar in this letter which will pay for Zion's Reveille the rest of the year. You may think strange that I suberibe only for six months at a time. It is simply this.—I know not how long I shall remain here. As I am the only one here that belongs to the church, I feel as though I could not do without your paper for one week. You scold at us for writing, complain of us if we do not.

Mrs. LURENA CLARK.

Now, that is not what we intend. It is not short pointed buisness letters like this that we scold about, but these long four page letters about nothing—especially when they come from non-subscribers.—We like a letter right to the point, like this, if it contains but one line.

[Ed.

MUSINGS.

GREATNESS.

A pleasing idea it is that the best men of the age, in their several stations, have in various ways shown a peculiar friendship for the church. When J. E. Page and O. Pratt went to Washington to seek redress for the grievances of the saints, they found a warm friend and an advocate of justice in the venerable John Q. Adams. The brave J. J. Hardin, (who recently fell covered with honor in the Mexican war,) both on that occasion and in many perils since, has extended his influence for the defence of the saints. Col. Doniphan who has, in his recent march of some five thousand miles through hostile countries, opposed alternately by overwhelming numbers, trackless deserts, vast rivers and desolate, broken mountains, never before passed by man, erected to his fame a monument more enduring than the language he speaks, and plucking laurels from the head of Zenophen, to whom twenty centuries had given no rival, even in that act come short of himself, when, nine years since at Far Wast, Mo., he stood between a Court Martial of the State of Missouri and the life of prophet Joseph.

THE PICTURE.

A sad scene that was. What does the saint not feel, looking back upon it. One who was there has just shown us a picture of the "fall of Far West." In front is the Court Martial in Gen. Clark's tent; before them are Joseph and six other saints receiving sentence of death. In the rear, to the left, are a large band of the mob beating out the brains of John Carey, (the first man ever confirmed in the church by J. E. Page, in his first mission to Canada, June, 1836.) To the right of the tent is Col. Doniphan remonstrating against the sentence of the court as unjust and murderous, and ordering his regiment off the ground. Beyond him is Dr. McLellin declaring with an oath that they ought to die. What a picture of human passion! The reckless hate of the mob; the blood-thirstiness of a few apostates joined to them, some of whom still look cautiously around as though they yet feared the prisoners in the jaws of death. The hardy desperation of some and the cool fortitude of others. Sure there is no hate like late changed love.

A singular fact it is that no party or individual has ever yet undertook to review and answer the arguments contained in the 1st Voree Herald. Every set of pretenders which have sprung out of the church avoid that—not one has ever undertook to answer it.—They know they cannot. Accusations any body can make, but there is no argument that will stand against so plain truth.

THE TELEGRAPH.—In the last No. of the Gospel Herald is an article from a recent No. of the Southport Telegraph, which we think a saint could not improve. There is a manly independence and a freedom from bigotry in the writings of Mr. Sholes which few men have the talent to sustain themselves in. Success to him. If there is a man in the community who loves truth and hates bigotry, let him sustain one who dares speak out in defiance of political associations, hoary headed hypocrisy, and the tyranny of debased public opinion. The single No. from which we extract is worth the year's subscription.

NORWEGIAN PAPER.—We are in the regular receipt of a Norwegian paper published in Racine Co., out of which we get a pleasant weekly feast, though the nut is hard to crack. There are now in Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa, twenty Norwegian settlements and sixteen of them within the limits of this Territory. They embrace a population of from fifteen to twenty thousand; frugal, industrious, honest, law-loving and law-abiding citizens. The principal settlement in Wisconsin is on Koskonong prairie, where there are nearly a thousand Norwegian families. In the towns of Muskego, Waukesha county, and Norway, Racine county, which adjoin each other, the Norwegian settlers number nearly 1000. In Rock county, there are a thousand and upwards, and many in Jefferson, Dodge, and other Northern counties.

TO THE SAINTS:—"Though I fall I shall rise again." I have been engaged for more than a year in the constant work of the ministry, separate more than a thousand miles from the Presidency.—During that time I have received occaional comunications from men of talent, holding respectable standing in the church, on subjects to which I can allude only with pain, and contrary to the instructions of the President of the church. To these I have offered a certain share of opposition, but I still feel that I have come short of my duty in the premises, and that by not sufficiently resisting evil it did not flee from me. For this I have now subjected myself to the censure of the priesthood for the first time in my life, having been a member of the church over sixteen years, I feel myself redeemed by the vigor and justice of the administration from a thousand perils.

Voree, Sept. 10th, 1847. EBENZER PAGE.

☞ Bro. E. Page has shown us several letters sent to him by different individuals contaiuing confessions for injuries done and attempted, on WHICH HE HAS PAID POSTAGE. Well, now, if that is not mending the matter! He says he will forgive them all, but does not want any more letters of that kind. Good confessions are worth from five to ten cents a-piece, but having preached a year without salary it is not exactly convenient to pay for them now. So say we; and we advise the individuals concerned to send him something handsome, and pay the postage next time. Don't be afraid of doing it too soon.

AN IMPROPRIETY REBUKED.

It is, or rather ought to be, well known to all the saints in the church that the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints does not acknowledge bnt one Prophet or law-giver to the church at one and the same time, and that the church is commanded not to receive as revelations or commandments any teachings but those given through him whom God has appointed. The lesser or minor authorities are only authorized to teach those revelations and commandments that come through the source referred to above. From the beginning of this church until now it has been more or less annoyed with a certain class of men under some grade of priesthood or other, who have over reached the duties devolving on them, and have laid many stumbling blocks in the way of many inquiring minds by pretending to preach things which have been (they say) revealed to them.—We have so often and repeatedly been put under the necessity of removing those stumbling blocks referred to above, that our patience is worn almost thread bare.

No longer since than last Sunday, the 3d inst., we heard a certain elder say "that it had been revealed to him that dominion would be given to the saints, as a kingdom, within two years." Now we wish to say to that elder, and all others, that we feel it our imperative duty to "sharply rebuke" such a course of conduct, and also to say we do not believe his declaration to be true. And why? 1st. Because he is not the proper authority through whom God should "reveal" to the church so important and sudden event. 2d. We do not believe the saints will possess the "dominion of the kingdom of God" until the "setting" of Adam, "the ancient of days," and the "house of Jacob shall possess their possessions." Read Dan. vii. 9 to 27 inclusive. Also, Obadiah 17 to 21 inclusive.

It is a great impropriety in the character of an elder to step out of the range of the word of the Lord, already made public. When the Lord makes bare his arm in the literal gathering of the Jews to Jerusalem and brings Israel from the "north country," and the house of Joseph as a mass receive the gospel, then let the saints begin to look for the sudden advent of the ancient of days, and the saints to possess the "dominion" of the kingdom of God.

JOHN E. PAGE,
Pres. of the Twelve.

PROCLAIMING AGAINST INIQUITY.

It is a common saying among apostates, "we will proclaim against iniquity." None is more likely to cry "stop thief" than he who commits the deed, and none shouts "murder" louder than the midnight assassin. So it is with apostates. They are always crying "iniquity," while they themselves reject the order of God, according to their own testimony, which they said was given by the power of the Holy Ghost. Of such the Apostle says, (Heb. vi. 4 to 6,) "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, And have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, If they shall fall away, to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame."

Brethren, be not of those who watch for iniquity and draw back unto perdition, but be of those who believe unto the saving of the soul; remembering that it is those only who endure unto the end that will be saved. G. W.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

PRES. STRANG:— Voree, August 13th, 1847.

DEAR SIR,— * Joseph was a prophet of the living God, and established the church of Christ, and gave the law and commandment which the saints must observe and keep in order to obtain an inheritance in the kingdom of our God. I believe also that Joseph brought forth the principles by which the church of anti-Christ will be governed when it is organized and established on the earth. For I contend that both kingdoms will be organized, that both the righteous and the wicked may be gathered to their own place. * Now, sir, I consider it necessary that the principles by which both of these kingdoms is to be governed should be brought forth, that life and death may be set before this people. * Joseph said that God is true, the constitution of the United States is true, the Bible is true, and the Book of Mormon is true, &c., &c. * With respect,

JAMES M. ADAMS.

P. S. Since I commenced writing the above I have been informed that you have been circulating the report that two individuals, that are on the island, stated that I was a believer in the spiritual wife doctrine when they left here. I boldly say, as you have said in the Reveille, that the man nor woman does not exist that ever heard me say that I had any faith in that system, further than what I stated to you last spring. * * J. M. A.

We have not circulated any such report. We do not thus try questions of divine truth. By the way, will Mr. Adams tell all the world "how he believes the spiritual system." It would not make him quite as popular as telling how wicked Prophets are. We don't wish to tell on him, but it ain't pretty, Mr. Adams, to cry stop thief to the honest, while you hug the prey. By the way, is it not a new notion in religion that the constitution of the United States is of equal authority with the Bible and Book of Mormon? [ED.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, OCT 14, 1847. [No. 30.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 3.

(Continued from last week.)

The reasonableness and truth of this rule will appear by the following illustration:—All officers of the State of Ohio act in the name of the people of the State. By what authority do they thus act? By an authority given by the people. The people of the State must speak to make any man an officer, authorized to act in their name. They must not only speak, but they must speak according to a fixed and known law of their own adoption. And he who assumes to act in any office in their name without being authorized, is a usurper, and liable to punishment. Further: Whatever act of the people is necessary to make one man Governor or magistrate the SAME ACT is necessary to confer the same office on any other man. The first Governor receives his office by a revelation of the will of the people, as expressed by their votes. Every subsequent Governor must receive his office in the same manner.—The first set of magistrates in any town or jurisdiction are elected by the people of their district, and every subsequent magistrate or set of magistrates must be elected in the same manner, or they cannot hold the office. Moreover, the first Governor was not only elected to the office, that is, called to it by a revelation of the will of the people, but after being so elected he was required to take an oath of office; and until he had taken that oath he was not Governor. So of every subsequent Governor. And every magistrate is in like manner both elected and qualified by an oath. The rule applies equally to successor and predecessor, and no man can hold the office without both an election and an oath of office.

The fact that the first set of manistrates were called and elected by a revelation of the will of the people, and qualified by oath of office, to act in the name of the people as magistrates, does not authorize them to confer the magisterial authority on others, by means of an oath of office alone, who have not been thus elected and chosen by a like revelation of the will of the people. So entirely sacred do nations and communities hold this rule, that if the best man in the nation should, without an election, simply receive the oath of office from some other magistrate and then enter upon the business of trying criminals, though all his official acts might be circumspect and his sentences eminently just, yet he himself would be a criminal by the law, and would subject himself to even severer punishment than the culprits brought before him, for inflicting just punishment on them.

If it be so eminently necessary that those who act in the name of the people have authority from them and be duly qualified, how much more that those who act in the name of God shall be both truly called and regularly qualified. As a Catholic, you are bound to acknowledge that God has conferred upon the priesthood the power of remitting sins. As HE confers the power, it must be exercised in HIS NAME. But if the administrator is not authorized to act in his name, then the act is void, and the sins are retained, or rather left unforgiven. And Paul says, no man taketh this authority unto himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. Aaron was called of God by revelation, for God spoke unto Moses, the prophet, and told him to put Aaron in the priests' office.

The fact that the priesthood were called by revelation of God and ordained by an authority above them, both before and during the Apostolic dispensation, as clearly appears by the Old and New Testaments as the fact that the officers of the several States of the Union are elected by the people and qualified by oath appears by the books of history and law in our nation—and the man who, after reading the scriptures, should assert that any one could come into the priesthood without both revelation and ordination is equally as blind as he who pretends that he can attain the magisterial authority without both election and oath. Oh fools, and slow of heart to understand the law of God.

That this may more clearly appear, I present a few cases of the conferring of the priesthood as there recorded.

Numbers, xxvii. 15, "And Moses spake unto the Lord, saying,

16. Let the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation,

17. Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd.

18. And the Lord SAID unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him;

19 And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation: and give him a charge in their sight.

20. And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel may be obedient.

22. And Moses did as the Lord commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation.

23. And he laid his hands upon him, and gave him a charge, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses."

Deut. xxxiv. 9, "And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses."

In this account we have both the essential facts in conferring the priesthood clearly stated, to wit: that Joshua was called by revelation, and that he was ordained by the laying on of hands. And, in accordance with the fundamental principle that the less is blessed of the greater, the revelation comes through the mouth of one above him, and one above him lays his hands upon him. Aside from this, I am not aware that any case of ordination by laying on of hands is specifically recorded in the Old Testament. But it is filled with cases of persons called by revelation. Yet the fact oftenest recorded is least believed.

Acts xiii. 1, "Now there were in the church that was at Antioch, certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2. As they ministred to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereunto I have called them.

3. And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4. So they being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus."

Again, in this case, we have a record of the two essential acts for conferring the priesthood, both being performed upon Barnabas and Saul. First the Holy Ghost said to the prophets and teachers, or some of them, set apart Barnabas and Saul to the work whereunto I have called them, and immediately they ordained them by the laying on of their hands. Consequently they were not said to be sent by the Holy Ghost, because the pastors at Antioch laid their hands on them, as you represent, but because the Holy Ghost sent them by that revelation which he gave when he said, "set apart Saul and Barnabas," &c.

Paul, in writing to Timothy, says, iv. 14, "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee BY PROPHECY, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery," (or assembly of the priesthood.)

Timothy received the laying on of hands of the presbytery, assembly or council, because, having been called by prophecy, that act was necessary still to bring him into the priesthood. Saul and Barnabas were ordained by the hands of prophets and teachers, be-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, OCT 14, 1847. [No. 30.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 3.

(Continued from last week.)

The reasonableness and truth of this rule will appear by the following illustration:—All officers of the State of Ohio act in the name of the people of the State. By what authority do they thus act? By an authority given by the people. The people of the State must speak to make any man an officer, authorized to act in their name. They must not only speak, but they must speak according to a fixed and known law of their own adoption. And he who assumes to act in any office in their name without being authorized, is a usurper, and liable to punishment. Further: Whatever act of the people is necessary to make one man Governor or magistrate the SAME ACT is necessary to confer the same office on any other man. The first Governor receives his office by a revelation of the will of the people, as expressed by their votes. Every subsequent Governor must receive his office in the same manner.—The first set of magistrates in any town or jurisdiction are elected by the people of their district, and every subsequent magistrate or set of magistrates must be elected in the same manner, or they cannot hold the office. Moreover, the first Governor was not only elected to the office, that is, called to it by a revelation of the will of the people, but after being so elected he was required to take an oath of office; and until he had taken that oath he was not Governor. So of every subsequent Governor. And every magistrate is in like manner both elected and qualified by an oath. The rule applies equally to successor and predecessor, and no man can hold the office without both an election and an oath of office.

The fact that the first set of manistrates were called and elected by a revelation of the will of the people, and qualified by oath of office, to act in the name of the people as magistrates, does not authorize them to confer the magisterial authority on others, by means of an oath of office alone, who have not been thus elected and chosen by a like revelation of the will of the people. So entirely sacred do nations and communities hold this rule, that if the best man in the nation should, without an election, simply receive the oath of office from some other magistrate and then enter upon the business of trying criminals, though all his official acts might be circumspect and his sentences eminently just, yet he himself would be a criminal by the law, and would subject himself to even severer punishment than the culprits brought before him, for inflicting just punishment on them.

If it be so eminently necessary that those who act in the name of the people have authority from them and be duly qualified, how much more that those who act in the name of God shall be both truly called and regularly qualified. As a Catholic, you are bound to acknowledge that God has conferred upon the priesthood the power of remitting sins. As HE confers the power, it must be exercised in HIS NAME. But if the administrator is not authorized to act in his name, then the act is void, and the sins are retained, or rather left unforgiven. And Paul says, no man taketh this authority unto himself but he that is called of God, as was Aaron. Aaron was called of God by revelation, for God spoke unto Moses, the prophet, and told him to put Aaron in the priests' office.

The fact that the priesthood were called by revelation of God and ordained by an authority above them, both before and during the Apostolic dispensation, as clearly appears by the Old and New Testaments as the fact that the officers of the several States of the Union are elected by the people and qualified by oath appears by the books of history and law in our nation—and the man who, after reading the scriptures, should assert that any one could come into the priesthood without both revelation and ordination is equally as blind as he who pretends that he can attain the magisterial authority without both election and oath. Oh fools, and slow of heart to understand the law of God.

That this may more clearly appear, I present a few cases of the conferring of the priesthood as there recorded.

Numbers, xxvii. 15, "And Moses spake unto the Lord, saying,

16. Let the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation,

17. Which may go out before them, and which may go in before them, and which may lead them out, and which may bring them in; that the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd.

18. And the Lord SAID unto Moses, Take thee Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him;

19 And set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation: and give him a charge in their sight.

20. And thou shalt put some of thine honour upon him, that all the congregation of the children of Israel may be obedient.

22. And Moses did as the Lord commanded him: and he took Joshua, and set him before Eleazar the priest, and before all the congregation.

23. And he laid his hands upon him, and gave him a charge, as the Lord commanded by the hand of Moses."

Deut. xxxiv. 9, "And Joshua the son of Nun was full of the spirit of wisdom; for Moses had laid his hands upon him: and the children of Israel hearkened unto him, and did as the Lord commanded Moses."

In this account are given the essential facts in conferring the priesthood clearly stated, to wit: that Joshua was called by revelation, and that he was ordained by the laying on of hands. And, in accordance with the fundamental principle that the less is blessed of the greater, the revelation comes through the mouth of one above him, and one above him lays his hands upon him. Aside from this, I am not aware that any case of ordination by laying on of hands is specifically recorded in the Old Testament. But it is filled with cases of persons called by revelation. Yet the fact oftenest recorded is least believed.

Acts xiii. 1, "Now there were in the church that was at Antioch, certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen, which had been brought up with Herod the tetrarch, and Saul.

2. As they ministred to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul, for the work whereunto I have called them.

3. And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

4. So they being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia; and from thence they sailed to Cyprus."

Again, in this case, we have a record of the two essential acts for conferring the priesthood, both being performed upon Barnabas and Saul. First the Holy Ghost said to the prophets and teachers, or some of them, set apart Barnabas and Saul to the work, whereunto I have called them, and immediately they ordained them by the laying on of their hands. Consequently they were not said to be sent by the Holy Ghost, because the pastors at Antioch laid their hands on them, as you represent, but because the Holy Ghost sent them by that revelation which he gave when he said, "set apart Saul and Barnabas," &c.

Paul, in writing to Timothy, says, iv. 14, "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee BY PROPHECY, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery," (or assembly of the priesthood.)

Timothy received the laying on of hands of the presbytery, assembly or council, because, having been called by prophecy, that act was necessary still to bring him into the priesthood. Saul and Barnabas were ordained by the hands of prophets and teachers, because the Holy Ghost had already called them. Joshua was ordained by the hands of Moses, because he was called of God to be the leader, chief captain, judge, or prophet of Israel. I might add authorities on this subject. But these are abundantly sufficient to show that a call by revelation and an ordination by the hands are both equally necessary to the possession of the priesthood. And, consequently, all who act in the priesthood without being so called and so ordained are "THIEVES and ROBBERS."

Having thus established the rule that no man has lawful right to the priesthood who is not called of God by revelation, I beg of you to inform me whether his holiness the Pope of Rome was so called? Did he obtain his office by revelation of God, or by election of the Cardinals? By the way, as the less is blessed of the greater, will you please tell me who ordained him? Of course it was some person who holds as high a PRIESTHOOD as he: for it is difficult to believe that so respectable a people as the Catholic church would, like the Methodists, pretend that a man could ordain others above himself.

Come, Mr. Rafferty, tell us by what prophet God called the present Pope to his priesthood, and by what priest, holding equal or higher authority, he was ordained: for as we have a high opinion of him personally, and as a politician, we should not like to call him either thief or robber, as Christ does those that come not in at the door. The Bible being the standard, this is the only door into the priesthood; and you apply Christ's epithets to all who exercise the priesthood without authority. You must not flinch when they rebound to your own face. And when all these questions are settled I wish you to answer me further, whether the Catholic Bishops and clergy do not generally obtain their priesthood by revelation of the will of some prince or rich man, rather than of God.

These facts and considerations, Mr. Rafferty, will induce reasonable and considerate men to ask the following questions:—Are the Romanist clergy called by revelation of God? If they are, by the mouth of what prophets? Are they ordained by the hands of those who themselves hold the priesthood? If so, who ordains the Pope, of whom there can be but ONE at a time, and consequently who has no superior or equal in the priesthood? Finally, what authority, officer or priesthood is visible head of the church from the death of one Pope to the election of another? Does so large a body as the Holy Catholic Apostolic Church continue to live during frequent and sometimes long interregnums without a head? Then let men cease to wonder at its diseases.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, AT VOREE.

On the 6th day of October, 1847, the semi-annual Conference assembled at Voree.

Opened by prayer by President Strang. Singing.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we have full confidence in James J. Strang as President of the church, and by virtue of that office recognize him as President of this Conference.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will sustain Gilbert Watson as general church Clerk and Recorder, and acknowledge him as Clerk of this Conference.

Pres. Strang made some remarks relative to the past history of the church, and its future prospects.

Adjourned til one o'clock.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by John E. Page, President of the Twelve.

Pres. Strang preached on the necessity of the dispensation of the fulness of times.

Adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Oct. 7. Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Called to order by Pres. Strang. Prayer by Pres. Marks.—Singing.

James Blakeslee, H. P., preached on the gathering of the house of Jacob to their own land.

Adjourned one hour and a half, to meet on the Temple lot for the purpose of breaking ground for the Temple.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

John E. Page, Pres. of the Twelve, acted as master of ceremonies, and arranged the congregation in the order of rank and priesthood, beginning with the First Presidency at the principal gate of the Temple.

The congregation sung the hymn—"How firm a foundation ye saints of the Lord." &c.. &c.

Presidents Strang and Marks proceeded to the centre of the Temple lot. Pres. Strang then offered up the dedicating prayer, which was responded to by the Conference by a hearty amen. Presidents Strang and Marks then returned to their former position and broke ground for the Temple, which was followed by the several quorums in the order in which they were placed.

When the several quorums were engaged in breaking the ground Pres. Strang explained the pattern of the Temple, after which Pres. Marks expressed his faith and confidence in the work of God, and exhorted the saints to be united and use their exertions to build the Temple according to the commandment of God.

After prayer by John E. Page, adjourned to the school house.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by Uriel C. H. Nickerson, H. P.

John E. Page, Pres. of the Twelve, preached on the evidences of the introduction of the dispensation of the fulness of times.

Adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Oct. 8. Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by Wm. Savage, Pres. of the Seventies.

The delegates from the branches reported the state of the branches, which we omit for want of room.

The President and various traveling elders gave interesting accounts of their missions.

The excommunication of the following named persons, with the several causes, was laid before the Conference for their action:—

John C. Bennett, H. P. and M. C., excommunicated for apostacy, conspiracy to establish a stake by falsehood, deception, &c., and various immoralities. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till the day of the coming of the Lord, and sealed up against all gospel privileges on earth. The whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

William E. McLellin, Apostle, excommunicated for apostacy and falsehood. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of the Lord, and sealed up against all gospel privileges on earth.—The whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

William Smith, Patriarch, excommunicated for adultery. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till he repent and make satisfaction. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

James M. Adams, Apostle, excommunicated for apostacy and believing the spiritual wife system. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till he repent. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

Benjamin C. Ellsworth, excommunicated for teaching and practicing the spiritual wife system. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till the day of the Lord. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

John Greenhow, excommunicated, 1st, for disclaiming his office and membership in the church; 2d, for frequently disregarding the directions of the First Presidency of the church relative to the management and issue of the "Reveille;" 3d, for indulging in the practice of intoxication. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till he repent and make satisfaction. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

John C. Gaylord, excommunicated for apostacy, neglect of the discipline of the church as President of Voree, and setting apostates to preach. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till he repent and make satisfaction. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

Jacob Bump, excommunicated for apostacy. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan till he repent and make satisfaction. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against him.

Adjourned one hour and a half.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by elder Alden Hale.

Pres. Strang suggested the propriety of appointing a committee to take charge of the work upon the Temple. Pres. Marks followed with remarks on the same subject.

Whereupon it was unanimously resolved,

That there be a committee of two appointed.

On motion of John E. Page, resolved, unanimously,

That Presidents Strang and Marks be appointed said committee

the vote being called separately on each.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will uphold and sustain James J. Strang as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator unto the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with our confidence, faith and prayers.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will uphold and sustain William Marks as one of the First Presidency and Counsellor to the Prophet by our confidence, faith and prayers.

Adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Oct. 9. Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by James Blakeslee, H. P.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will uphold and sustain John E. Page as President of the Twelve by our faith, confidence and prayers.

N. B. Similar resolutions were passed on the several authorities present.

Pres. Strang made some remarks relative to the publication of a new work on the evidences of the Book of Mormon, as derived from a very full development of American Antiquities, by John E. Page.

Whereupon, on motion, it was resolved, unanimously,

That this Conference recommend the publication of the evidences of the Book of Mormon by John E. Page, and commend the work to the saints and to all men.

Adjourned one hour and a half.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by Ebenezer Page, Apostle.

Preaching by Ebenezer Page on the necessity of Prophets.

Adjourned sine die. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres.

GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

A MORMON MIRACLE.—We have now in our office a pumpkin vine grown on the lot next south of the Temple ground, which spreads out like a board to the width of 8½ inches, and has its pumpkins in a cluster like grapes, but of a good size, varying from eight to twelve inches in diameter. We commend this to the notice of the Chicago Democrat as a notable and genuine Mormon miracle. As the editor of that paper is an amateur in such matters we shall be most happy to make him acquainted with the mode of production. We can assure him there is no phosphorus used in the operation. Consequently he will run no risk of burning up a suit of clothes, as one of the tell tales he is so fond of did.

TEMPLE AT VOREE.—The ceremony of breaking ground for the Temple was performed the second day of Conference, Oct. 7, and the work is now progressing daily. Some thirty cords of stone and a considerable quantity of lime are provided and paid for, to be delivered as fast as they can be used. We expect to have several rooms ready for use by the spring Conference. Cedar timber will be brought from Beaver Islands for joists this fall. The entire Temple consists of a central edifice, with three towers; twelve other principal buildings; five courts; walls, cloisters, stair-cases, &c., and covers a block of ground 264 feet square, and will consume in the building some 3,000 or 4,000 cords of stone. All who wish to assist in the construction of it can either forward their contributions or come and labor. Now, let us take hold as one man and do our work in righteousness, that God may accept it and bless us.

THE PROSPECT.—Once in three or four months regularly, a report goes out from the apostates in this region that Voree is to be abandoned. As the time of Conference approaches they as regularly give out that none will be held. These lies have been told too often to be longer regarded. In spite of all that apostates have done or can do, our course is onward. Each Conference is better attended. That which has just been held has exhibited a better spirit, and a more perfect union, than any that has gone before. We feel now that we are rid of a heavy weight in the clique we have cut off for practicing immorality and teaching heresies while they professed penitence and purity. Let all such take warning and understand that when we talk of these things it is because we mean it.—Scarcely a man is excommunicated for immorality and corruption, but he goes off accusing the church of his own crimes. The few who have been fools enough to give credit to such stories, and come here for the indulgence, have found it a sad sack in. If the editors of the Chicago Democrat and Ottawa Free Trader believed us half as corrupt as they publish us, they would both be in the church in a fortnight.

Now is the time to move forward. The work is in good hands; conducted by men tried and faithful. Every effort now made will tell in the great event; for a long time we have labored to correct the errors and blunders of others. Now we can do the right instead of toiling daily to undo the wrong. Who will go with us to serve the Lord? Who will assist in building a Temple to our God?

☞ Some follower of Reuben Miller has sent to us to know in what part of his pamphlet he acknowledges his belief in the spiritual wife system. We think the man who, after reading his work, asks such a question rather underwitted. Of course we do not expect a thief to say in so many words that he stole, even though he makes the fact clear in his efforts to conceal it. From Miller's first pamphlet, page five, we select the following:—

"When in conversation with my friends, Mr. Strang has tried to make it appear that I became dissatisfied because I was not permitted to teach, what he is pleased to call, the spiritual wife system.—In regard to this, or his views on this subject, it was impossible for me to be mistaken, as I fully understood how he held it. When I saw him last winter, he explained his views to me in full, and gave me what he called a 'thus saith the Lord' in writing, which I carried with me to the city of Nauvoo, and went to sister Emma, the wife of the Prophet, and conversed with her in regard to the matter, and from that day I have come out in public and in private decidedly opposed to all such principles.

If a principle gets into the church, and that principle declared by the words or writings of Joseph to be an error, and of the evil one, as soon as I learn that fact I am bound to and will reject the same. When I stood at the waters' edge to be baptized, I made a covenant with the Lord, through the elder, to be obedient to all the commands of the Lord; consequently whatever Joseph (whom I recognize as a true Prophet of God) has renounced as church principles, I am bound to renounce. But on the other hand, whatever he has taught by revelation and a thus saith the Lord of hosts, I am bound to and will receive and act accordingly, notwithstanding the traditions of my fathers, and the bigotry and superstition of the age, and the frowns and sneers of the scribes and pharisees of the nineteenth century. Therefore, be it known unto you, ye Latter Day Saints, that God has never sent a messenger from the eternal world to the human family on a foolish errand, (unless it was when he sent one to ordain Mr. Strang.) Elijah, the prophet, has come in fulfillment of the sayings of Malachi, and has conferred upon Joseph the sealing powers of the Melchisedec priesthood, and I believe in the virtue and powers of his priesthood, and in that eternal union through which the hearts of the fathers are turned to the children, and those of the children to the fathers; and a welding link effected between us and the fathers that have died without the gospel."

Here Mr. Miller acknowledges that he was a believer in spiritual wifery while a follower of Brigham Young; that when he became a Strangite he came out against all such principles; and that he has gone back to be a Brighamite. Finally, he tells about some dreadful thing (which he does not name) which he will practice, NOTWITHSTANDING the traditions of his fathers, and the bigotry and superstitions of the age, and the frowns and sneers of the scribes and pharisees of the nineteenth century. And because Mr. Strang disallows such practices as fornication, adultery and polygamy, he calls on all the Latter Day Saints to know that God never sent a messenger to him; as though a man could not possibly have the ministra-

the vote being called separately on each.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will uphold and sustain James J. Strang as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator unto the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with our confidence, faith and prayers.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will uphold and sustain William Marks as one of the First Presidency and Counsellor to the Prophet by our confidence, faith and prayers.

Adjourned till to-morrow at ten o'clock.

Oct. 9. Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by James Blakeslee, H. P.

On motion, resolved, unanimously,

That we will uphold and sustain John E. Page as President of the Twelve by our faith, confidence and prayers.

N. B. Similar resolutions were passed on the several authorities present.

Pres. Strang made some remarks relative to the publication of a new work on the evidences of the Book of Mormon, as derived from a very full development of American Antiquities, by John E. Page.

Whereupon, on motion, it was resolved, unanimously,

That this Conference recommend the publication of the evidences of the Book of Mormon by John E. Page, and commend the work to the saints and to all men.

Adjourned one hour and a half.

Conference assembled pursuant to adjournment.

Opened by singing. Prayer by Ebenezer Page, Apostle.

Preaching by Ebenezer Page on the necessity of Prophets.

Adjourned sine die. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres.

GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

A MORMON MIRACLE.—We have now in our office a pumpkin vine grown on the lot next south of the Temple ground, which spreads out like a board to the width of 8½ inches, and has its pumpkins in a cluster like grapes, but of a good size, varying from eight to twelve inches in diameter. We commend this to the notice of the Chicago Democrat as a notable and genuine Mormon miracle. As the editor of that paper is an amateur in such matters we shall be most happy to make him acquainted with the mode of production. We can assure him there is no phosphorus used in the operation. Consequently he will run no risk of burning up a suit of clothes, as one of the tell tales he is so fond of did.

TEMPLE AT VOREE.—The ceremony of breaking ground for the Temple was performed the second day of Conference, Oct. 7, and the work is now progressing daily. Some thirty cords of stone and a considerable quantity of lime are provided and paid for, to be delivered as fast as they can be used. We expect to have several rooms ready for use by the spring Conference. Cedar timber will be brought from Beaver Islands for joists this fall. The entire Temple consists of a central edifice, with three towers; twelve other principal buildings; five courts; walls, cloisters, stair-cases, &c., and covers a block of ground 264 feet square, and will consume in the building some 3,000 or 4,000 cords of stone. All who wish to assist in the construction of it can either forward their contributions or come and labor. Now, let us take hold as one man and do our work in righteousness, that God may accept it and bless us.

THE PROSPECT.—Once in three or four months regularly, a report goes out from the apostates in this region that Voree is to be abandoned. As the time of Conference approaches they as regularly give out that none will be held. These lies have been told too often to be longer regarded. In spite of all that apostates have done or can do, our course is onward. Each Conference is better attended. That which has just been held has exhibited a better spirit, and a more perfect union, than any that has gone before. We feel now that we are rid of a heavy weight in the clique we have cut off for practicing immorality and teaching heresies while they professed penitence and purity. Let all such take warning and understand that when we talk of these things it is because we mean it.—Scarcely a man is excommunicated for immorality and corruption, but he goes off accusing the church of his own crimes. The few who have been fools enough to give credit to such stories, and come here for the indulgence, have found it a sad suck in. If the editors of the Chicago Democrat and Ottawa Free Trader believed us half as corrupt as they publish us, they would both be in the church in a fortnight.

Now is the time to move forward. The work is in good hands; conducted by men tried and faithful. Every effort now made will tell in the great event; for a long time we have labored to correct the errors and blunders of others. Now we can do the right instead of toiling daily to undo the wrong. Who will go with us to serve the Lord? Who will assist in building a Temple to our God?

☞ Some follower of Reuben Miller has sent to us to know in what part of his pamphlet he acknowledges his belief in the spiritual wife system. We think the man who, after reading his work, asks such a question rather underwitted. Of course we do not expect a thief to say in so many words that he stole, even though he makes the fact clear in his efforts to conceal it. From Miller's first pamphlet, page five, we select the following:—

"When in conversation with my friends, Mr. Strang has tried to make it appear that I became dissatisfied because I was not permitted to teach, what he is pleased to call, the spiritual wife system.—In regard to this, or his views on this subject, it was impossible for me to be mistaken, as I fully understood how he held it. When I saw him last winter, he explained his views to me in full, and gave me what he called a 'thus saith the Lord,' in writing, which I carried with me to the city of Nauvoo, and went to sister Emma, the wife of the Prophet, and conversed with her in regard to the matter, and from that day I have come out in public and in private decidedly opposed to all such principles."

If a principle gets into the church, and that principle declared by the words or writings of Joseph to be an error, and of the evil one, as soon as I learn that fact I am bound to and will reject the same. When I stood at the waters' edge to be baptized, I made a covenant with the Lord, through the elder, to be obedient to all the commands of the Lord; consequently whatever Joseph (whom I recognize as a true Prophet of God) has renounced as church principles, I am bound to renounce. But on the other hand, whatever he has taught by revelation and a thus saith the Lord of hosts, I am bound to and will receive and act accordingly, notwithstanding the traditions of my fathers, and the bigotry and superstition of the age, and the frowns and sneers of the scribes and pharisees of the nineteenth century. Therefore, be it known unto you, ye Latter Day Saints, that God has never sent a messenger from the eternal world to the human family on a foolish errand, (unless it was when he sent one to ordain Mr. Strang.) Elijah, the prophet, has come in fulfillment of the sayings of Malachi, and has conferred upon Joseph the sealing powers of the Melchisedec priesthood, and I believe in the virtue and powers of his priesthood, and in that eternal union through which the hearts of the fathers are turned to the children, and those of the children to the fathers; and a welding link affected between us and the fathers that have died without the gospel."

Here Mr. Miller acknowledges that he was a believer in spiritual wifery while a follower of Brigham Young; that when he became a Strangite he came out against all such principles; and that he has gone back to be a Brighamite. Finally, he tells about some dreadful thing (which he does not name) which he will practice, NOTWITHSTANDING the traditions of his fathers, and the bigotry and superstitions of the age, and the frowns and sneers of the scribes and pharisees of the nineteenth century. And because Mr. Strang disallows such practices as fornication, adultery and polygamy, he calls on all the Latter Day Saints to know that God never sent a messenger to him; as though a man could not possibly have the misfortune tion of angels till he was sunk to the infamy of a Sodomite. He begins by naming the doctrine "what Mr. Strang is pleased to call the spiritual wife system;" then it is something very much against the notions of this age, and finally it is "eternal union" by the power of the priesthood. Pshaw! Does not the merest dolt in Brighamite key-words know that "eternal union" is synonymous with perpetual permission to——no matter what?

From the Belfast Journal of Sept. 25th, 1846.

MORMONISM.—These people are somewhat divided, and have been for a number of years: we believe before the death of the Prophet, Joseph Smith, dissentions had sprung up in the church, and we have no question if Mormonism had been left to itself, without persecution it would have fallen to pieces by its own internal discord. Those acknowledging the rule of the "Twelve" have mainly left for the Pacific ocean, but whether to Oregon, or California, we know not.—There is a branch that acknowledge as their head one Rigdon, an early friend of the Prophet. There is another branch, situated at Voree, Wisconsin Territory, who follow James J. Strang, a man of some talent, and more cunning. Strang, report says, a year or two since, had revealed to him another batch of gold plates, constituting him the bigest toad in the puddle, now living. We have seen a number of Strang's revelations, and shall give one of them, just to show their style. We shall send our paper to the Voree Herald and request brother Strang, or whoever may be editor, to exchange his strange paper with us, hoping he will kindly correct us if we are in error. So long as the first Prophet or his immediate followers had a paper we exchanged with them; and having visited the holy city, and made many pleasant acquaintances, we feel an interest in knowing how Mormonism, or "The Latter Day Saints" are getting on.—Will the Herald send us a few back numbers.

We received a Belfast Journal about a year since containing the foregoing, and in return "Brother Strang" sent a "few back numbers" of his "strange paper," and also a file, while he has had charge of the paper, since, abundantly sufficient to correct many of the errors of the man of Belfast, if he is not incorrigible. We cannot say, however, that we have fairly responded to the request for an exchange, for we have never received any thing in exchange.—We would like to hear what progress he of the Journal makes.

"Bigotry is the arch-fiend of this woe-begone world. Did he always stand out in his own drapery of sable and soot, there would be little trouble with him. But he takes the robes of religion, of spirituality, even of freedom and liberality. But there is one certain test of his presence. It is the grave. At that sad bourne all human quarrels cease. Humanity there unbends the bow, lets fall the battle axe, and weeps with a full heart over the prostrate brother laid away in his long sleep. Meek eyed Charity bends over the coffin, remembers all the good and worthy deeds and forgets and forgives the ill ones. But there is that which comes with rude manner and sneering lips, plucks aside the winding sheet, exposes every scar and deformity, and spurns the coffin with a grin of contempt. This is Bigotry. No matter if clothed in the vestments of the holiest freedom and the most bloodless non-resistance—it is Bigotry the fiend that has kindled all the auto de fes and Smithfield fires, and invented all the racks and thumb-screws that have yet been used in the absurd work of making men think alike."—Chronotype.

☞ That is true, Mr. Chronotype, and you are the man that dare say it. But dare you make the application? You are a bold man, but we doubt your temerity reaching to that. Have not a majority of the church-going people of the United States, both clergy and laity, "with rude manner and sneering lips plucked aside the winding sheet" of the prophet Joseph, 'and exposed every scar or deformity' of his character, whether real or pretended? Have not they 'spurned his coffin with a grin of contempt?' Aye, have they not rejoiced in his murder, when they asserted that he deserved his fate, and set up their hypocritical moans that he should have met it by illegal violence? And this is bigotry. And it is not the less bigotry from the rank and respectability of those who enact such things.—The robe and tunic cannot wash such corruptions out.

MUSINGS.

So the Herald is to be enlarged. Not a single column added, but the sheet doubled. Well, that is better than the oft repeated apostate prediction that it would be discontinued about these days.—After the next No. we expect to make a show of what we can do, and at these times we may muse a little on the future from the past. It is not two years since we started a monthly paper of sixteen thousand ems, printers measure, which this enlargement brings up to thirty-six thousand ems weekly, or nearly ten times the matter and only twice the price. Long life and much success to the little Herald. Give but a decent share of patronage and the little one will become a giant. Indeed, we sometimes almost believe it a giant already, so few are willing to grapple with it in argument.

A word in your ear, reader. Did you ever consider that even on our small sheet we gave you weekly as much reading matter as is generally contained in country papers, for which you pay the same price? Nevertheless it is true. From using small type, setting solid matter, as the printers call it, and no advertisements, we have put much in a little space. Had we spread the same matter on a sheet twice as large and then filled as much more space with advertisements, no body would have complained of the size. Still they would have had no more to read.

Now we hope to satisfy all who can be satisfied. And we expect our friends to furnish a small addition of means in the form of handsome lists of new subscribers, and the advance pay. With our limited means it is a great undertaking, but we have mused on the subject till we concluded it could be done. So let us all try together. We have not forgotten when we commenced with less than a dozen subscribers. To him that believes all things are possible. We believe that it is good that the Herald should come out eight pages a week. We believe it can be done. And we believe it will be done. Our friends helped us gratuitously to seventeen dollars to commence with, and we have no idea of failing.

THE TEMPLE.

Reader, do you wish to see the Temple of God at Voree? So do I; and I intend to see it ere long, completed and filled with the saints of the most High, shouting grace, GRACE, unto it. But that is not what we meant to say. Would you like to see the pattern of it? Well, we intend to get it engraved very soon and insert it in the Herald. If you are not a subscriber, send on soon that you may receive it.

PREACHING.

The subscriber designs to resume his calling and duty in the ministry of the "everlasting gospel." We wish to say to the readers of the "Gospel Herald that we wish to visit those places first where we can do the most good for the interest of the church and the salvation of mankind. Through grace we feel fully prepared to successfully put to silence any and every plausible objection to the true principles of the faith of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the Pope of Rome to the last and least dissenting Mormon,

We shall unhesitatingly contend for the rights and claims of President James J. Strang to preside over the church as prophet revelator, translator, and seer. All persons adressing us at any time POST PAID, soliciting our services, will be responded to according to our time and means. Persons thus addressing us are requested to state in short what are the prospects relative to a place of holding meetings, and the probable amount of hearers. JOHN E. PAGE.

☞ Dr. Hawks receives a salary of $6,000 a year as pastor of Christ's church, N. O., and $1,000 more as professor of the university of La. Can the Dr. tell what salary Christ received? As the servant is not above the master, we fear the Dr. is none of his. We never heard of his having so large a salary.

tion of angels till he was sunk to the infamy of a Sodomite. He begins by naming the doctrine "what Mr. Strang is pleased to call the spiritual wife system;" then it is something very much against the notions of this age, and finally it is "eternal union" by the power of the priesthood. Pshaw! Does not the merest dolt in Brighamite key-words know that "eternal union" is synonymous with perpetual permission to——no matter what?

From the Belfast Journal of Sept. 25th, 1846.

MORMONISM.—These people are somewhat divided, and have been for a number of years: we believe before the death of the Prophet, Joseph Smith, dissentions had sprung up in the church, and we have no question if Mormonism had been left to itself, without persecution it would have fallen to pieces by its own internal discord. Those acknowledging the rule of the "Twelve" have mainly left for the Pacific ocean, but whether to Oregon, or California, we know not.—There is a branch that acknowledge as their head one Rigdon, an early friend of the Prophet. There is another branch, situated at Voree, Wisconsin Territory, who follow James J. Strang, a man of some talent, and more cunning. Strang, report says, a year or two since, had revealed to him another batch of gold plates, constituting him the bigest toad in the puddle, now living. We have seen a number of Strang's revelations, and shall give one of them, just to show their style. We shall send our paper to the Voree Herald and request brother Strang, or whoever may be editor, to exchange his strange paper with us, hoping he will kindly correct us if we are in error. So long as the first Prophet or his immediate followers had a paper we exchanged with them; and having visited the holy city, and made many pleasant acquaintances, we feel an interest in knowing how Mormonism, or "The Latter Day Saints" are getting on.—Will the Herald send us a few back numbers.

We received a Belfast Journal about a year since containing the foregoing, and in return "Brother Strang" sent a "few back numbers" of his "strange paper," and also a file, while he has had charge of the paper, since, abundantly sufficient to correct many of the errors of the man of Belfast, if he is not incorrigible. We cannot say, however, that we have fairly responded to the request for an exchange, for we have never received any thing in exchange.—We would like to hear what progress he of the Journal makes.

"Bigotry is the arch-fiend of this woe-begone world. Did he always stand out in his own drapery of sable and soot, there would be little trouble with him. But he takes the robes of religion, of spirituality, even of freedom and liberality. But there is one certain test of his presence. It is the grave. At that sad bourne all human quarrels cease. Humanity there unbends the bow, lets fall the battle axe, and weeps with a full heart over the prostrate brother laid away in his long sleep. Meek eyed Charity bends over the coffin, remembers all the good and worthy deeds and forgets and forgives the ill ones. But there is that which comes with rude manner and sneering lips, plucks aside the winding sheet, exposes every scar and deformity, and spurns the coffin with a grin of contempt. This is Bigotry. No matter if clothed in the vestments of the holiest freedom and the most bloodless non-resistance—it is Bigotry the fiend that has kindled all the auto de fes and Smithfield fires, and invented all the racks and thumb-screws that have yet been used in the absurd work of making men think alike."—Chronotype.

☞ That is true, Mr. Chronotype, and you are the man that dare say it. But dare you make the application? You are a bold man, but we doubt your temerity reaching to that. Have not a majority of the church-going people of the United States, both clergy and laity, "with rude manner and sneering lips plucked aside the winding sheet" of the prophet Joseph, 'and exposed every scar or deformity' of his character, whether real or pretended? Have not they 'spurned his coffin with a grin of contempt?' Aye, have they not rejoiced in his murder, when they asserted that he deserved his fate, and set up their hypocritical moans that he should have met it by illegal violence? And this is bigotry. And it is not the less bigotry from the rank and respectability of those who enact such things.—The robe and tunic cannot wash such corruptions out.

MUSINGS.

So the Herald is to be enlarged. Not a single column added, but the sheet doubled. Well, that is better than the oft repeated apostate prediction that it would be discontinued about these days.—After the next No. we expect to make a show of what we can do, and at these times we may muse a little on the future from the past. It is not two years since we started a monthly paper of sixteen thousand ems, printers measure, which this enlargement brings up to thirty-six thousand ems weekly, or nearly ten times the matter and only twice the price. Long life and much success to the little Herald. Give but a decent share of patronage and the little one will become a giant. Indeed, we sometimes almost believe it a giant already, so few are willing to grapple with it in argument.

A word in your ear, reader. Did you ever consider that even our small sheet we gave you weekly as much reading matter as is generally contained in country papers, for which you pay the same price? Nevertheless it is true. From using small type, setting solid matter, as the printers call it, and no advertisements, we have put much in a little space. Had we spread the same matter on a sheet twice as large and then filled as much more space with advertisements, no body would have complained of the size. Still they would have had no more to read.

Now we hope to satisfy all who can be satisfied. And we expect our friends to furnish a small addition of means in the form of handsome lists of new subscribers, and the advance pay. With our limited means it is a great undertaking, but we have mused on the subject till we concluded it could be done. So let us all try together. We have not forgotten when we commenced with less than a dozen subscribers. To him that believes all things are possible. We believe that it is good that the Herald should come out eight pages a week. We believe it can be done. And we believe it will be done. Our friends helped us gratuitously to seventeen dollars to commence with, and we have no idea of failing.

THE TEMPLE.

Reader, do you wish to see the Temple of God at Voree? So do I; and I intend to see it ere long, completed and filled with the saints of the most High, shouting grace, GRACE, unto it. But that is not what we meant to say. Would you like to see the pattern of it? Well, we intend to get it engraved very soon and insert it in the Herald. If you are not a subscriber, send on soon that you may receive it.

PREACHING.

The subscriber designs to resume his calling and duty in the ministry of the "everlasting gospel." We wish to say to the readers of the "Gospel Herald that we wish to visit those places first where we can do the most good for the interest of the church and the salvation of mankind. Through grace we feel fully prepared to successfully put to silence any and every plausible objection to the true principles of the faith of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, from the Pope of Rome to the last and least dissenting Mormon,

We shall unhesitatingly contend for the rights and claims of President James J. Strang to preside over the church as prophet revelator, translator, and seer. All persons adressing us at any time POST PAID soliciting our services, will be responded to according to our time and means. Persons thus addressing us are requested to state in short what are the prospects relative to a place of holding meetings and the probable amount of hearers. JOHN E. PAGE.

☞ Dr. Hawks receives a salary of $6,000 a year as pastor of Christ's church, N. O., and $4,000 more as professor of the university of La. Can the Dr. tell what salary Christ received? As the servant is not above the master, we fear the Dr. is none of his. We never heard of his having so large a salary.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, OCT 21, 1847. [No. 31.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

PROPHETS.

It is a thing generally understood among the saints, though others are ignorant of it, that as in the present dispensation so in those which preceded it, there was one man appointed prophet, to stand as a law-giver to all God's people. But very few have taken the trouble to ascertain how any one was thus placed at the head of a dispensation, and less to compare the rule as laid down in the revelations given to Joseph with that contained in the ancient scriptures. As I have written once on the appointment of prophets, and established the rule on the foundation of God's eternal truth in an epistle which was published nearly two years since, has gone through four editions of over ten thousand copies, which no man has ever yet attempted to refute or answer, I might excuse myself from saying any more on the subject.

When I say no man has attempted to answer, I would not be understood as saying that nothing has been said by any one on the subject, but merely that no man has ever taken up the true merit and point of the argument and grappled with it. No man has ever taken the authorities there referred to and shown, one by one, that they are susceptible of a different interpretation. And no man has ever undertaken to show that any different rule can be adopted consistent with all the scriptures.

Yet, as pretenders are starting up on every hand and attempting to lead believers astray from the fold of God, and from the guidance of the true shepherd, I am constrained to write again and admonish the saints against all such, by reminding you more fully of what God has spoken, both in ancient and modern times, concerning setting up and removing prophets, and concerning the obligations of men to give heed to them.

I desire every person especially to remember, while reading this article, that I do not anywhere teach that there are no prophets among God's people, but the one that stands at the head; nor do I pretend that none of the priesthood, except prophets, can teach by way of commandment under any circumstances. But I do lay down as a fundamental principle that God places at the head of his people in all ages and in all dispensations one who is a PROPHET and a LAW-GIVER OR RULER, holding a ROYAL PRIESTHOOD, or, in other words, the priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, and standing at the head of all prophets, apostles, high priests, kings and rulers. And in this article I intend to show you, briefly, by reference to the word of God, the means by which any one attains to this priesthood, and the means by which he loses it, as well as the extent of the obligation of mankind to obey his commandments, and the consequences of his giving improper commandments.

Joseph received his priesthood by revelation and ordination. By revelation from God, who called him into the priesthood, and by ordination by the ministration of angels, whom Jesus Christ sent unto him for that purpose.

That Joseph was called by revelation, appears by the following testimonies:—

D. & C. sec. xlvi. par. 1 & 2, "Behold there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou (Joseph) shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church through the will of God the Father, and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ; being inspired of the Holy Ghost to lay the foundation thereof, and to build it up unto the most holy faith. Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and COMMANDMENTS, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me: for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you. For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good."

Sec. li. par. 2. "But behold, verily, verily I say unto thee, (Oliver Cowdery,) no one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church, excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., for he receiveth them even as Moses. And thou shalt not command him (Joseph) who is at thy head, and at the head of the church; for I have given him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations which are sealed, until I shall appoint unto them ANOTHER IN HIS STEAD."

Sec. xiv. par. 1, "O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you: for behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand."

Sec. xi. par. 4, "I have sent forth the fulness of my gospel by the hand of my servant Joseph: and in weakness have I blessed him, and I have given unto him the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed, even things which were from the foundation of the world, and the things which shall come from this time until the time of my coming, if he abide in me, and if not, another will I plant in his stead."

To these might be added many more, if it was necessary, but it is deemed that these will settle the question in the minds of all the saints. I shall proceed, therefore, to show the proofs that he was not only called by revelation, but ordained by the ministration of angels. I am aware it is said, on good authority, that he was ordained by Oliver Cowdery. Without controverting the fact in any sense, it is clear to the mind of any who has any knowledge of the priesthood that that ordination did not give him the priesthood to stand at the head of the church, because Oliver could not confer any greater power than what he himself possessed; and he is expressly put under Joseph and commanded to be obedient to him. I shall not, in establishing this fact, rely on any inferior testimony, such as publications, even in the newspapers of the church, but solely upon the word of God.

D. & C. Sec. l. par. 2 & 3, "Behold this is wisdom in me: wherefore marvel not for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth: and also John (the Baptist) the son of Zacharias, which John I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, Jr., and Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto this first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordain-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, OCT 21, 1847. [No. 31.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

PROPHETS.

It is a thing generally understood among the saints, though others are ignorant of it, that as in the present dispensation so in those which preceded it, there was one man appointed prophet, to stand as a law-giver to all God's people. But very few have taken the trouble to ascertain how any one was thus placed at the head of a dispensation, and less to compare the rule as laid down in the revelations given to Joseph with that contained in the ancient scriptures. As I have written once on the appointment of prophets, and established the rule on the foundation of God's eternal truth in an epistle which was published nearly two years since, has gone through four editions of over ten thousand copies, which no man has ever yet attempted to refute or answer, I might excuse myself from saying any more on the subject.

When I say no man has attempted to answer, I would not be understood as saying that nothing has been said by any one on the subject, but merely that no man has ever taken up the true merit and point of the argument and grappled with it. No man has ever taken the authorities there referred to and shown, one by one, that they are susceptible of a different interpretation. And no man has ever undertaken to show that any different rule can be adopted consistent with all the scriptures.

Yet, as pretenders are starting up on every hand and attempting to lead believers astray from the fold of God, and from the guidance of the true shepherd, I am constrained to write again and admonish the saints against all such, by reminding you more fully of what God has spoken, both in ancient and modern times, concerning setting up and removing prophets, and concerning the obligations of men to give heed to them.

I desire every person especially to remember, while reading this article, that I do not anywhere teach that there are no prophets among God's people, but the one that stands at the head; nor do I pretend that none of the priesthood, except prophets, can teach by way of commandment under any circumstances. But I do lay down as a fundamental principle that God places at the head of his people in all ages and in all dispensations one who is a PROPHET and a LAW-GIVER OR RULER, holding a ROYAL PRIESTHOOD, or, in other words, the priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, and standing at the head of all prophets, apostles, high priests, kings and rulers. And in this article I intend to show you, briefly, by reference to the word of God, the means by which any one attains to this priesthood, and the means by which he loses it, as well as the extent of the obligation of mankind to obey his commandments, and the consequences of his giving improper commandments.

Joseph received his priesthood by revelation and ordination. By revelation from God, who called him into the priesthood, and by ordination by the ministration of angels, whom Jesus Christ sent unto him for that purpose.

That Joseph was called by revelation, appears by the following testimonies:—

D. & C. sec. xlvi. par. 1 & 2, "Behold there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou (Joseph) shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church through the will of God the Father, and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ; being inspired of the Holy Ghost to lay the foundation thereof, and to build it up unto the most holy faith. Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and COMMANDMENTS, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me: for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you. For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good."

Sec. li. par. 2. "But behold, verily, verily I say unto thee, (Oliver Cowdery,) no one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church, excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., for he receiveth them even as Moses. And thou shalt not command him (Joseph) who is at thy head, and at the head of the church; for I have given him the keys of the mysteries and the revelations which are sealed, until I shall appoint unto them ANOTHER IN HIS STEAD."

Sec. xiv. par. 1, "O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you: for behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand."

Sec. xi. par. 4, "I have sent forth the fulness of my gospel by the hand of my servant Joseph: and in weakness have I blessed him, and I have given unto him the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed, even things which were from the foundation of the world, and the things which shall come from this time until the time of my coming, if he abide in me, and if not, another will I plant in his stead."

To these might be added many more, if it was necessary, but it is deemed that these will settle the question in the minds of all the saints. I shall proceed, therefore, to show the proofs that he was not only called by revelation, but ordained by the ministration of angels. I am aware it is said, on good authority, that he was ordained by Oliver Cowdery. Without controverting the fact in any sense, it is clear to the mind of any who has any knowledge of the priesthood that that ordination did not give him the priesthood to stand at the head of the church, because Oliver could not confer any greater power than what he himself possessed; and he is expressly put under Joseph and commanded to be obedient to him. I shall not, in establishing this fact, rely on any inferior testimony, such as publications, even in the newspapers of the church, but solely upon the word of God.

D. & C. Sec. l. par. 2 & 3, "Behold this is wisdom in me: wherefore marvel not for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth: and also John (the Baptist) the son of Zacharias, which John I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, Jr., and Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto this first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordained even as Aaron. And also with Peter, and James, and John, (angels,) whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ORDAINED you and CONFIRMED you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry: and of the same things which I revealed unto them: unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things both which are in heaven and which are on earth: wherefore lift up your hearts and rejoice, and gird up your loins, and take upon you my whole armor, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, having done all ye may be able to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth; having on the breastplate of righteousness: and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace which I have sent mine ANGELS to commit unto you, taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of my Spirit, which I will pour out upon you, and my word which I reveal unto you, and be agreed as touching all things whatsoever ye ask of me, and be faithful until I come, and ye shall be caught up that where I am ye shall be also. Amen."

Here are two ordinations by angels; one to the Aaronic and the other to the Milchisedec priesthood. Had the Melchisedec priesthood been conferred first there would have been no occasion for sending John the Baptist, who was beheaded by Herod, to ordain him to the Aaronic priesthood, because the higher priesthood can officiate in all offices below it; but as the Aaronic priesthood was first restored, there being no power on earth to ordain thereto, an angel was sent from heaven that Joseph might be both called by revelation and ordained by the priesthood, "as was Aaron."

Afterward, when God would confer on him the priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, the "keys of the kingdom" of God, and of the 'ministry of those things which were revealed' to the revelator and apostles of the church of the former days, and "of a dispensation of the gospel for the fulness of times and for the last times," 'in which God will bring together in one both the church in heaven and on earth,' it became necessary that the ordination should be again from heaven by the ministration of angels, because, though the priesthood was on earth, Joseph and Oliver both having received the Aaronic priesthood by ordination of John the Baptist, yet there was no one on earth holding as high priesthood as that which God was giving to Joseph. If God had known anything of that doctrine which apostates have been so full of for the last two years, that all ordinations and anointings to the priesthood must be performed by the living priesthood on the earth while any part of it remains, Joseph would have received this ordinat on from them.—But as that notion had not yet been heard of in heaven, the Lord Jesus Christ had no way of putting Joseph into the Melchisedec priesthood but a call by revelation and ordination by the ministration of angels who held that priesthood.

The idea put forth in Miller's pamphlet and in various pseudo publications that the priesthood on the earth could ordain a prophet and First President of the church, or could do anything whatever towards making one, was not known at that time either on earth or in heaven, and consequently he was ordained by angels. And after being so ordained, Christ says to him, "I HAVE ORDAINED YOU." Had the superior wisdom of these apostates been known in heaven the angels would have been saved their journey to earth.

Having thus shown the manner in which Joseph received his priesthood, it would seem that we had shown also how any other person should attain to the same priesthood, for there is no plainer truth than this,—that whatever amount of power and whatever peculiar ceremony is necessary to confer the priesthood on one man, the same amount of power and the same peculiar ceremony is necessary to confer the same priesthood on any other person. With this rule, so plainly stated, fully agrees both the ancient and the modern scriptures.

(To be continued.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

September 23d, 1817.

* * * According to what I have seen and heard, the gospel of the kingdom seems to be moving steadily forward; notwithstanding the great afflictions which the saints have to pass through, and the great divisions which have arisen in consequence of false hearted brethren, who desire to bear the rule and delight in all manner of abominations. But the mighty God who hath called us with a holy calling is of purer eyes than to behold vanity, and he will not suffer the guilty to go unpunished. I have often felt to mourn over the languishing condition of Zion, which now seems to be bleeding at every pore; it seems that nearly all of her former lovers have forgotten her—they have become filthy and profane—they have defiled themselves with the idols of their own hearts, and have altogether gone out of the way. Oh, that they were wise; then they would not depart from the commandments of God, but would call upon his name right early, and he would hear them and lead them into green pastures and down by the side of still waters—he would bind up the wounds of Zion and build her waste places—he would be a bulwark of safety unto his people, and deliver them out of the hand of strange children. We have reason to take up a lamentation for the sons and daughters of Zion, who once were the people that the Lord delighted to bless—once were they fair and comely; but now they are loathsome and filthy—once they prospered in the city of Joseph; but now cast out of the holy city—once they delighted in keeping the commandments; but now have forsaken them—once they were blessed with wisdom above all the inhabitants of the earth, insomuch that the hidden mysteries of eternity were unveiled to them; but now have they followed lying spirits and given heed to the doctrines of devils! They have become corrupted like unto the Nephites of old, and the Lord has rejected them. We ought, therefore, to learn a lesson from them and try to escape the judgments and calamities which befall evil doers, and pass the time of our sojourning here in fear; lest, a promise being left us of entering into his (God's) rest, any of us should seem to come short of it. When I have seen men of sterling talents and men of honesty and integrity, and apparently soured in the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, turn away from the truth, I have felt the need of the grace of God to keep us steadfast, that we do not make ship-wreck of our faith. God has promi ed to suffer no temptations to come upon us but such as we are able to bear, if we only trust in him. There is one thing certain even in these last days, that is this,—that judgment has first began at the house of God and will not leave it until the church is thoroughly purged from all iniquity. It seems there are but few names left even now who remain steadfast in the truth, and how long most of them will remain God only knoweth; but he knoweth them that are his, and he will try them even as gold is tried. But I have full faith in the promises of God, and feel assured that the work will not cease until the consummation of the decreed consumption upon the whole earth.

My ardent desire and prayer to Almighty God is this,—that his servants may be clothed with righteousness, and labor diligently to buy the white raiment, that they may not be found naked at the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. If every one who professes to be a saint would adorn his profession with a well ordered life and a godly conversation, then would the kingdom of

ed even as Aaron. And also with Peter, and James, and John, (angels,) whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ORDAINED you and CONFIRMED you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry: and of the same things which I revealed unto them: unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things both which are in heaven and which are on earth: wherefore lift up your hearts and rejoice, and gird up your loins, and take upon you my whole armor, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, having done all ye may be able to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth; having on the breastplate of righteousness: and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace which I have sent mine ANGELS to commit unto you, taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked; and take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of my Spirit, which I will pour out upon you, and my word which I reveal unto you, and be agreed as touching all things whatsoever ye ask of me, and be faithful until I come, and ye shall be caught up that where I am ye shall be also. Amen."

Here are two ordinations by angels; one to the Aaronic and the other to the Milchisedec priesthood. Had the Melchisedec priesthood been conferred first there would have been no occasion for sending John the Baptist, who was beheaded by Herod, to ordain him to the Aaronic priesthood, because the higher priesthood can officiate in all offices below it; but as the Aaronic priesthood was first restored, there being no power on earth to ordain thereto, an angel was sent from heaven that Joseph might be both called by revelation and ordained by the priesthood, "as was Aaron."

Afterward, when God would confer on him the priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, the "keys of the kingdom" of God, and of the 'ministry of those things which were revealed' to the revelator and apostles of the church of the former days, and "of a dispensation of the gospel for the fulness of times and for the last times," 'in which God will bring together in one both the church in heaven and on earth,' it became necessary that the ordination should be again from heaven by the ministration of angels, because, though the priesthood was on earth, Joseph and Oliver both having received the Aaronic priesthood by ordination of John the Baptist, yet there was no one on earth holding as high priesthood as that which God was giving to Joseph. If God had known anything of that doctrine which apostates have been so full of for the last two years, that all ordinations and anointings to the priesthood must be performed by the living priesthood on the earth while any part of it remains, Joseph would have received this ordination from them.—But as that notion had not yet been heard of in heaven, the Lord Jesus Christ had no way of putting Joseph into the Melchisedec priesthood but a call by revelation and ordination by the ministration of angels who held that priesthood.

The idea put forth in Miller's pamphlet and in various pseudo publications that the priesthood on the earth could ordain a prophet and First President of the church, or could do anything whatever towards making one, was not known at that time either on earth or in heaven, and consequently he was ordained by angels. And after being so ordained, Christ says to him, "I HAVE ORDAINED YOU." Had the superior wisdom of these apostates been known in heaven the angels would have been saved their journey to earth.

Having thus shown the manner in which Joseph received his priesthood, it would seem that we had shown also how any other person should attain to the same priesthood, for there is no plainer truth than this,—that whatever amount of power and whatever peculiar ceremony is necessary to confer the priesthood on one man, the same amount of power and the same peculiar ceremony is necessary to confer the same priesthood on any other person. With this rule, so plainly stated, fully agrees both the ancient and the modern scriptures.

(To be continued.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

September 23d, 1847.

* * * According to what I have seen and heard, the gospel of the kingdom seems to be moving steadily forward; notwithstanding the great afflictions which the saints have to pass through, and the great divisions which have arisen in consequence of false hearted brethren, who desire to bear the rule and delight in all manner of abominations. But the mighty God who hath called us with a holy calling is of purer eyes than to behold vanity, and he will not suffer the guilty to go unpunished. I have often felt to mourn over the languishing condition of Zion, which now seems to be bleeding at every pore; it seems that nearly all of her former lovers have forgotten her—they have become filthy and profane—they have defiled themselves with the idols of their own hearts, and have altogether gone out of the way. Oh, that they were wise; then they would not depart from the commandments of God, but would call upon his name right early, and he would hear them and lead them into green pastures and down by the side of still waters—he would bind up the wounds of Zion and build her waste places—he would be a bulwark of safety unto his people, and deliver them out of the hand of strange children. We have reason to take up a lamentation for the sons and daughters of Zion, who once were the people that the Lord delighted to bless—once were they fair and comely; but now they are loathsome and filthy—once they prospered in the city of Joseph; but now cast out of the holy city—once they delighted in keeping the commandments: but now have forsaken them—once they were blessed with wisdom above all the inhabitants of the earth, insomuch that the hidden mysteries of eternity were unveiled to them; but now have they followed lying spirits and given heed to the doctrines of devils! They have become corrupted like unto the Nephites of old, and the Lord has rejected them. We ought, therefore, to learn a lesson from them and try to escape the judgments and calamities which befall evil doers, and pass the time of our sojourning here in fear; lest, a promise being left us of entering into his (God's) rest, any of us should seem to come short of it. When I have seen men of sterling talents and men of honesty and integrity, and apparently soured in the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, turn away from the truth, I have felt the need of the grace of God to keep us steadfast, that we do not make ship-wreck of our faith. God has promi ed to suffer no temptation to come upon us but such as we are able to bear, if we only trust in him. There is one thing certain even in these last days, that is this,—that judgment has first began at the house of God and will not leave it until the church is thoroughly purged from all iniquity. It seems there are but few names left even now who remain steadfast in the truth, and how long most of them will remain God only knoweth; but he knoweth them that are his, and he will try them even as gold is tried. But I have full faith in the promises of God and feel assured that the work will not cease until the consummation of the decreed consumption upon the whole earth.

My ardent desire and prayer to Almighty God is this,—that his servants may be clothed with righteousness, and labor diligently, to buy the white raiment, that they may not be found naked at the appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. If every one who professes to be a saint would adorn his profession with a well ordered life and a godly conversation, then would the kingdom of God move with power—then would the gospel be speedily borne to every nation, and then would Jesus come bringing his saints with him to reign on the earth. Dearly beloved, let us try by the grace of God to be faithful and always cultivate a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. In short, if we keep the commandments we shall have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city. Give my respects to all well wishers in the gospel.

WARREN POST.

Ilion, Herkimer Co., N. Y., Oct. 4th, 1847.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG,—I have enclosed three dollars for three half yearly subscriptions. One for myself, one for Daniel Burgdorff and one for Rodolph G. Steele, all of this place. Bro. Steele's to commence with the 27th No. of Zion's Reveille. You will do me a favor by sending me No. 24, as that No. appears to be missing. Myself, with the above named persons, expect to come to Voree next spring. We are sick of Babylon, and want to be at head quarters of the saints. Your in the Gospel Covenant,

GEO. ENGLAND.

☞ We publish this as a pattern letter. Let every man write thus to the point, and they will save us many an hour of midnight toil. [ED.

SUCCESS OF APOSTATES.—Not many weeks since Wm. E. McLellin went from this place west preaching apostacy. Soon the man who carried him, one Asa H. Anson, returned with word that he had converted almost the entire church at Potosi, and that he baptized eleven at the close of his first sermon. Bro. Wright has just received the following letter, showing that this is just as near the truth as apostate tales generally are. McLellin has not been there.

Potosi, Grant Co., W. T., Sept. 13th, 1847.

* * * Know assuredly that I will come to Voree as soon as I can. I am not standing still to see the work go ahead. I am standing still simply because I cannot stir. I shall set no time to come, but all my energy and enterprise shall be exerted until I get there. I am willing to lay my shoulder to the wheel as soon as I can. It grieves me that I cannot be with you now, and imbibe the pure principles as they fall from the lips of the prophet, but, Bro. Wright, you know my circumstances and also my mind in regard to these principles. You said you heard that Wm. E. McLellin had paid us a visit. It is not so. I have not heard of him, and if you see him you may tell him we can do without him, although I think his visit would be vain if he was to come. For my part I am satisfied with apostates. If I was for nothing but speculation I might think McLellin was a fine man.

I remain your brother and friend,

DAVID POWELL.

MUSINGS.

COMPROMISES.

The world is full of talk about compromises. We hear of compromises of parties political, and compromises of parties theological. These things may be occasionally right; of course they may when the thing compromised is of no importance. To us the idea of a compromise is equivalent to giving up the right. Why compromise the right? Can you get anything better? or is something other than right, with the assistance of another party, better than the right without such assistance. We never learned any such philosophy. We would sooner be in the right and alone, than in the wrong and have half the world to back us. If we have truth we will not exchange it for all the errors that compromises have ever adopted. If a system is right, some body will find it out without splitting the difference between two errors for it.

"Speak well of the bridge that carries you safe over."—OLD SAW. We hate these old saws. Every one of them contains an abominable lie. We say speak well of the bridge that carries every body safe over. But give a bad name to that which is rotten, no matter how well it has served you, it may break the next man's neck. The substance of the maxim is, that we shall recommend a scamp if he has used us well, and thus help him cheat or impose on somebody else. Remember that a rogue is a rogue, no matter how fairly he may have dealt with you. Reward him for the good he has done. Commend justice and fair dealing to him. But not help him cheat some body by giving him a better name than he deserves.

PARTIZANSHIP.

When a man gets beat, or dispairs of success, he begins to decry parties. Every man is willing to have parties as long as his party prevails. All the broke down politicians are opposed to parties.—Every hack who has lost every body's confidence, is opposed to parties in theology. You will find them hoarse crying "union, union." Even in a school district the same man who attempts to carry measures by deception and fraud in derogation of common interest, when he is headed, cries out against parties.

We don't subscribe to any such notions. We believe in joining all men in a party for doing right. Those who wish to do wrong we expect to have against us. We have no disposition to unite with such. Stop the cry for union and raise one for truth.

BUILDING.

During the summer the saints at Voree have been so engaged in raising crops that hardly any building was going on. Consequently all the apostates flattered themselves that the place would go down. How soon do the hopes of the wicked perish! Now all is bustle again. Piles of stone and heaps of lime and sand appear on every hand. More building is going on at this time than at any time previous. So mild and serene is a Wisconsin autumn we expect two months of good weather for doing masonry yet. It is not improbable that building may progress half the winter to good advantage. At the opening of spring we hope to see Voree double.

LETTERS.

Well, we have read many of that great pile of letters we cast aside two months since. If we could only have attended to them in season it would have made us and our readers a treat. Well, we don't mean to be so much crowded for time to come. Ah, there is the thing. How is deliverance coming? Some men always have more on hand than they can attend to; and we suspect we are of that number. Never mind. It is better to wear out than to rust out.—We are wearing in a good cause. And when this body is worn out we will get it renewed and much improved.

Speaking of wearing out brings to mind the old saw,—"Too many irons in the fire." There is no such thing as too many irons in the fire. The more the better, if you only attend to them. Then you always have one ready hot up for the hammer. Just take care that they don't burn. Work all the time and you will be surprised at the amount you can accomplish.

Don't say I can't do it. If you begin in that way you will never get on. Impossible is not good language. There ought to be no such word in an English dictionary. To the believing all things are possible. Have a little faith and go ahead.

It was on this principle that we gave out notice that the Temple

God move with power—then would the gospel be speedily borne to every nation, and then would Jesus come bringing his saints with him to reign on the earth. Dearly beloved, let us try by the grace of God to be faithful and always cultivate a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price. In short, if we keep the commandments we shall have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city. Give my respects to all well wishers in the gospel.

WARREN POST.

Ilion, Herkimer Co., N. Y., Oct. 4th, 1847.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG,—I have enclosed three dollars for three half yearly subscriptions. One for myself, one for Daniel Burgdorff and one for Rodolph G. Steele, all of this place. Bro. Steele's to commence with the 27th No. of Zion's Reveille. You will do me a favor by sending me No. 24, as that No. appears to be missing. Myself, with the above named persons, expect to come to Voree next spring. We are sick of Babylon, and want to be at head quarters of the saints. Your in the Gospel Covenant,

GEO. ENGLAND.

☞ We publish this as a pattern letter. Let every man write thus to the point, and they will save us many an hour of midnight toil. [ED.

SUCCESS OF APOSTATES.—Not many weeks since Wm. E. McLellin went from this place west preaching apostacy. Soon the man who carried him, one Asa H. Anson, returned with word that he had converted almost the entire church at Potosi, and that he baptized eleven at the close of his first sermon. Bro. Wright has just received the following letter, showing that this is just as near the truth as apostate tales generally are. McLellin has not been there.

Potosi, Grant Co., W. T., Sept. 13th, 1847.

* * Know assuredly that I will come to Voree as soon as I can. I am not standing still to see the work go ahead. I am standing still simply because I cannot stir. I shall set no time to come, but all my energy and enterprise shall be exerted until I get there. I am willing to lay my shoulder to the wheel as soon as I can. It grieves me that I cannot be with you now, and imbibe the pure principles as they fall from the lips of the prophet; but, Bro. Wright, you know my circumstances and also my mind in regard to these principles. You said you heard that Wm. E. McLellin had paid us a visit. It is not so. I have not heard of him, and if you see him you may tell him we can do without him, although I think his visit would be vain if he was to come. For my part I am satisfied with apostates. If I was for nothing but speculation I might think McLellin was a fine man.

I remain your brother and friend,

DAVID POWELL.

MUSINGS.

COMPROMISES.

The world is full of talk about compromises. We hear of compromises of parties political, and compromises of parties theological. These things may be occasionally right.; of course they may when the thing compromised is of no importance. To us the idea of a compromise is equivalent to giving up the right. Why compromise the right? Can you get anything better? or is something other than right, with the assistance of another party, better than the right without such assistance. We never learned any such philosophy. We would sooner be in the right and alone, than in the wrong and have half the world to back us. If we have truth we will not exchange it for all the errors that compromises have ever adopted. If a system is right, some body will find it out without splitting the difference between two errors for it.

"Speak well of the bridge that carries you safe over."—OLD SAW. We hate these old saws. Every one of them contains an abominable lie. We say speak well of the bridge that carries every body safe over. But give a bad name to that which is rotten, no matter how well it has served you, it may break the next man's neck. The substance of the maxim is, that we shall recommend a scamp if he has used us well, and thus help him cheat or impose on somebody else. Remember that a rogue is a rogue, no matter how fairly he may have dealt with you. Reward him for the good he has done. Commend justice and fair dealing to him. But not help him cheat some body by giving him a better name than he deserves.

PARTIZANSHIP.

When a man gets beat, or dispairs of success, he begins to decry parties. Every man is willing to have parties as long as his party prevails. All the broke down politicians are opposed to parties.—Every hack who has lost every body's confidence, is opposed to parties in theology. You will find them hoarse crying "union, union." Even in a school district the same man who attempts to carry measures by deception and fraud in derogation of common interest, when he is headed, cries out against parties.

We don't subscribe to any snch notions. We believe in joining all men in a party for doing right. Those who wish to do wrong we expect to have against us. We have no disposition to union with such. Stop the cry for union and raise one for truth.

BUILDING.

During the summer the saints at Voree have been so engaged in raising crops that hardly any building was going on. Consequently all the apostates flattered themselves that the place would go down. How soon do the hopes of the wicked perish? Now all is bustle again. Piles of stone and heaps of lime and sand appear on every hand. More building is going on at this time than at any time previous. So mild and serene is a Wisconsin autumn we expect two months of good weather for doing masonry yet. It is not improbable that building may progress half the winter to good advantage. At the opening of spring we hope to see Voree double.

LETTERS.

Well, we have read many of that great pile of letters we cast aside two months since. If we could only have attended to them in season it would have made us and our readers a treat. Well, we don't mean to be so much crowded for time to come. Ah, there is the thing. How is deliverance coming? Some men always have more on hand than they can attend to; and we suspect we are of that number. Never mind. It is better to wear out than to rest out.—We are wearing in a good cause. And when this body is worn out we will get it renewed and much improved.

Speaking of wearing out brings to mind the old saw,—"Too many irons in the fire." There is no such thing as too many irons in the fire. The more the better, if you only attend to them. Then you always have one ready het up for the hammer. Just take care that they don't burn. Work all the time and you will be surprised at the amount you can accomplish.

Don't say I can't do it. If you begin in that way you will never get on. Impossible is not good language. There ought to be no such word in an English dictionary. To the believing all things are possible. Have a little faith and go ahead.

It was on this principle that we gave out notice that the Temple would be commenced this fall; and the result has justified the undertaking. We have already means in hand to keep work going on through the winter. If any one lacks faith, let him stand back.—Our course is onward.

Reader, did you ever think what was the object of a shepherd over a flock of sheep? Suppose the wolves should get in the fold and commence destroying the sheep, what should the shepherd do?—Speak out and struggle to defend the flock? or go off to some quiet nook and set down till the flock was destroyed, and there wait for somebody to tell him that he was shepherd, or for the sheep to bleat him up after the damage is passed? Curious ideas some people have.

Going to Beaver again. The thought is a pleasant one, but it is mixed with toil. Well, brother, do you wish to settle there? Now is the time. Navigation soon closes, and then, except a monthly mail drawn by dogs, you will be shut out from the rest of the world till spring. Plenty of society in the summer, and plenty of seclusion in the winter; enough to do and extra prices. By the way, we expect cedar timber for the Temple from there. Who will meet us there? Who of the saints is going up there to inherit the promises?

"Ah, you have been excommunicating a lot. Don't you see now that I was right in leaving you?" Just as right as the sheep is in leaving the fold for the forest, when wolves are prowling around.—We have slain the wolves, while you run to the forest to perish by his cubs.

THE EDUCATION OF THE HEART.

It is the vice of the age to substitute learning for wisdom—to educate the head, and forget that there is a more important education necessary for the heart. The reason is cultivated at an age when nature does not furnish the elements necessary to a successful cultivation of it, and the child is solicited to reflection, when he is only capable of sensation and emotion. In infancy, the attention and the memory are only excited strongly by things which impress the senses and move the heart, and a father shall instil more solid and available instruction in an hour spent in the fields, where wisdom and goodness are exemplified, seen and felt, than in a month spent in the study, where they are expounded in stereotyped aphorisms.

No physician doubts that precocious children, in fifty cases for one, are much the worse for the discipline they have undergone.—The mind seems to have been strained, and the foundations of insanity are laid. When the studies of maturer years are stuffed into the head of a child, people do not reflect on the anatomical fact, that the brain of an infant is not the brain of a man; that the one is confirmed and can bear exertion, the other is growing and requires repose; that to force the attention to abstract facts—to load the memory with chronological and historical or scientific detail—in short, to expect a child's brain to bear with impunity the exertions of a man's, is just as rational as it would be to hazard the same sort of experiment on its muscles.

The first eight or ten years of life should be devoted to the education of the heart—to the formation of principles, rather to the acquirement of what is usually termed knowledge. Nature herself points out such a course; for the emotions are then the liveliest and most easily moulded, being as yet unalloyed by passion. It is from this source that the mass of men are hereafter to draw their sum of happiness or misery; the actions of the immense majority are, under all circumstances, determined much more by feeling than reflection; in truth, life presents an infinity of occasions, where it is essential to happiness, that we should feel rightly; very few, where it is at all necessary, that we should think profoundly.

Up to the seventh year of life, very great changes are going on in the structure of the brain, and demand, therefore, the utmost attention not to interrupt them by improper or over excitement. Just that degree of exercise should be given to the brain at this period, as is necessary to its health; and the best is oral instruction, exemplified by objects which strike the sense.

It is perhaps necessary to add that at this period of life special attention should be given both by parents and teachers to the physical development of the child. Pure air and free exercise are indispensable, and wherever these are withheld, the consequences will be certain to extend themselves over the whole future life. The seeds of protracted and hopeless suffering have, in innumerable instances, been sown in the constitution of the child, simply through ignorance of this great fundamental physical law; and the time has come when the united voices of these innocent victims should ascend, "trumpet-tongued," to the ears of every parent and teacher in the land, "Give us free air and wholesome exercise; leave to develope our expanding energies, in accordance with the laws of our being, and full scope for the elastic and bounding impulses of our young blood!"—London Quarterly Review.

CONFERENCE.

There will be a Conference held at Franklinville, Franklin precinct, McHenry Co., Ill., the first Saturday in Nov. and the following Sunday.

☞ A dissenting Mormon said, a short time since, to one of the truth abiding saints, "if it had not been for John C. Bennett we might have been all united here now." Bah! Two and two does not make four because some body abuses the science of mathematics, and says it makes five; does it—eh?

CONSISTENCY.

THE TWO MARTYRS.

I came to the place where the two martyrs lay,
And pensively stood by the tomb;
And in a low whisper I heard something say,
How sweetly we sleep here alone.

Though tempests may rage and loud thunders roar,
And gathering storms may arise;
Yet calm and serene, and at rest are our souls,
The tears are all wiped from our eyes.

When called by our Savior to publish abroad
The pure testimony again,
With hearts of rejoicing we gladly went forth,
Enduring all things for his name.

We wandered as exiles and pilgrims below,
To publish salvation abroad;
Endeavored the trump of the gospel to blow,
Preparing a people for God.

And when among strangers in prison we lay,
And promised protection by law,
A lawless banditti soon made us their prey,
Our bodies they pierced with balls.

Go tell our dear brethren and families most dear,
To weep not for Joseph though gone;
Nor Hyrum, for Jesus, through scenes dark and dreary,
Has safely conducted us home.

would be commenced this fall; and the result has justified the undertaking. We have already means in hand to keep work going on through the winter. If any one lacks faith, let him stand back.—Our course is onward.

Reader, did you ever think what was the object of a shepherd over a flock of sheep? Suppose the wolves should get in the fold and commence destroying the sheep, what should the shepherd do?—Speak out and struggle to defend the flock? or go off to some quiet nook and set down till the flock was destroyed, and there wait for somebody to tell him that he was shepherd, or for the sheep to bleat him up after the damage is passed? Curious ideas some people have.

Going to Beaver again. The thought is a pleasant one, but it is mixed with toil. Well, brother, do you wish to settle there? Now is the time. Navigation soon closes, and then, except a monthly mail drawn by dogs, you will be shut out from the rest of the world till spring. Plenty of society in the summer, and plenty of seclusion in the winter; enough to do and extra prices. By the way, we expect cedar timber for the Temple from there. Who will meet us there? Who of the saints is going up there to inherit the promises?

"Ah, you have been excommunicating a lot. Don't you see now that I was right in leaving you?" Just as right as the sheep is in leaving the fold for the forest, when wolves are prowling around.—We have slain the wolves, while you run to the forest to perish by his cubs.

THE EDUCATION OF THE HEART.

It is the vice of the age to substitute learning for wisdom—to educate the head, and forget that there is a more important education necessary for the heart. The reason is cultivated at an age when nature does not furnish the elements necessary to a successful cultivation of it, and the child is solicited to reflection, when he is only capable of sensation and emotion. In infancy, the attention and the memory are only excited strongly by things which impress the senses and move the heart, and a father shall instil more solid and available instruction in an hour spent in the fields, where wisdom and goodness are exemplified, seen and felt, than in a month spent in the study, where they are expounded in stereotyped aphorisms.

No physician doubts that precocious children, in fifty cases for one, are much the worse for the discipline they have undergone.—The mind seems to have been strained, and the foundations of insanity are laid. When the studies of maturer years are stuffed into the head of a child, people do not reflect on the anatomical fact, that the brain of an infant is not the brain of a man; that the one is confirmed and can bear exertion, the other is growing and requires repose; that to force the attention to abstract facts—to load the memory with chronological and historical or scientific detail—in short, to expect a child's brain to bear with impunity the exertions of a man's, is just as rational as it would be to hazard the same sort of experiment on its muscles.

The first eight or ten years of life should be devoted to the education of the heart—to the formation of principles, rather to the acquirement of what is usually termed knowledge. Nature herself points out such a course; for the emotions are then the liveliest and most easily moulded, being as yet unalloyed by passion. It is from this source that the mass of men are hereafter to draw their sum of happiness or misery; the actions of the immense majority are, under all circumstances, determined much more by feeling than reflection; in truth, life presents an infinity of occasions, where it is essential to happiness, that we should feel rightly; very few, where it is at all necessary, that we should think profoundly.

Up to the seventh year of life, very great changes are going on in the structure of the brain, and demand, therefore, the utmost attention not to interrupt them by improper or over excitement. Just that degree of exercise should be given to the brain at this period, as is necessary to its health; and the best is oral instruction, exemplified by objects which strike the sense.

It is perhaps necessary to add that at this period of life special attention should be given both by parents and teachers to the physical development of the child. Pure air and free exercise are indispensable, and wherever these are withheld, the consequences will be certain to extend themselves over the whole future life. The seeds of protracted and hopeless suffering have, in innumerable instances, been sown in the constitution of the child, simply through ignorance of this great fundamental physical law; and the time has come when the united voices of these innocent victims should ascend, "trumpet-tongued," to the ears of every parent and teacher in the land, "Give us free air and wholesome exercise; leave to develope our expanding energies, in accordance with the laws of our being, and full scope for the elastic and bounding impulses of our young blood!"—London Quarterly Review.

CONFERENCE.

There will be a Conference held at Franklinville, Franklin precinct, McHenry Co., Ill., the first Saturday in Nov. and the following Sunday.

☞ A dissenting Mormon said, a short time since, to one of the truth abiding saints, "if it had not been for John C. Bennett we might have been all united here now." Bah! Two and two does not make four because some body abuses the science of mathematics, and says it makes five; does it—ch?

CONSISTENCY.

THE TWO MARTYRS.

I came to the place where the two martyrs lay,
And pensively stood by the tomb:
And in a low whisper I heard something say,
How sweetly we sleep here alone.

Though tempests may rage and loud thunders roar,
And gathering storms may arise;
Yet calm and serene, and at rest are our souls,
The tears are all wiped from our eyes.

When called by our Savior to publish abroad
The pure testimony again,
With hearts of rejoicing we gladly went forth,
Enduring all things for his name.

We wandered as exiles and pilgrims below,
To publish salvation abroad;
Endeavored the trump of the gospel to blow,
Preparing a people for God.

And when among strangers in prison we lay,
And promised protection by law,
A lawless banditti soon made us their prey,
Our bodies they pierced with balls.

Go tell our dear brethren and families most dear,
To weep not for Joseph though gone;
Nor Hyrum, for Jesus, through scenes dark and dreary,
Has safely conducted us home.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, OCT 28, 1847. [No. 32.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

DISCUSSION AGAIN.

It is universally understood that I am seeking discussion for the development of religion and truth, and that in my confidence that truth will triumph over error and that we have truth in all our principles, I have challenged the world and all religious parties for discussion. Recently one W. E. McLellin passed through here, and after he was gone his few adherents reported that I had been challenged by him and refused to meet him. This story is of course a mere falsehood. I never refused a challenge of any man on earth.

On McLellin's return to this place I sent a friend to him with the following note:

1. That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true original church of that people, commonly called Mormons.

2. That Joseph Smith remained the First President of that church and a true prophet till the day of his death.

3. That no man can stand at the head of that church as President, Prophet, Seer, Revelator, Translator and Apostle but he that is appointed by revelation of God and ordained by the ministration of angels, and after the establishment of the dispensation the revelation appointing the successor must come through his predecessor.

4. That no man on earth who has set up any pretence to stand at the head of that church, except James J. Strang, has any such authority; and they are all impostors.

I am ready to debate the foregoing propositions, or either of them, taking the affirmative on each. I will also consent to add any other important proposition which shall be suggested, and will not be particular as to the rules of the debate only that they be in some sense fair and reciprocal. JAMES J. STRANG.

To this, after fifteen hours delay, I received the following:

Tuesday, Oct. 19, 1847.

1. That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true original church of that people, commonly called Mormons.

2. That Joseph Smith remained the true Prophet, Seer, Revelator, Translator and First President of the church organized by him and others on the 6th day of April, 1830, until the day of his death.

3. That no man can stand at the head of that church as First President, Seer, &c., unless he has first been appointed of God by revelation, and then ordained thereto by the administration of angels.

4. That no man on earth has any legal claim to stand at the head of that church, organized as above, as First President, Seer, &c., except James J. Strang, consequently all others, whose claims are before the public, are impostors.

If James J. Strang will take the affirmative of the above propositions I will meet him this afternoon at 1 P. M. I had appointed to leave for Kirtland, my home, on to-morrow, consequently if I meet you in discussion it must be this afternoon or evening.

As ever, W. E. M'LELLIN.

P. S. I should prefer that each one should occupy only forty minutes at a time. W. E. M.

I instantly returned the following:

October 19th, 1847.

W. E. McL.—I am ready. I shall not consent to your alteration of the words of my affirmatives. Whatever affirmatives you make you will, of course, put in your own words. I agree to the time of speaking. As the time is so near I regret that you have not nominated a presiding officer. I nominate Lewis Royce, Esq., of Burlington. Any indifferent gentleman, who understands the order of debate, will suit me. Yours,

JAMES J. STRANG.

We accordingly met at the school house in Voree, Oct. 19th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., Lewis Royce, Esq., presiding.

Mr. Strang read the propositions and proceeded.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

It is a thing well understood in this community, and in most places where I am known, that whatever doctrine I advance, either in politics, morals, or theology, or any other of the sciences, I am ready at all times to defend. And that, holding that truth is more mighty than error, I am in the habit of seeking an encounter between them; and that in carrying out this object I have publicly challenged the champions of all sects and parties, christian or infidel, from the Roman Catholic church down to the least and last of all Pseudo factions to the encounter of logic. It is in accordance with this action that I have pushed on this discussion. I was not a little influenced to that course in this case from the fact that the story has been very industriously circulated, both here and in distant places, by my opponent and his partizans, that "he had challenged me to a debate, and I had refused to meet him." I deem no apology necessary for getting up a debate, but if any is necessary for using a little extra effort to crowd an opponent into one, this is my apology,—"That this course would most promptly give the lie to so bare-faced a falsehood."

In the four propositions before us I hold the affirmative on each. It was my desire to debate the theory of my opponent, as well as my own, and for that purpose, in the note I sent him, I offered to debate such propositions as he might add. Knowing that it is easier to attack than to defend, and that much skill and ability is sometimes necessary to defend the truth against skillful sophisms, I do not hesitate at all times to submit my doctrine to the test. Had my opponent like confidence in his, he would doubtless have made it a subject of examination on this occasion. As he has seen fit to hold back and only attack mine, I shall be content to take the laboring oar, and to both produce the truth and defend it.

The first fact I have to establish is, that "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," so called at this time, is the original church of that people commonly called Mormons. Let us look at the history of that people. The church had its beginning in 1829, when the priesthood was restored to the earth by revelation of God, who called Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery thereto, and ordained them by the ministry of angels. For they immediately baptized each other, and thus made each other both by priesthood and regen-

Discussion

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE. W. T., THURSDAY, OCT 28, 1847. [No. 32.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

DISCUSSION AGAIN.

It is universally understood that I am seeking discussion for the development of religion and truth, and that in my confidence that truth will triumph over error and that we have truth in all our principles, I have challenged the world and all religious parties for discussion. Recently one W. E. McLellin passed through here, and after he was gone his few adherents reported that I had been challenged by him and refused to meet him. This story is of course a mere falsehood. I never refused a challenge of any man on earth.

On McLellin's return to this place I sent a friend to him with the following note:

1. That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true original church of that people, commonly called Mormons.

2. That Joseph Smith remained the First President of that church and a true prophet till the day of his death

3. That no man can stand at the head of that church as President, Prophet, Seer, Revelator, Translator and Apostle but he that is appointed by revelation of God and ordained by the ministration of angels, and after the establishment of the dispensation the revelation appointing the successor must come through his predecessor.

4. That no man on earth who has set up any pretence to stand at the head of that church, except James J. Strang, has any such authority; and they are all impostors.

I am ready to debate the foregoing propositions, or either of them, taking the affirmative on each. I will also consent to add any other important proposition which shall be suggested, and will not be particular as to the rules of the debate only that they be in some sense fair and reciprocal. JAMES J. STRANG.

To this, after fifteen hours delay, I received the following:

Tuesday, Oct. 19, 1847.

1. That the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true original church of that people, commonly called Mormons.

2. That Joseph Smith remained the true Prophet, Seer, Revelator, Translator and First President of the church organized by him and others on the 6th day of April, 1830, until the day of his death.

3. That no man can stand at the head of that church as First President, Seer, &c., unless he has first been appointed of God by revelation, and then ordained thereto by the administration of angels.

4. That no man on earth has any legal claim to stand at the head of that church, organized as above, as First President, Seer, &c., except James J. Strang, consequently all others, whose claims are before the public, are impostors.

If James J. Strang will take the affirmative of the above propositions I will meet him this afternoon at 1 P. M. I had appointed to leave for Kirtland, my home, on to-morrow, consequently if I meet you in discussion it must be this afternoon or evening.

As ever, W. E. M'LELLIN.

P. S. I should prefer that each one should occupy only forty minutes at a time. W. E. M.

I instantly returned the following:

October 19th, 1847.

W. E. McL.—I am ready. I shall not consent to your alteration of the words of my affirmatives. Whatever affirmatives you make you will, of course, put in your own words. I agree to the time of speaking. As the time is so near I regret that you have not nominated a presiding officer. I nominate Lewis Royce, Esq., of Burlington. Any indifferent gentleman, who understands the order of debate, will suit me. Yours,

JAMES J. STRANG.

We accordingly met at the school house in Voree, Oct. 19th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., Lewis Royce, Esq., presiding.

Mr. Strang read the propositions and proceeded.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

It is a thing well understood in this community, and in most places where I am known, that whatever doctrine I advance, either in politics, morals, or theology, or any other of the sciences, I am ready at all times to defend. And that, holding that truth is more mighty than error, I am in the habit of seeking an encounter between them; and that in carrying out this object I have publicly challenged the champions of all sects and parties, christian or infidel, from the Roman Catholic church down to the least and last of all Pseudo factions to the encounter of logic. It is in accordance with this action that I have pushed on this discussion. I was not a little influenced to that course in this case from the fact that the story has been very industriously circulated, both here and in distant places, by my opponent and his partizans, that "he had challenged me to a debate, and I had refused to meet him." I deem no apology necessary for getting up a debate, but if any is necessary for using a little extra effort to crowd an opponent into one, this is my apology,—"That this course would most promptly give the lie to so bare-faced a falsehood."

In the four propositions before us I hold the affirmative on each. It was my desire to debate the theory of my opponent, as well as my own, and for that purpose, in the note I sent him, I offered to debate such propositions as he might add. Knowing that it is easier to attack than to defend, and that much skill and ability is sometimes necessary to defend the truth against skillful sophisms, I do not hesitate at all times to submit my doctrine to the test. Had my opponent like confidence in his, he would doubtless have made it a subject of examination on this occasion. As he has seen fit to hold back and only attack mine, I shall be content to take the laboring oar, and to both produce the truth and defend it.

The first fact I have to establish is, that "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," so called at this time, is the original church of that people commonly called Mormons. Let us look at the history of that people. The church had its beginning in 1829, when the priesthood was restored to the earth by revelation of God, who called Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery thereto, and ordained them by the ministry of angels. For they immediately baptized each other, and thus made each other both by priesthood and regeneration of water and the spirit, members of the church. They also baptized others from time to time till April 6th, 1830, when six of the members thus baptized assembled at Fayette, Seneca Co., N. Y., and organized themselves not only as an ecclesiastical body, but as a body politic and corporate, according to the law of that State. At the organization they were called the Church of Christ, and continued to be called both by that name and by the various names applied to the true church in the scriptures from that time down to this.

But in 1834, as they were about to obtain a title to a lot on which to build a Temple at Kirtland, it was necessary to designate a name by which they would be legally known in that State. Among the numerous denominations there, all claiming to be christians and to be the true church of Christ, the name "Church of Christ" was already known on the public records as the designation of another people. Consequently they, in a public Conference, by a vote of the assembled authorities from the First Presidency down, added the words "Latter Day Saints," and took the deed of the lot on which the Temple at Kirtland was built by that name.

In process of time the word Jesus was prefixed to the word Christ in the name of the church, as it is in the name of the Savior. Hence the name "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." But it should be remarked that the addition of these several words to the name of the church have never been made by a part of the church, leaving another part clinging to the shorter name. They have IN EVERY INSTANCE been made by the WHOLE BODY. The parties claiming to be the true church by virtue of name alone are new organizations, got up years after, and having a distinct and independent origin.

I state this last fact, however, only as one among other reasons for claiming the identity of the original Mormon church in the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The true identity of a church consists in identity of doctrine, discipline and organization, and a regular succession in the priesthood and superior authorities.—Though its name should be changed many times; though faction after faction should fall off; though even a majority of its members should depart from the faith and establish a new system, yet so long as there continued a regular succession in the supreme authorities and priesthood of the church, and a regular organization in the original order, maintaining the original fundamental doctrine and ordinances. that body, so kept up, would be the identical original church. As well might it be said that the French nation was not the same nation that it was sixty years ago, because its name has been four times changed; or that the British empire was not the same that it was two hundred years ago, because its name has been twice changed. Yes, as well might my opponent say that I am not the same person that I was twenty-five years ago, because a word has been added to my name since that time. So strange is the idea that a simple change of name changes identity, that I should never have deemed it worthy of notice, but for the fact that my opponent has principally relied on it in defence of his measures and party.

MR. MCLELLIN.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

I shall contend that there is but one church of Christ, and the name of it is "the Church of Christ." Names are given to designate a thing and distinguish it from other things. Each church has its appropriate name. There is one church of Christ, because he established it, and a Presbyterian church, and an Episcopal Methodist church, and a Baptist church, and all are called by their appropriate names, because they distinguish them and show what they are. Christ has given his name to his church to show that it is his church, and if you alter the name it is not his church any longer. The name of the thing tells what the thing is. Christ established his church on earth and gave it his name, because it was his church, and every thing must be called by the right name; and when the church fell into sin, and left the pure, holy, grand, glorious, righteous principles on which Christ established them, they wanted to be called by some other name, because they were not any longer the church of Christ. They did not wish to take upon them any longer the name of Christ, so they took an appropriate name. They called themselves Latter Day Saints. Every thing must have the right name, and they could not any longer be called by the name of Christ, because they were not his church. They had gone over to L-A-T-T-E-R D-A-Y S-A-I-N-T ism, and there let them wallow.

I am not a-going to stop here, before my time is up, neither. I have got enough to say. I have been crowded into this debate, and now I am a-going to attend to it. And I shall claim all my rights. I shall speak my full time if he don't speak ten minutes with his flummery about his name, and the name of Great Britain and France, and all the great and glorious nations who have filled the world with their fame, their arts and their arms. What have they to do with the church of Christ? His name is a pretty sample of his church. It is first one thing and then another, and won't be any thing long.

The name of the church is church of Christ. The word Jesus is not it. There is no saint about it. His name is Christ, and he said the church should be called by his name, and that is "church of Christ."

It requires the same amount of authority to abrogate a law that it does to make it. The name of the church was given by revelation, and can only be altered by revelation. It was changed by council action, which is a less degree of authority than a revelation, and, consequently, is not valid. There is no force in it, unless they consider council action equal with revelation. This is their idea. It is all great Mr. Strang; his authority is sufficient to do any thing. The PRIESTHOOD. The GREATNESS of the everlasting priesthood.—HE got the greatness of the EVERLASTING PRIESTHOOD. Flummery! His succession in the PRIESTHOOD. That is all little Jimme J. knows. He has had another word added to his name to distinguish him from his uncle or somebody else; so he thinks the church must have another word added to its name, and then they will be just alike.

Why, this rule would cut off Mormonism altogether. By this rule the Catholics are the true church. They have got a regular succession in the priesthood from the days of the Apostles, but they are not the true church because they have changed the name. They call it the Holy Catholic Apostolic church of Jesus Christ, and if what I hear is true little Jimme J. has beat them. He calls his church the Holy Catholic Apostolic Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I am acquainted with the history of this church from the beginning. I know all about these things. You can't deceive me with your flummery. I know all about it. I have been looking on from the beginning and have seen all the ups and downs and twistings, and you can't draw the wool over my eyes with your flummery.—He tells about Great Britain and the other great nations. Why, we were once part of Great Britain. And after we declared ourselves independent of them we took a new name, because we were a new nation. These were the same men here, but they took a new name, and that made them a new nation. The old name did not properly distinguish them, and they took an appropriate name. They called themselves United States, because they were United States. Every thing must be called by its appropriate name. They could not have made themselves Great Britain by calling themselves so.

Revelation is the highest authority known in this church: the eration of water and the spirit, members of the church. They also baptized others from time to time till April 6th, 1830, when six of the members thus baptized assembled at Fayette, Seneca Co., N. Y., and organized themselves not only as an ecclesiastical body, but as a body politic and corporate, according to the law of that State. At the organization they were called the Church of Christ, and continued to be called both by that name and by the various names applied to the true church in the scriptures from that time down to this.

But in 1834, as they were about to obtain a title to a lot on which to build a Temple at Kirtland, it was necessary to designate a name by which they would be legally known in that State. Among the numerous denominations there, all claiming to be christians and to be the true church of Christ, the name "Church of Christ" was already known on the public records as the designation of another people. Consequently they, in a public Conference, by a vote of the assembled authorities from the First Presidency down, added the words "Latter Day Saints," and took the deed of the lot on which the Temple at Kirtland was built by that name.

In process of time the word Jesus was prefixed to the word Christ in the name of the church, as it is in the name of the Savior. Hence the name "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." But it should be remarked that the addition of these several words to the name of the church have never been made by a part of the church, leaving another part clinging to the shorter name. They have IN EVERY INSTANCE been made by the WHOLE BODY. The parties claiming to be the true church by virtue of name alone are new organizations, got up years after, and having a distinct and independent origin.

I state this last fact, however, only as one among other reasons for claiming the identity of the original Mormon church in the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The true identity of a church consists in identity of doctrine, discipline and organization, and a regular succession in the priesthood and superior authorities.—Though its name should be changed many times; though faction after faction should fall off; though even a majority of its members should depart from the faith and establish a new system, yet so long as there continued a regular succession in the supreme authorities and priesthood of the church, and a regular organization in the original order, maintaining the original fundamental doctrine and ordinances. that body, so kept up, would be the identical original church. As well might it be said that the French nation was not the same nation that it was sixty years ago, because its name has been four times changed; or that the British empire was not the same that it was two hundred years ago, because its name has been twice changed. Yes, as well might my opponent say that I am not the same person that I was twenty-five years ago, because a word has been added to my name since that time. So strange is the idea that a simple change of name changes identity, that I should never have deemed it worthy of notice, but for the fact that my opponent has principally relied on it in defence of his measures and party.

MR. McLELLIN.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

I shall contend that there is but one church of Christ, and the name of it is "the Church of Christ." Names are given to designate a thing and distinguish it from other things. Each church has its appropriate name. There is one church of Christ, because he established it, and a Presbyterian church, and an Episcopal Methodist church, and a Baptist church, and all are called by their appropriate names, because they distinguish them and show what they are. Christ has given his name to his church to show that it is his church, and if you alter the name it is not his church any longer. The name of the thing tells what the thing is. Christ established his church on earth and gave it his name, because it was his church, and every thing must be called by the right name; and when the church fell into sin, and left the pure, holy, grand, glorious righteous principles on which Christ established them, they wanted to be called by some other name, because they were not any longer the church of Christ. They did not wish to take upon them any longer the name of Christ, so they took an appropriate name. They called themselves Latter Day Saints. Every thing must have the right name, and they could not any longer be called by the name of Christ, because they were not his church. They had gone over to L-A-T-T-E-R D-A-Y S-A-I-N-T ism, and there let them wallow.

I am not a-going to stop here, before my time is up, neither. I have got enough to say. I have been crowded into this debate, and now I am a-going to attend to it. And I shall claim all my right. I shall speak my full time if he don't speak ten minutes with his flummery about his name, and the name of Great Britain and France and all the great and glorious nations who have filled the world with their fame, their arts and their arms. What have they to do with the church of Christ? His name is a pretty sample of his church. It is first one thing and then another, and won't be any thing long.

The name of the church is church of Christ. The word Jesus is not it. There is no saint about it. His name is Christ, and he said the church should be called by his name, and that is "church of Christ."

It requires the same amount of authority to abrogate a law that it does to make it. The name of the church was given by revelation, and can only be altered by revelation. It was changed by council action, which is a less degree of authority than a revelation, and consequently, is not valid. There is no force in it, unless they consider council action equal with revelation. This is their idea. It is all great Mr. Strang; his authority is sufficient to do any thing. The PRIESTHOOD. The GREATNESS of the everlasting priesthood.—HE got the greatness of the EVERLASTING PRIESTHOOD. Flummery. His succession in the PRIESTHOOD. That is all little Jimme J. knows. He has had another word added to his name to distinguish him from his uncle or somebody else; so he thinks the church must have another word added to its name, and then they will be just alike.

Why, this rule would cut off Mormonism altogether. By this rule the Catholics are the true church. They have got a regular succession in the priesthood from the days of the Apostles, but they are not the true church because they have changed the name. They call it the Holy Catholic Apostolic church of Jesus Christ, and if what I hear is true little Jimme J. has beat them. He calls his church the Holy Catholic Apostolic Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I am acquainted with the history of this church from the beginning. I know all about these things. You can't deceive me with your flummery. I know all about it. I have been looking on from the beginning and have seen all the ups and downs and twistings, and you can't draw the wool over my eyes with your flummery.—He tells about Great Britain and the other great nations. Why, we were once part of Great Britain. And after we declared ourselves independent of them we took a new name, because we were a new nation. These were the same men here, but they took a new name, and that made them a new nation. The old name did not properly distinguish them, and they took an appropriate name. They called themselves United States, because they were United States. Every thing must be called by its appropriate name. They could not have made themselves Great Britain by calling themselves so.

Revelation is the highest authority known in this church: the name of the church was given by revelation. It is called the church of Christ in revelation eight times. All the rest of the name was given by council action. We are commanded to put on the name of Christ, and for three years the name of Christ was not in the church. It was the Church of Latter Day Saints, because Christ had nothing to do with it. Then they fell into wickedness and finally they got so bad they wanted another name, and they called it the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

How did they put on the name of Christ, when the name of Christ was not in the church at all? I have had nothing to do with this Latter Day Saintism. I went out of the church when Saintism came in, and when I talked of coming in again with Strang I could not stand that. I thought that white heap might be meal, and, then, it might be a cat. So I held back, and I shall stick to the name of Christ. Christ has but one church, and that is the church of Christ. I am well acquainted with these matters. I have been crowded into this debate, and I shall stick them to it till they are sick of it.—I have got the documents, and I will make little Jimme J. look little before he gets through. He don't get out of this so easy as he thinks for, I don't back out. When I take hold of any thing I hang on, and I will make him sorry he ever met W. E. McLellin.

MR. STRANG.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

I cannot say but I may be sorry I ever met W. E. McLellin. I am not particularly fond of meeting a blackguard on any occasion; and when a disputant makes up his arguments principally of nicknames, they are not especially convincing or very interesting, even though one is not able to answer them. As they are an article I do not deal in, I shall be under the necessity of conceding to my opponent all that he has proved by calling me little Jimme J. Still I cannot see that the name has changed my identity. For aught that I can perceive I am the same identical person that I was before that name was given me. And if a change of my name does not change my identity, I cannot perceive how it should change the identity of the church. Nor do I see that that name is any more appropriate since it was given than it was before. It may be all blindness in me, but certainly I cannot see but I am the same both in identity and characteristics, and consequently whatever name was appropriate in time past is now.

I shall perfectly agree with my opponent that whatever amount of authority was necessary to make a law, the same is necessary to abrogate it. I wish every person present to keep that principle in mind, as we shall have occasion to appeal to it hereafter. The church is called, both in revelation and in all other writings, by a variety of appellations or names, such as "the church," "the body of Christ," "a woman," "the bride, the Lamb's wife," "the church of Christ," "the assembly of the saints," "the church of God," "the church of the living God." "the only true and living church," &c., &c., but the only name that has ever been given to it by the force of a REVELATION, in the nature of a LAW or COMMANDMENT, is, "THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS." All other names are merely prescriptive. The authority of them consists merely in the fact that they are used, for there is no command that they shall be used. God has called the church by a variety of names, but this is the only one he has given as the name in a pre-eminent sense; and this is given by revelation, which is the highest authority known in the church.

Mr. President, however, as a lawyer, will agree with me not only that change of name does not change identity, but that no specific amount of authority is necessary to give or change a name. Parents, relatives, friends, or mere strangers, give name to persons, and such names are all held equally valid. A distinguished ex-member of Congress, from the city of New York, was named Preserved Fish, from the simple fact that he was found in infancy in the fish market, and his parentage was unknown. And persons thus named may change their own names at pleasure. In accordance with this fact I prefixed the name Jesse to my original name of James Strang, and many years after I changed it about so as to make Jesse the middle instead of the first name; yet I never heard till to-day that I was not the same identical individual that was formerly James Strang. So true is it that no specific amount of authority is necessary to change a name, that if a man shall write any name whatever to a contract, but in a single instance, he is liable to be sued by that name, and though he take titles to property by a name he was never before called, yet will he hold the property. Churches and other corporations adopt a name at pleasure, and making contracts by one name can sue and be sued on them by any other name by which they may be afterwards called.

The illustration which my opponent has borrowed from the separation of the United States from Great Britain is unfortunate for him in all its parts. In that case Great Britain kept a regular succession in the supreme authorities at home, and the United States established a new supremacy. Consequently Great Britain retained her identity without regard to her name. But Great Britain had changed her name some years previous to the organization of the United States; as the church had changed its name some years previous to the formation of the church, of which my opponent is visible head; so if the United States, when they formed a separate and independent government, had fallen back on the old name of "Kingdom of England," and then claimed to be the original identical English island and empire by virtue of name alone, without either a succession in the supreme authorities or likeness of constitution and form of government, they would have been guilty of precisely the folly that my opponent is perpetrating, when he claims that his followers are the identical original Mormon church by virtue of the name "Church of Christ."

(To be continued.)

LONG LIVE HUMBUG.

GOLD, GOLD.—Who would not be a Mormon for gold! The apostates are drumming up for converts to their faith just as the kings of the earth drum up for men of blood. Gold, gold, is the cry now. The apostates have promised gold to those that go with them, as much as they can carry. It is hardly credible, but nevertheless true, that men who have had the credit of a good share of common sense are responding to such calls. But where is the gold coming from? Oh, the old trick of money digging; that is all.—Money digging is getting in repute again. Lust and avarice hand in hand. The cry of gold and women, and the union of the pseudo and Bennett apostacy, tells its own story. God rid us of all such. We pity any one who is deceived by them. Allowing that any of them are honest, and we do not doubt a very few are, where will they hide their heads when they see the result.

☞ In consequence of the publication of the debate commenced on the first page we suspendad the publication of the article on Prophets.

CONFERENCE.

There will be a Conference held at Franklinville, Franklin precinct, McHenry Co., Ill., the first Saturday in Nov. and the following Sunday.

ame of the church was given by revelation. It is called the church f Christ in revelation eight times. All the rest of the name was iven by council action. We are commanded to put on the name of hrist, and for three years the name of Christ was not in the church. t was the Church of Latter Day Saints, because Christ had noth- ng to do with it. Then they fell into wickedness and finally they ot so bad they wanted another name, and they called it the Church f Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

How did they put on the name of Christ, when the name of Christ as not in the church at all? I have had nothing to do with this atter Day Saintism. I went out of the church when Saintism ame in, and when I talked of coming in again with Strang I could ot stand that. I thought that white heap might be meal, and, then, t might be a cat. So I held back, and I shall stick to the name of Christ. Christ has but one church, and that is the church of Christ. I am well acquainted with these matters. I have been crowded in- o this debate, and I shall stick them to it till they are sick of it.— I have got the documents, and I will make little Jimme J. look lit- le before he gets through. He don't get out of this so easy as he thinks for, I don't back out. When I take hold of any thing I hang on, and I will make him sorry he ever met W. E. McLellin.

Mr. STRANG.

Mr. President,—

I cannot say but I may be sorry I ever met W. E. McLellin. I am not particularly fond of meeting a blackguard on any occasion; and when a disputant makes up his arguments principally of nick-names, they are not especially convincing or very interesting, even though one is not able to answer them. As they are an artic-le I do not deal in, I shall be under the necessity of conceding to my opponent all that he has proved by calling me little Jimme J. Still I cannot see that the name has changed my identity. For aught that I can perceive I am the same identical person that I was be-fore that name was given me. And if a change of my name does not change my identity, I cannot perceive how it should change the identity of the church. Nor do I see that that name is any more ap-propriate since it was given than it was before. It may be all blind-ness in me, but certainly I cannot see but I am the same both in identity and characteristics, and consequently whatever name was appropriate in time past is now.

I shall perfectly agree with my opponent that whatever amount of authority was necessary to make a law, the same is necessary to abrogate it. I wish every person present to keep that principle in mind, as we shall have occasion to appeal to it hereafter. The church is called, both in revelation and in all other writings, by a variety of appellations or names, such as "the church," "the body of Christ," "a woman," "the bride, the Lamb's wife," "the church of Christ," "the assembly of the saints," "the church of God," "the church of the living God," "the only true and living church," &c., &c., but the only name that has ever been given to it by the force of a REVELATION, in the nature of a LAW or COMMANDMENT, is, "THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS." All other names are merely prescriptive. The authority of them consists merely in the fact that they are used, for there is no command that they shall be used. God has called the church by a variety of names, but this is the only one he has given as the name in a pre-eminent sense; and this is given by revelation, which is the highest author-ity known in the church.

Mr. President, however, as a lawyer, will agree with me not on-ly that change of name does not change identity, but that no specific amount of authority is necessary to give or change a name. Parents, relatives, friends, or mere strangers, give name to persons, and such names are all held equally valid. A distinguished ex-member of Congress, from the city of New York, was named Preserved Fish, from the simple fact that he was found in infancy in the fish market, and his parentage was unknown. And persons thus named may change their own names at pleasure. In accordance with this fact I prefixed the name Jesse to my original name of James Strang, and many years after I changed it about so as to make Jesse the middle instead of the first name; yet I never heard till to-day that I was not the same identical individual that was formerly James Strang. So true is it that no specific amount of authority is necessary to change a name, that if a man shall write any name whatever to a contract, but in a single instance, he is liable to be sued by that name, and though he take titles to property by a name he was never before called, yet will he hold the property. Churches and other corporations adopt a name at pleasure, and making contracts by one name can sue and be sued on them by any other name by which they may be afterwards called.

The illustration which my opponent has borrowed from the sep-aration of the United States from Great Britain is unfortunate for him in all its parts. In that case Great Britain kept a regular suc-cession in the supreme authorities at home, and the United States established a new supremacy. Consequently Great Britain retain-ed her identity without regard to her name. But Great Britain had changed her name some years previous to the organization of the United States; as the church had changed its name some years pre-vious to the formation of the church, of which my opponent is visi-ble head; so if the United States, when they formed a separate and independent government, had fallen back on the old name of "King-dom of England," and then claimed to be the original identical Eng lish island and empire by virtue of name alone, without either a succession in the supreme authorities or likeness of constitution and form of government, they would have been guilty of precisely the folly that my opponent is perpetrating, when he claims that his fol-lowers are the identical original Mormon church by virtue of the name "Church of Christ."

(To be continued.)

LONG LIVE HUMBUG.

GOLD, GOLD.—Who would not be a Mormon for gold? The apostates are drumming up for converts to their faith just as the kings of the earth drum up for men of blood. Gold, gold, is the cry now. The apostates have promised gold to those that go with them, as much as they can carry. It is hardly credible, but never-theless true, that men who have had the credit of a good share of common sense are responding to such calls. But where is the gold coming from? Oh, the old trick of money digging; that is all.— Money digging is getting in repute again. Lust and avarice hand in hand. The cry of gold and women, and the union of the pseudo and Bennett apostacy, tells its own story. God rid us of all such. We pity any one who is deceived by them. Allowing that any of them are honest, and we do not doubt a very few are, where will they hide their heads when they see the result.

☞ In consequence of the publication of the debate commenced on the first page we suspended the publication of the article on Prophets.

CONFERENCE.

There will be a Conference held at Franklinville, Franklin pre-cinct, McHenry Co., Ill., the first Saturday in Nov. and the fol-lowing Sunday.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 4.

(Continued from No. 30.)

"The Apostles established the church of Christ in all the countries in the universe, and sealed with their blood the truths they taught.

"Those whom they had chosen to succeed them in the functions of their ministry imitated their zeal, and, IN LIKE MANNER, transmitted to their successors the faith intrusted to them, which, by these means, has from age to age been handed down to our days in its original purity.

(The church) "having the same invisible head, Jesus Christ, and the same visible head, St. Peter, first Pope and Bishop of Rome."

If I understand this language, Mr. Rafferty, especially taking it in connection with what you have said of the power conferred on "PETER alone," you hold that Peter was not the successor of Christ in his ministry and priesthood, but a vicegerent to him; that Christ is at all times the invisible head of the church, but that Peter, during his episcopate, and the successors of Peter in the episcopate are the visible head of the church.

Now, what am I to understand by these words,—"Those WHOM THEY HAD CHOSEN TO SUCCEED them in the functions of their ministry, IN LIKE MANNER, transmitted to their successors the faith intrusted to them?" In like manner to what manner or act? In the same manner that was used in conferring it on them? In like manner to that which was used in giving them their ministry? I cannot understand your language otherwise. Then how should any one be made Pope, vicegerent of Christ, and visible head of the church? In like manner as Peter was. I give this in your own words:

"To St. Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, &c. Matt. xvi. 19.

"To Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not; and thou being once converted, confirm thy brethren. Luke xxii. 37. [Luke xxii. 32.]

"To Peter our blessed Savior proposed three times the following questions: Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? John xxi. 15, 16, 17; and upon Peter's answer in the affirmative he tells him twice feed my lambs, and the third time feed my sheep."

Is this the manner that men are made Popes in these days? No. Then the functions of their ministry are not transmitted to them "in like manner," as they were received by the Apostles. That a just comparison may be made of the mode of conferring the "keys of the kingdom" on Peter and on the Popes of Rome, I extract from Goodrich's "religious ceremonies and customs," page 261:

"Policy exerts all her arts, and sets every spring in motion, at the election of a pope; nor do the electors always wait for the death of the present chief or head of the church, to begin those cabals and intrigues which are proper for advancing him whom they esteem a fit person to succeed to the pontifical throne; and although the college (of Cardinals) invariably and unanimously invoke the assistance and aid of the Holy Ghost, to direct them in the choice of a Vicar of Jesus Christ, yet their eminences use all the precaution imaginable to prevent him from being in any way concerned in the election. The cardinals are obliged to enter the conclave ten days after the death of the pope; but before that time they hear the Mass of the Holy Ghost in the Gregorian Chapel, and some bishop makes a Latin harangue, exhorting them to make choice of a person who is worthy to fill the chair of the prince of the apostles. After this, their eminences march in procession to the conclave, two by two, according to their rank, attended by the Swiss Guards and a vast crowd of people, the chorus all the while singing the "Veni Creator." Being arrived at the conclave, they take possession of their cells by lot, after which they all go to the Paulin Chapel, where the bulls for the election of the pope are read, and the dean of the sacred college exhorts the assembly to act in conformity to them. When this is over, the cardinals are allowed to go home to dine, but must return to the conclave before three at night: at which time the master of the ceremonies acquaints them that they ought not to shut themselves up, unless they are determined to continue there as long as the conclave shall last, consistently with the order and direction of the bulls, in which it is regulated that those who go out shall not be permitted to return. The governor and marshal of the conclave now post their soldiers in such order and in such places as they judge most requisite for the safety of the election.—The embassadors of princes, and all those who have any interest in the election of a future pope, are allowed to continue in the conclave for the first twenty-four hours. When the clock strikes three the master of the ceremonies rings a bell, after which all, except the electors, retire: the doors are then shut, the conclave is walled up, and guards are posted at all the avenues. The cardinal-dean, and cardinal-camerlengo, now visit the conclave, to see if it be well shut, and an act thereof is drawn up by an apostolical notary.

"None but the cardinals, and two conclavists for each, (one an ecclesiastic, and the other a soldier,) remain in the conclave. Those cardinals who are princes, or who are old, or infirm, are sometimes allowed three. The other persons appointed for the service of the conclave are the sacristan, the under-sacristan, a secretary, an under-secretary, a confessor, who is always a Jesuit, two physicians, a surgeon, two barbers, an apothecary, and their apprentices, five masters of the ceremonies, a bricklayer, a carpenter, and sixteen porters or valets, for hard labor.

"Though the office of a conclavist be incommodious and uneasy, yet on account of its privileges it is very much sought after; for a conclavist is sometimes the secret agent of the ministers of crowned heads. Every officer, however, of the conclave, takes an oath not to reveal any of its secrets.

"According to the order of Innocent III., there are three several methods of electing a pope, viz. by scrutiny, compromise, and inspiration. The election by scrutiny, which is the only way that has been used for a long while, contains all the formality that appears most essential for making the election canonical. Still it is no more than a mere ceremony, as the several factions of the cardinals have united beforehand in the choice of the person. This harmony is brought about by the most refined and delicate strokes of policy, and for the most part comes on after their eminences have found out, by several scrutinies, the disposition of the sacred college. Then, if the votes for any of the candidates come near the number required, it is a very common practice for the other factions to fall off and coalesce with the others, and thereby contribute to the pope's election, fearing to draw on them his hatred by a fruitless and unseasonable opposition.

"The scrutiny consists in collecting and examining votes, given in by printed billets, which the cardinals put into a chalice that stands on the altar of the chapel, at which they have met to choose the pope. These billets are prepared by the masters of the ceremonies, who put them into two golden basins, placed at each end of a long table, which stands on the side of the high altar. Before the scrutiny begins, little bills, having the names of all the cardinals on them, are put into a bag, with an intent to draw thence three scrutineers, three overseers of the sick, and three revisors.

"The cardinals use all the art imaginable to disguise their hands. Or, if they have not skill enough to conceal their hands, they make use of an unknown hand, that it may not be known for whom they vote.

"If there be a greater or less number of billets than there are car-

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 4.

(Continued from No. 30.)

"The Apostles established the church of Christ in all the countries in the universe, and sealed with their blood the truths they taught.

"Those whom they had chosen to succeed them in the functions of their ministry imitated their zeal, and, IN LIKE MANNER, transmitted to their successors the faith intrusted to them, which, by these means, has from age to age been handed down to our days in its original purity.

(The church) "having the same invisible head, Jesus Christ, and the same visible head, St. Peter, first Pope and Bishop of Rome."

If I understand this language, Mr. Rafferty, especially taking it in connection with what you have said of the power conferred on "PETER alone," you hold that Peter was not the successor of Christ in his ministry and priesthood, but a vicegerent to him; that Christ is at all times the invisible head of the church, but that Peter, during his episcopate, and the successors of Peter in the episcopate are the visible head of the church.

Now, what am I to understand by these words,—"Those WHOM THEY HAD CHOSEN TO SUCCEED them in the functions of their ministry, IN LIKE MANNER, transmitted to their successors the faith intrusted to them?" In like manner to what manner or act? In the same manner that was used in conferring it on them? In like manner to that which was used in giving them their ministry? I cannot understand your language otherwise. Then how should any one be made Pope, vicegerent of Christ, and visible head of the church? In like manner as Peter was. I give this in your own words:

"To St. Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, &c. Matt. xvi. 19.

"To Peter alone our blessed Savior said, I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not; and thou being once converted, confirm thy brethren. Luke xxii. 37. [Luke xxii. 32.]

"To Peter our blessed Savior proposed three times the following questions: Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? John xxi. 15, 16, 17; and upon Peter's answer in the affirmative he tells him twice feed my lambs, and the third time feed my sheep."

Is this the manner that men are made Popes in these days? No. Then the functions of their ministry are not transmitted to them "in like manner," as they were received by the Apostles. That a just comparison may be made of the mode of conferring the "keys of the kingdom" on Peter and on the Popes of Rome, I extract from Goodrich's "religious ceremonies and customs," page 261:

"Policy exerts all her arts, and sets every spring in motion, at the election of a pope; nor do the electors always wait for the death of the present chief or head of the church, to begin those cabals and intrigues which are proper for advancing him whom they esteem a fit person to succeed to the pontifical throne; and although the college (of Cardinals) invariably and unanimously invoke the assistance and aid of the Holy Ghost, to direct them in the choice of a Vicar of Jesus Christ, yet their eminences use all the precaution imaginable to prevent him from being in any way concerned in the election. The cardinals are obliged to enter the conclave ten days after the death of the pope; but before that time they hear the Mass of the Holy Ghost in the Gregorian Chapel, and some bishop makes a Latin harangue, exhorting them to make choice of a person who is worthy to fill the chair of the prince of the apostles. After this, their eminences march in procession to the conclave, two by two, according to their rank, attended by the Swiss Guards and a vast crowd of people, the chorus all the while singing the "Veni Creator." Being arrived at the conclave, they take possession of their cells by lot, after which they all go to the Paulin Chapel, where the bulls for the election of the pope are read, and the dean of the sacred college exhorts the assembly to act in conformity to them. When this is over, the cardinals are allowed to go home to dine, but must return to the conclave before three at night: at which time the master of the ceremonies acquaints them that they ought not to shut themselves up, unless they are determined to continue there as long as the conclave shall last, consistently with the order and direction of the bulls, in which it is regulated that those who go out shall not be permitted to return. The governor and marshal of the conclave now post their soldiers in such order and in such places as they judge most requisite for the safety of the election.—The embassadors of princes, and all those who have any interest in the election of a future pope, are allowed to continue in the conclave for the first twenty-four hours. When the clock strikes three the master of the ceremonies rings a bell, after which all, except the electors, retire: the doors are then shut, the conclave is walled up, and guards are posted at all the avenues. The cardinal-dean, and cardinal-camerlengo, now visit the conclave, to see if it be well shut, and an act thereof is drawn up by an apostolical notary.

"None but the cardinals, and two conclavists for each, (one an ecclesiastic, and the other a soldier,) remain in the conclave. Those cardinals who are princes, or who are old, or infirm, are sometimes allowed three. The other persons appointed for the service of the conclave are the sacristan, the under-sacristan, a secretary, an under-secretary, a confessor, who is always a Jesuit, two physicians, a surgeon, two barbers, an apothecary, and their apprentices, five masters of the ceremonies, a bricklayer, a carpenter, and sixteen porters or valets, for hard labor.

"Though the office of a conclavist be incommodious and uneasy, yet on account of its privileges it is very much sought after; for a conclavist is sometimes the secret agent of the ministers of crowned heads. Every officer, however, of the conclave, takes an oath not to reveal any of its secrets.

"According to the order of Innocent III., there are three several methods of electing a pope, viz. by scrutiny, compromise, and inspiration. The election by scrutiny, which is the only way that has been used for a long while, contains all the formality that appears most essential for making the election canonical. Still it is no more than a mere ceremony, as the several factions of the cardinals have united beforehand in the choice of the person. This harmony is brought about by the most refined and delicate strokes of policy, and for the most part comes on after their eminences have found out, by several scrutinies, the disposition of the sacred college. Then, if the votes for any of the candidates come near the number required, it is a very common practice for the other factions to fall off and coalesce with the others, and thereby contribute to the pope's election, fearing to draw on them his hatred by a fruitless and unseasonable opposition.

"The scrutiny consists in collecting and examining votes, given in by printed billets, which the cardinals put into a chalice that stands on the altar of the chapel, at which they have met to choose the pope. These billets are prepared by the masters of the ceremonies, who put them into two golden basins, placed at each end of a long table, which stands on the side of the high altar. Before the scrutiny begins, little bills, having the names of all the cardinals on them, are put into a bag, with an intent to draw thence three scrutineers, three overseers of the sick, and three revisors.

"The cardinals use all the art imaginable to disguise their hands. Or, if they have not skill enough to conceal their hands, they make use of an unknown hand, that it may not be known for whom they vote.

"If there be a greater or less number of billets than there are cardinals, the scrutineer burns all he finds in the two chalices, and each cardinal makes a new one, till the scrutiny comes right. When the billets are equal to the number of cardinals, the scrutiny is published. Meanwhile, the cardinals mark each name upon a sheet of paper, on which all their names are printed. Those who are named set down also the votes given them, to see if they have a sufficient number to be elected. This number must be at least two thirds.

"If the votes do not rise to a sufficient number, billets are taken in order to choose the pope by way of accessus; and there is scarcely ever a scrutiny without this accessus. The accessus is intended to correct the scrutiny. In this, they give their votes by other billets, on which is written, "Accedo Domino," &c., when they join their vote to another's; or, "Accedo Nemini," when they adhere to their first vote. The accessus is performed in the same manner as the scrutiny, only they do not take the oath again. The scrutineers examine the billets of the accessus, as they did those of the scrutiny, and the cardinals, after the same manner, set down the votes which are gained thereby to any of the candidates.

"After the revisors have very accurately examined the votes of the accessus, and find the election to be perfectly canonical, they send for three apostolical notaries into the chapel where the election was made, who, upon inspecting the billets and other pieces which the scrutineers and revisors lay before them, draw up a memorandum of the election. All the cardinals who have assisted at the conclave, sign and seal this record; after which, the scrutineers burn all the billets, both of the scrutiny and the accessus, in presence of all the cardinals.

"The pope is elected by compromise, when the cardinals, disagreeing in their choice, engage by mutual compromise to refer the election to some particular cardinals of probity, and to acknowledge him whom they shall nominate as duly elected, by virtue of the power given to them for that purpose. The election by way of inspiration is in some measure riotous and tumultuary. A select number of cardinals of different factions, who have determined to put every thing to the last push, begin to cry out, "such a one is pope," as it were by inspiration. Adoration is the same as inspiration, which is, when two thirds of the conclave, being agreed in the person, go in a body and adore and acknowledge the pope they approve of, as head of the church. The elections by way of compromise, inspiration, and adoration, but seldom happen. The scrutiny and accessus are the methods generally observed."

I have not been able to learn that the Pope receives any ordination at all, except as Bishop or ordinary. If you can see any LIKENESS in such a "manner," to that which Christ used in conferring the keys of the kingdom on Peter and making him "visible head," I for one cannot.

Your distinction between priesthood and jurisdiction will not help you out of this difficulty. If Peter, when he received "the keys" of the kingdom, received no new priesthood, but only a new jurisdiction, yet he received it by the word of Christ who first stood at the head on earth, and afterwards in heaven. If, as the first vicegerent, Peter received his vicegerency or pontificate from Christ himself, so each subsequent one must receive his vicegerency or pontificate from the same source, or there is no likeness. The present Pope of Rome did not receive the keys from his predceessor, for his predceessor was dead before his election. He did not receive them from the college of cardinals, for as they were not possessed of the keys during the pontificate of the preceding Pope, it is not conceivable that without any act whatever, but the death of an individual, they become ipso facto possessed of them. And if he did receive them by any such means, there would be no likeness between that and the mode in which Peter received them. There is no likeness unless he receives them as Peter did from Christ himself. When the king of Spain established Vice Royal goverment in the Indies, he not only established the fundamental laws and appointed a Vice Roy with power to make such additional laws as should be necessary, but he himself appoints all the subsequent Vice Roys in the same manner and by the same solemnities as those used in the first instance.—So you claim that the Roman hierarchy receives the "functions of their ministry" (whether you designate it as orders or jurisdiction) in the same manner as their predecessors in the beginning received theirs. If you can see any likness in the mode now adopted in that church and the mode used for conferring the keys on Peter, as you have described it, I think few others can. Such a thing as a Vice Roy appointing his successor of his own motion is not known, much less of his being appointed by the princes and great men of his dominion without waiting for the will of the king under whom he holds jurisdiction.

To make Peter head of the church you conclude that Christ, by the peculiar language he used to him alone, gave him power that no other Apostle possessed. Then to make the Bishops of Rome his successors you assume that he was Bishop of Rome. Then you assume that the keys of the kingdom pertain to the Bishopric, which he did not hold till long after, and not to the other Bishoprics.—Then you assnme that Bishops are successors of Apostles. Then that an ordination to any other Bishopric is all that is necessary to hold the keys, so the incumbent has his call by revelation, not from Christ, but from the cardinals, most of whom are not even Bishops, but only priests, deacons, &c.

In this manner you have blotted out all the fundamental principles of priesthood as acknowledged and practiced in the days of Christ and the Apostles. An election by equals and inferiors answers to a call by revelation of the Lord Jesus Christ. An ordination by the hands of Bishops who were subject to the Apostles, is all that is necessary to fill the chair of the prince of Apostles, and to preside over not only Bishops, but Arch-Bishops and Patriarchs.—Thus have you blotted out both a call by revelation and the law that the less is ordained of the greater.

I have sought in this article, as much as possible, to avoid all allusion to the abuses of the Roman Catholic system, because I well know that the abuses of a true system do not make it untrue. Consequently I have altogether discarded the common accusations against the Romanists. Without alluding to the purchase and sale of Bishoprics, even where that purchase sale is publicly made by the highest functionaries in the church, I have put the matter to the test of the THEORY of the Roman Catholic church, as compared to RULE contained in the scriptures. Can you see any likeness?—Will you now say that the Catholic clergy receive the functions of their ministry in the same manner as the Apostles and their immediate successors received theirs?

I cannot well avoid calling your attention to the manner used in a former dispensation. Moses stood at the head of a former dispensation, in which priesthood was conferred by the same immutable law, to wit: revelation and the laying on of hands. But the great end of the dispensation, the establishment of Israel as a NATION OF PRIESTS and a holy people unto God in that rest which Abraham and many of the faithful looked for, having failed by the disobedience and idolatry of the Israelites, especially in the matter of the golden calf, when Moses was taken away, but a part of his priesthood or authority was left. Consequently, before his dissolution and in anticipation of that event, Joshua was called by the voice of God and ordained by the hand of Moses to a subordinate station, that he might be the leader of that people, a prophet, a priest or sacrificator, and a captain of the Lord's host. Num. xxvii. 19, 13, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20.

dinals, the scrutineer burns all he finds in the two chalices, and each cardinal makes a new one, till the scrutiny comes right. When the billets are equal to the number of cardinals, the scrutiny is published. Meanwhile, the cardinals mark each name upon a sheet of paper, on which all their names are printed. Those who are named set down also the votes given them, to see if they have a sufficient number to be elected. This number must be at least two thirds.

"If the votes do not rise to a sufficient number, billets are taken in order to choose the pope by way of accessus; and there is scarcely ever a scrutiny without this accessus. The accessus is intended to correct the scrutiny. In this, they give their votes by other billets, on which is written, "Accedo Domino," &c., when they join their vote to another's; or, "Accedo Nemini," when they adhere to their first vote. The accessus is performed in the same manner as the scrutiny, only they do not take the oath again. The scrutineers examine the billets of the accessus, as they did those of the scrutiny, and the cardinals, after the same manner, set down the votes which are gained thereby to any of the candidates.

"After the revisors have very accurately examined the votes of the accessus, and find the election to be perfectly canonical, they send for three apostolical notaries into the chapel where the election was made, who, upon inspecting the billets and other pieces which the scrutineers and revisors lay before them, draw up a memorandum of the election. All the cardinals who have assisted at the conclave, sign and seal this record; after which, the scrutineers burn all the billets, both of the scrutiny and the accessus, in presence of all the cardinals.

"The pope is elected by compromise, when the cardinals, disagreeing in their choice, engage by mutual compromise to refer the election to some particular cardinals of probity, and to acknowledge him whom they shall nominate as duly elected, by virtue of the power given to them for that purpose. The election by way of inspiration is in some measure riotous and tumultuary. A select number of cardinals of different factions, who have determined to put every thing to the last push, begin to cry out, "such a one is pope," as it were by inspiration. Adoration is the same as inspiration, which is, when two thirds of the conclave, being agreed in the person, go in a body and adore and acknowledge the pope they approve of, as head of the church. The elections by way of compromise, inspiration, and adoration, but seldom happen. The scrutiny and accessus are the methods generally observed."

I have not been able to learn that the Pope receives any ordination at all, except as Bishop or ordinary. If you can see any LIKENESS in such a "manner," to that which Christ used in conferring the keys of the kingdom on Peter and making him "visible head," I for one cannot.

Your distinction between priesthood and jurisdiction will not help you out of this difficulty. If Peter, when he received "the keys" of the kingdom, received no new priesthood, but only a new jurisdiction, yet he received it by the word of Christ who first stood at the head on earth, and afterwards in heaven. If, as the first vicegerent, Peter received his vicegerency or pontificate from Christ himself, so each subsequent one must receive his vicegerency or pontificate from the same source, or there is no likeness. The present Pope of Rome did not receive the keys from his predecessor, for his predecessor was dead before his election. He did not receive them from the college of cardinals, for as they were not possessed of the keys during the pontificate of the preceding Pope, it is not conceivable that without any act whatever, but the death of an individual, they become ipso facto possessed of them. And if he did receive them by any such means, there would be no likeness between that and the mode in which Peter received them. There is no likeness unless he receives them as Peter did from Christ himself. When the king of Spain established Vice Royal goverment in the Indies, he not only established the fundamental laws and appointed a Vice Roy with power to make such additional laws as should be necessary, but he himself appoints all the subsequent Vice Roys in the same manner and by the same solemnities as those used in the first instance.— So you claim that the Roman hierarchy receives the "functions of their ministry" (whether you designate it as orders or jurisdiction) in the same manner as their predecessors in the beginning received theirs. If you can see any likness in the mode now adopted in that church and the mode used for conferring the keys on Peter, as you have described it, I think few others can. Such a thing as a Vice Roy appointing his successor of his own motion is not known, much less of his being appointed by the princes and great men of his dominion without waiting for the will of the king under whom he holds jurisdiction.

To make Peter head of the church you conclude that Christ, by the peculiar language he used to him alone, gave him power that no other Apostle possessed. Then to make the Bishops of Rome his successors you assume that he was Bishop of Rome. Then you assume that the keys of the kingdom pertain to the Bishopric, which he did not hold till long after, and not to the other Bishoprics.— Then you assume that Bishops are successors of Apostles. Then that an ordination to any other Bishopric is all that is necessary to hold the keys, so the incumbent has his call by revelation, not from Christ, but from the cardinals, most of whom are not even Bishops, but only priests, deacons, &c.

In this manner you have blotted out all the fundamental principles of priesthood as acknowledged and practiced in the days of Christ and the Apostles. An election by equals and inferiors answers to a call by revelation of the Lord Jesus Christ. An ordination by the hands of Bishops who were subject to the Apostles, is all that is necessary to fill the chair of the prince of Apostles, and to preside over not only Bishops, but Arch-Bishops and Patriarchs.— Thus have you blotted out both a call by revelation and the law that the less is ordained of the greater.

I have sought in this article, as much as possible, to avoid all allusion to the abuses of the Roman Catholic system, because I well know that the abuses of a true system do not make it untrue. Consequently I have altogether discarded the common accusations against the Romanists. Without alluding to the purchase and sale of Bishoprics, even where that purchase sale is publicly made by the highest functionaries in the church, I have put the matter to the test of the THEORY of the Roman Catholic church, as compared to RULE contained in the scriptures. Can you see any likeness?— Will you now say that the Catholic clergy receive the functions of their ministry in the same manner as the Apostles and their immediate successors received theirs?

I cannot well avoid calling your attention to the manner used in a former dispensation. Moses stood at the head of a former dispensation, in which priesthood was conferred by the same immutable law, to wit: revelation and the laying on of hands. But the great end of the dispensation, the establishment of Israel as a NATION OF PRIESTS and a holy people unto God in that rest which Abraham and many of the faithful looked for, having failed by the disobedience and idolatry of the Israelites, especially in the matter of the golden calf, when Moses was taken away, but a part of his priesthood or authority was left. Consequently, before his dissolution and in anticipation of that event, Joshua was called by the voice of God and ordained by the hand of Moses to a subordinate station, that he might be the leader of that people, a prophet, a priest or sacrificator, and a captain of the Lord's host. Num. xxvii. 19, 13, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20,

You will readily perceive that if Joshua had been called to the same authority as Moses, Moses could not have ordained him, because Moses held a sole priesthood in which he could have no fellow or equal. Like the Pope, there could be but one at the same time. But as he came in to a subordinate priesthood, Moses conferred it upon him, that, during his life, he might exercise it in subjection to him, and after his death exercise the same power and no more, in the same station; the superior priesthood which Moses held not being continued on the earth at all.

But the priesthood which Moses conferred on Joshua did continue through many generations, and as that also was held by a single individual who went before all the congregation of Israel and the princes and heads of tribes, and before the bigh priests, the sons of Aaron; that is, stood above them in priesthood and jurisdiction, as the Romanists claim that the Pope does above kings and princes, Bishops, Arch-Bishops and Patriarchs; it would seem that the manner of appointing the Pope should be somewhat like that used in appointing the Prophet-Judge and Captain of Israel. The appointment of Peter to hold the keys of the kingdom, &c., as subordinate to Christ, and not as successor to him, (for I think you so hold it,) corresponds sufficiently. But where is the likeness between the appointment of the Popes of Rome, as successors of Peter, and the Prophet-Judges of Israel, as successors to Joshua? When Eli, the Judge, suffered unrighteousness and oppression to go unpunished and unredressed, the Lord God SPOKE to Eli and put him out of the Judge's office, and denounced judgments against him for his wickedness; and at the same time SPOKE to Samuel, and put him into the Judge's office. Eli, who was removed from the priesthood, could not put Samuel in; but the Lord put him in, and made Eli a witness of it, so that Eli said "it is the Lord," and voluntarily yielded up his power to Samuel, a mere child, so that from that time forward all Israel obeyed him. 1 Samuel iii.

Afterward when Elijah, filling the same office and priesthood which had belonged to both Joshua, Eli, Samuel and many others, by his righteousness prevailed with God to be translated to heaven, it was not till he was taken up from the earth that he could confer it upon Elisha, his successor. It could not be even that he should confer it on him the same day of his ascension before he went up, but it was necessary that Elisha should be with him WHEN he went up, that after he entered the chariot of the Lord and ceased to remain on earth he might, as a minister of heaven, confer on him a priesthood or jurisdiction that belongs to but one individual on earth at the same time. 2 Kings ii. Many have supposed that Elisha became prophet instead by the anointing of Elijah. 1 Kings xix. 16.—But this is a most obvious error; bacause Elijah continued in his own place a long time after that anointing. At the taking of Elijah Elisha asked a double portion of his spirit, and not till after he got it was a prophet in Elijah's stead. This more clearly appears from the further fact that Hazael was at the same time anointed to be king over Syria, and Jehu to be king over Israel. 1 Kings xix. 15, 16, 17. Yet Hazael did not become king even in the mind of the Lord, by whose word he was anointed, till years passed away. For many years after that the prophet Elisha said to him, "the Lord hath shown me that thou shalt be king over Syria." 2 Kings viii. 16. And Jehu, too, though anointed to be king, had to be anointed king afterwards before he could fill the throne of Israel. 2 Kings ix. 1 to 6.

These few facts make a clear rule in that dispensation, that the superior priesthood which was not after the order of Aaron, but after the order of Melchisidec, the same order of priesthood which Christ held, and of which he made the Apostles partakers; which Peter calls a ROYAL PRIESTHOOD, because it holds the governing power, which the Popes claim, as his successors; and by virtue of which they claim the right to make and dethrone kings as did those Prophet-Judges, could be received only by revelation of God; that by that means the succession was kept up in that dispensation. The history of that dispensation also shows that the apostacy of that people consisted in their setting up a different set of authorities, called not by revelation of the will of God, but the will of the people, or of some faction. I confess that the conferring of the priesthood or jurisdiction on the Roman Catholic hierarchy looks to me much more like the assumptions of power during the apostacy of Israel, than the conferring of the true priesthood, either in the Mosaic or Apostolic dispensation.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

From the National Era.

WORDS OF HOPE.

Dreamers! wake ye from your revery—
Sleepers! rouse ye from your sleep!
Wrong and vice, in virtue's livery,
Round ye like the serpents creep!

Fix your glances on futurity—
Lo! where beams the day-spring bright:
Ye may yet know joy and purity—
Darkness may be changed to light!

God sleeps not, though sleeps humanity—
Moves he still in fire and blood:
Heaven is not a vast Inanity—
Earth is more than mankind's shroud!

Good is our race, though hidden—
Peace is mightier far than strife;
Earth may yet be made an Eden—
Heaven be reached in mortal life!

There is nought so high and holy
As the Hope which conquers Pain:
In yourselves, ye crushed and lowly,
Lives the power to rise again!

Trust not that which startles reason—
Good can ne'er be gained by ill;
All that chains, or clouds, is treason;
Naught is powerful but "I WILL!"

Would ye read the Eternal's mystery?
Like Bartimeus view the day!
Eyes that best discern God's history
Were anointed first with clay.

Gaze from well-depths up to heaven;
And ye see the stars at noon—
Thus to lowly sense is given
Reason's best and richest boon!

Not one grain of earth's material
Ever was, nor will be, lost—
And shall man's great soul, Ethereal,
Be to dark oblivion lost?

Boldly speak, reluctant lisper!
Truth's appeal must mount on high:
Each great word—each feeble whisper—
Once breathed out, can never die!

Philadelphia, Sept. 1847. DUGANNE.

You will readily perceive that if Joshua had been called to the same authority as Moses, Moses could not have ordained him, because Moses held a sole priesthood in which he could have no fellow or equal. Like the Pope, there could be but one at the same time. But as he came in to a subordinate priesthood, Moses conferred it upon him, that, during his life, he might exercise it in subjection to him, and after his death exercise the same power and no more, in the same station; the superior priesthood which Moses held not being continued on the earth at all.

But the priesthood which Moses conferred on Joshua did continue through many generations, and as that also was held by a single individual who went before all the congregation of Israel and the princes and heads of tribes, and before the high priests, the sons of Aaron; that is, stood above them in priesthood and jurisdiction, as the Romanists claim that the Pope does above kings and princes, Bishops, Arch-Bishops and Patriarchs; it would seem that the manner of appointing the Pope should be somewhat like that used in appointing the Prophet-Judge and Captain of Israel. The appointment of Peter to hold the keys of the kingdom, &c., as subordinate to Christ, and not as successor to him, (for I think you so hold it,) corresponds sufficiently. But where is the likeness between the appointment of the Popes of Rome, as successors of Peter, and the Prophet-Judges of Israel, as successors to Joshua? When Eli, the Judge, suffered unrighteousness and oppression to go unpunished and unredressed, the Lord God SPOKE to Eli and put him out of the Judge's office, and denounced judgments against him for his wickedness; and at the same time SPOKE to Samuel, and put him into the Judge's office. Eli, who was removed from the priesthood, could not put Samuel in; but the Lord put him in, and made Eli a witness of it, so that Eli said "it is the Lord," and voluntarily yielded up his power to Samuel, a mere child, so that from that time forward all Israel obeyed him. 1 Samuel iii.

Afterward when Elijah, filling the same office and priesthood which had belonged to both Joshua, Eli, Samuel and many others, by his righteousness prevailed with God to be translated to heaven, it was not till he was taken up from the earth that he could confer it upon Elisha, his successor. It could not be even that he should confer it on him the same day of his ascension before he went up, but it was necessary that Elisha should be with him WHEN he went up, that after he entered the chariot of the Lord and ceased to remain on earth he might, as a minister of heaven, confer on him a priesthood or jurisdiction that belongs to but one individual on earth at the same time. 2 Kings ii. Many have supposed that Elisha became prophet instead by the anointing of Elijah. 1 Kings xix. 16.—But this is a most obvious error; bacause Elijah continued in his own place a long time after that anointing. At the taking of Elijah Elisha asked a double portion of his spirit, and not till after he got it was a prophet in Elijah's stead. This more clearly appears from the further fact that Hazael was at the same time anointed to be king over Syria, and Jehu to be king over Israel. 1 Kings xix. 15, 16, 17. Yet Hazael did not become king even in the mind of the Lord, by whose word he was anointed, till years passed away. For many years after that the prophet Elisha said to him, "the Lord hath shown me that thou shalt be king over Syria." 2 Kings viii. 16. And Jehu, too, though anointed to be king, had to be anointed king afterwards before he could fill the throne of Israel. 2 Kings ix. 1 to 6.

These few facts make a clear rule in that dispensation, that the superior priesthood which was not after the order of Aaron, but after the order of Melchisidec, the same order of priesthood which Christ held, and of which he made the Apostles partakers; which Peter calls a ROYAL PRIESTHOOD, because it holds the governing power, which the Popes claim, as his successors; and by virtue of which they claim the right to make and dethrone kings as did those Prophet-Judges, could be received only by revelation of God; that by that means the succession was kept up in that dispensation. The history of that dispensation also shows that the apostacy of that people consisted in their setting up a different set of authorities, called not by revelation of the will of God, but the will of the people, or of some faction. I confess that the conferring of the priesthood or jurisdiction on the Roman Catholic hierarchy looks to me much more like the assumptions of power during the apostacy of Israel, than the conferring of the true priesthood, either in the Mosaic or Apostolic dispensation.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

From the National Era.

WORDS OF HOPE.

Dreamers! wake ye from your revery—
Sleepers! rouse ye from your sleep!
Wrong and vice, in virtue's livery,
Round ye like the serpents creep!

Fix your glances on futurity—
Lo! where beams the day-spring bright:
Ye may yet know joy and purity—
Darkness may be changed to light!

God sleeps not, though sleeps humanity—
Moves he still in fire and blood:
Heaven is not a vast Inanity—
Earth is more than mankind's shroud!

Good is our race, though hidden—
Peace is mightier far than strife;
Earth may yet be made an Eden—
Heaven be reached in mortal life!

There is nought so high and holy
As the Hope which conquers Pain:
In yourselves, ye crushed and lowly,
Lives the power to rise again!

Trust not that which startles reason—
Good can ne'er be gained by ill;
All that chains, or clouds, is treason;
Naught is powerful but "I WILL!"

Would ye read the Eternal's mystery?
Like Bartimeus view the day!
Eyes that best discern God's history
Were anointed first with clay.

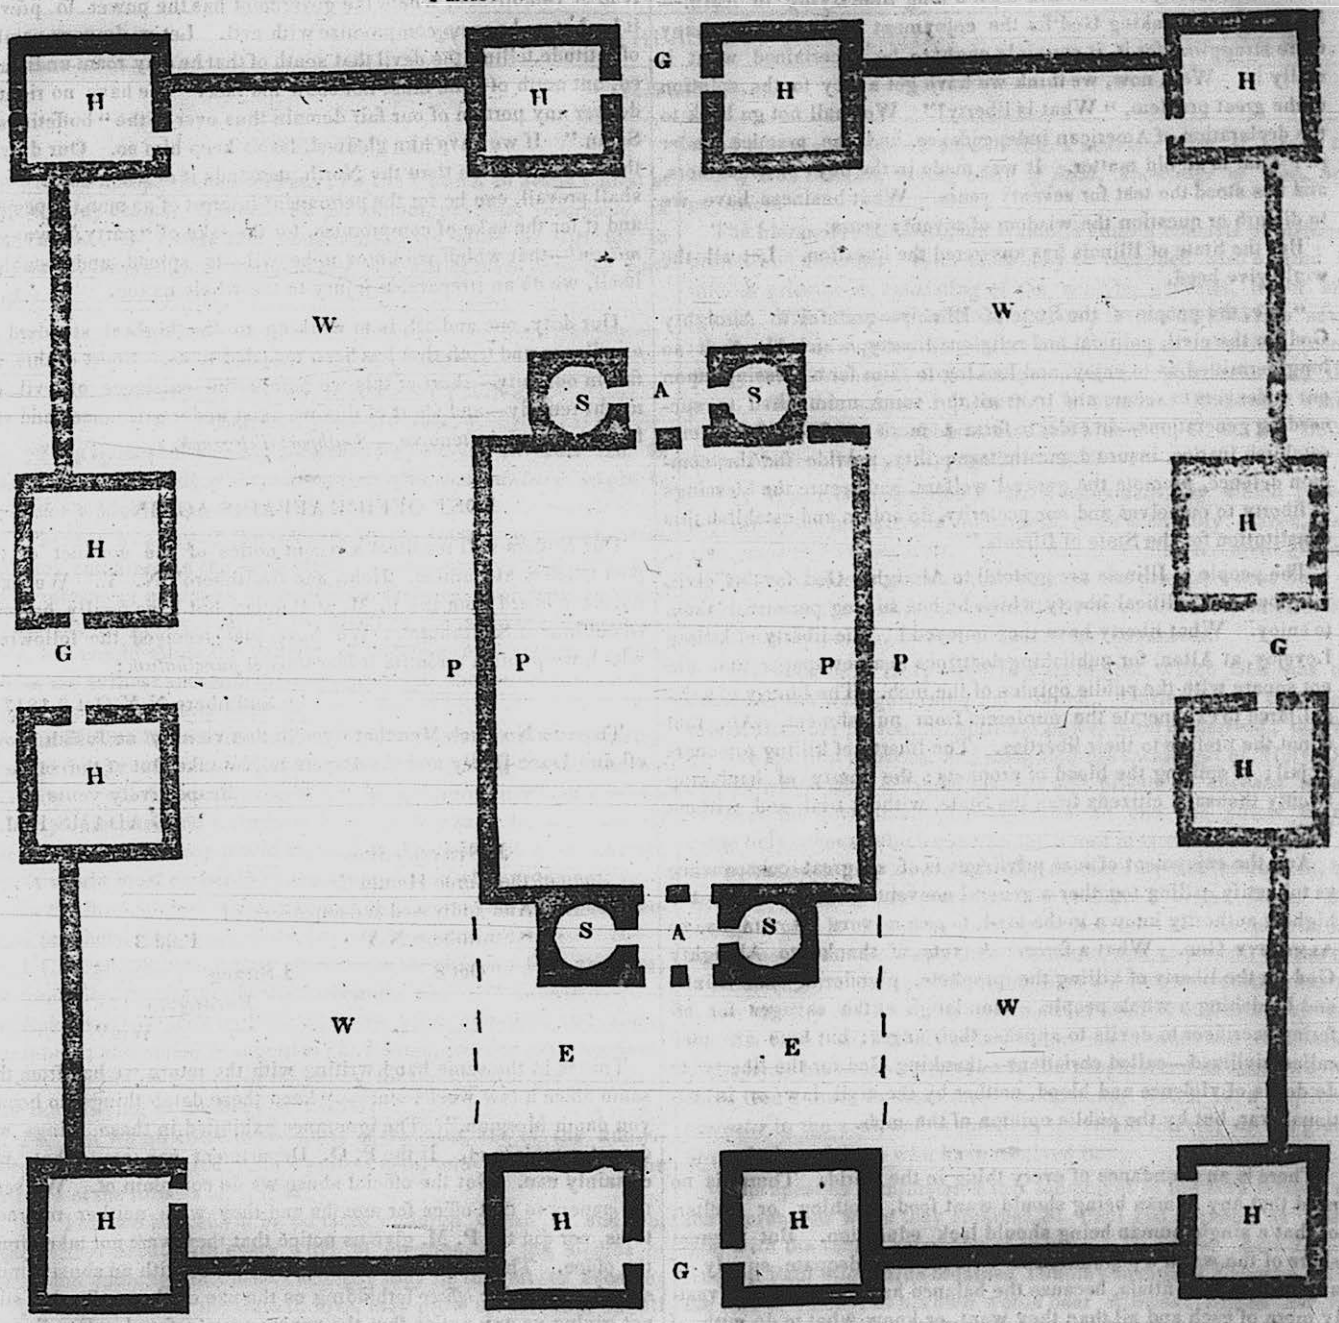
Gaze from well-depths up to heaven;
And ye see the stars at noon—
Thus to lowly sense is given
Reason's best and richest boon!

Not one grain of earth's material
Ever was, nor will be, lost—
And shall man's great soul, Ethereal,
Be to dark oblivion lost?

Boldly speak, reluctant lisper!
Truth's appeal must mount on high:
Each great word—each feeble whisper—
Once breathed out, can never die!

Philadelphia, Sept. 1847. DUGANNE.

PLAN OF THE TEMPLE AT VOREE.



EXPLANATION.

The central block is the main building, having two principal stories, each arranged in one entire room, about 70 feet by 100.

At the right and left are two large courts, covered with canvas.

H, H, &c., are 12 halls, each two stories high, 32 by 32 feet, for record offices, halls of the quorums, &c.

G, G, G, G, are the four principal entrances to the Temple.—The upper entrance is to the north and leads to the upper story.—The lower one leads to the lower story. The right and left to the two principal courts.

S, S, S, S, are stair-cases from top to bottom of the main building.

A, A, are ante-rooms or entries to the inner court.

P, P, P, P, are pulpits.

Over the pulpits, standing upon the wall and on the iron columns, are two towers.

Over the ante-room at the north is the chief tower, which will overlook the country for some 20 miles.

W, W, W, W, are wells.

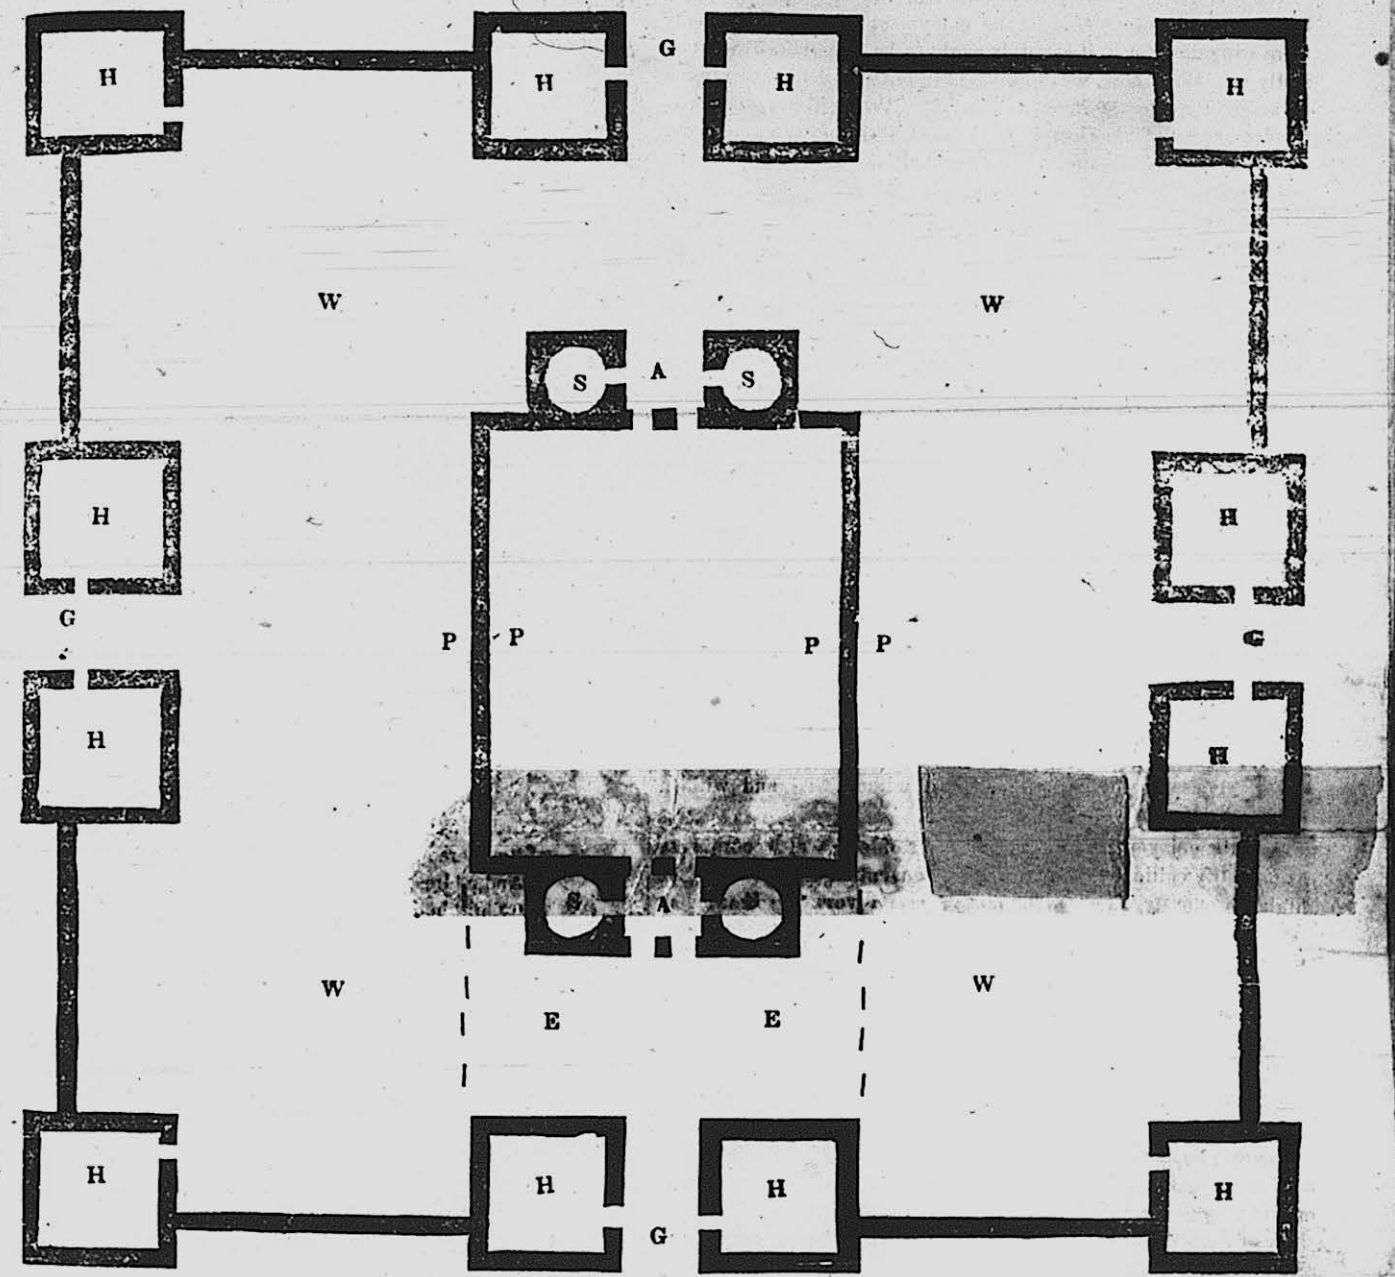
E, E, are gardens.

The space at the north end of the main building is occupied by a variety of low buildings, not represented on the cut.

Inside of the connecting walls and joining on to them is to be a row of rooms for persons employed about the Temple.

The entire edifice is to be warmed by a single fire in the basement of the main building, the heat of which will be conducted through the walls to every part at pleasure.

PLAN OF THE TEMPLE AT VOREE.



EXPLANATION.

The central block is the main building, having two principal stories, each arranged in one entire room, about 70 feet by 100.

At the right and left are two large courts, covered with canvas.

H, H, &c., are 12 halls, each two stories high, 32 by 32 feet, for record offices, halls of the quorums, &c.

G, G, G, G, are the four principal entrances to the Temple.—The upper entrance is to the north and leads to the upper story.—The lower one leads to the lower story. The right and left to the two principal courts.

S, S, S, S, are stair-cases from top to bottom of the main building.

A, A, are ante-rooms or entries to the inner court.

P, P, P, P, are pulpits.

Over the pulpits, standing upon the wall and on the iron columns, are two towers.

Over the ante-room at the north is the chief tower, which will overlook the country for some 20 miles.

W, W, W, W, are wells.

E, E, are gardens.

The space at the north end of the main building is occupied by a variety of low buildings, not represented on the cut.

Inside of the connecting walls and joining on to them is to be a row of rooms for persons employed about the Temple.

The entire edifice is to be warmed by a single fire in the basement of the main building, the heat of which will be conducted through the walls to every part at pleasure.

LIBERTY, CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS.

What is liberty? We have been a long time trying to learn.—So many are thanking God for the enjoyment of it, and so many more struggling for it, it certainly ought to be ascertained what it really is. Well, now, we think we have got a key to the solution of the great problem, "What is liberty?" We shall not go back to the declaration of American independence, and the practice under it. That is an old matter. It was made in the days of our fathers, and has stood the test for seventy years. What business have we to disturb or question the wisdom of seventy years.

But the State of Illinois has answered the question. Let all the world give heed.

"We, the people of the State of Illinois—grateful to Almighty God for the civil, political and religious liberty, which He hath so long permitted us to enjoy, and looking to Him for a blessing upon our endeavors to secure and transmit the same unimpaired to succeeding generations—in order to form a more perfect government, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the State of Illinois."

The people of Illinois are grateful to Almighty God for the civil, religious and political liberty which he has so long permitted them to enjoy. What liberty have they enjoyed? The liberty of killing Lovejoy, at Alton, for publishing doctrines in a newspaper that did not square with the public opinion of the mob. The liberty of a legal farce to exhonerate the murderers from punishment. Ah, that is not the preface to their liberties. The liberty of killing prisoners in jail; of spilling the blood of prophets: the liberty of banishing twenty thousand citizens from the State, without trial and without law.

And the enjoyment of such privileges is of so great consequence as to justify calling together a general convention of the State, the highest authority known in the land, to pass a VOTE OF THANKS TO ALMIGHTY GOD. What a farce. A vote of thanks to Almighty God for the liberty of killing the prophets, plundering the saints, and banishing a whole people. Men laugh at the savages for offering sacrifices to devils to appease their anger; but here are men called civilized—called christians—thanking God for the liberty to do deeds of violence and blood, neither by the civil law or in national war, but by the public opinion of the mob.

There is an abundance of every thing in the world. There is no need that any human being should want food, clothing, or shelter, or that a single human being should lack education. But a great share of the world's population is without an adequate supply of any of these essentials, because the balance have monopolized vastly more of each and all than they want, or know what to do with.—It is a condition of things which has grown out of antagonistic relations—a perversion of that faculty of the mind which was designed as all faculties are for good ends alone. Association will cure all this. A good man of the olden time came upon the earth and preached peace and good will to all mankind. The world has attained an age, and the human mind an elevation, enabling it to see and comprehend the means to attain this great result. Clearly we must have common ends, common interests, before it can be done. Association is the germ which will give the fruit. The world cannot at once be resolved into a great brotherhood. It can only be done gradually. An association of a few on the right principle, will form a nucleus, which will eventually embrace the world. The means are worthy of a special and divine revelation, whether this revelation be of that character or not.—Southport Telegraph.

Is it not recreancy to the right, to establish the wrong, or permit it to be established, where the goverment has the power to prevent it? Let us have no compromise with evil. Let us draw no parallel of latitude, telling the devil that south of that he may roam undisturbed, but north of it he must not show his face. We have no right to deliver any portion of our fair domain thus over to the "buffetings of Satan." If we have him chained, let us keep him so. Our duty to the South, not less than the North, demands it of us. That wrong shall prevail, can be for the permanent interest of no man, or people; and if for the sake of compromise, for the sake of "party," we permit evil—that which we know to be evil—to spread and establish itself, we do an irreparable injury to the whole nation.

Our duty, one and all, is to work up to the highest standard of excellence and truth that has been revealed to us. Short of this, we fail in our duty—short of this we permit the existence of evil we might remedy—and short of this we exist under grievances and sufferings we might remove.—Southport Telegraph.

POST OFFICE AFFAIRS AGAIN.

Our readers will recollect a recent notice of the conduct of the post masters at Pontiac, Mich., and Smithboro', N. Y. We have not since heard from the P. M. at Pontiac, but have finally burrowed out him of Smithboro'. We have just received the following, which we publish verbatim et literatum et punctuatum:

"Smithboro N Y Oct 8 1847

There is No Such Men that lives in this vicinity as Josiah Howell and Isacc Dudly and the Papers is Not take Out of the office

Respectively yours
G ADAMS P M

J. STRANG editor
of the Voree Herald"
And addressed and superscribed
"Smithboro N Y Paid 3
Oct 8 J Strang
Burlington
Wis"

This is in the same hand writing with the return we had from the same office a few weeks since—"keep these damb things to home, you damb Mormon." The ignorance exhibited in these things we do not complain of. If the P. O. Department can stand that, we certainly can. But the official abuse we do complain of. We sent the papers to that office for months and they were neither returned to us, nor did the P. M. give us notice that they were not taken from the office. Then we received our papers back, with an abusive missive from a public officer forbidding us the use of the mail; but still not giving us any notice that the papers were refused. Finally, after another delay of weeks and perhaps being stirred by the Department, we got notice that no such persons live there. To prove himself as ignorant as he is wicked the P. M. has marked this missive "Paid 3," though he is required to send it under frank; and both in this and the former case has violated the law by writing on a newspaper and its wrapper and then sending it as a newspaper. Such a man from vicious disposition is incapable of wishing to do right, and from ignorance incapable of doing well if he wished to. If he is fit for a public officer God deliver us from those that are not. We shall send the P. M.'s letter to the P. O. Department, and unless the P. M. at Pontiac tells who that young man is whom he selects as the guilty one in his office, we shall stir him up in the same quarter. What say you, Mr. Denton? We have waited a long time to hear from you.

LIBERTY, CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS.

What is liberty? We have been a long time trying to learn.—So many are thanking God for the enjoyment of it, and so many more struggling for it, it certainly ought to be ascertained what it really is. Well, now, we think we have got a key to the solution of the great problem, "What is liberty?" We shall not go back to the declaration of American independence, and the practice under it. That is an old matter. It was made in the days of our fathers, and has stood the test for seventy years. What business have we to disturb or question the wisdom of seventy years.

But the State of Illinois has answered the question. Let all the world give heed.

"We, the people of the State of Illinois—grateful to Almighty God for the civil, political and religious liberty, which He hath so long permitted us to enjoy, and looking to Him for a blessing upon our endeavors to secure and transmit the same unimpaired to succeeding generations—in order to form a more perfect government, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the State of Illinois."

The people of Illinois are grateful to Almighty God for the civil, religious and political liberty which he has so long permitted them to enjoy. What liberty have they enjoyed? The liberty of killing Lovejoy, at Alton, for publishing doctrines in a newspaper that did not square with the public opinion of the mob. The liberty of a legal farce to exhonerate the murderers from punishment. Ah, that is not the preface to their liberties. The liberty of killing prisoners in jail; of spilling the blood of prophets; the liberty of banishing twenty thousand citizens from the State, without trial and without law.

And the enjoyment of such privileges is of so great consequency as to justify calling together a general convention of the State, the highest authority known in the land, to pass a VOTE OF THANKS TO ALMIGHTY GOD. What a farce. A vote of thanks to Almighty God for the liberty of killing the prophets, plundering the saints, and banishing a whole people. Men laugh at the savages for offering sacrifices to devils to appease their anger; but here are men called civilized—called christians—thanking God for the liberty to do deeds of violence and blood, neither by the civil law or in national war, but by the public opinion of the mob.

There is an abundance of every thing in the world. There is no need that any human being should want food, clothing, or shelter, or that a single human being should lack education. But a great share of the world's population is without an adequate supply of any of these essentials, because the balance have monopolized vastly more of each and all than they want, or know what to do with.—It is a condition of things which has grown out of antagonistic relations—a perversion of that faculty of the mind which was designed as all faculties are for good ends alone. Association will cure all this. A good man of the olden time came upon the earth and preached peace and good will to all mankind. The world has attained an age, and the human mind an elevation, enabling it to see and comprehend the means to attain this great result. Clearly we must have common ends, common interests, before it can be done. Association is the germ which will give the fruit. The world cannot at once be resolved into a great brotherhood. It can only be done gradually. An association of a few on the right principle, will form a nucleus, which will eventually embrace the world. The means are worthy of a special and divine revelation, whether this revelation be of that character or not.—Southport Telegraph.

Is it not recreancy to the right, to establish the wrong, or permit it to be established, where the goverment has the power to prevent it? Let us have no compromise with evil. Let us draw no parallel of latitude, telling the devil that south of that he may roam undisturbed, but north of it he must not show his face. We have no right to deliver any portion of our fair domain thus over to the "buffetings of Satan." If we have him chained, let us keep him so. Our duty to the South, not less than the North, demands it of us. That wrong shall prevail, can be for the permanent interest of no man, or people; and if for the sake of compromise, for the sake of "party," we permit evil—that which we know to be evil—to spread and establish itself, we do an irreparable injury to the whole nation.

Our duty, one and all, is to work up to the highest standard of excellence and truth that has been revealed to us. Short of this, we fail in our duty—short of this we permit the existence of evil we might remedy—and short of this we exist under grievances and sufferings we might remove.—Southport Telegraph.

POST OFFICE AFFAIRS AGAIN.

Our readers will recollect a recent notice of the conduct of the post masters at Pontiac, Mich., and Smithboro', N. Y. We have not since heard from the P. M. at Pontiac, but have finally burrowed out him of Smithboro'. We have just received the following, which we publish verbatim et literatum et punctuatum:

"Smithboro N Y Oct 8 1847

There is No Such Men that lives in this vicinity as Josiah Howell and Isaac Dudly and the Papers is Not take Out of the office

Respectively yours
G ADAMS P M

J. STRANG editor
of the Voree Herald"
And addressed and superscribed
"Smithboro N Y Paid 3
Oct 8 J Strang
Burlington
Wis"

This is in the same hand writing with the return we had from the same office a few weeks since—"keep these damb things to home, you damb Mormon." The ignorance exhibited in these things we do not complain of. If the P. O. Department can stand that, we certainly can. But the official abuse we do complain of. We sent the papers to that office for months and they were neither returned to us, nor did the P. M. give us notice that they were not taken from the office. Then we received our papers back, with an abusive missive from a public officer forbidding us the use of the mail; but still not giving us any notice that the papers were refused. Finally, after another delay of weeks and perhaps being stirred by the Department, we get notice that no such persons live there. To prove himself as ignorant as he is wicked the P. M. has marked this missive "Paid 3," though he is required to send it under frank; and both in this and the former case has violated the law by writing on a newspaper and its wrapper and then sending it as a newspaper. Such a man from vicious disposition is incapable of wishing to do right, and from ignorance incapable of doing well if he wished to. If he is fit for a public officer God deliver us from those that are not. We shall send the P. M.'s letter to the P. O. Department, and unless the P. M. at Pontiac tells who that young man is whom he selects as the guilty one in his office, we shall stir him up in the same quarter. What say you, Mr. Denton? We have waited a long time to hear from you.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 4, 1847. [No. 33.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 5.

(Continued from last week.)

"They established a rule of succession for futurity in order that in each age, at the death of its pastors, their office and ministry might be regularly handed down to others."

There is no array of the officers and ministry of the christian church contained in the scriptures. Consequently, should I find any officers or ministers in the Roman Catholic church not mentioned in the scriptures, I should not insist on that as being clearly error, but would allow the validity of tradition and church practice from the earliest authentic history, provided the succession in that ministry was properly kept up.

But if there be an essential and important branch of the ministry, a superior priesthood and jurisdiction in the church, the use and necessity of which clearly appears by the scripture, in which you are totally defective, and have been from age to age, I humbly submit that such a deficiency would be fatal to the claims of your church, as it would most certainly to the soundness of your argument.

In the hierarchy of the christian church were first apostles, second prophets, then evangelists, pastors, teachers, &c.

1 Cor. xii. 28, 'God hath set some in the church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers,' &c.

Eph. iv. 11, "And he (Christ) gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;

12. For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:

13. Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ:

14. That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

15. But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things which is the head, even Christ:

16. From whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

As this ministry or priesthood was set in the church for the perfecting of the saints, and that we be no more tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine and by the cunning and craftiness of men, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; and as this was done by an all-wise God who is abundantly able to use the means best adapted to the end, it follows that without such a ministry the end will not be accomplished, but that we henceforward shall be tossed to and fro as children with every wind of doctrine, and shall be deceived by the craftiness of men, whereby we shall MAKE SHIPWRECK of FAITH instead of being fitly joined together into a PERFECT BODY of which the SON of GOD is HEAD, having unity of faith, knowledge of God, and perfection.

The hierarchy of the Roman Catholic church consists of bishops, priests and deacons. With these may be reckoned also a kind of inferior priesthood, consisting of the acolyte, exorcist, lector and porter. The office or priesthood of bishop is also divided into several dignities or degrees of spiritual jurisdiction, as ordinaries, (commonly called bishops,) arch-bishops, primates, patriarchs and the pope. On this subject I quote from a standard Romanist work, "The Poor Man's Catechism, by John Mannock, O. S. B., Baltimore, Metropolitan press, page 201—2—3—4:—

"Q. WHAT is Holy Order? A. A sacrament, by which power is given to the ministers of the church, to do their holy offices, and also grace to do them well. Q. To whom is this sacrament given? A. To such, chiefly, as are made bishops and priests, whose duty it is to conduct the faithful to eternal life; there are, also, inferior degrees of holy orders, as that of deacon and subdeacon.

"INSTRUCTION. Holy Order is a sacrament, which God has ordained to the well-governing his church. Christ being our high priest, from his person, all spiritual power must be derived; this he gave to the first apostles, and instituted the sacrament of Holy Order, by which they ordained bishops and priests to succeed themselves in the government of souls: and no one has power to do those holy offices, which concern the honor of God and salvation of souls, but such only as are lawfully ordained by this sacrament, by the hands of those who were lawfully ordained before them. Although a man is elected by the magistrates and all the people, he has no power to administer the sacraments, and to preach, unless he is ordained by a bishop. As in baptism we are made christians, to follow the life of Christ; in confirmation, soldiers of Christ, to defend his faith; so, by holy order, we are made ministers of Christ, to dispense his sacred mysteries to his people; and as such, we receive God's mark in these three sacraments, which is a spiritual character in the soul, and is indelible, to remain forever, to the glory or confusion of those who have received it.

"The apostles administered this sacrament in the very infancy of the church; as when they ordained St. Paul and Barnaby at Antioch, with the sacred ceremony of imposition of hands. Acts xiv.—And St. Paul afterwards ordained Timothy bishop of Ephesus, with the like ceremony, as his own words bear witness: Neglect not the grace which is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the imposition of the hands of the priesthood. 1 Tim. iv. 14. I admonish thee that thou stir up the grace of God, which is in thee by the imposition of my hands. 2 Tim. i. 6.

"In Holy Order there are seven degrees, by which we ascend to the priesthood: four less, and three greater. Con. Carthag. 4. c. 6. Of the less, the first is that of Porter, whose office is to keep the keys of the church, sacristy, treasury, and to keep all out of the church and sanctuary who ought not to enter: to him the bishop says, in his ordination, So behave yourself as to give an account to God of what is kept under your charge. 2. That of Lector; his office is to read aloud the lessons of the Old and New Testament, which belong to the divine office, and to instruct the ignorant in the rudiments of the christian religion: the bishop gives him a book,

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 4, 1847. [No. 33.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 5.

(Continued from last week.)

"They established a rule of succession for futurity in order that in each age, at the death of its pastors, their office and ministry might be regularly handed down to others."

There is no array of the officers and ministry of the christian church contained in the scriptures. Consequently, should I find any officers or ministers in the Roman Catholic church not mentioned in the scriptures, I should not insist on that as being clearly error, but would allow the validity of tradition and church practice from the earliest authentic history, provided the succession in that ministry was properly kept up.

But if there be an essential and important branch of the ministry, a superior priesthood and jurisdiction in the church, the use and necessity of which clearly appears by the scripture, in which you are totally defective, and have been from age to age, I humbly submit that such a deficiency would be fatal to the claims of your church, as it would most certainly to the soundness of your argument.

In the hierarchy of the christian church were first apostles, second prophets, then evangelists, pastors, teachers, &c.

1 Cor. xii. 28, 'God hath set some in the church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers,' &c.

Eph. iv. 11, "And he (Christ) gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers;

12. For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ:

13. Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ:

14. That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive;

15. But speaking the truth in love, may grow up into him in all things which is the head, even Christ:

16. From whom the whole body fitly joined together, and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love."

As this ministry or priesthood was set in the church for the perfecting of the saints, and that we be no more tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine and by the cunning and craftiness of men, whereby they lie in wait to deceive; and as this was done by an all-wise God who is abundantly able to use the means best adapted to the end, it follows that without such a ministry the end will not be accomplished, but that we henceforward shall be tossed to and fro as children with every wind of doctrine, and shall be deceived by the craftiness of men, whereby we shall MAKE SHIPWRECK of FAITH instead of being fitly joined together into a PERFECT BODY of which the SON of GOD is HEAD, having unity of faith, knowledge of God, and perfection.

The hierarchy of the Roman Catholic church consists of bishops, priests and deacons. With these may be reckoned also a kind of inferior priesthood, consisting of the acolyte, exorcist, lector and porter. The office or priesthood of bishop is also divided into several dignities or degrees of spiritual jurisdiction, as ordinaries, (commonly called bishops,) arch-bishops, primates, patriarchs and the pope. On this subject I quote from a standard Romanist work, "The Poor Man's Catechism, by John Mannock, O. S. B., Baltimore, Metropolitan press, page 201—2—3—4:—

"Q. WHAT is Holy Order? A. A sacrament, by which power is given to the ministers of the church, to do their holy offices, and also grace to do them well. Q. To whom is this sacrament given? A. To such, chiefly, as are made bishops and priests, whose duty it is to conduct the faithful to eternal life; there are, also, inferior degrees of holy orders, as that of deacon and subdeacon.

"INSTRUCTION. Holy Order is a sacrament, which God has ordained to the well-governing his church. Christ being our high priest, from his person, all spiritual power must be derived; this he gave to the first apostles, and instituted the sacrament of Holy Order, by which they ordained bishops and priests to succeed themselves in the government of souls: and no one has power to do these holy offices, which concern the honor of God and salvation of souls, but such only as are lawfully ordained by this sacrament, by the hands of those who were lawfully ordained before them. Although a man is elected by the magistrates and all the people, he has no power to administer the sacraments, and to preach, unless he is ordained by a bishop. As in baptism we are made christians, to follow the life of Christ; in confirmation, soldiers of Christ, to defend his faith; so, by holy order, we are made ministers of Christ, to dispense his sacred mysteries to his people; and as such, we receive God's mark in these three sacraments, which is a spiritual character in the soul, and is indelible, to remain forever, to the glory or confusion of those who have received it.

"The apostles administered this sacrament in the very infancy of the church; as when they ordained St. Paul and Barnaby at Antioch, with the sacred ceremony of imposition of hands. Acts xiv.—And St. Paul afterwards ordained Timothy bishop of Ephesus, with the like ceremony, as his own words bear witness: Neglect not the grace which is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the imposition of the hands of the priesthood. 1 Tim. iv. 14. I admonish thee that thou stir up the grace of God, which is in thee by the imposition of my hands. 2 Tim. i. 6.

"In Holy Order there are seven degrees, by which we ascend to the priesthood: four less, and three greater. Con. Carthag. 4. c. 6. Of the less, the first is that of Porter, whose office is to keep the keys of the church, sacristy, treasury, and to keep all out of the church and sanctuary who ought not to enter: to him the bishop says, in his ordination, So behave yourself as to give an account to God of what is kept under your charge. 2. That of Lector; his office is to read aloud the lessons of the Old and New Testament, which belong to the divine office, and to instruct the ignorant in the rudiments of the christian religion: the bishop gives him a book, containing those things, and charges him faithfully and profitably to fulfill his office. 3. That of Exorcist; to him is given power to exorcise possessed persons: the bishop gives a book of exorcisms, and bids him receive it with power to lay his hands on such as are possessed, whether baptized or catechumens. 4. That of Acolyte; his office is to assist the deacon and subdeacon at the altar; to carry the lights, to prepare the wine and water for consecration, and attend on the divine mysteries: the bishop gives him a wax candle, with two little cruets, bidding him light the candle, and serve wine and water in the cruets. By these less we ascend to the greater. The first of these is the order of Subdeacon; he serves the deacon at the altar; prepares the altar, the chalice, the bread, and the wine; he reads the epistle aloud at high Mass: the bishop, before he ordains him, declares that none are to receive this order, but those who will observe perpetual continency from marriage: he then gives him a chalice, and paten, basin and towel, and two little cruets, the book of epistles; bids him Consider his ministry, and behave so as to please God. The second of the greater orders is that of Deacon; his office is immediately to assist the bishop or priest at high Mass, and the administration of the sacraments. He reads the Gospel aloud at Mass; he gives the cup, when the sacrament of the Eucharist is given in both kinds; he may give baptism, and preach the Gospel, by commission. To him the bishop gives a book of the Gospels, with power to read it in the Church of God. The third is that of priesthood, which has two degrees of power and dignity: that of bishops, and that of priests. The office of a priest is to consecrate and offer the sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ, under the form of bread and wine; to administer all the sacraments, except confirmation and holy order; to preach the Gospel, to bless the people, and to conduct them in the way to life eternal; as also to bless such things as are not reserved to the benediction of the bishop. The bishop, when he ordains a priest, anoints his hands with oil, which signifies the grace that is conferred upon him; he gives him the paten with bread upon it, and a chalice with wine, with power to offer sacrifice for the living and the dead; then he lays his hands upon him and says, Receive the Holy Ghost, &c., with several other ceremonies. The office of a bishop is to govern the Church, both clergy and laity, in his respective diocess; to inflict censures, excomunication, suspension, &c., to offer sacrifice, to preach the Gospel, to give confirmation, and holy order; none but bishops receive this sacrament in full, so as to have power to administer all the sacraments. Of these degrees of holy order, only bishops, priests and deacons constitute the hierarchy of the Church, which is of divine institution. Coun. Trent. Sess. 23, c. 6. But, as there are several degrees in order, so there are higher and lower degrees of dignity and spiritual jurisdiction in the episcopacy itself: 1. That of ordinaries. 2. That of archbishops. 3. That of primate. 4. That of patriarch. 5. That of the supreme head, and common father of all, the pope, who holds his supremacy, as succecsor to St. Peter, by right divine."

Here, sir, is an entire lack of the most important ministry and priesthood of the christian church. You have neither Apostles or Prophets. And you are not only destitute of this ministry, but you have no substitute for it. It will not do to say your Bishops are a substitute for the office of Apostles, for the Apostles were some of them Prophets, Seers, and Revelators, and all were witnesses of Christ and embassadors from him to the nations, which your Bishops none of them profess to be. The Bishops are in no sense in place of the Apostles, for many of the functions of the Apostolic office the church authoritatively disclaims possession of.

And as it is a well known fact that Bishops existed in the church during the time of the Apostles, and that they held an inferior ministry and were subject to the Apostles, it is foolish to pretend that they are successors to them. And the Bishop being the highest priesthood in the Roman church, it would seem that this fact alone made a full end of their pretensions.

But where do you pretend to find a substitute for Prophets? Who in your church, either with or without being Bishops, hold this priesthood? What Prophet among you stood up in the name of God to tell you of the recent famine in Ireland, which has swept off untold thousands of the faithful in that country, as Agabus of old told the saints in his days of the famine in the days of Claudius Cæsar? Who of your priesthood could, by the spirit of God, perceive the coming danger and warn them of the true refuge? Aye, who knows now whether that famine was sent as a scourge on the Catholics of Ireland or on their enemies? Upon them alike has it fallen. It is not improbable that the population of the whole kingdom is decimated. The grave has yawned till cities are desolate. The starved skeletons of the Catholic and the Protestant alike wander over the land, whose miseries are but begun. The Catholic and the Protestant clergy alike chant anthems to the same God, that the feast of death is suspended, which they fondly and falsely believe will not begin again. But among them all is not found the Seer who can tell against whom the wrath of God is waxed hot, or why he thus chastises the creatures of his hand. Among all their clergy was raised no warning voice beforehand to tell them of the coming calamity; to admonish them of the law of God forgotten, or point out a refuge to the penitent and obedient. No; the word of God was not among them, and they perished, and knew not why and had no refuge. Their shepherds are as dogs without mouths, that could neither bark to warn the flock of invasion or bite the destroyer among them. They are as men who have no God, and they perished as the heathen and knew not why.

And as they made shipwreck of life then and there for want of Apostles and prophets, so have they elsewhere and at other times, and so also have they made shipwreck of faith. For want of the word and authority of God that church is no nearer perfected now than hundreds of years ago. It has no more come to the unity of the faith; its body is no more edified, and it has not progressed one step in BRINGING IN THE REST of GOD which he has RESERVED to his PEOPLE, taking away ALL CURSE and ESTABLISHING EVERLASTING RIGHTEOUSNESS.

That church has existed more than one thousand years with its present organization and priesthood. During all that time, except one or two short interregnums, she has been an empire of herself.—And she has exerted a power above princes, kings and potentates throughout near half the earth. And looking back through the vista of time in the light of history I cannot discover one single act of her doing which should help to bring about that state of things that the Prophets looked for, and patriarchs and priests of old died in the faith of.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

MUSINGS.

What a world we live in. Oh for a little sincerity. Holy hypocrites! yes, they are the applauded and worshipped of the age.—The man with solemn voice, measured mien, and face that scarce can smile, is imitated, applauded, caressed, almost worshipped. Though he is avaricious, ignorant and revengeful, of blunted affections and unfeeling heart, yet he is still looked up to as one of God's favored; as one of the good men of the earth. He is worshipped of his fellow-creatures.

INFIDELITY.

Bible infidels! Ah, that is the word. The world is full of Bible infidels; infidel christians; persons who profess to believe the Bi-containing those things, and charges him faithfully and profitably to fulfill his office. 3. That of Exorcist; to him is given power to exorcise possessed persons: the bishop gives a book of exorcisms, and bids him receive it with power to lay his hands on such as are possessed, whether baptized or catechumens. 4. That of Acolyte; his office is to assist the deacon and subdeacon at the altar; to carry the lights, to prepare the wine and water for consecration, and attend on the divine mysteries: the bishop gives him a wax candle, with two little cruets, bidding him light the candle, and serve wine and water in the cruets. By these less we ascend to the greater. The first of these is the order of Subdeacon; he serves the deacon at the altar; prepares the altar, the chalice, the bread, and the wine; he reads the epistle aloud at high Mass: the bishop, before he ordains him, declares that none are to receive this order, but those who will observe perpetual continency from marriage: he then gives him a chalice, and paten, basin and towel, and two little cruets, the book of epistles; bids him Consider his ministry, and behave so as to please God. The second of the greater orders is that of Deacon; his office is immediately to assist the bishop or priest at high Mass, and the administration of the sacraments. He reads the Gospel aloud at Mass; he gives the cup, when the sacrament of the Eucharist is given in both kinds; he may give baptism, and preach the Gospel, by commission. To him the bishop gives a book of the Gospels, with power to read it in the Church of God. The third is that of priesthood, which has two degrees of power and dignity: that of bishops, and that of priests. The office of a priest is to consecrate and offer the sacrifice of the body and blood of Christ, under the form of bread and wine; to administer all the sacraments, except confirmation and holy order; to preach the Gospel, to bless the people, and to conduct them in the way to life eternal; as also to bless such things as are not reserved to the benediction of the bishop. The bishop, when he ordains a priest, anoints his hands with oil, which signifies the grace that is conferred upon him; he gives him the paten with bread upon it, and a chalice with wine, with power to offer sacrifice for the living and the dead; then he lays his hands upon him and says, Receive the Holy Ghost, &c., with several other ceremonies. The office of a bishop is to govern the Church, both clergy and laity, in his respective diocess; to inflict censures, excomunication, suspension, &c., to offer sacrifice, to preach the Gospel, to give confirmation, and holy order; none but bishops receive this sacrament in full, so as to have power to administer all the sacraments. Of these degrees of holy order, only bishops, priests and deacons constitute the hierarchy of the Church, which is of divine institution. Can. Trent. Sess. 23, c 6. But, as there are several degrees in order, so there are higher and lower degrees of dignity and spiritual jurisdiction in the episcopacy itself: 1. That of ordinaries. 2. That of archbishops. 3. That of primate. 4. That of patriarch. 5. That of the supreme head, and common father of all, the pope, who holds his supremacy, as successor to St. Peter, by right divine."

Here, sir, is an entire lack of the most important ministry and priesthood of the christian church. You have neither Apostles or Prophets. And you are not only destitute of this ministry, but you have no substitute for it. It will not do to say your Bishops are a substitute for the office of Apostles, for the Apostles were some of them Prophets, Seers, and Revelators, and all were witnesses of Christ and embassadors from him to the nations, which your Bishops none of them profess to be. The Bishops are in no sense in place of the Apostles, for many of the functions of the Apostolic office the church authoritatively disclaims possession of.

And as it is a well known fact that Bishops existed in the church during the time of the Apostles, and that they held an inferior ministry and were subject to the Apostles, it is foolish to pretend that they are successors to them. And the Bishop being the high priesthood in the Roman church, it would seem that this fact al made a full end of their pretensions.

But where do you pretend to find a substitute for Prophets? W in your church, either with or without being Bishops, h this priesthood? What Prophet among you stood up in the na of God to tell you of the recent famine in Ireland, which has swe off untold thousands of the faithful in that country, as Agabus old told the saints in his days of the famine in the days of Claudi Cæsar? Who of your priesthood could, by the spirit of God, p ceive the coming danger and warn them of the true refuge? A who knows now whether that famine was sent as a scourge on t Catholics of Ireland or on their enemies? Upon them alike has fallen. It is not improbable that the population of the whole kin dom is decimated. The grave has yawned till cities are desola The starved skeletons of the Catholic and the Protestant alike wa der over the land, whose miseries are but begun. The Catholic a the Protestant clergy alike chant anthems to the same God, that t feast of death is suspended, which they fondly and falsely belie will not begin again. But among them all is not found the Se who can tell against whom the wrath of God is waxed hot, or wh he thus chastises the creatures of his hand. Among all their clerg was raised no warning voice beforehand to tell them of the comin calamity; to admonish them of the law of God forgotten, or poi out a refuge to the penitent and obedient. No; the word of Go was not among them, and they perished, and know not why and ha no refuge. Their shepherds are as dogs without mouths, that coul neither bark to warn the flock of invasion or bite the destroy among them. They are as men who have no God, and they pe ished as the heathen and knew not why.

And as they made shipwreck of life then and there for want Apostles and prophets, so have they elsewhere and at other time and so also have they made shipwreck of faith. For want of t word and authority of God that church is no nearer perfected no than hundreds of years ago. It has no more come to the unity the faith; its body is no more edified, and it has not progressed on step in BRINGING IN THE REST of GOD which he has RESERVED to h PEOPLE, taking away ALL CURSE and ESTABLISHING EVERLASTIN RIGHTEOUSNESS.

That church has existed more than one thousand years with i present organization and priesthood. During all that time, exce one or two short interregnums, she has been an empire of herself.- And she has exerted a power above princes, kings and potentat throughout near half the earth. And looking back through the vi ta of time in the light of history I cannot discover one single act her doing which should help to bring about that state of things th the Prophets looked for, and patriarchs and priests of old died i the faith of.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

MUSINGS.

What a world we live in. Oh for a little sincerity. Holy hyp crites! yes, they are the applauded and worshipped of the age.- The man with solemn voice, measured mien, and face that scar can smile, is imitated, applauded, caressed, almost worshipped. Though he is avaricious, ignorant and revengeful, of blunted affe tions and unfeeling heart, yet he is still looked up to as one God's favored; as one of the good men of the earth. He is wo shipped of his fellow-creatures.

INFIDELITY.

Bible infidels! Ah, that is the word. The world is full of Bibl infidels; infidel christians; persons who profess to believe the B ble, but don't believe the doctrine contain d in it. You can hardly find a man in the world that believes the Bible. They are as scarce as angels visits.

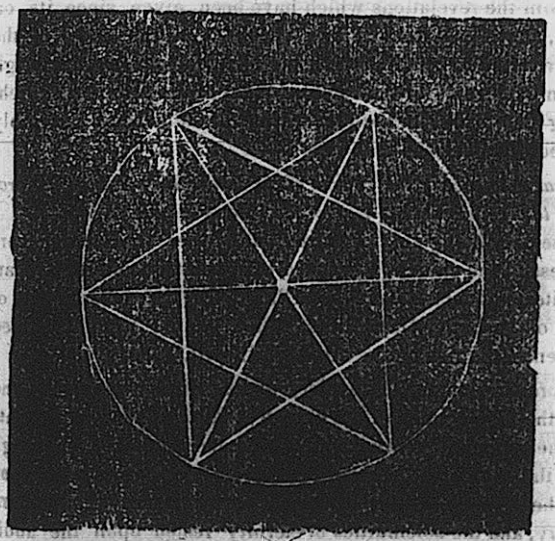
Well, that is not strange. They were brought up to it. But a Mormon that don't believe in Mormonism is a curiosity, notwithstanding the abundance of them. Well, now, reader, while writing this what do you guess I have heard? It was just what this class of Mormons apostatize on. Elder Page was telling anecdotes of his first mission in Canada. Among others is this,—That one man was convinced of the truth of Mormonism and detained him in conversation till the hour appointed for meetings. So when he pulled away from the anxious disciple to go to his appointment, he started on a run and jumped over the bars. "Well, what of that?" Oh, nothing, only the man turned back from Mormonism and followed after it no more. If the preacher was so light hearted as to jump over the bars without putting his hands on them, he did not believe in him or his gospel. Elder Blakesley's turn came next, and he told of a member of the church who denied the faith and went out of the church because elder Blakesley was so wicked, so regardless of the word of God as to take his knife out of his pocket and cut and scrape his finger nails during sermon. What contumely! What a disregard of God's holy presence! A holy hypocrite, a Bible infidel would suit such men to a T. These are the Mormons that don't believe in Mormonism. They make great professions of holiness. They are exceedingly sanctimonious. Their hearts may be filled with malice and envy. They will even brag of destroying confidence and breaking friendship. They will make their bite more venomous than that of the rattle snake; but the solemn tone, the unmoved face, the regular habit, and the affectionless heart, is to them instead of truth, and a means of lust, avarice and revenge.

COUNTING.

There is many a curiosity in the world, and among them are some in counting. Nineteen points can be set in nine straight rows and have five in every row, thus:—



Consequently the nineteen count forty-five by counting every way. Well, reader, this is just the way the apostates count their gains. They count them every way, and if that don't make enough they count them again, and then count around the circle. Take their stories for it and they have drawn more out of the church than were in it. Yet we are increasing from day to day.

"What did you put such a trifling picture in the paper for?"—Ah; is your faith tried? I have known men to apostatize for less cause than that. I put the picture in to leave it as a memorial to your children of the follies of apostacy. They will read and remember. From this time forward they will never forget that pseudo counting is very uncertain. They will always remember that nineteen can be counted up to forty-five. Is it not a little singular that every apostate thinks that when he goes out of the church that it will go down? For fifteen years apostacies have taken place on a variety of occasions. Those concerned in each and all supposed when they went off the church would go down, and of a dozen apostacies which have had their day, but a single one has left a prominent mark on the church, or materially retarded its growth, to wit: that of the western camp.

There are continually hanging around the skirts of the church a class of persons—Mormons who don't believe in Mormonism, and yet have gone just far enough in it so that they can't let it alone.—These men seize on every new movement. They take hold of whatever springs up, and are always looking for some great thing by some self-instituted body of men. You will see them baptized under some new leader once in six months or a year, and as often as they try some new thing you will hear them cry "now we have got the same spirit we had when we first came into the church," "we have the spirit of old Mormonism." They are just as sure they are right as the Israelites were when they shouted, "These be the gods that brought you out of Egypt, O Israel;" and their spirit is generally just about as near the true spirit of the gospel as Aaron's calf was to the true God.

Every new leader, when he calls these around him, counts them as so many secessions from the true church, and thus by counting them over and over from year to year they make nineteen count 45, or if right hard pushed run it up to 96, and thus make those that pray for evil in Zion believe the whole church has apostatized and more too.

Well, what of that number nineteen. Oh, nothing, only one of the apostates has recently been up in some neighborhood towards Milwaukee and turned back or broke down nineteen Strangites.—To this we have as good a defense as the Tennessee lawyer had to a suit brought against his client for breaking a borrowed kettle.—First, his client never borrowed the kettle; second, it was broken when he borrowed it; and third, it was whole when he returned it. There were never nineteen Mormons there; what there were, were never Strangites, and if they had any disposition that way they had lost it long ago. It takes a long faced holy hypocrite to make two or three old apostates into nineteen Strangites, just turned back. Saints, don't apostatize on one man's say so.

☞ The weather continues extremely mild. There is no country which enjoys a more beautiful autumn than the region about the great lakes of North America.

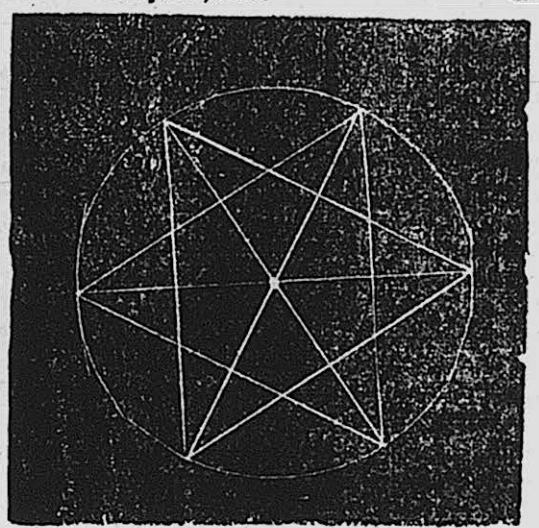
PAYMENT OF TITHING.—We hope to see a prompt payment of tithing this fall and winter. Let every man remember that he can tithe his income when he has it, much easier than to account for it after it has gone. Now, when your granaries are full, remember the house of the Lord. And the sisters should not forget that they have an interest in these matters. Every pair of mittens or stockings sent up will become stones in the walls of the house of God.—The men that do the work want such things, and all help in the great result. Now, while the weather is propitious, we are getting all things well a-going, and hope to see a noble beginning before next summer.

, but don't believe the doctrine contained in it. You can hardly d a man in the world that believes the Bible. They are as scarce angels visits.

Well, that is not strange. They were brought up to it. But a ormon that don't believe in Mormonism is a curiosity, notwithnding the abundance of them. Well, now, reader, while writing s what do you guess I have heard? It was just what this class Mormons apostatize on. Elder Page was telling anecdotes of s first mission in Canada. Among others is this,—That one man as convinced of the truth of Mormonism and detained him in conrsation till the hour appointed for meetings. So when he pulled ay from the anxious disciple to go to his appointment, he started a run and jumped over the bars. "Well, what of that?" Oh, thing, only the man turned back from Mormonism and followed er it no more. If the preacher was so light hearted as to jump er the bars without putting his hands on them, he did not believe him or his gospel. Elder Blakesley's turn came next, and he d of a member of the church who denied the faith and went out of e church because elder Blakesley was so wicked, so regardless of e word of God as to take his knife out of his pocket and cut and rape his finger nails during sermon. What contumely! What disregard of God's holy presence! A holy hypocrite, a Bible inel would suit such men to a T. These are the Mormons that n't believe in Mormonism. They make great professions of holess. They are exceedingly sanctimonious. Their hearts may filled with malice and envy. They will even brag of destroying nfidence and breaking friendship. They will make their bite ore venomous than that of the rattle snake; but the solemn tone, e unmoved face, the regular habit, and the affectionless heart, is them instead of truth, and a means of lust, avarice and revenge.

COUNTING.

There is many a curiosity in the world, and among them are me in counting. Nineteen points can be set in nine straight rows d have five in every row, thus:—



Consequently the nineteen count forty-five by counting every y. Well, reader, this is just the way the apostates count their ins. They count them every way, and if that don't make enough ey count them again, and then count around the circle. Take eir stories for it and they have drawn more out of the church than re in it. Yet we are increasing from day to day.

"What did you put such a trifling picture in the paper for?"—; is your faith tried? I have known men to apostatize for less cause than that. I put the picture in to leave it as a memorial to your children of the follies of apostacy. They will read and remember. From this time forward they will never forget that pseudo counting is very uncertain. They will always remember that nineteen can be counted up to forty-five. Is it not a little singular that every apostate thinks that when he goes out of the church that it will go down? For fifteen years apostacies have taken place on a variety of occasions. Those concerned in each and all supposed when they went off the church would go down, and of a dozen apostacies which have had their day, but a single one has left a prominent mark on the church, or materially retarded its growth, to wit: that of the western camp.

There are continually hanging around the skirts of the church a class of persons—Mormons who don't believe in Mormonism, and yet have gone just far enough in it so that they can't let it alone.—These men seize on every new movement. They take hold of whatever springs up, and are always looking for some great thing by some self-instituted body of men. You will see them baptized under some new leader once in six months or a year, and as often as they try some new thing you will hear them cry "now we have got the same spirit we had when we first came into the church," "we have the spirit of old Mormonism." They are just as sure they are right as the Israelites were when they shouted, "These be the gods that brought you out of Egypt, O Israel;" and their spirit is generally just about as near the true spirit of the gospel as Aaron's calf was to the true God.

Every new leader, when he calls these around him, counts them as so many secessions from the true church, and thus by counting them over and over from year to year they make nineteen count 45, or if right hard pushed run it up to 96, and thus make those that pray for evil in Zion believe the whole church has apostatized and more too.

Well, what of that number nineteen. Oh, nothing, only one of the apostates has recently been up in some neighborhood towards Milwaukee and turned back or broke down nineteen Strangites.—To this we have as good a defense as the Tennessee lawyer had to a suit brought against his client for breaking a borrowed kettle.—First, his client never borrowed the kettle; second, it was broken when he borrowed it; and third, it was whole when he returned it. There were never nineteen Mormons there; what there were, were never Strangites, and if they had any disposition that way they had lost it long ago. It takes a long faced holy hypocrite to make two or three old apostates into nineteen Strangites, just turned back. Saints, don't apostatize on one man's say so.

☞ The weather continues extremely mild. There is no country which enjoys a more beautiful autumn than the region about the great lakes of North America.

PAYMENT OF TITHING.—We hope to see a prompt payment of tithing this fall and winter. Let every man remember that he can tithe his income when he has it, much easier than to account for it after it has gone. Now, when your granaries are full, remember the house of the Lord. And the sisters should not forget that they have an interest in these matters. Every pair of mittens or stockings sent up will become stones in the walls of the house of God.—The men that do the work want such things, and all help in the great result. Now, while the weather is propitious, we are getting all things well a-going, and hope to see a noble beginning before next summer.

MORMON DISCUSSION.

(Continued from last week.)

Spain in like manner has lost the principal part of her empire.—One third of North America, two thirds of South America, and many millions of subjects in India and Africa have separated from her; yet nobody ever dreamed that they could steal away the identity of the nation by name, numbers, or anything else short of obtaining the supreme power at the sovereign head of the nation, either by regular succession or revolution. France was the "Kingdom of France," then the "Republic of the French," then the "French Empire," again the "Kingdom of France," and now the "Kingdom of the French;" but it was never doubted that through all these mutations of name it remained the same identical nation. If change of name changed identity, a most convenient mode that would be of wiping out old debts. It would beat any system of bankruptcy yet known. In fine, the whole idea is so egregious a folly that the principal difficulty in disproving it is that there is nothing to disprove. It is a self-evident falsehood, which no argument can make either more or less certain.

There can be no greater folly than to say that a church is truly the church of Christ simply because it is called by that name, or that it ceases to be his church simply by being called by another name. The whole question, if question it may be called, lies in this,—either the authority that adopted the name "Latter Day Saints" was competent to adopt that name, or it was not. If the authority was competent, the act was legal and the name was valid. If the authority was not competent to change the name, then the act was illegal, unauthorized and void. Consequently the name was not changed; for nothing can be clearer than that an act done by an incompetent authority is a mere nullity. So if it be settled that the act of a Conference was sufficient to adopt the words "Latter Day Saints" in the name of the church, then that act was legally done, and those words became legally attached to the name of the church.

Mr. Strang read the act, as follows:—

From the Evening and Morning Star.

Kirtland, Ohio, May 2, 1834.

Minutes of a Conference of the Elders of the Church of Christ, which Church was organized in the township of Fayette, Seneca county, New York, on the 6th of April, A. D. 1830.

The Conference came to order, and Joseph Smith, Jr., was chosen Moderator, and Frederick G. Williams and Oliver Cowdery were appointed Clerks.

After prayer the Conference proceeded to discuss the subject of names and appellations, when a motion was made by Sidney Rigdon, and seconded by Newell K. Whitney, that this church be known hereafter by the name of the Church of the Latter Day Saints. Appropriate remarks were delivered by some of the members, after which the motion was put by the Moderator, and passed by UNANIMOUS VOICE.

Resolved, That this Conference recommend to the Conferences and churches abroad, that in making out and transmitting minutes of their proceedings, such minutes and proceedings be made out under the above title.

Resolved, That these minutes be signed by the Moderator and Clerks, and published in the Evening and the Morning Star.

JOSEPH SMITH, JR., Moderator.

FREDERICK G. WILLIAMS, } Clerks.
OLIVER COWDERY, }

Mr. Strang proceeded. Mr. President,—You will perceive that this act does not abrogate the name of the church. It does not take away any part of it. It only fixes upon a certain further designation to be used in papers, Conference minutes and other documents, by which to distinguish it from any other church, which might claim also to be called the church of Christ. And, as I said before, if the authority of this Conference, so constituted, and containing in its organization all the authorities of the church from the First President down, was sufficient to adopt such a name, then that became the legal name of the same original identical church organized by Joseph Smith and others, April 6th, 1830. And if that authority was not sufficient, then the act was merely void; the name "Latter Day Saints," as attached to the church, is a misnomer, a mere nickname, like that of "Mormon" or "Mormonite."

But to talk that an act void of itself, and consequently utterly without force, has the effect to annihilate the church of God or to change it from being the church of God to that of the Devil, and to abolish all priesthood therein, is to me the merest absurdity that the mind of man has ever conceived. This I humbly conceive to be sufficient, and if no more could be said I should hold the question settled on a firm basis. But I have another class of evidence which I shall offer, not because I consider it the best evidence, but because my opponent is estopped from controverting it. You will bear in mind, Mr. President, that my opponent has been a member of this church of Latter Day Saints, as well as of almost every faction that has ever sprung out of it. And he has been so much a favorite with God that he has obtained revelations from him, justifying his course in all its meanderings. To be plain, I intend to show by revelations, that my opponent has pretended to have from God, that both the name "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" and several other names are all equally true names of the church of Christ.

Mr. Strang then introduced the "Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, carefully selected from the revelations of God, and compiled by Joseph Smith, Jr., Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams." The preface to this book is addressed "to the members of the Church of the Latter Day Saints," and contains the following: "the second part (of this book) contains items or principles for the regulation of the church, as taken from the revelations which have been given since its organization, as well as from former ones;" and the body of the work thus referred to contains the same identical revelations originally given by Joseph for the establishment of the Mormon church. Mr. Strang also read from the proceedings of the general assembly that adopted that book the following:—

At a General Assembly of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, according to previous notice, held on the 17th of August, 1835.

The Assembly being duly organized, and after transacting certain business of the church, proceeded to appoint a committee to arrange the items of doctrine of Jesus Christ, for the government of his church of the Latter Day Saints, which church was organized and commenced its rise on the 6th day of April, 1830.

Wherefore Presidents O. Cowdery and S. Rigdon proceeded and organized the high council of the church at Kirtland, and Presidents W. W. Phelps and J. Whitmer proceeded and organized the high council of the church in Missouri, &c., &c. A hymn was then sung and the services of the day opened by the prayer of President O. Cowdery, and the solemnities of eternity rested upon the audience.

President Cowdery arose and introduced the "Book of Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints." W. W. Phelps bore record that the book presented to the assembly was true. President John Whitmer also arose and testified that it was true.—Elder John Smith, taking the lead of the high council in Kirtland, bore record that the revelations in said book were true, and that the lectures were judiciously arranged and compiled, and were profitable

MORMON DISCUSSION.

(Continued from last week.)

Spain in like manner has lost the principal part of her empire.—One third of North America, two thirds of South America, and many millions of subjects in India and Africa have separated from her; yet nobody ever dreamed that they could steal away the identity of the nation by name, numbers, or anything else short of obtaining the supreme power at the sovereign head of the nation, either by regular succession or revolution. France was the "Kingdom of France," then the "Republic of the French," then the "French Empire," again the "Kingdom of France," and now the "Kingdom of the French;" but it was never doubted that through all these mutations of name it remained the same identical nation. If change of name changed identity, a most convenient mode that would be of wiping out old debts. It would beat any system of bankruptcy yet known. In fine, the whole idea is so egregious a folly that the principal difficulty in disproving it is that there is nothing to disprove. It is a self-evident falsehood, which no argument can make either more or less certain.

There can be no greater folly than to say that a church is truly the church of Christ simply because it is called by that name, or that it ceases to be his church simply by being called by another name. The whole question, if question it may be called, lies in this,—either the authority that adopted the name "Latter Day Saints" was competent to adopt that name, or it was not. If the authority was competent, the act was legal and the name was valid. If the authority was not competent to change the name, then the act was illegal, unauthorized and void. Consequently the name was not changed; for nothing can be clearer than that an act done by an incompetent authority is a mere nullity. So if it be settled that the act of a Conference was sufficient to adopt the words "Latter Day Saints" in the name of the church, then that act was legally done, and those words became legally attached to the name of the church.

Mr. Strang read the act, as follows:—

From the Evening and Morning Star.

Kirtland, Ohio, May 2, 1834.

Minutes of a Conference of the Elders of the Church of Christ, which Church was organized in the township of Fayette, Seneca county, New York, on the 6th of April, A. D. 1830.

The Conference came to order, and Joseph Smith, Jr., was chosen Moderator, and Frederick G. Williams and Oliver Cowdery were appointed Clerks.

After prayer the Conference proceeded to discuss the subject of names and appellations, when a motion was made by Sidney Rigdon, and seconded by Newell K. Whitney, that this church be known hereafter by the name of the Church of the Latter Day Saints. Appropriate remarks were delivered by some of the members, after which the motion was put by the Moderator, and passed by UNANIMOUS VOICE.

Resolved, That this Conference recommend to the Conferences and churches abroad, that in making out and transmitting minutes of their proceedings, such minutes and proceedings be made out under the above title.

Resolved, That these minutes be signed by the Moderator and Clerks, and published in the Evening and the Morning Star.

JOSEPH SMITH, JR., Moderator.

FREDERICK G. WILLIAMS, OLIVER COWDERY, } Clerks.

Mr. Strang proceeded. Mr. President,—You will perceive that this act does not abrogate the name of the church. It does not take away any part of it. It only fixes upon a certain further designation to be used in papers, Conference minutes and other documents, by which to distinguish it from any other church, which might claim also to be called the church of Christ. And, as I said before, if the authority of this Conference, so constituted, and containing in its organization all the authorities of the church from the First President down, was sufficient to adopt such a name, then that became the legal name of the same original identical church organized by Joseph Smith and others, April 6th, 1830. And if that authority was not sufficient, then the act was merely void; the name "Latter Day Saints," as attached to the church, is a misnomer, a mere nickname, like that of "Mormon" or "Mormonite."

But to talk that an act void of itself, and consequently utterly without force, has the effect to annihilate the church of God or to change it from being the church of God to that of the Devil, and to abolish all priesthood therein, is to me the merest absurdity that the mind of man has ever conceived. This I humbly conceive to be sufficient, and if no more could be said I should hold the question settled on a firm basis. But I have another class of evidence which I shall offer, not because I consider it the best evidence, but because my opponent is estopped from controverting it. You will bear in mind, Mr. President, that my opponent has been a member of the church of Latter Day Saints, as well as of almost every faction that has ever sprung out of it. And he has been so much a favorite with God that he has obtained revelations from him, justifying his course in all its meanderings. To be plain, I intend to show by revelations, that my opponent has pretended to have from God, that both the name "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" and several other names are all equally true names of the church of Christ.

Mr. Strang then introduced the "Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, carefully selected from the revelations of God, and compiled by Joseph Smith, Jr., Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams." The preface to the book is addressed "to the members of the Church of the Latter Day Saints," and contains the following: "the second part (of the book) contains items or principles for the regulation of the church as taken from the revelations which have been given since its organization, as well as from former ones;" and the body of the work thus referred to contains the same identical revelations originally given by Joseph for the establishment of the Mormon church. Mr. Strang also read from the proceedings of the general assembly that adopted that book the following:—

At a General Assembly of the Church of the Latter Day Saints, according to previous notice, held on the 17th of August, 1835.

The Assembly being duly organized, and after transacting certain business of the church, proceeded to appoint a committee to arrange the items of doctrine of Jesus Christ, for the government of his church of the Latter Day Saints, which church was organized and commenced its rise on the 6th day of April, 1830.

Wherefore Presidents O. Cowdery and S. Rigdon proceeded and organized the high council of the church at Kirtland, and President W. W. Phelps and J. Whitmer proceeded and organized the high council of the church in Missouri, &c., &c. A hymn was then sung and the services of the day opened by the prayer of President O. Cowdery, and the solemnities of eternity rested upon the audience.

President Cowdery arose and introduced the "Book of Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints." W. W. Phelps bore record that the book presented to the assembly was true. President John Whitmer also arose and testified that it was true. Elder John Smith, taking the lead of the high council in Kirtland, bore record that the revelations in said book were true, and that the lectures were judiciously arranged and compiled, and were profitable for doctrine; whereupon the high council of Kirtland accepted and acknowledged them as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote. Elder Levi Jackman, taking the lead of the high council of the church in Missouri, bore testimony that the revelations in said book were true, and the said high council of Missouri accepted and acknowledged them as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote.

President W. W. Phelps then read the written testimony of the Twelve, [of which quorum W. E. McLellin was then a member,] as follows: "The testimony of the witnesses to the book of the Lord's commandments, which he gave to his church through Joseph Smith, Jr., who was appointed by the voice of the church for this purpose: we therefore feel willing to bear testimony to all the world of mankind, to every creature upon the face of all the earth, and upon the islands of the sea, that the Lord has borne record to our souls, through the Holy Ghost shed forth upon us, that these commandments were given by inspiration of God, and are profitable for all men, and are verily true. We give this testimony unto the world, the Lord being our helper; and it is through the grace of God, the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, that we are permitted to have this privilege of bearing this testimony unto the world, in the which we rejoice exceedingly, praying the Lord always, that the children of men may be profited thereby." Elder Leonard Rich bore record of the truth of the book, and the council of the Seventy accepted and acknowledged it as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote.

OLIVER COWDERY, } Presidents.
SIDNEY RIGDON, }

[See errata.]

THOMAS BURDICK, }
WARREN PARRISH, } Clerks.
SYLVESTER SMITH, }

Mr. Strang proceeded. Not only my opponent himself, but nearly all his principal associates, were actors in this scene, and gave their testimony on that occasion in favor of the Church of Latter Day Saints as the true church of Christ, establishhd by revelation and organized April 6th, 1830. Whether they lied in the name of God, as my opponent would now have us believe, is not perhaps for me to say. However inconsistent their present course may be, I know nothing preceding it to impugn the testimony of most of them. Not so my opponent. He has talked quite too much. So often has he changed his position, and always upon the pretence of a thus saith the Lord, that I cannot say less of him than that he lies in the name of God, not weekly, but daily and hourly.

Mr. McLellin. I claim the protection of the President. If I am to be abused in this way I shall leave the house and abandon the debate.

The Pres. If Mr. Strang makes that statement as an accusation, it is improper. If as a conclusion from the argument, it is a proper subject of examination.

Mr. Strang. It is not necessary to decide that question at all.—I shall give my opponent no excuse for backing out of this debate. I am quite in the habit of calling things by their right names, but I can find more courteous language if my opponent is fastidious.

Mr. McLellin. I claim to have this question decided now.

The Pres. Mr. Strang will proceed, keeping within the rule I have suggested.

Mr. Strang. I think we will easily avoid any further trouble on this subject. When I make the proofs I shall be perfectly content to leave other people to use the expletives. To the subject.—The testimony of the quorum of the Twelve, of which my opponent was a member, which I have just read, states that God has revealed to them that these commandments and covenants of the Church of Latter Day Saints are true, and one of those commandments says this is "the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth." Sec. i. par 5. I conceive, Mr. President, that so far as the testimony of my opponent can prove a revelation, he has here proved that the church of Christ organized April 6th, 1831, and called the church of the Latter Day Saints in 1835, is the same identical living and true church.

But I shall not leave him here. I shall hold him for the whole name, "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Mr. Strang read from the Messenger and Advocate of Jan. 15th, 1845, page 91, the following letter from W. E. McLellin to S. Rigdon:—

Hampton, Ill., Dec. 23, 1844.

PRESIDENT S. RIGDON,—

With feelings of no ordinary character I seat myself to address a few lines to you. Notwithstanding it has been years since I voluntarily withdrew from the "church of Jesus Christ, of Latter Day Saints," yet I have by no means been an unnoticing spectator of the course and doings of that society. With intense anxiety have I watched them. For many noble spirits—virtuous hearts, among them I have (notwithstanding my many dark, lonesome hours) ever entertained the highest regard. As truly as I believed and valued the truth of divine revelation, so firmly did I believe the work of the "Latter day" would yet come out and prosper gloriously. I, at this moment Sir, have the consolation to know that never, no never, has this sharp-pointed pen of mine, been raised against THAT work, or PEOPLE to injure or harm since I left them. Nay, verily, the truth of that work I could not, I dare not oppose.

Now, sir, let me say to you in confidence, that the Lord has shown to me that by a union of President Law and yourself, together with each, your friends, that all the honest in heart among the Latter Day Saints and throughout the world will UNITE also, and form that company who will follow the Savior robed in white linen "clean and white." I have seen all the communications between you and Pres. Law, and I am much pleased with the spirit that they breathe. My word for it that Wm. Law and his brethren who are here with him, are men of inestimable value in the things of God. You may rely upon their word, upon their integrity of purpose to serve God, at the sacrifice of all things earthly.

We are in daily expectation of your answer to Pres. W. Law's last letter to you. I do not know (as yet) whether it is my duty to wait till the northern wind ceases to freeze before I speed my way to you. One thing certain I shall move as directed.

I am yours in the bond
of the New Covenant,
W. E. McLELLIN.

Mr. Strang proceeded. Here we are told expressly, in distinct reference to "the Church of JESUS CHRIST of LATTER DAY SAINTS," that the Dr.'s "sharp-pointed pen" had NEVER been raised against that WORK OR PEOPLE. And as distinctly are we told that the REASON was that he KNEW the work (of that church) was true, and DARE not OPPOSE IT. About the other sharp-pointed instruments, that he did use against that church when he assisted in mobbing them out of Mo., as he has not seen fit to enlighten us, we are left merely to infer that though truth was invulnerable to his pen, mens' bodies were not thus shielded against sword and shot, and consequently, that he attacked them in a vulnerable spot; their bodies and their lives.

You will perceive, Mr. President, that this letter comes in largely in praise of "President William Law," a righteous servant of God. How did Wm. Law become a President? And why is he called a servant of God? He became President in this same "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" by a revelation which God gave to Joseph in 1841.

for doctrine; whereupon the high council of Kirtland accepted and acknowledged them as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote. Elder Levi Jackman, taking the lead of the high council of the church in Missouri, bore testimony that the revelations in said book were true, and the said high council of Missouri accepted and acknowledged them as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote.

President W. W. Phelps then read the written testimony of the Twelve, [of which quorum W. E. McLellin was then a member,] as follows: "The testimony of the witnesses to the book of the Lord's commandments, which he gave to his church through Joseph Smith, Jr., who was appointed by the voice of the church for this purpose: we therefore feel willing to bear testimony to all the world of mankind, to every creature upon the face of all the earth, and upon the islands of the sea, that the Lord has borne record to our souls, through the Holy Ghost shed forth upon us, that these commandments were given by inspiration of God, and are profitable for all men, and are verily true. We give this testimony unto the world, the Lord being our helper; and it is through the grace of God, the Father, and his Son Jesus Christ, that we are permitted to have this privilege of bearing this testimony unto the world, in the which we rejoice exceedingly, praying the Lord always, that the children of men may be profited thereby." Elder Leonard Rich bore record of the truth of the book, and the council of the Seventy accepted and acknowledged it as the doctrine and covenants of their faith, by a unanimous vote.

OLIVER COWDERY, } Presidents.
SIDNEY RIGDON, }

[See errata.]

THOMAS BURDICK, }
WARREN PARRISH, } Clerks.
SYLVESTER SMITH, }

Mr. Strang proceeded. Not only my opponent himself, but nearly all his principal associates, were actors in this scene, and gave their testimony on that occasion in favor of the Church of Latter Day Saints as the true church of Christ, establishhd by revelation and organized April 6th, 1830. Whether they lied in the name of God, as my opponent would now have us believe, is not perhaps for me to say. However inconsistent their present course may be, I know nothing preceding it to impugn the testimony of most of them. Not so my opponent. He has talked quite too much. So often has he changed his position, and always upon the pretence of a thus saith the Lord, that I cannot say less of him than that he lies in the name of God, not weekly, but daily and hourly.

Mr. McLellin. I claim the protection of the President. If I am to be abused in this way I shall leave the house and abandon the debate.

The Pres. If Mr. Strang makes that statement as an accusation, it is improper. If as a conclusion from the argument, it is a proper subject of examination.

Mr. Strang. It is not necessary to decide that question at all.—I shall give my opponent no excuse for backing out of this debate. I am quite in the habit of calling things by their right names, but I can find more courteous language if my opponent is fastidious.

Mr. McLellin. I claim to have this question decided now.

The Pres. Mr. Strang will proceed, keeping within the rule I have suggested.

Mr. Strang. I think we will easily avoid any further trouble on this subject. When I make the proofs I shall be perfectly content to leave other people to use the expletives. To the subject,—The testimony of the quorum of the Twelve, of which my opponent was a member, which I have just read, states that God has revealed to them that these commandments and covenants of the Church of Latter Day Saints are true, and one of those commandments says this is "the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth." Sec. i. par 5. I conceive, Mr. President, that so far as the testimony of my opponent can prove a revelation, he has here proved that the church of Christ organized April 6th, 1831, and called the church of the Latter Day Saints in 1835, is the same identical living and true church.

But I shall not leave him here. I shall hold him for the whole name, "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." Mr. Strang read from the Messenger and Advocate of Jan. 15th, 1845, page 91, the following letter from W. E. McLellin to S. Rigdon:—

Hampton, Ill., Dec. 23, 1844.

PRESIDENT S. RIGDON,—

With feelings of no ordinary character I seat myself to address a few lines to you. Notwithstanding it has been years since I voluntarily withdrew from the "church of Jesus Christ, of Latter Day Saints," yet I have by no means been an unnoticing spectator of the course and doings of that society. With intense anxiety have I watched them. For many noble spirits—virtuous hearts, among them I have (notwithstanding my many dark, lonesome hours) ever entertained the highest regard. As truly as I believed and valued the truth of divine revelation, so firmly did I believe the work of the "Latter day" would yet come out and prosper gloriously. I, at this moment Sir, have the consolation to know that never, no never, has this sharp-pointed pen of mine, been raised against THAT work, or PEOPLE to injure or harm since I left them. Nay, verily, the truth of that work I could not, I dare not oppose.

Now, sir, let me say to you in confidence, that the Lord has shown to me that by a union of President Law and yourself, together with each, your friends, that all the honest in heart among the Latter Day Saints and throughout the world will UNITE also, and form that company who will follow the Savior robed in white linen "clean and white." I have seen all the communications between you and Pres. Law, and I am much pleased with the spirit that they breathe. My word for it that Wm. Law and his brethren who are here with him, are men of inestimable value in the things of God. You may rely upon their word, upon their integrity of purpose to serve God, at the sacrifice of all things earthly.

We are in daily expectation of your answer to Pres. W. Law's last letter to you. I do not know (as yet) whether it is my duty to wait till the northern wind ceases to freeze before I speed my way to you. One thing certain I shall move as directed.

I am yours in the bond
of the New Covenant,
W. E. McLELLIN.

Mr. Strang proceeded. Here we are told expressly, in distinct reference to "the Church of JESUS CHRIST of LATTER DAY SAINTS," that the Dr.'s "sharp-pointed pen" had NEVER been raised against that WORK OR PEOPLE. And as distinctly are we told that the REASON was that he KNEW the work (of that church) was true, and DARE not OPPOSE IT. About the other sharp-pointed instruments, that he did use against that church when he assisted in mobbing them out of Mo., as he has not seen fit to enlighten us, we are left merely to infer that though truth was invulnerable to his pen, mens' bodies were not thus shielded against sword and shot, and consequently, that he attacked them in a vulnerable spot; their bodies and their lives.

You will perceive, Mr. President, that this letter comes in largely in praise of "President William Law," a righteous servant of God. How did Wm. Law become a President? And why is he called a servant of God? He became President in this same "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" by a revelation which God gave to Joseph in 1841.

Mr. Strang read from Doctrine and Covenants, (Nauvoo edition,) page 406—7 par. 29,—"And again, verily I say unto you, let my servant William be appointed, ordained and anointed as counsellor unto my servant Joseph, in the room of my servant Hyrum."

Mr. Strang also read from a revelation which Wm. E. McLellin professed to have received at Hampton, Ill., Jan. 7th, 1845, as follows:—

"Now I say unto you, that from this time forth you must turn neither to the right hand or to the left, but keep and obey the laws of my kingdom; be careful of your words when you speak in the name of the Lord, in time to come; for if you are humble and speak in my name, you shall speak in wisdom, in light, in power, and in demonstration of the spirit, and I the Lord will fulfill all your words. Therefore I say unto you again, be careful, and in my church, in my kingdom, never look upon sin with allowance. For my KINGDOM must now begin to put on its strength, and it will yet become the deliverer and joy of the whole earth; therefore go with MY SERVANT WILLIAM LAW, and stand by each other in all right principles, and even in perils if need be; for with him I the Lord am well pleased, inasmuch as he desires above all things to build up my church, to BRING IT FORTH OUT OF DISTRESS, and to assist in establishing it upon the true principles of mine everlasting covenant. I have seen his firmness of purpose, his love of innocence and virtue; yea, I have seen his sacrifice, and have heard his prayers for the deliverance of Zion; and now if he desires my glory more than the praises and riches of the world, behold I will bless him and his brethren with him who have NOT DENIED MY NAME in a day of trouble, until their souls shall say amen and amen.

"Yea, I say unto you again, go with him, and go speedily unto the east, where you can unite with my servants who are willing to forsake all for Christ's truth; that the authorities of my church may be together to strengthen each other's faith, and weaken the hands of their enemies; for I say unto you that when you shall move forward darkness shall brood over the minds of your enemies, and they shall quake and tremble before the power of God, the power of truth, which shall be manifest through you; therefore fear not, only fear to offend the Lord, and you shall prosper; you shall stand among the redeemed from earth, the sanctified from sin, the honored of God. Go then, that mine elders who have kept themselves from the abominations which I hate, who have kept their priesthood unspotted, who have kept the faith, may assemble and hold a Conference and converse together in love, in light, and in the spirit in my kingdom; for my church must be built up to me, and not unto man, that my saints who have made covenant with me by sacrifice may be gathered. Yea, go that the school of the prophets may be established according to the pattern which you have and shall have before you. Go forward, for great things await you, and you shall learn from time to time. I the Lord delight to make known to my servants all my will concerning them. A short work will I now perform upon the earth, the glory of which and the power of which you cannot now conceive, but if faithful you shall see it, and rejoice in it, even so. Amen."

Mr. Strang also read from a revelation which W. E. McLellin professed to receive at Hampton, Ill., Jan. 18th, 1845, as follows:—

"I always hold all my ministers in my own hand, I will call all their enemies to judgement who abuse them or trample on their authority. And verily I say unto you, and can you not remember it, that every act of righteousness in them has its reward, and though I bear long for my namesake, yet every act of disobedience or transgression in any of them who are called with so holy a calling has its punishment, for my ministry in my kingdom must be holy.—Then what has any to fear respecting the transgressions of any, are not my laws before you? Therefore let every man who desires to work put his trust in me, and righteousness shall go forth as a lamp that burneth. I the Lord yet ACKNOWLEDGE the AUTHORITY and MINISTRY in my CHURCH who are now willing to forsake all unrighteousness and cleave unto me, notwithstanding all their imperfections, inasmuch as they repent, I will be gracious unto them; therefore I say unto you again, have no fears, but go forward to obey my voice, the voice of my spirit to you, and all shall be well with you and with those whom you now feel to be your brethren. Now if you continue to the end you shall be my son, and dwell in my presence with all the church of the first born. Verily thus saith the Lord your Savior, even so. Amen."

Here, Mr. President, are arrayed before that man a set of his own testimonies that ought to make him hide his face with shame in the dust. Yes, shame, shame, SHAME on the man who will thus deny the word that God has spoken to him. He knew the truth of the work of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The Lord commanded him to go with his servant Wm. Law, one of the Presidents of that church, who was never President, and for aught that appears never a member till the church took that name to join with Sidney Rigdon another of the Presidents of that chrrch, in building up that church. And to remove all doubts from his mind about its being the true church, the Lord tells him in these words: "I the Lord yet acknowledge the authority and ministry in my church." Speaking of those who are ministers in the "church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and in no other church. If he will not believe when GOD SPEAKS to HIM, wherewith shall we persuade him!

(To be continued.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

New Brighton, (Fallston P. O.,) Oct. 15, 1847.

PRESIDENT J. J. STRANG:—

ESTEEMED BROTHER,—I embrace a few moments of leisure this evening to write to you, and to enclose an X to you from our brother Winders of Pittsburgh. I have also one dozen Books of Mormon from brother James Smith, which I shall forward along, with some paper for the "Gospel Herald," so soon as I am informed where to consign it, as the shippers here do not know at which port (Racine or Southport) the steamers stop at. I propose sending a box of printing paper, and brother Ross will put in some notions to scare cold weather. Please inform me soon what size the paper should be, and where and to whom I shall direct the box. In the mean time I shall collect all the money I can for the Herald.

Tell Bro. John E. Page to keep good heart, we will do all in our power to sustain both him and the Herald. We have a paper now that we are proud of. I was just going to give some particulars what we like, but I cannot select. We like all! The course of our beloved President is highly commended by all the living members here.

I meet the brethren in Pittsburgh as frequently as possible, usually once in two weeks. God has a few names even there, who stand fast—hating the doctrines of the Nicolaitans. Bro. James Smith, the presiding high priest, is a faithful and good man, zealous of good works. I was glad that the Lord, "by revelation," set him apart to that high calling. We are a mutual help and comfort to each other. Bro. Winders and wife are firm and zealous. Bro. McDowell, the Pres. of the branch, lost all he had by Rigdon; yet standing fast in the truth. Bros. Prince, Boyington, Spratley, and some others, are firm and faithful. We have our meetings regularly, and are opening new places for preaching. The people are be-

Mr. Strang read from Doctrine and Covenants, (Nauvoo edition,) page 406—7 par. 29,—"And again, verily I say unto you, let my servant William be appointed, ordained and anointed as counsellor unto my servant Joseph, in the room of my servant Hyrum."

Mr. Strang also read from a revelation which Wm. E. McLellin professed to have received at Hampton, Ill., Jan. 7th, 1845, as follows:—

"Now I say unto you, that from this time forth you must turn neither to the right hand or to the left, but keep and obey the laws of my kingdom; be careful of your words when you speak in the name of the Lord, in time to come; for if you are humble and speak in my name, you shall speak in wisdom, in light, in power, and in demonstration of the spirit, and I the Lord will fulfill all your words. Therefore I say unto you again, be careful, and in my church, in my kingdom, never look upon sin with allowance. For my KINGDOM must now begin to put on its strength, and it will yet become the deliverer and joy of the whole earth; therefore go with MY SERVANT WILLIAM LAW, and stand by each other in all right principles, and even in perils if need be; for with him I the Lord am well pleased, inasmuch as he desires above all things to build up my church, to BRING IT FORTH OUT OF DISTRESS, and to assist in establishing it upon the true principles of mine everlasting covenant. I have seen his firmness of purpose, his love of innocence and virtue; yea, I have seen his sacrifice, and have heard his prayers for the deliverance of Zion; and now if he desires my glory more than the praises and riches of the world, behold I will bless him and his brethren with him who have NOT DENIED MY NAME in a day of trouble, until their souls shall say amen and amen.

"Yea, I say unto you again, go with him, and go speedily unto the east, where you can unite with my servants who are willing to forsake all for Christ's truth; that the authorities of my church may be together to strengthen each other's faith, and weaken the hands of their enemies; for I say unto you that when you shall move forward darkness shall brood over the minds of your enemies, and they shall quake and tremble before the power of God, the power of truth, which shall be manifest through you; therefore fear not, only fear to offend the Lord, and you shall prosper; you shall stand among the redeemed from earth, the sanctified from sin, the honored of God. Go then, that mine elders who have kept themselves from the abominations which I hate, who have kept their priesthood unspotted, who have kept the faith, may assemble and hold a Conference and converse together in love, in light, and in the spirit in my kingdom; for my church must be built up to me, and not unto man, that my saints who have made covenant with me by sacrifice may be gathered. Yea, go that the school of the prophets may be established according to the pattern which you have and shall have before you. Go forward, for great things await you, and you shall learn from time to time. I the Lord delight to make known to my servants all my will concerning them. A short work will I now perform upon the earth, the glory of which and the power of which you cannot now conceive, but if faithful you shall see it, and rejoice in it, even so. Amen."

Mr. Strang also read from a revelation which W. E. McLellin professed to receive at Hampton, Ill., Jan. 18th, 1845, as follows:—

"I always hold all my ministers in my own hand, I will call all their enemies to judgement who abuse them or trample on their authority. And verily I say unto you, and can you not remember it, that every act of righteousness in them has its reward, and though I bear long for my namesake, yet every act of disobedience of transgression in any of them who are called with so holy a calling has its punishment, for my ministry in my kingdom must be holy.—Then what has any to fear respecting the transgressions of any, are not my laws before you? Therefore let every man who desires to work put his trust in me, and righteousness shall go forth as a lamp that burneth. I the Lord yet ACKNOWLEDGE the AUTHORITY and MINISTRY in my CHURCH who are now willing to forsake all unrighteousness and cleave unto me, notwithstanding all their imperfections, inasmuch as they repent, I will be gracious unto them; therefore I say unto you again, have no fears, but go forward to obey my voice, the voice of my spirit to you, and all shall be well with you and with those whom you now feel to be your brethren. Now if you continue to the end you shall be my son, and dwell in my presence with all the church of the first born. Verily thus saith the Lord your Savior, even so. Amen."

Here, Mr. President, are arrayed before that man a set of his own testimonies that ought to make him hide his face with shame in the dust. Yes, shame, shame, SHAME on the man who will thus deny the word that God has spoken to him. He knew the truth of the work of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The Lord commanded him to go with his servant Wm. Law, one of the Presidents of that church, who was never President, and for aught that appears never a member till the church took that name to join with Sidney Rigdon another of the Presidents of that church, in building up that church. And to remove all doubts from his mind about its being the true church, the Lord tells him in these words: "I the Lord yet acknowledge the authority and ministry in my church." Speaking of those who are ministers in the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," and in no other church. If he will not believe when GOD SPEAKS to HIM, wherewith shall we persuade him?

(To be continued.)

CORRESPONDENCE.

New Brighton, (Fallston P. O.,) Oct. 15, 1847.

PRESIDENT J. J. STRANG:—

ESTEEMED BROTHER,—I embrace a few moments of leisure this evening to write to you, and to enclose an X to you from our brother Winders of Pittsburgh. I have also one dozen Books of Mormon from brother James Smith, which I shall forward along, with some paper for the "Gospel Herald," so soon as I am informed where to consign it, as the shippers here do not know at which port (Racine or Southport) the steamers stop at. I propose sending a box of printing paper, and brother Ross will put in some notions to scare cold weather. Please inform me soon what size the paper should be, and where and to whom I shall direct the box. In the mean time I shall collect all the money I can for the Herald.

Tell Bro. John E. Page to keep good heart, we will do all in our power to sustain both him and the Herald. We have a paper now that we are proud of. I was just going to give some particulars what we like, but I cannot select. We like all! The course of our beloved President is highly commended by all the living members here.

I meet the brethren in Pittsburgh as frequently as possible, usually once in two weeks. God has a few names even there, who stand fast—hating the doctrines of the Nicolaitans. Bro. James Smith, the presiding high priest, is a faithful and good man, zealous of good works. I was glad that the Lord, "by revelation," set him apart to that high calling. We are a mutual help and comfort to each other. Bro. Winders and wife are firm and zealous. Bro. McDowell, the Pres. of the branch, lost all he had by Rigdon; yet standing fast in the truth. Bros. Prince, Boyington, Spratley, and some others, are firm and faithful. We have our meetings regularly, and are opening new places for preaching. The people are beginning to give heed to the truth.

In this (Beaver) branch there are a few names left. Bro. Ross and Bro. Tuttle, who preside, are yet alive, with some others, and a goodly company of women and children. I am still determined to preach the gospel of truth—adhere to its precepts—sustain by my faith and works the authorities in the church in all righteousness.

The only remarkable fact worth my notice is this,—that all who went to the "valley" have apostatized from the faith.

In haste, dear brother, I subscribe myself
your brother in the Gospel,
JAMES M. GREIG.

J. J. STRANG,
President of the Church, Voree.

Binghampton, Oct. 11th, 1847.

BROTHER STRANG,—

Having noticed in the Reveille a publication of hymn books mailed in sheets, and also tracts, please send one hymn book and the remainder of the enclosed in gospel tracts. No. 11 and 15 of the 2d Vol. I have not received, which I should be pleased to receive if you have them on hand to spare. The 2d Vol. I calculate to have bound. The first came so irregular, receiving only eight papers, that I give that up. I have not the least doubt but that they were regularly mailed, but the Devil must do something to stop the progress of light.

My age and infirmities forbid my going to Voree, as 84 winters have passed over me, and I almost despair of ever seeing an elder pass through here. If he should I do not know that he would fare any better than Paul did among the Ephesians. We have a great variety of gospels here to please the taste of the world, which is full of sinning saints, holy hypocrites and Bible infidels, and they have all got Bible enough and do not wish for any more. You ask your readers how they like your change of name. I can say for one I like it well. I think HERALD is much more appropriate.

With sentiments of high esteem, I subscribe myself your unknown friend
and brother,
WM. ROSE.

JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ Money received in this and the former letter. We shall mail the hymn book and tracts. The enlargement of the paper compels us to be slower in printing these things than we intended, but we keep them going. [ED.

TO PRIVATE CORESPONDENTS.

Many persons have inquired of us by letter at various times during the last year:—Is Wm. Smith in the church? Has J. C. Bennett joined? Have you received W. E. McLellin? Why did you take them in? What confession did they make? Why did you not publish their confessions? Very few of these questions have we ever answered, except through the papers. And we wish all such and all others who have such questions in their mind to take this answer as a full answer to all such questions, both in reference to those men and all other similar cases. They were received according to the law of the gospel. They were held to the discipline of the gospel law while in the church. They were cut off in accordance with that law for violations of it. We did not publish their confessions because we did not deem it profitable, and for the same reason we do not publish them now. We were perfectly aware of the unpopularity of these men when they came into the church.—We have no doubt that the coming in of these three men have kept out hundreds, possibly thousands, and expected such would be the result when they came in. And we are also well persuaded that many of those thus turned back were better men than those on whose account they turned back. We never doubted it. But,—— THEY WERE NOT FIT FOR THE KINGDOM OF GOD. The man that will turn back from the fold of God because ANYBODY else, whoever, IS IN, IS A VESSEL OF WRATH FITTED FOR DESTRUCTION. The place for the saint is in the true church, and one who has stamina enough to abide the day of trial knows it is his business to stand in the church, and faithfully do his duty let others do as they may. And he will stand for extending gospel priviliges to every one that complies with the conditions God has affixed, though all men turn back.—Such a man does his duty because it is his duty, and not because of what others do or neglect.

Moreover it is not a neglect of duty, or a fault that a very bad man, a great sinner, is admitted into the church. The gospel was given for the salvation of sinners; not righteous men. We would receive into the church the Pope of Rome, the malefactor with the rope about his neck, or the prince of apostates. Yes, any man on earth who is not sealed up by the power of the priesthood against the revelation of the wrath of God, and his vengeance upon the ungodly. And though we should not like to take such into the church, simply because they are not saveable, yet if a man would leave the church because Satan himself was in, he will sometime think he sees him there.

We intend to administer the law in righteousness. No man's prejudices will count, and one thing we wish particularly understood, and that is, we don't have the least idea that any man's influence can either build up or overthrow this church. We understand that God has a hand in it, and it is all moonshine to talk about the influence of this, that, or the other man. We have had enough of great men both for and against, and we have yet to learn that the influence of any man has yet done us any good or hurt. Truth is mighty, no matter who speaks it.

SINS.

How differently do men estimate sins from God's estimate of them! The very sins that men look upon as venial, aye, acts that they look upon as no sins, are before God most exceedingly sinful. How many hold that because they are law-abiders, they are righteous before God! Yet a man may abide the law of his country all his days and still the cry of his sins ascend up unto the throne of God for vengeance. There are three sins whose cry ascends to God continually for vengeance on the doers, and of the three two are almost universaly looked upon as small matters, matters hardly worth naming. The three are murder, oppression of the poor, and defrauding workmen of their wages. Gen. iv. 8, 9, 10, 11. Gen. xxviii. 20, 21. Ezek. xvi. 49. Exod. xxii, 22, 23, 24. James v. 4.—Deut. xxiv. 14, 15.

How little do men think of these things. How many live in continual violation of them. The wealth of most rich men is made up by oppressing the poor according to law, and defrauding them of a just compensation for their labor by legal means. Will not their cry ascend to heaven? Will not God hear? Will he not execute judgement on the oppressor? And when he does it, will he not take their wealth away? Aye, the fierceness of his wrath will smoke against them, and his anger will not turn back till their land be utterly desolate.

☞ A small party have recently gone up to Beaver to settle. Another leaves here to-day. The work progresses surely, and if not so fast as we could wish, still we have nothing to fear in the final result. It is not too late to go there yet, but navigation will soon close, when no one can go till spring.

ginning to give heed to the truth.

In this (Beaver) branch there are a few names left. Bro. Ross and Bro. Tuttle, who preside, are yet alive, with some others, and a goodly company of women and children. I am still determined to preach the gospel of truth—adhere to its precepts—sustain by my faith and works the authorities in the church in all righteousness.

The only remarkable fact worth my notice is this,—that all who went to the "valley" have apostatized from the faith.

In haste, dear brother, I subscribe myself
your brother in the Gospel,
JAMES M. GREIG.

J. J. STRANG,
President of the Church, Voree.

Binghampton, Oct. 11th, 1847.

BROTHER STRANG,—

Having noticed in the Reveille a publication of hymn books mailed in sheets, and also tracts, please send one hymn book and the remainder of the enclosed in gospel tracts. No. 11 and 15 of the 2d Vol. I have not received, which I should be pleased to receive if you have them on hand to spare. The 2d Vol. I calculate to have bound. The first came so irregular, receiving only eight papers, that I give that up. I have not the least doubt but that they were regularly mailed, but the Devil must do something to stop the progress of light.

My age and infirmities forbid my going to Voree, as 84 winters have passed over me, and I almost despair of ever seeing an elder pass through here. If he should I do not know that he would fare any better than Paul did among the Ephesians. We have a great variety of gospels here to please the taste of the world, which is full of sinning saints, holy hypocrites and Bible infidels, and they have all got Bible enough and do not wish for any more. You ask your readers how they like your change of name. I can say for one I like it well. I think HERALD is much more appropriate.

With sentiments of high esteem, I subscribe
myself your unknown friend
and brother,
WM. ROSE.

JAMES J. STRANG.

☞ Money received in this and the former letter. We shall mail the hymn book and tracts. The enlargement of the paper compels us to be slower in printing these things than we intended, but we keep them going. [ED.

TO PRIVATE CORESPONDENTS.

Many persons have inquired of us by letter at various times during the last year:—Is Wm. Smith in the church? Has J. C. Bennett joined? Have you received W. E. McLellin? Why did you take them in? What confession did they make? Why did you not publish their confessions? Very few of these questions have we ever answered, except through the papers. And we wish all such and all others who have such questions in their mind to take this answer as a full answer to all such questions, both in reference to those men and all other similar cases. They were received according to the law of the gospel. They were held to the discipline of the gospel law while in the church. They were cut off in accordance with that law for violations of it. We did not publish their confessions because we did not deem it profitable, and for the same reason we do not publish them now. We were perfectly aware of [illegible] when they came into the church.—[illegible] of these three men have kept [illegible] would be the result when they came in. And we are also well persuaded that many of those thus turned back were better men than those on whose account they turned back. We never doubted it. But,—— THEY WERE NOT FIT FOR THE KINGDOM OF GOD. The man that will turn back from the fold of God because ANYBODY else, whoever, IS IN, IS A VESSEL OF WRATH FITTED FOR DESTRUCTION. The place for the saint is in the true church, and one who has stamina enough to abide the day of trial knows it is his business to stand in the church, and faithfully do his duty let others do as they may. And he will stand for extending gospel priviliges to every one that complies with the conditions God has affixed, though all men turn back.—Such a man does his duty because it is his duty, and not because of what others do or neglect.

Moreover it is not a neglect of duty, or a fault that a very bad man, a great sinner, is admitted into the church. The gospel was given for the salvation of sinners; not righteous men. We would receive into the church the Pope of Rome, the malefactor with the rope about his neck, or the prince of apostates. Yes, any man on earth who is not sealed up by the power of the priesthood against the revelation of the wrath of God, and his vengeance upon the ungodly. And though we should not like to take such into the church, simply because they are not saveable, yet if a man would leave the church because Satan himself was in, he will [illegible] think he sees him there.

We intend to administer the law in righteousness. No man's prejudices will count, and one thing we wish particularly understood, and that is, we don't have the least idea that any man's influence can either build up or overthrow this church. We understand that God has a hand in it, and it is all moonshine to talk about the influence of this, that, or the other man. We have had enough of [illegible] both for and against, and we have yet to learn that [illegible] of any man has yet done us any good or hurt. Truth [illegible] no matter who speaks it.

SINS.

How differently do men estimate sins from God's estimate of them! The very sins that men look upon as venial, aye, acts that they look upon as no sins, are before God most exceedingly sinful. How many hold that because they are law-abiders, they are righteous before God! Yet a man may abide the law of his country all his days and still the cry of his sins ascend up unto the throne of God for vengeance. There are three sins whose cry ascends to God continually for vengeance on the doers, and of the three two are almost universaly looked upon as small matters, matters hardly worth naming. The three are murder, oppression of the poor, and defrauding workmen of their wages. Gen. iv. 8, 9, 10, 11. Gen. xxviii. 20, 21. Ezek. xvi. 49. Exod. xxii, 22, 23, 24. James v. 4.—Deut. xxiv. 14, 15.

How little do men think of these things. How many live in continual violation of them. The wealth of most rich men is made up by oppressing the poor according to law, and defrauding them of a just compensation for their labor by legal means. Will not their cry ascend to heaven? Will not God hear? Will he not execute judgement on the oppressor? And when he does it, will he not take their wealth away? Aye, the fierceness of his wrath will smoke against them, and his anger will not turn back till their land be utterly desolate.

☞ A small party have recently gone up to Beaver to settle. Another leaves here to-day. The work progresses surely, and if not so fast as we could wish, still we have nothing to fear in the final result. It is not too late to go there yet, but navigation will soon close, when no one can go till spring.

THE MORMONS.

For some weeks past, a paragraph has been circulating through the papers, to the effect that the Mormons, through their chief man or prophet, JAMES J. STRANG, had selected Great Beaver Island in Lake Michigan, as the abiding place for the sect, for all time to come. At first, this seemed to be rather an improbable story, and we were disposed to regard it as unworthy of credit; but we have recently learned, from such a source as to leave no reason for doubt, that the statement is true, and that the preliminary steps have been taken for acquiring, ultimately, the title to this Island. The land has been surveyed by the government, but it has not yet been brought into market, and is of course subject to pre-emption.

Great Beaver, as the largest island of the cluster of some half a dozen, lies about 60 miles southwest from Mackinac. It contains a little more than 25,000 acres, chiefly covered with beech, maple and ever-greens of different varieties. The soil is not productive, and it lies too far north for agriculture—scarcely anything but potatoes coming to maturity. There are now several squatters on the island, most of them being employed in preparing wood for the steamboats. It is some fifteen or twenty miles out of the direct route from Buffalo to Chicago, but there is a good harbor near the northern extremity, and boats frequently touch there. The Northwest Fishing Co., of Rochester, N. Y., about a year since made a permanent location there, and are now making improvements. This company have the best location on the island for a harbor and fishing ground. Mr. STRANG has visited the agents at Rochester and negociated with them for their claim. A surveyor has recently gone to the island to locate their future city and lay out the lots. Some of the "chosen people" have already arrived on the island.

The Detroit Free Press has collected some facts respecting the conditions of and prospects of the Mormons, that are not without interest. The general impression has been that Mormonism became extinct with the murder of its founder and the dispersion of the sixteen or seventeen thousand of his "Saints" who were inhumanly driven from Nauvoo and vicinity toward the Pacific at the point of the bayonet by a ruthless Illinois mob. Such is not the case. As in former religious persecutions, "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church." Mormon "stakes" are now planted in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Virginia, the Carolinas, Oregon, California, and the British Empire.

Mr. STRANG claims to be the Heaven appointed successor of their prophet, Jo Smith. He is now located at Voree, near Burlington, Wisconsin, and has about 1000 in his settlement.

The Cleveland Herald says President STRANG is described as a shrewd and talented man, and Zion's Reveille, the Mormon organ at Voree, says "there is not his equal on this earth for patience, faith, prudence, wisdom, aptness to teach, and indefatigable perseverance." If this is correct, he surpasses the virtues and qualifications of his predecessor, Jo Smith, and the sect is not likely to suffer ultimately by the change.—Buffalo Express.

☛ We can assure the editor of the Express that he is quite in an error in supposing either that the soils of the Beaver Islands is not productive, or that it lies too far north for agriculture. Its latitude corresponds with Montreal; is less than Paris; the same as the central provinces of France and southern of Germany; less than any part of England, Holland, Prussia or Poland, all great grain growing regions. For soil our neighbor of the Express need only wander over the town of Collins, in his own county, in company with some of the Buffalo cheese-mongers, and instead of those deep gulfs imagine small lakes so clear that if he should drop his silver pencil case in 50 feet water he could see it, and he will have a sufficently accurate idea of Big Beaver and Garden Islands. The climate is milder than that of Erie county, and corn has not been cut off with frost for fourteen years. The Indian cornfields which are quite extensive were untouched with frost Oct. 20. Big Beaver Island contains about 50,000 acres instead of 25,000, and Little Beaver, Garden and High Islands, about 18,000 each. The group are not 20 miles from the direct route from Buffalo to Chicago, but immediately on it. The channel between the islands and Michigan shore is but 14 miles wide. Boats going to the Manitous for wood pass near the center of this channel, but if not called out of their course for that purpose they run down the shore of Big Beaver some twelve miles.

We think also that the Detroit Free Press is quite mistaken as to the number of Mormons stakes he speaks of, though he has not over estimated the growth of Mormonism. Give us an exchange, gentlemen, and we will keep you informed of our progress. If your readers do speak ill of us, they all like to get the Mormon news.

LEARNED.—The editor of the Elkhorn Star in commenting on the proposition of the American government to that of Mexico to establish two American "factories" in California, in lieu of compensation for the war, says,—"This it appears they were disposed to relinquish for the privilege of erecting two manufactories in California." This we look upon as decidedly rich. Of course the man who calumniates the Mormons, and attempted to get up an Anti-Mormon paper in Wisconsin, does not know the difference between a shop where they make shoe pegs or cut nails and a fortified trading town established by one nation within the territories of another. We always expect such ignoramuses in the ranks of our enemies.

HYMN.

Wake, O wake the world from sleeping!
Watchman, watchman, stand in power—
Hear the Savior now exclaiming:
'Tis the last—th' eleventh hour!

Lo! the Lion's left his thicket;
Up ye watchmen, be in haste,
The destroyer of the Gentiles
Goes to lay their cities waste.

Bring the remnants from their exile,
For the promise is to them;
Japhet's ruled the world his time out,
He must leave the tents of Shem.

Comfort ye the house of Israel,
They are pardon'd, gather them;
Hear the watchman's proclamation,
Jews rebuild Jerusalem.

Soon the Jews will know their error,
How they killed the Holy One,
And they'll mourn and shout hosanna!
This is the beloved Son.

Sound the trumpet with the tidings,
Call in all of Abram's seed,
Though the Gentiles may reject it,
Christ will come in very deed.

THE MORMONS.

For some weeks past, a paragraph has been circulating through the papers, to the effect that the Mormons, through their chief man or prophet, JAMES J. STRANG, had selected Great Beaver Island in Lake Michigan, as the abiding place for the sect, for all time to come. At first, this seemed to be rather an improbable story, and we were disposed to regard it as unworthy of credit; but we have recently learned, from such a source as to leave no reason for doubt, that the statement is true, and that the preliminary steps have been taken for acquiring, ultimately, the title to this Island. The land has been surveyed by the government, but it has not yet been brought into market, and is of course subject to pre-emption.

Great Beaver, as the largest island of the cluster of some half a dozen, lies about 60 miles southwest from Mackinac. It contains a little more than 25,000 acres, chiefly covered with beech, maple and ever-greens of different varieties. The soil is not productive, and it lies too far north for agriculture—scarcely anything but potatoes coming to maturity. There are now several squatters on the island, most of them being employed in preparing wood for the steamboats. It is some fifteen or twenty miles out of the direct route from Buffalo to Chicago, but there is a good harbor near the northern extremity, and boats frequently touch there. The Northwest Fishing Co., of Rochester, N. Y., about a year since made a permanent location there, and are now making improvements. This company have the best location on the island for a harbor and fishing ground. Mr. Strang has visited the agents at Rochester and negociated with them for their claim. A surveyor has recently gone to the island to locate their future city and lay out the lots. Some of the "chosen people" have already arrived on the island.

The Detroit Free Press has collected some facts respecting the Mormons that are not without interest. The general impression has been that Mormonism became extinct with the murder of its founder and the dispersion of the six or seventeen thousand of his "Saints" who were inhumanly driven from Nauvoo and vicinity toward the Pacific at the point of the bayonet by a ruthless Illinois mob. Such is not the case. As in former religious persecutions, "the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the Church." Mormon "stakes" are now planted in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Virginia, the Carolinas, Oregon, California, and the British Empire.

Mr. STRANG claims to be the Heaven appointed successor of their prophet, Jo Smith. He is now located at Voree, near Burlington, Wisconsin, and has about 1000 in his settlement.

The Cleveland Herald says President STRANG is described as a shrewd and talented man, and Zion's Reveille, the Mormon organ at Voree, says "there is not his equal on this earth for patience, faith, prudence, wisdom, aptness to teach, and indefatigable perseverance." If this is correct, he surpasses the virtues and qualifications of his predecessor, Jo Smith, and the sect is not likely to suffer ultimately by the change.—Buffalo Express.

☞ We can assure the editor of the Express that he is quite in an error in supposing either that the soils of the Beaver Island is not productive, or that it lies too far north for agriculture. Its latitude corresponds with Montreal; is less than Paris; the same as the central provinces of France and southern of Germany; less than any part of England, Holland, Prussia or Poland, all great grain growing regions. For soil our neighbor of the Express need only wander over the town of Collins, in his own county, in company with some of the Buffalo cheese-mongers, and instead of the deep gulfs imagine small lakes so clear that if he should drop a silver pencil case in 50 feet water he could see it, and he will have a sufficently accurate idea of Big Beaver and Garden Islands. The climate is milder than that of Erie county, and corn has not been cut off with frost for fourteen years. The Indian cornfields which are quite extensive were untouched with frost Oct. 20. Big Beaver Island contains about 50,000 acres instead of 25,000, and Little Beaver, Garden and High Islands, about 18,000 each. The group are not 20 miles from the direct route from Buffalo to Chicago, but immediately on it. The channel between the islands and Michigan shore is but 14 miles wide. Boats going to the Manitous for wood pass near the center of this channel, but if not called out of their course for that purpose they run down the shore of Big Beaver some twelve miles.

We think also that the Detroit Free Press is quite mistaken as to the number of Mormons stakes he speaks of, though he has not over estimated the growth of Mormonism. Give us an exchange, gentlemen, and we will keep you informed of our progress. If your readers do speak ill of us, they all like to get the Mormon news.

LEARNED.—The editor of the Elkhorn Star in commenting on the proposition of the American government to that of Mexico to establish two American "factories" in California, in lieu of compensation for the war, says,—"This it appears they were disposed to relinquish for the privilege of erecting two manufactories in California." This we look upon as decidedly rich. Of course the man who calumniates the Mormons, and attempted to get up an Anti-Mormon paper in Wisconsin, does not know the difference between a shop where they make shoe pegs or cut nails and a fortified trading town established by one nation within the territories of another. We always expect such ignoramuses in the rank of our enemies.

HYMN.

Wake, O wake the world from sleeping!
Watchman, watchman, stand in power—
Hear the Savior now exclaiming:
'Tis the last—th' eleventh hour!

Lo! the Lion's left his thicket;
Up ye watchmen, be in haste,
The destroyer of the Gentiles
Goes to lay their cities waste.

Bring the remnants from their exile,
For the promise is to them;
Japhet's ruled the world his time out,
He must leave the tents of Shem.

Comfort ye the house of Israel,
They are pardon'd, gather them;
Hear the watchman's proclamation,
Jews rebuild Jerusalem.

Soon the Jews will know their error,
How they killed the Holy One,
And they'll mourn and shout hosanna!
This is the beloved Son.

Sound the trumpet with the tidings,
Call in all of Abram's seed
Though the Gentiles ma[illegible]
Ch[illegible]

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 11, 1847. [No. 34.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from last week.)

"United together by the profession of the SAME FAITH."

In my last number I showed the consequence which, according to the scriptures, should befall the church of Christ from a want of the priesthood which God set therein. I also showed that, according to the constitution of the Roman church, it was defective in that priesthood. It behooves me now to show that those consequences have actually befallen that church.

I shall therefore show that, as children, they have been tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine till they have lost the faith committed to the saints, as well as departed altogether from the foundation of Christ and the Apostles. What, sir, is the first and most important fact to ascertain in determining the truth of the divine mission of Christ and of the christian religion? What is the grand fundamental truth upon which hangs the authority of the christian religion? What is the foundation stone of the christian faith? It is that JESUS CHRIST came in the flesh as the MESSIAH, in FULFILLMENT of the WORD OF GOD by the JEWISH PROPHETS. And that fact is most DISTINCTLY and EXPLICITLY DENIED in the CREEDS of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The very confession of your creeds is a denial of the faith, and a proclamation that Christ is an impostor and christianity a lie.

The whole course of prophesies was that the Messiah should come of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah and of the lineage of David. And the mass of testimony by the Apostles was that he did thus come. Not so the Catholic church. Ashamed of his parentage in the times of the decay of Hebrew royalty, and unwilling that the founder of their church should be the son of a poor carpenter, they have resorted to the heathen fable of children begotten of gods on beautiful women, and filled all their books and creeds with a story, fit only for heathen mythology, of a liason of the God of heaven with a Hebrew peasant girl. The Apostolic creed runs, "I believe in Jesus Christ, God's only Son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the virgin Mary." I quote also from the Poor Man's Catechism, page 28, 30, 31, 32:—

"Q. What is the signification of the name Christ? A. The anointed. Q. What mean those words, His only Son our Lord? A. That he is by nature the only Son of God the Father, born of him from all eternity; and that he is our Lord and our God.

"Q. What means the incarnation? A. It means that God the Son, the second person in the blessed Trinity, was made man.—Q. How was he made man? A. He assumed human nature, a body and soul, like ours, which subsisted together with the divine nature, in one and the same person of the Son of God. Q. When was he made man. A. At that instant when he was conceived in the womb of his blessed mother, the Virgin Mary, when she gave her consent, saying, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done to me according to thy word.

"INSTRUC.—The unity and trinity of God whereby we understand that one and same divine nature subsists in three persons, really distinct; and the incarnation of the Son of God; whereby the two natures, divine and human were united in one person, are mysteries of mysteries; the two principal mysteries of the Christian faith; and the ground-work upon which our religion is built.

"So great and incomprehensible is this mystery, that we have all reason to say with St. Paul, O! depth of the riches and wisdom of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways beyond finding out! Why should we doubt or fear to submit to all the other mysteries of the Christian faith, while we have this before our eyes, and believe it, that God the Son was made man, was born of a woman, lived in poverty, suffered and died as man, even the death that was due to sinners.

"Q. How was he conceived? A. Not by human generation, but by the power and virtue of the Holy Ghost. Q. When was he conceived? A. At the instant the Virgin Mary gave her consent, saying, behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done to me according to thy word.

"INSTRUC.—The conception of our blessed Savior was purely a work of God, beyond our comprehension. It was all miraculous, full of mystery; far different from the ordinary conception of other men, by human generation: his conception was the immediate work of the Holy Ghost, and not of any man. That his body was formed by the substance of his mother, is indeed a natural thing, for all men are in like manner formed; but that a virgin, who never knew man, should conceive a son; that his human nature should subsist in a divine person: that his mother, remaining a virgin, was also a mother of God, mother of man, are mysteries beyond the reach of nature, and capacity of our understanding, and peculiar to none but himself."

Now if this account be true, Christ was not of the lineage of David. Jewish genealogies are always reckoned in the male line; never in the female. Moreover if we should reckon in the female line, we have not one iota of evidence that Mary, the mother of Christ, was of the lineage of David, nor even of the tribe of Judah. Two of the evangelists, Matthew and Luke, have given the genealogy from Abraham to Joseph, the HUSBAND of Mary, for the especial purpose of showing that in the MALE LINE Jesus Christ was a literal descendant of Abraham, Judah and David. If the husband of Mary was not the father of Christ, what have we to do with his genealogy? And for what purpose was it written? Matthew begins his gospel, "The book of the generation (genealogy) of JESUS CHRIST, the SON of DAVID the SON of ABRAHAM," and concludes the genealogy, ver. 16, "And Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ." Why is this, if Joseph did not beget Jesus? How is this, his genealogy, if Joseph is not his father? How is it evident, as Paul says, "that our Lord sprung out of Judah," Heb. vii. 14, if it does not appear by these genealogies, neither of which runs to Mary, but both to Joseph?—Ah! would Paul dare thus in writing to the Jews boldly assert that Christ was of the tribe of Judah, if the doctrine had then gone forth

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 11, 1847. [No. 34.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from last week.)

"United together by the profession of the SAME FAITH."

In my last number I showed the consequence which, according to the scriptures, should befall the church of Christ from a want of the priesthood which God set therein. I also showed that, according to the constitution of the Roman church, it was defective in that priesthood. It behooves me now to show that those consequences have actually befallen that church.

I shall therefore show that, as children, they have been tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine till they have lost the faith committed to the saints, as well as departed altogether from the foundation of Christ and the Apostles. What, sir, is the first and most important fact to ascertain in determining the truth of the divine mission of Christ and of the christian religion? What is the grand fundamental truth upon which hangs the authority of the christian religion? What is the foundation stone of the christian faith? It is that JESUS CHRIST came in the flesh as the MESSIAH, in FULFILLMENT of the WORD OF GOD by the JEWISH PROPHETS. And that fact is most DISTINCTLY and EXPLICITLY DENIED in the CREEDS of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The very confession of your creeds is a denial of the faith, and a proclamation that Christ is an impostor and christianity a lie.

The whole course of prophesies was that the Messiah should come of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah and of the lineage of David. And the mass of testimony by the Apostles was that he did thus come. Not so the Catholic church. Ashamed of his parentage in the times of the decay of Hebrew royalty, and unwilling that the founder of their church should be the son of a poor carpenter, they have resorted to the heathen fable of children begotten of gods on beautiful women, and filled all their books and creeds with a story, fit only for heathen mythology, of a liason of the God of heaven with a Hebrew peasant girl. The Apostolic creed runs, "I believe in Jesus Christ, God's only Son, our Lord, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the virgin Mary." I quote also from the Poor Man's Catechism, page 28, 30, 31, 32:—

"Q. What is the signification of the name Christ? A. The anointed. Q. What mean those words, His only Son our Lord? A. That he is by nature the only Son of God the Father, born of him from all eternity; and that he is our Lord and our God.

"Q. What means the incarnation? A. It means that God the Son, the second person in the blessed Trinity, was made man.—Q. How was he made man? A. He assumed human nature, a body and soul, like ours, which subsisted together with the divine nature, in one and the same person of the Son of God. Q. When was he made man. A. At that instant when he was conceived in the womb of his blessed mother, the Virgin Mary, when she gave her consent, saying, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done to me according to thy word.

"INSTRUC.—The unity and trinity of God whereby we understand that one and same divine nature subsists in three persons, really distinct; and the incarnation of the Son of God; whereby the two natures, divine and human were united in one person, are mysteries of mysteries; the two principal mysteries of the Christian faith; and the ground-work upon which our religion is built.

"So great and incomprehensible is this mystery, that we have all reason to say with St. Paul, O! depth of the riches and wisdom of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways beyond finding out! Why should we doubt or fear to submit to all the other mysteries of the Christian faith, while we have this before our eyes, and believe it, that God the Son was made man, was born of a woman, lived in poverty, suffered and died as man, even the death that was due to sinners.

"Q. How was he conceived? A. Not by human generation, but by the power and virtue of the Holy Ghost. Q. When was he conceived? A. At the instant the Virgin Mary gave her consent, saying, behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done to me according to thy word.

"INSTRUC.—The conception of our [illegible] work of God, beyond our comprehension. It was all [illegible] full of mystery; far different from the ordinary conception of [illegible] men, by human generation: his conception was [illegible] of the Holy Ghost, and not of any man. That his body was formed by the substance of his mother, is indeed a natural thing, for all men are in like manner formed; but that a virgin, who never knew man, should conceive a son; that his human nature should subsist in a divine person: that his mother, remaining a virgin, was also a mother of God, mother of man, are mysteries beyond the reach of nature, and capacity of our understanding, and peculiar to none but himself."

Now if this account be true, Christ was not of the lineage of David. Jewish genealogies are always reckoned in the male line; never in the female. Moreover if we should reckon in the female line, we have not one iota of evidence that Mary, the mother of Christ, was of the lineage of David, nor even of the tribe of Judah. Two of the evangelists, Matthew and Luke, have given the genealogy from Abraham to Joseph, the HUSBAND of Mary, for the especial purpose of showing that in the MALE LINE Jesus Christ was a literal descendant of Abraham, Judah and David. If the husband of Mary was not the father of Christ, what have we to do with his genealogy? And for what purpose was it written? Matthew begins his gospel, "The book of the generation (genealogy) of JESUS CHRIST, the SON of DAVID the SON of ABRAHAM," and concludes the genealogy, ver. 16, "And Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ." Why is this, if Joseph did not beget Jesus? How is this, his genealogy, if Joseph is not his father? How is it evident, as Paul says, "that our Lord sprung out of Judah," Heb. vii. 14, if it does not appear by these genealogies, neither of which runs to Mary, but both to Joseph?—Ah! would Paul dare thus in writing to the Jews boldly assert that Christ was of the tribe of Judah, if the doctrine had then gone forth that Joseph was not his father? Aye; would not the Jews have answered, "how is it evident that he came out of Judah? wherein does it appear? By what line did he descend from Judah?"

(To be continued.)

ESSAY ON THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

BY OLIVER COWDERY.

As the members of this church profess a belief in the truth of the book of Mormon, the world, either out of contempt and ridicule, or to distinguish us from others, have been very lavish in bestowing the title of "Mormonite." Others may call themselves by their own, or by other names, and have the privilege of wearing them without our changing them or attempting so to do; but WE do not accept the above title, nor shall we wear it as OUR name, though it may be lavished out upon US double to what it has heretofore been. And when that bitterness of feeling, now cherished in the bosoms of those who profess to be the followers of Christ, against the church of the Latter Day Saints, shall cease to exist, and when fabrications and disipient reports concerning this society are no longer considered a virtue, it will take its rank, at least with others, and these stigmas will forever sleep with their inventors.

It is not our intention to go into a lengthy investigatiou of name, in this article, nor shall we examine, particularly, the claims of each party to the right of heirship in the house of God. This thing is certain, however, if one is right, all the others are wrong, and if they are all right the bible is not true; for when the doctrine therein advocated is compared with this confused mass of heathenism, mockery, and idolatry, the resemblance is so foreign, that a candid mind would say at once, that if the same being was author of these, and that book too, he must be possessed of as many different natures as the "hydra" was of heads.

If there is a sect now extant, professing to follow the teachings of heaven, and cannot, when they present their system to the consideration of the unbeliever, affirm, upon the authority of heaven, that by obeying it he is sure of eternal salvation, what can induce them to hold it out to the inspection of men, and teach it as coming from God? Is the system of man's salvation founded upon an uncertainty? and is it of that curious compound, that there can be a thousand ways, and all mean the same thing, and at last effect the same object? If it is urged that the ancient SAINTS were a different people in worship, had different ordinances, were partakers of other joys and privileges, and all this was necessary for their salvation, might we not with propriety ask, why was all this necessary for them, and is now unnecessary for those whose profession says that they are heirs of the same kingdom, children of the same Parent, and are expecting to be equal sharers with them in those joys which never fade, in that house not made with hands?

They had no distinction of sects; this was lost when they obeyed the commandment, and were admitted into the church. They all followed one form of teaching, and each observed the same ordi- nances; and if a difference of opinion arose, the matter was decided by revelation. Thus they all walked the same road, were members of the same family, partakers of the same joys, and heirs to the same incorruptible inheritance. In short, they were the church of God, they were his SAINTS.

If none were entitled to the name SAINTS except such as kept all the commandments and observed all the ordinances of heaven, and walked in that perfect manner that ALL their actions corresponded, so that in truth they could be called one family, it is no wonder that those who have departed from the course which the ancients were required to pursue in order to make their election sure should now substitute other names, and that their names should be as dissimilar as their forms of worship; for, certainly, it would be as inconsistent to suppose, by altering their names without reforming their systems, that that would give them a greater assurance of eternal life as it would to suppose that, by calling themselves by one, they would yet all unite in ascribing glory to God for the plan of salvation, founded upon that act, when none of them agreed in principle. And since they have departed from the practices of the ancient SAINTS, we do not see why they should be required to call themselves after their names.

It is no more than just that something further should be said upon a word that occurs more than ninety different times in the bible, and in every instance is meant to represent the people of God, either those immediately dwelling with him in glory, or those on earth walking according to his commandments. It certainly cannot be supposed by a reflecting man that the Lord talked in vain to his people in ancient days, if he cannot admit that HE now communicates to the professed world. And it is reasonable to suppose, that if the Lord ever talked to a people on earth, that he called them by a name; and if he did, it is reasonable that he should call his people by a name which would distinguish them from all other people, as well as by one which would be pleasing in his sight that they should wear.

How many different names the enemy of the people of the Lord heaped upon them in different ages of the world we are not prepared to say, and especially in the early period of the church, as we find nothing recorded on this subject. Whether Noah and his family were called by reproachful names or not the bible does not inform us; and the same may be said of Abraham, Lot, Isaac and Jacob. Jacob was called Israel after he had wrestled with the angel and prevailed, and his posterity ever after have been called Israelites.

If the Lord had a people on earth before the days of Israel, what were they called, or by what name were they distinguished from others? Melchisedec was a priest of the most high God, it is said, and was also king of Salem. If, in the days of Abraham God had a people, (and certainly there was one righteous man beside him, for he was God's priest,) by what name were they called? They could not have been called Israelites, for Jacob was yet in the loins of his father, as was said of Levi, nor was the name of Israel known, or at least as we have any account. And even to suppose that the Lord never had a people that he called his before the great deluge, would be an inconsistent supposition; for we read of the sons of God in or about the days of Noah, and previous to the time when he built the ark; and who, in the name of common sense, could the sons of God be, if they were not men in the flesh? for it is said that they took to themselves wives of all they chose, &c. And where, since the world was made, had God sons who took wives, and yet at the same time did not dwell on earth? And where is it recorded that God had sons on earth who were not called his people? And if God had a people that he called his before the flood, by what name did he know them, and how were they distinguished from the wicked? They could not have been called Jews nor Israelites.

While the apostles were living, both they and their brethren began to be called Christians; and since that time those professing the same religion, generally, have been known by the same name, especially by their enemies, till all who profess to be followers of the doctrine of the gospel of Christ, now call themselves Christians, with few exceptions. And from this fact we may conclude that they suppose it to be a name given by inspiration, and that all embracing the testimony of Christ, and believing him to be the Savior, are bound to acknowledge the same name. But this at once shows how little they study the word of God, and with what little that Joseph was not his father? Aye; would not the Jews have answered, "how is it evident that he came out of Judah? wherein does it appear? By what line did he descend from Judah?"

(To be continued.)

ESSAY ON THE NAME OF THE CHURCH.

BY OLIVER COWDERY.

As the members of this church profess a belief in the truth of the book of Mormon, the world, either out of contempt and ridicule, or to distinguish us from others, have been very lavish in bestowing the title of "Mormonite." Others may call themselves by their own, or by other names, and have the privilege of wearing them without our changing them or attempting so to do; but WE do not accept the above title, nor shall we wear it as OUR name, though it may be lavished out upon US double to what it has heretofore been. And when that bitterness of feeling, now cherished in the bosoms of those who profess to be the followers of Christ, against the church of the Latter Day Saints, shall cease to exist, and when fabrications and disipient reports concerning this society are no longer considered a virtue, it will take its rank, at least with others, and these stigmas will forever sleep with their inventors.

It is not our intention to go into a lengthy investigation of name, in this article, nor shall we examine, particularly, the claims of each party to the right of heirship in the house of God. This thing is certain, however, if one is right, all the others are wrong, and if they are all right the bible is not true; for when the doctrine therein advocated is compared with this confused mass of heathenism, mockery, and idolatry, the resemblance is so foreign, that a candid mind would say at once, that if the same being was author of these, and that book too, he must be possessed of as many different natures as the "hydra" was of heads.

If there is a sect now extant, professing to follow the teachings of heaven, and cannot, when they present their system to the consideration of the unbeliever, affirm, upon the authority of heaven, that by obeying it he is sure of eternal salvation, what can induce them to hold it out to the inspection of men, and teach it as coming from God? Is the system of man's salvation founded upon an uncertainty? and is it of that curious compound, that there can be a thousand ways, and all mean the same thing, and at last effect the same object? If it is urged that the ancient SAINTS were a different people in worship, had different ordinances, were partakers of other joys and privileges, and all this was necessary for their salvation, might we not with propriety ask, why was all this necessary for them, and is now unnecessary for those whose profession says that they are heirs of the same kingdom, children of the same Parent, and are expecting to be equal sharers with them in those joys which never fade, in that house not made with hands?

They had no distinction of sects; this was lost when they obeyed the commandment, and were admitted into the church. They all followed one form of teaching, and each observed the same ordinances; and if a difference of opinion arose, the matter was decided by revelation. Thus they all walked the same road, were members of the same family, partakers of the same joys, and heirs to the same incorruptible inheritance. In short, they were the church of God, they were his SAINTS.

If none were entitled to the name SAINTS except such as kept all the commandments and observed all the ordinances of heaven, and walked in that perfect manner that ALL their actions corresponded, so that in truth they could be called one family, it is no wonder that those who have departed from the course which the ancients were required to pursue in order to make their election sure should now substitute other names, and that their names should be as dissimilar as their forms of worship; for, certainly, it would be as inconsistent to suppose, by altering their names without reforming their systems, that that would give them a greater assurance of eternal life as it would to suppose that, by calling themselves by one, they would yet all unite in ascribing glory to God for the plan of salvation, founded upon that act, when none of them agreed in principle. And since they have departed from the practices of the ancient SAINTS, we do not see why they should be required to call themselves after their names.

It is no more than just that something further should be said upon a word that occurs more than ninety different times in the bible, and in every instance is meant to represent the people of God, either those immediately dwelling with him in glory, or those on earth walking according to his commandments. It certainly cannot be supposed by a reflecting man that the Lord talked in vain to his people in ancient days, if he cannot admit that HE now communicates to the professed world. And it is reasonable to suppose, that if the Lord ever talked to a people on earth, that he called them by a name; and if he did, it is reasonable that he should call his people by a name which would distinguish them from all other people, as well as by one which would be pleasing in his sight that they should wear.

How many different names the enemy of the people of the Lord heaped upon them in different ages of the world we are not prepared to say, and especially in the early period of the church, as we find nothing recorded on this subject. Whether Noah and his family were called by reproachful names or not the bible does not inform us; and the same may be said of Abraham, Lot, Isaac and Jacob. Jacob was called Israel after he had wrestled with the angel and prevailed, and his posterity ever after have been called Israelites.

If the Lord had a people on earth before the days of Israel, what were they called, or by what name were they distinguished from others? Melchisedec was a priest of the most high God, it is said, and was also king of Salem. If, in the days of Abraham God had a people, (and certainly there was one righteous man beside him, for he was God's priest,) by what name were they called? They could not have been called Israelites, for Jacob was yet in the loins of his father, as was said of Levi, nor was the name of Israel known, or at least as we have any account. And even to suppose that the Lord never had a people that he called his before the great deluge, would be an inconsistent supposition; for we read of the sons of God in or about the days of Noah, and previous to the time when he built the ark; and who, in the name of common sense, could the sons of God be, if they were not men in the flesh? for it is said that they took to themselves wives of all they chose, &c. And where, since the world was made, had God sons who took wives, and yet at the same time did not dwell on earth? And where is it recorded that God had sons on earth who were not called his people? And if God had a people that he called his before the flood, by what name did he know them, and how were they distinguished from the wicked? They could not have been called Jews nor Israelites.

While the apostles were living, both they and their brethren began to be called Christians; and since that time those professing the same religion, generally, have been known by the same name, especially by their enemies, till all who profess to be followers of the doctrine of the gospel of Christ, now call themselves Christians, with few exceptions. And from this fact we may conclude that they suppose it to be a name given by inspiration, and that all embracing the testimony of Christ, and believing him to be the Savior, are bound to acknowledge the same name. But this at once shows how little they study the word of God, and with what little concern they peruse its sacred pages; for if they would examine as one would without prejudice by tradition, they would see that the NAME CHRISTIAN was one reproachfully given to the SAINTS of God because they believed in Christ Jesus, and that the Lord never called his people by that name from the creation to the present day.—If he did, it is no where recorded.

Having this title before us, we shall see whether it can be proven from the scriptures, that God designed his people to be called by it, by comparing this name with the name saints; and if our reasoning is not satisfactory to any of our professing friends, they can have the liberty to give better ones, and, if they please, disprove what we shall attempt to prove, and that is, as we have previously remarked, that God never called his people Christians.

The first mention of the name Christian, as recorded in the bible, is to be found in the xi. chapter and 26 verse of Acts. Though the historian has not told us plainly that this was given to the believers in Christ by way of reproach, he has said that "they were called Christians first in Antioch." It is reasonable to suppose from the fact that the followers of Christ were not called Christians till so long after his resurrection, that it was a name given them by their enemies; for it is said they were first called Christians in Antioch. And we may suppose that it was their enemies who gave them this name, as it is said, "they were first called." Had it been handed down to us that they first called themselves Christians in Antioch, it would alter the sense materially.

When Paul [or Saul] was led blind into Damascus, the Lord said to Ananias, in a vision, that in the house of Judas in a certain street he would find him; but Ananias sought to excuse himself because he had heard by many how much evil he [Saul] had previously done to the Lord's saints in Jerusalem. [See the ix. chapter.] In the same chapter it is said, that as Peter passed through the country he came down also to the saints who were in Lydda. In the 41 verse also of this chapter, it is written, that when Peter had raised Dorcas from the dead, he presented her alive to the saints, &c. This was evidently near the time when Barnabas found Paul at Tarsus, and brought him to Antioch, as would also appear from the manner of the expression, and was about the time when the disciples were first called Christians; but were known to each other by the name disciples, brethren, and saints.

In the xxxi. chapter and 28 verse of the same book, the historian informs us, that when Paul was speaking for himself before Agrippa, that the king said, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." There are certain facts to be considered concerning this account, previous to placing the mind directly upon this verse. We will here survey a powerful plea of Paul before his Judges, rendered doubly interesting from the fact that his accusers charged him with constant attempts to overthrow the government, stir up factions, riots, discords, tumults, and rebellions of every description, and finally a subverter of the peace and good order of society every where, and that he had spread his pernicious doctrine throughout all Asia, when the plain fact was, his accusers were MAD with him because of his religion—he had forsaken his former party, and ceased to persecute the saints, and they were determined to take his life; if they could not assassinate him secretly, they would, like every other MOB, use every exertion to frame and circulate false reports concerning his private as well as public character, to enrage popular prejudice and stir up the authorities against him, to procure his destruction in that way. But Paul spake for himself, in the defense of his own life and character, and maintained his point in a beautiful manner, by relating his own conversion to the doctrine of the gospel, and thereby satisfactorily convinced his judges that this was the ground of the whole charge preferred against him by the Jews. One item further will be noticed in his defense, that in the midst of the relation of his vision, he says, "Many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they [the saints] were put to death, I gave my voice against them." [The saints.] "Because I thought that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, therefore I shut up the saints [not Christians] in prison," &c.

The next and last mention made of the word Christian in the bible, is in Peter's first epistle, iv. chapter, and 16 verse. In the 14 verse of the same chapter, Peter plainly shows that the saints were called Christians in his day out of reproach, because he says, "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you. On their part he [Christ] is evil spoken of, but on your part he [Christ] is glorified." From this it is reasonable to conclude that the saints in Peter's day were reproached for the name of Christ, that is, because they belonged to, or were followers of Christ; for had they not been followers of Christ, they certainly would not have been despised or reproached for him; and if they had not believed on him, they would not have been called Christians; and if they had not been called Christians, they would not have suffered reproach for the gospel's sake; because if they were reproached for Christ, it is evident that they were called Christians out of reproach, for their religion being from heaven, certainly heaven never would give a religion and then reproach it by calling those who embraced it by another name out of reproach. He further says: "But let no man suffer as a murderer, or a thief, or an evil-doer, or as a busy-body in other men's matters. Yet, if as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf."

This is all we have in the bible to form or make the word Christian for a name to distinguish the church of Christ. The first and last show evidently that it was a name given by the enemies of truth, and the other is merely quoted as the words of Agrippa after hearing Paul relate his vision of the Savior. Paul was accused, as before said, of violating the law of his country, but when he was brought before Agrippa and the Roman governor, by relating his vision he convinced them that the whole accusation on the part of the Jews was for his embracing the gospel and believing that Jesus of Nazareth was the true Messiah. So the fact was demonstrated to them that Paul was "reproached" for the name of Christ, and Agrippa was almost persuaded to be "reproached" also for the sake of the reward, after listening to Paul's account of his own conversion, and of the circumstances leading to, or transpiring previous to that event, and of the glory of God which surrounded him on that occasion.

This being the amount of the testimony in the scriptures on the word Christian, it is to be observed that it is mentioned only three times in all, and in neither case by the Lord in any form as addressing his people in that name, but to the contrary, it came from unbelievers, except in the last instance, and this, as has been shown, was only quoted by the apostle Peter, as a name by which the saints were called out of reproach—the difference being more than thirty to one between the two words, and whenever the term or name saints is applied, it is mentioned to represent the people of God, not by their enemies, but by themselves.

PRESENT STATE OF THE WORLD.

The world has had a long rest from severe and protracted wars and commerce and wealth have greatly increased within the last 33 years in consequence of the general prevalence of peace among the nations. But the appearance of the world now savors again of concern they peruse its sacred pages; for if they would examine as he would without prejudice by tradition, they would see that the NAME CHRISTIAN was one reproachfully given to the SAINTS of God because they believed in Christ Jesus, and that the Lord never called his people by that name from the creation to the present day.—If he did, it is no where recorded.

Having this title before us, we shall see whether it can be proven from the scriptures, that God designed his people to be called by it, by comparing this name with the name saints; and if our reasoning is not satisfactory to any of our professing friends, they can have the liberty to give better ones, and, if they please, disprove what we shall attempt to prove, and that is, as we have previously remarked, that God never called his people Christians.

The first mention of the name Christian, as recorded in the bible, is to be found in the xi. chapter and 26 verse of Acts. Though the historian has not told us plainly that this was given to the believers in Christ by way of reproach, he has said that "they were called Christians first in Antioch." It is reasonable to suppose from the fact that the followers of Christ were not called Christians till so long after his resurrection, that it was a name given them by their enemies; for it is said they were first called Christians in Antioch. And we may suppose that it was their enemies who gave them this name, as it is said, "they were first called." Had it been handed down to us that they first called themselves Christians in Antioch, it would alter the sense materially.

When Paul [or Saul] was led blind into Damascus, the Lord said to Ananias, in a vision, that in the house of Judas in a certain street he would find him; but Ananias sought to excuse himself because he had heard by many how much evil he [Saul] had previously done to the Lord's saints in Jerusalem. [See the ix. chapter.] In the same chapter it is said, that as Peter passed through the country he came down also to the saints who were in Lydda. In the 41 verse also of this chapter, it is written, that when Peter had raised Dorcas from the dead, he presented her alive to the saints, &c. This was evidently near the time when Barnabas found Paul at Tarsus, and brought him to Antioch, as would also appear from the manner of the expression, and was about the time when the disciples were first called Christians; but were known to each other by the name disciples, brethren, and saints.

In the xxxi. chapter and 28 verse of the same book, the historian informs us, that when Paul was speaking for himself before Agrippa, that the king said, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." There are certain facts to be considered concerning this account, previous to placing the mind directly upon this verse. We will here survey a powerful plea of Paul before his Judges, rendered doubly interesting from the fact that his accusers charged him with constant attempts to overthrow the government, stir up factions, riots, discords, tumults, and rebellions of every description, and finally a subverter of the peace and good order of society every where, and that he had spread his pernicious doctrine throughout all Asia, when the plain fact was, his accusers were MAD with him because of his religion—he had forsaken his former party, and ceased to persecute the saints, and they were determined to take his life; if they could not assassinate him secretly, they would, like every other MOB, use every exertion to frame and circulate false reports concerning his private as well as public character, to enrage popular prejudice and stir up the authorities against him, to procure his destruction in that way. But Paul spake for himself, in the defense of his own life and character, and maintained his point in a beautiful manner, by relating his own conversion to the doctrine of the gospel, and thereby satisfactorily convinced his judges that this was the ground of the whole charge preferred against him by the Jews. One item further will be noticed in his defense, that in the midst of the relation of his vision, he says, "Many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they [the saints] were put to death, I gave my voice against them." [The saints.] "Because I thought that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, therefore I shut up the saints [not Christians] in prison," &c.

The next and last mention made of the word Christian in the bible, is in Peter's first epistle, iv. chapter, and 16 verse. In the 14 verse of the same chapter, Peter plainly shows that the saints were called Christians in his day out of reproach, because he says, "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye; for the Spirit of glory and of God resteth upon you. On their part he [Christ] is evil spoken of, but on your part he [Christ] is glorified." From this it is reasonable to conclude that the saints in Peter's day were reproached for the name of Christ, that is, because they belonged to, or were followers of Christ; for had they not been followers of Christ, they certainly would not have been despised or reproached for him; and if they had not believed on him, they would not have been called Christians; and if they had not been called Christians, they would not have suffered reproach for the gospel's sake; because if they were reproached for Christ, it is evident that they were called Christians out of reproach, for their religion being from heaven, certainly heaven never would give a religion and then reproach it by calling those who embraced it by another name out of reproach. He further says: "But let no man suffer as a murderer, or a thief, or an evil-doer, or as a busy-body in other men's matters. Yet, if as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf."

This is all we have in the bible to form or make the word Christian for a name to distinguish the church of Christ. The first and last show evidently that it was a name given by the enemies of truth, and the other is merely quoted as the words of Agrippa after hearing Paul relate his vision of the Savior. Paul was accused, as before said, of violating the law of his country, but when he was brought before Agrippa and the Roman governor, by relating his vision he convinced them that the whole accusation on the part of the Jews was for his embracing the gospel and believing that Jesus of Nazareth was the true Messiah. So the fact was demonstrated to them that Paul was "reproached" for the name of Christ, and Agrippa was almost persuaded to be "reproached" also for the sake of the reward, after listening to Paul's account of his own conversion, and of the circumstances leading to, or transpiring previous to that event, and of the glory of God which surrounded him on that occasion.

This being the amount of the testimony in the scriptures on the word Christian, it is to be observed that it is mentioned only three times in all, and in neither case by the Lord in any form as addressing his people in that name, but to the contrary, it came from unbelievers, except in the last instance, and this, as has been shown, was only quoted by the apostle Peter, as a name by which the saints were called out of reproach—the difference being more than thirty to one between the two words, and whenever the term or name saints is applied, it is mentioned to represent the people of God, not by their enemies, but by themselves.

PRESENT STATE OF THE WORLD.

The world has had a long rest from severe and protracted wars, and commerce and wealth have greately increased within the last 23 years in consequence of the general prevalence of peace among the nations. But the appearance of the world now covers again of general and bloody wars. The war between the United States and Mexico, though it has been hardly contested, has not yet involved a great number of combatants. From these facts nothing favorable can be argued, for it is the beginning of a contest between the Saxon and Spanish races on the western continent; and however a peace may be patched up from time to time, the contest will break out anew from time to time, until the Spanish race is swallowed up.—Hereafter there will be no permanent peace between the two races till the proudest, haughtiest and most effeminate submits and yields its institutions. And as the Spanish race is the most difficult of all the European races to conquer, the most obstinate and bloody in defensive warfare, the contest will be long and bloody. It is vain to calculate on the weakness and effeminacy of the Mexicans, and worse than vain to hope for any advantages from their divisions.—The very fact of their divisions renders a peace impossible. The defeat of the Mexican armies is looked on by them only as the defeat of a military leader.

The masses of their armies are immediately rallied around the standard of some other leader, with new hopes always to be held out; never realized. During a year and a half of hard contested warfare they have not gained one single victory. They have already yielded the capital of their country, all their principal ports, and most of the rich trading towns, with the full half of their territory. In nearly a dozen of the hardest contested fields ever fought on this continent, they have been uniformly defeated. Yet do they not show the least disposition to peace. Nor do they express any very deeply seated fear of finally failing in the defense of their country. From their habits and feelings they must be hard to conquer. Their country may be overrun and given up to fire and sword, but this does not conquer it. The United States may colonize the unsettled parts of their territory, but Mexico will not yield it as the price of peace, even when all hope of reconquest departs. If, at some time, the United States should effect a treaty of peace with the existing government, they can have no assurance, but the presence of a powerful army, that the next administration will not repudiate the treaty.—In fine, however a peace may be patched up it can be looked upon only as a truce of arms, to be broken the first opportunity. War may be looked for in the main till English and Spanish republics cease to exist side by side; not because they are natural enemies, for naturally they should have combined against the monarchies of Europe; but because God is thus working out his purposes. Those who are familiar with the writings of the prophet Joseph will not be at a loss to see the end from the beginning. Strange and inscrutable are the ways of God, except to those to whom he reveals them. So great improbabilities are spoken by the prophets, and so perfectly are they fulfilled from age to age, that he who disbelieves is more credulous than the believer.

Equally do the clouds of war lower in the old world. When the storm will break forth the world cannot tell, hardly guess. But they all feel there is eminent danger. None doubts that it is near at hand, and all are, according to their several passions or interests, dreading or hoping it may fall on their own countries.

The last Gospel Herald, published at Voree, contains the ground plan of the temple of the Latter Day Saints, which it is intended to erect at that place. It consists of a main building surrounded by a court. The main building is to be 70 feet by 100, two stories high. The enclosure, or court, is composed of 12 buildings, connected by a wall, pierced by four entrances or gateways to the main building. If the work be completed, according to the plan, the saints have considerable of a job before them; but if faith can remove mountains, we don't see why it cannot build temples.—Southport Telegraph.

☞ We have been again disappointed in obtaining paper, and are obliged to come out on a small sheet. As we had provided cash to purchase our winter's supply, we hope to avoid such a contingency; but having visited every stationer in Milwaukee without finding one ream of paper, our subscribers must take necessity as a sufficient excuse. We shall doubtless get a stock within one or two weeks, when we hope to serve our subscribers regularly with a full sized paper. Our thanks to our numerous friends who are sending in the solid testimonials of their interest in the work. By the way, we have on our list a considerable number of names in arrears. This should not be. And by the first day of December we shall commence striking them off, and intend by the beginning of another year to have every name off the list which we find in arrears, except one.

☞ We congratulate the saints again on the more cheering prospects of the church both at home and abroad. The various corespondents, whose letters are pouring in upon us, all agree in the expression of better feeling, and many are telling us of additions in the several places of their ministry. Very few preachers are in the field, and the calls for help are increasing; but the little few who are in the work are all prospering, while we here are making progress. We cannot help saying that there are some able preachers here who would be glad to go into the work, but cannot do it for want of food for their families even for one month. Cannot some of the branches who are anxious for an elder, send on occasionally something to fit him out with?

☞ We are compelled to delay the publication of the Mormon discussion this week waiting for the sheets containing the remarks of one of the parties. As the most satisfactory substitute, we insert a treatise on the name of the church, by Oliver Cowdery.

Union, Rock Co., W. T., Oct. 31st, 1847.

Dear Brother Strang:—

There is a Baptist preacher here who thinks he can show to the world that Mormonism has no foundation. And, sir, I want you to come and preach a few times, and let him see his mistake. He says you shall have the school house, and also he will preach after you, but he will not consent to debate with you. If you cannot come yourself send some other person, for I think if we can get the people to hear the gospel there will be some honest enough to obey.

Yours with respect,
SETH C. CHILD.

☞ My avocations will not admit of my absence from this place. If the Baptist preacher will debate, we will send up some of the boys to meet him at any time. But if he can show to the world that Mormonism has no foundation, he had better write out his showing and send it to us. We should be most happy to publish such a work. And as our readers are principally interested in the matter, we think that, as a minister of the gospel, he is under obligation to enlighten them. If Mormonism is a delusion, he will immortalize himself on earth and gain a crown in heaven by effectually showing it; and as we wish to do the cause of truth some service in our day, we shall be most happy to save him all the expense of publishing such a work by doing it for him. [Ed.

A Query.—What kind of faith is that which some (would be called) saints have, that are in possession of a large portion of this world's goods, who will not preach themselves nor contribute to the support of those who do and have nothing?

general and bloody wars. The war between the United States and Mexico, though it has been hardly contested, has not yet involved a great number of combatants. From these facts nothing favorable can be argued, for it is the beginning of a contest between the Saxon and Spanish races on the western continent; and however a peace may be patched up from time to time, the contest will break out anew from time to time, until the Spanish race is swallowed up.—Hereafter there will be no permanent peace between the two races till the proudest, haughtiest and most effeminate submits and yields its institutions. And as the Spanish race is the most difficult of all the European races to conquer, the most obstinate and bloody in defensive warfare, the contest will be long and bloody. It is vain to calculate on the weakness and effeminacy of the Mexicans, and worse than vain to hope for any advantages from their divisions.—The very fact of their divisions renders a peace impossible. The defeat of the Mexican armies is looked on by them only as the defeat of a military leader.

The masses of their armies are immediately rallied around the standard of some other leader, with new hopes always to be held out; never realized. During a year and a half of hard contested warfare they have not gained one single victory. They have already yielded the capital of their country, all their principal ports, and most of the rich trading towns, with the full half of their territory. In nearly a dozen of the hardest contested fields ever fought on this continent, they have been uniformly defeated. Yet do they not show the least disposition to peace. Nor do they express any very deeply seated fear of finally failing in the defense of their country. From their habits and feelings they must be hard to conquer. Their country may be overrun and given up to fire and sword, but this does not conquer it. The United States may colonize the unsettled parts of their territory, but Mexico will not yield it as the price of peace, even when all hope of reconquest departs. If, at some time, the United States should effect a treaty of peace with the existing government, they can have no assurance, but the presence of a powerful army, that the next administration will not repudiate the treaty.—In fine, however a peace may be patched up it can be looked upon only as a truce of arms, to be broken the first opportunity. War may be looked for in the main till English and Spanish republics cease to exist side by side; not because they are natural enemies, for naturally they should have combined against the monarchies of Europe; but because God is thus working out his purposes. Those who are familiar with the writings of the prophet Joseph will not be at a loss to see the end from the beginning. Strange and inscrutable are the ways of God, except to those to whom he reveals them. So great improbabilities are spoken by the prophets, and so perfectly are they fulfilled from age to age, that he who disbelieves is more credulous than the believer.

Equally do the clouds of war lower in the old world. When the storm will break forth the world cannot tell, hardly guess. But they all feel there is eminent danger. None doubts that it is near at hand, and all are, according to their several passions or interests, dreading or hoping it may fall on their own countries.

The last Gospel Herald, published at Voree, contains the ground plan of the temple of the Latter Day Saints, which it is intended to erect at that place. It consists of a main building surrounded by a court. The main building is to be 70 feet by 100, two stories high. The enclosure, or court, is composed of 12 buildings, connected by a wall, pierced by four entrances or gateways to the main building. If the work be completed, according to the plan, the saints have considerable of a job before them; but if faith can remove mountains, we don't see why it cannot build temples.—Southport Telegraph.

☞ We have been again disappointed in obtaining paper, and are obliged to come out on a small sheet. As we had provided cash to purchase our winter's supply, we hope to avoid such a contingency; but having visited every stationer in Milwaukee without finding one ream of paper, our subscribers must take necessity as a sufficient excuse. We shall doubtless get a stock within one or two weeks, when we hope to serve our subscribers regularly with a full sized paper. Our thanks to our numerous friends who are sending in the solid testimonials of their interest in the work. By the way, we have on our list a considerable number of names in arrears. This should not be. And by the first day of December we shall commence striking them off, and intend by the beginning of another year to have every name off the list which we find in arrears, except one.

☞ We congratulate the saints again on the more cheering prospects of the church both at home and abroad. The various corespondents, whose letters are pouring in upon us, all agree in the expression of better feeling, and many are telling us of additions in the several places of their ministry. Very few preachers are in the field, and the calls for help are increasing; but the little few who are in the work are all prospering, while we here are making progress. We cannot help saying that there are some able preachers here who would be glad to go into the work, but cannot do it for want of food for their families even for one month. Cannot some of the branches who are anxious for an elder, send on occasionally something to fit him out with?

☞ We are compelled to delay the publication of the Mormon discussion this week waiting for the sheets containing the remarks of one of the parties. As the most satisfactory substitute, we insert a treatise on the name of the church, by Oliver Cowdery.

Union, Rock Co., W. T., Oct. 31st, 1847.

Dear Brother Strang:—

There is a Baptist preacher here who thinks he can show to the world that Mormonism has no foundation. And, sir, I want you to come and preach a few times, and let him see his mistake. He says you shall have the school house, and also he will preach after you, but he will not consent to debate with you. If you cannot come yourself send some other person, for I think if we can get the people to hear the gospel there will be some honest enough to obey.

Yours with respect,
SETH C. CHILD.

☞ My avocations will not admit of my absence from this place. If the Baptist preacher will debate, we will send up some of the boys to meet him at any time. But if he can show to the world that Mormonism has no foundation, he had better write out his showing and send it to us. We should be most happy to publish such a work. And as our readers are principally interested in the matter, we think that, as a minister of the gospel, he is under obligation to enlighten them. If Mormonism is a delusion, he will immortalize himself on earth and gain a crown in heaven by effectually showing it; and as we wish to do the cause of truth some service in our day, we shall be most happy to save him all the expense of publishing such a work by doing it for him. [Ed.

A Query.—What kind of faith is that which some (would be called) saints have, that are in possession of a large portion of this world's goods, who will not preach themselves nor contribute to the support of those who do and have nothing?

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 18, 1847 [No. 35.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from last week.)

That the justice of these remarks may more clearly appear, I shall proceed at some leugth to examine the prophecies and testimonies on this subject. And as not only the infallibility, but the christianity of the Roman Catholic church is involved in this matter, I shall, in treating of this question, meet you on your own grounds by using the Doway version of the Old Testament and the Rhemes version of the New, and shall annex the notes which the Roman church has given for the better understanding of the sacred text.

Gen. iii. 14, "And the Lord God said to the serpent: Because thou hast done this thing, thou art cursed among all cattle, and beasts of the earth: upon thy breast shalt thou go, and earth shalt thou eat all the days of thy life.

15. I will put enmities between thee and the woman, and thy seed and her seed: she shall crush* thy head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her heel."

Such is the first promise of a deliverer. God renewed this promise to Abraham, with the assurance that the deliverer should be of his lineage.

Gen. xxii. 15, "And the angel of the Lord called to Abraham a second time from heaven, saying:

16. By my own self have I sworn, saith the Lord: because thou hast done this thing, and hast not spared thy only begotten son for my sake:

18. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, because thou hast obeyed my voice."

Paul assures us that this promise to Abraham was of Christ the Messiah.

Gal. iii. 16, "To Abraham were the promises made, and to his seed. He saith not: And to his seeds, as of many: but as of one: and to thy seed, who is Christ."

This promise was confirmed to Jacob.

Gen. xxviii. 14, "And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth: thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and IN THEE and thy seed all the tribes of the earth SHALL BE BLESSED.

15. And I will be thy keeper whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee back into this land: neither will I leave thee, till I shall have accomplished all that I have said."

Jacob put it upon the head of Juda.

"She shall crush.* Ipsa, the woman: so divers of the fathers read this place, conformably to the Latin: others read it ipsum, viz. the seed. The sense is the same: for it is by her seed, Jesus Christ, that the woman crushes the serpent's head."

Gen. xlix. 9, "Juda is a lion's whelp:† to the prey, my son, thou art gone up: resting thou hast couched as a lioness; who shall rouse him?

10. The sceptre shall not be taken away from Juda, nor a ruler from his thigh, till he come that IS TO BE SENT, and he shall be the expectation of nations.

11. Tying his foal to the vineyard, and his ass, O my son, to the vine. He shall wash his robe in wine, and his garment in the blood of the grape.

12. His eyes are more beautiful than wine, and his teeth whiter than milk."

Moses, speaking of the priesthood of the Messiah, says:—

Deut. xviii. 18, "I will raise them up a prophet out of the midst of their brethren like to thee: and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak all that I shall command him.

19. And he that will not hear his words, which he shall speak in my name, I will be the revenger."

And Peter assures us that this was fulfilled in Christ.

Acts iii. 13, "The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus, whom you indeed delivered up and denied before the face of Pilate, when he judged he should be released.

19. Be penitent, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out:

20. That, when the times of refreshment shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send him who hath been preached unto you, Jesus Christ.

22. For Moses indeed said: A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you out of your brethren, like unto me: him you shall hear, according to all things whatsoever he shall speak to you.

24. And all the prophets, from Samuel and afterwards, that have spoken, have foretold these days.

25. You are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made to our fathers, saying to Abraham: And in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Now as Moses was a LAW-GIVER, standing at the HEAD of the people, and exercising ROYAL and PRIESTLY AUTHORITY over them, and a prophet of the most High God, exalted above the princes and heads of tribes, and as Christ was to be like him in the authority of his priesthood, it is very clear that if the throne of David is established forever Christ must come in his line in order to fill it.

2 Kings, alias 2 Samuel, vii. 8, "And now thus shalt thou speak to my servant David: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: I took thee out of the pastures from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people Israel.

12. And when thy days shall be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall

---

"†A lion's whelp, &c. This blessing of Juda foretelleth the strength of his tribe, the fertility of his inheritance; and principally that the sceptre and legislative power should not be utterly taken away from his race till about the time of the coming of Christ; as in effect it never was: which is a demonstration against the modern Jews, that the Messiah is long since come; for the sceptre has long since been utterly taken away from Juda."

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 18, 1847 [No. 35.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from last week.)

That the justice of these remarks may more clearly appear, I shall proceed at some length to examine the prophecies and testimonies on this subject. And as not only the infallibility, but the christianity of the Roman Catholic church is involved in this matter, I shall, in treating of this question, meet you on your own grounds by using the Doway version of the Old Testament and the Rhemes version of the New, and shall annex the notes which the Roman church has given for the better understanding of the sacred text.

Gen. iii. 14, "And the Lord God said to the serpent: Because thou hast done this thing, thou art cursed among all cattle, and beasts of the earth: upon thy breast shalt thou go, and earth shalt thou eat all the days of thy life.

15. I will put enmities between thee and the woman, and thy seed and her seed: she shall crush* thy head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her heel."

Such is the first promise of a deliverer. God renewed this promise to Abraham, with the assurance that the deliverer should be of his lineage.

Gen. xxii. 15, "And the angel of the Lord called to Abraham a second time from heaven, saying:

16. By my own self have I sworn, saith the Lord: because thou hast done this thing, and hast not spared thy only begotten son for my sake:

18. And in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed, because thou hast obeyed my voice."

Paul assures us that this promise to Abraham was of Christ the Messiah.

Gal. iii. 16, "To Abraham were the promises made, and to his seed. He saith not: And to his seeds, as of many: but as of one: and to thy seed, who is Christ."

This promise was confirmed to Jacob.

Gen. xxviii. 14, "And thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth: thou shalt spread abroad to the west, and to the east, and to the north, and to the south: and IN THEE and thy seed all the tribes of the earth SHALL BE BLESSED.

15. And I will be thy keeper whithersoever thou goest, and will bring thee back into this land: neither will I leave thee, till I shall have accomplished all that I have said."

Jacob put it upon the head of Juda.

"She shall crush.* Ipsa, the woman: so divers of the fathers read this place, conformably to the Latin: others read it ipsum, viz. the seed. The sense is the same: for it is by her seed, Jesus Christ, that the woman crushes the serpent's head."

Gen. xlix. 9, "Juda is a lion's whelp:† to the prey, my son, thou art gone up: resting thou hast couched as a lioness; who shall rouse him?

10. The sceptre shall not be taken away from Juda, nor a ruler from his thigh, till he come that IS TO BE SENT, and he shall be the expectation of nations.

11. Tying his foal to the vineyard, and his ass, O my son, to the vine. He shall wash his robe in wine, and his garment in the blood of the grape.

12. His eyes are more beautiful than wine, and his teeth whiter than milk."

Moses, speaking of the priesthood of the Messiah, says:—

Deut. xviii. 18, "I will raise them up a prophet out of the midst of their brethren like to thee: and I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak all that I shall command him.

19. And he that will not hear his words, which he shall speak in my name, I will be the revenger."

And Peter assures us that this was fulfilled in Christ.

Acts iii. 13, "The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, the God of our fathers, hath glorified his Son Jesus, whom you indeed delivered up and denied before the face of Pilate, when he judged he should be released.

19. Be penitent, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out:

20. That when the times of refreshment shall come from the presence of the Lord, and he shall send him who hath been preached unto you, Jesus Christ,

22. For Moses indeed said: A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you out of your brethren, like unto me: him you shall hear, according to all things whatsoever he shall speak to you.

24. And all the prophets, from Samuel and afterwards, that have spoken, have foretold these days.

25. You are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made to our fathers, saying to Abraham: And in thy seed shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

Now as Moses was a LAW-GIVER, standing at the HEAD of the people, and exercising ROYAL and PRIESTLY AUTHORITY over them, and a prophet of the most High God, exalted above the princes and heads of tribes, and as Christ was to be like him in the authority of his priesthood, it is very clear that if the throne of David is established forever Christ must come in his line in order to fill it.

2 Kings, alias 2 Samuel, vii. 8, "And now thus shalt thou speak to my servant David: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: I took thee out of the pastures from following the sheep, to be ruler over my people Israel.

12. And when thy days shall be fulfilled, and thou shalt sleep with thy fathers, I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall

---

"†A lion's whelp, &c. This blessing of Juda foretelleth the strength of his tribe, the fertility of his inheritance; and principally that the sceptre and legislative power should not be utterly taken away from his race till about the time of the coming of Christ; as in effect it never was: which is a demonstration against the modern Jews, that the Messiah is long since come; for the sceptre has long since been utterly taken away from Juda."

proceed out of thy bowels: and I will establish his kingdom.‡

13. He shall build a house to my name; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever.

14. I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son: and if he commit any iniquity, I will correct him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men.

15. But my mercy I will not take away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I removed from before my face.

16. And thy house shall be faithful, and thy kingdom forever before thy face: and thy throne shall be firm forever.

17. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak to David.

18. And David went in, and sat before the Lord and said: Who am I, O Lord God, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far?

19. But yet this hath seemed little in thy sight, O Lord God, unless thou didst also speak of the house of thy servant for a long time to come: for this is the law of Adam, O Lord God.

24. For thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be an everlasting people: and thou, O Lord God, art become their God.

29. And now begin, and bless the house of thy servant, that it may endure forever before thee: because thou, O Lord God, hast spoken it; and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed forever."

To cut off the possibility of a misunderstanding of this scripture, you will remark that the Roman Catholic church have by their note explanatory of it determined that it is a prophecy of Christ; and, what is of more consequence, Paul quotes it as such, Heb. i. 5; and lest there should be any doubt that the promise to David, in the royal line, centre in Christ as king of Israel and right heir to David, Paul, in this instance, applies to CHRIST a promise made in favor of the posterity of David with the condition of DISOBEDIENCE and a CURSE annexed: "I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son; and if he commit any INIQUITY, I will correct him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men."

Psalm. lxxxviii. (lxxxix Protestant version) 4, "I have made a covenant with my elect: I have sworn to David my servant: THY SEED will I settle forever.

5. And I will build up thy THRONE unto generation and generation.

6. The heavens shall confess thy wonders, O Lord; and thy truth in the church of the saints.

19. For our protection is of the Lord, and of our king the holy one of Israel.

20. Then thou speakest in a vision to thy saints, and saidst: I have laid help upon one that is mighty, and have exalted one chosen out of my people.

21. I have found David my servant: with my holy oil I have anointed him.

22. For my hand shall help him: and my arm shall strengthen him.

23. The enemy shall have no advantage over him: nor the son of iniquity have power to hurt him.

24. And I will cut down his enemies before his face: and them that hate him I will put to flight.

25. And my truth and my mercy shall be with him; and in my name shall his horn (power) be exalted.

"‡I will establish his kingdom. This prophecy partly relateth to Solomon; but much more to Christ, who is called the son of David in scripture and who is the builder of the true temple which is the church, his everlasting kingdom, which shall never fail."

26. And I will set his hand in the sea; and his right hand in the rivers.

27. He shall cry out to me: Thou art my father; my God, and the support of my salvation.

28. And I will make HIM MY FIRST-BORN, high above the kings of the earth.

29. I will keep my mercy for him FOREVER: and my covenant faithful to him.

30. And I will make his SEED to endure for EVERMORE, and his THRONE as the days of HEAVEN.

31. And if his children forsake my law, and walk not in my judgments;

32. If they profane my justices: and keep not my commandments;

33. I will visit their iniquities with a rod; and their sins with stripes.

34. But my mercy I will not take away from him: nor will I suffer my truth to fail.

35. Neither will I profane my covenant: and the words that proceed from my mouth I WILL NOT MAKE VOID.

36. ONCE HAVE I SWORN BY MY HOLINESS: I will not LIE UNTO DAVID:

37. His SEED shall ENDURE FOREVER.

38. And his THRONE as the SUN before me; and as the moon PERFECT FOREVER, and a FAITHFUL WITNESS IN HEAVEN."

It is an error to suppose this prophecy was fulfilled in David, or in Solomon, or any other one person alone; but it is to be fulfilled in the posterity of David, in the royal line. The covenant was made to David. By it his SEED was established forever. And though in consequence of their iniquities God would visit them with a rod, yet is bound by his oath to David to give unto his seed his throne from generation to generation; to cut down his enemies before his face; to keep his mercy for him forever; to make him HIS FIRST BORN, HIGH ABOVE the KINGS of the EARTH; to make him A FAITHFUL WITNESS in heaven, and to establish his THRONE BEFORE GOD as the SUN in the firmament; which is the fulness of the promise of the MESSIAHSHIP.

Psalm cxxxi. (cxxxii. Protestant version) 10, "For thy servant David's sake, turn not away the face of thy anointed.

11. The Lord hath sworn truth to David; and he will not make it void: of the fruit of thy womb I will set upon thy throne.

12. If thy children will keep my covenant, and these my testimonies which I shall teach them; their children also for evermore shall sit upon thy throne.

13. For the Lord hath chosen Sion: he hath chosen it for his dwelling.

14. This is my rest forever and ever: here will I dwell, for I have chosen it.

15. Blessing I will bless her widow; I will satisfy her poor with bread.

16. I will clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shall rejoice with exceeding great joy.

17. There will I bring forth a HORN to DAVID: I have prepared a lamp for my anointed.

18. His enemies I will clothe with confusion. but upon him shall my sanctification flourish."

This Psalm shows most clearly that the promise to David to establish his throne forevermore was to be fulfilled in his posterity in the Messiahship, who should be the great and righteous deliverer of Israel.

Isa. xi. 1, "And there shall come forth a rod out of the root of Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.

2. And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him: the spirit of wisdom, and of understanding, the spirit of counsel, and of fortitude, proceed out of thy bowels: and I will establish his kingdom.‡

13. He shall build a house to my name; and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever.

14. I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son: and if he commit any iniquity, I will correct him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men.

15. But my mercy I will not take away from him, as I took it from Saul, whom I removed from before my face.

16. And thy house shall be faithful, and thy kingdom forever before thy face: and thy throne shall be firm forever.

17. According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so did Nathan speak to David.

18. And David went in, and sat before the Lord and said: Who am I, O Lord God, and what is my house, that thou hast brought me thus far?

19. But yet this hath seemed little in thy sight, O Lord God, unless thou didst also speak of the house of thy servant for a long time to come: for this is the law of Adam, O Lord God.

24. For thou hast confirmed to thyself thy people Israel, to be an everlasting people: and thou, O Lord God, art become their God.

29. And now begin, and bless the house of thy servant, that it may endure forever before thee: because thou, O Lord God, hast spoken it; and with thy blessing let the house of thy servant be blessed forever."

To cut off the possibility of a misunderstanding of this scripture, you will remark that the Roman Catholic church have by their note explanatory of it determined that it is a prophecy of Christ; and, what is of more consequence, Paul quotes it as such, Heb. i. 5; and lest there should be any doubt that the promise to David, in the royal line, centre in Christ as king of Israel and right heir to David, Paul, in this instance, applies to CHRIST a promise made in favor of the posterity of David with the condition of DISOBEDIENCE and a CURSE annexed: "I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son; and if he commit any INIQUITY, I will correct him with the rod of men, and with the stripes of the children of men."

Psalm. lxxxviii. (lxxxix Protestant version) 4, "I have made a covenant with my elect: I have sworn to David my servant: THY SEED will I settle forever.

5. And I will build up thy THRONE unto generation and generation.

6. The heavens shall confess thy wonders, O Lord; and thy truth in the church of the saints.

19. For our protection is of the Lord, and of our king the holy one of Israel.

20. Then thou spakest in a vision to thy saints, and saidst: I have laid help upon one that is mighty, and have exalted one chosen out of my people.

21. I have found David my servant: with my holy oil I have anointed him.

22. For my hand shall help him: and my arm shall strengthen him.

23. The enemy shall have no advantage over him: nor the son of iniqui[ty] have power to hurt him.

24. And I will cut down his enemies before his face: and them that hate him I will put to flight.

25. And my truth and my mercy shall be with him; and in my name shall his h[orn (power)] be exalted.

26. And I will set his hand in the sea; and his right hand in rivers.

27. He shall cry out to me: Thou art my father; my God, and the support of my salvation.

28. And I will make HIM my FIRST-BORN, high above the kings the earth.

29. I will keep my mercy for him FOREVER: and my covena[nt] faithful to him.

30. And I will make his SEED to endure for EVERMORE, and [his] THRONE as the days of HEAVEN.

31. And if his children forsake my law, and walk not in [my] judgments;

32. If they profane my justices: and keep not my commandment[s]

33. I will visit their iniquities with a rod; and their sins wi[th] stripes.

34. But my mercy I will not take away from him: nor will I s[uf]fer my truth to fail.

35. Neither will I profane my covenant: and the words that pr[o]ceed from my mouth I WILL NOT MAKE VOID.

36. ONCE HAVE I SWORN BY MY HOLINESS: I will not LIE UN[TO] DAVID:

37. His SEED shall ENDURE FOREVER.

38. And his THRONE as the SUN before me; and as the moon PE[R]FECT FOREVER, and a FAITHFUL WITNESS IN HEAVEN."

It is an error to suppose this prophecy was fulfilled in David, in Solomon, or any other one person alone; but it is to be fulfille[d] in the posterity of David, in the royal line. The covenant w[as] made to David. By it his SEED was established forever. An[d] though in consequence of their iniquities God would visit the[m] with a rod, yet is bound by his oath to David to give unto his se[ed] his throne from generation to generation; to cut down his enemi[es] before his face; to keep his mercy for him forever; to make hi[m] HIS FIRST BORN, HIGH ABOVE the KINGS of the EARTH; [to] make him A FAITHFUL WITNESS in heaven, and to establish his THRON[E] BEFORE GOD as the SUN in the firmament; which is the fulness of th[e] promise of the MESSIAHSHIP.

Psalm cxxxi. (cxxxii. Protestant version) 10, "For thy servan[t] David's sake, turn not away the face of thy anointed.

11. The Lord hath sworn truth to David; and he will not mak[e] it void: of the fruit of thy womb I will set upon thy throne.

12. If thy children will keep my covenant, and these my test[i]monies which I shall teach them; their children also for evermo[re] shall sit upon thy throne.

13. For the Lord hath chosen Sion: he hath chosen it for hi[s] dwelling.

14. This is my rest forever and ever: here will I dwell, for I have chosen it.

15. Blessing I will bless her widow; I will satisfy her poo[r] with bread.

16. I will clothe her priests with salvation: and her saints shal[l] rejoice with exceeding great joy.

17. There will I bring forth a HORN to DAVID: I have prepared a lamp for my anointed.

18. His enemies I will clothe with confusion. but upon him shall my sanctification flourish."

This Psalm shows most clearly that the promise to David to establish his throne forevermore was to be fulfilled in his posterity in the Messiahship, who should be the great and righteous deliverer of Israel.

Isa. xi. 1, "And there shall come forth a rod out of the root o[f] Jesse, and a flower shall rise up out of his root.

2. And the spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him: the spirit o[f] wisdom, and of understanding, the spirit of counsel, and of fortitude

---

‡ I will establish his kingdom. This prophecy partly relateth to Solomon; but much mo[re] to Christ, who is called the son of David in scripture and who is the builder of the true temple which is the church, his everlasting king[dom, which shall never fail.]

the spirit of knowledge, and of godliness,

3. And he shall be filled with the spirit of the fear of the Lord.—He shall not judge according to the sight of the eyes, nor reprove according to the hearing of the ears.

4. But he shall judge the poor with justice, and shall reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked.

5. And justice shall be the girdle of his loins: and faith the girdle of his reins.

10. In that day the root of Jesse, who standeth for an ensign of people, him the gentiles shall beseech, and his sepulchre (rest) shall be glorious.

11. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand the second time to possess the remnant of his people, which shall be left from the Assyrians, and from Egypt, and from Phetros, and from Ethiopia, and from Elam, and from Sennaar, and from Emath, and from the islands of the sea.

12. And he shall set up a standard unto the nations, and shall assemble the fugitives of Israel, and shall gather together the dispersed of Juda from the four quarters of the earth."

Isa. ix. 6, "For a child is born to us; and a son is given to us; and the government is upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God the Mighty, the Father of the world to come, the Prince of peace.

7. His empire shall be multiplied; and there shall be no end of peace: he shall sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom; to establish it and strengthen it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth and forever."

The Angel Gabriel used almost these precise words to Mary in promising Christ, and yet connected the subject both ways by an indissoluble bond in calling king David his father.

Luke i. 31, "Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and shalt bring forth a Son; and thou shalt call his name Jesus.

32. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the most High: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of David his father: and he shall reign in the house of Jacob forever.

33. And of his kingdom there shall be no end."

As if to cut off the possibility of controversy and doubt on the srbject, Luke tells immediately above that Joseph was of the house of David, and a little after gives us his lineage from him.

Isa. lv. 1, "All you that thirst, come to the waters: and you that have no money, make haste, buy, and eat: come ye, buy wine and milk without money, and without any price.

3. Incline your ear, and come to me: hear, and your soul shall live, and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, the faithful mercies of David.

4. Behold, I have given HIM for a WITNESS to the people, for a LEADER and a MASTER to the GENTILES.

5. Behold, thou shalt call a nation, which thou knewest not: and the nations that knew not thee shall run to thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the holy One of Israel, for he hath glorified thee."

Eze. xxxiv. 23, "And I will set up one shepherd over them: and he shall feed them, even my servant David: ‖ he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

24. And I the Lord will be their God: and my servant David the prince in the midst of them: I the Lord have spoken it.

27. And the tree of the field shall yield its fruit: and the earth shall yield her increase; and they shall be in their land without fear: and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall have broken the bonds of their yoke, and shall have delivered them out of the hand of those that rule over them.

28. And they shall be no more for a spoil to the nations; neither shall the beasts of the earth devour them: but they shall dwell securely without any terror.

29. And I will raise up for them a bud of renown: § and they shall be no more consumed with famine in the land, neither shall they bear any more the reproach of the gentiles."

Jer. xxxiii. 14, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform the good word that I have spoken to the house of Israel, and to the house of Juda.

15. In those days, and at that time, I will make the bud of justice to spring forth unto David: and he shall do judgment and justice in the earth.

16. In those days shall Juda be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell securely: and this is the name that they shall call him, The Lord our just one.

17. For thus saith the Lord: There shall not be cut off from David ¶ a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel.

18. Neither shall there be cut off from the priests  and Levites a man before my face, to offer holocausts, and to burn sacrifice, and to kill victims continually."

Zech. xii. 7, "And the Lord shall save the tabernacles of Juda, as in the beginning: that the house of David, and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, may not boast and magnify themselves against Juda.

8. In that day shall the Lord protect the inhabitants of Jesusalem, and he that hath offended among them in that day shall be as David; and the house of David, as that of God, as an Angel of the Lord in their sight.

10. And I will pour out upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace, and of prayers: and they shall look upon me, whom they have pierced; and they shall mourn for him as one mourneth for an only son: and they shall grieve over him, as the manner is to grieve for the death of the first-born."

Zech. xiii. 1, "In that day there shall be a fountain open to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem: for the washing of the sinner, and of the unclean woman.

2. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will destroy the names of idols out of the earth; and they shall be remembered no more: and I will take away the false prophets, and the unclean spirit out of the earth."

Such are a few of the many prophesies of Christ the Messiah.—I submit the question now in all confidence to the good sense of all men. Have not I made good the declaration with which I set out, that Christ should come of the SEED of ABRAHAM; of the TRIBE of JUDAH and of the HOUSE of DAVID, in the male line, the HEIR APPARENT to the THRONE of ISRAEL by virtue of the COVENANT and OATH of

---

"‖ David. Christ who is of the house of David,"

"§ A bud of renown. Germen nominatum. He speaks of Christ our Lord, the illustrious bud of the house of David, renowned over all the earth. See Jeremias xxxiii. 15."

"¶ There shall not be cut off from David, &c. This was verified in Christ, who is of the house of David; and whose kingdom in his church shall have no end."

" Neither shall there be cut off from the priests, &c. This promise relates to the Christian priesthood; which shall also continue forever; the functions of which (more especially the great sacrifice of the altar) are here expressed by the name of holocausts, and other offerings of the law, which were so many figures of the Christian sacrifice."

the spirit of knowledge, and of godliness,

3. And he shall be filled with the spirit of the fear of the Lord.—He shall not judge according to the sight of the eyes, nor reprove according to the hearing of the ears.

4. But he shall judge the poor with justice, and shall reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall strike the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips he shall slay the wicked.

5. And justice shall be the girdle of his loins: and faith the girdle of his reins.

10. In that day the root of Jesse, who standeth for an ensign of people, him the gentiles shall beseech, and his sepulchre (rest) shall be glorious.

11. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand the second time to possess the remnant of his people, which shall be left from the Assyrians, and from Egypt, and from Phetros, and from Ethiopia, and from Elam, and from Sennaar, and from Emath, and from the islands of the sea.

12. And he shall set up a standard unto the nations, and shall assemble the fugitives of Israel, and shall gather together the dispersed of Juda from the four quarters of the earth."

Isa. ix. 6, "For a child is born to us; and a son is given to us; and the government is upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called, Wonderful, Counsellor, God the Mighty, the Father of the world to come, the Prince of peace.

7. His empire shall be multiplied; and there shall be no end of peace: he shall sit upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom; to establish it and strengthen it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth and forever."

The Angel Gabriel used almost these precise words to Mary in promising Christ, and yet connected the subject both ways by an indissoluble bond in calling king David his father.

Luke i. 31, "Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and shalt bring forth a Son; and thou shalt call his name Jesus.

32. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the most High: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of David his father: and he shall reign in the house of Jacob forever.

33. And of his kingdom there shall be no end."

As if to cut off the possibility of controversy and doubt on the srbject, Luke tells immediately above that Joseph was of the house of David, and a little after gives us his lineage from him.

Isa. lv. 1, "All you that thirst, come to the waters: and you that have no money, make haste, buy, and eat: come ye, buy wine and milk without money, and without any price.

3. Incline your ear, and come to me: hear, and your soul shall live, and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, the faithful mercies of David.

4. Behold, I have given HIM for a WITNESS to the people, for a LEADER and a MASTER to the GENTILES.

5. Behold, thou shalt call a nation, which thou knewest not: and the nations that knew not thee shall run to thee, because of the Lord thy God, and for the holy One of Israel, for he hath glorified thee."

Eze. xxxiv. 23, "And I will set up one shepherd over them: and he shall feed them, even my servant David: ‖ he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

24. And I the Lord will be their God: and my servant David the prince in the midst of them: I the Lord have spoken it.

27. And the tree of the field shall yield its fruit: and the earth shall yield her increase; and they shall be in their land without fear: and they shall know that I am the Lord, when I shall have broken the bonds of their yoke, and shall have delivered them out of the hand of those that rule over them.

28. And they shall be no more for a spoil to the nations; neither shall the beasts of the earth devour them: but they shall dwell securely without any terror.

29. And I will raise up for them a bud of renown: § and they shall be no more consumed with famine in the land, neither shall they bear any more the reproach of the gentiles."

Jer. xxxiii. 14, "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will perform the good word that I have spoken to the house of Israel, and to the house of Juda.

15. In those days, and at that time, I will make the bud of justice to spring forth unto David: and he shall do judgment and justice in the earth.

16. In those days shall Juda be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell securely: and this is the name that they shall call him, The Lord our just one.

17. For thus saith the Lord: There shall not be cut off from David ¶ a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel.

18. Neither shall there be cut off from the priests  and Levites a man before my face, to offer holocausts, and to burn sacrifice, and to kill victims continually."

Zech. xii. 7, "And the Lord shall save the tabernacles of Juda, as in the beginning: that the house of David, and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, may not boast and magnify themselves against Juda.

8. In that day shall the Lord protect the inhabitants of Jesusalem, and he that hath offended among them in that day shall be as David; and the house of David, as that of God, as an Angel of the Lord in their sight.

10. And I will pour out upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace, and of prayers: and they shall look upon me, whom they have pierced; and they shall mourn for him as one mourneth for an only son: and they shall grieve over him, as the manner is to grieve for the death of the first-born."

Zech. xiii. 1, "In that day there shall be a fountain open to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem: for the washing of the sinner, and of the unclean woman.

2. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord of hosts, that I will destroy the names of idols out of the earth; and they shall be remembered no more: and I will take away the false prophets, and the unclean spirit out of the earth."

Such are a few of the many prophesies of Christ the Messiah.—I submit the question now in all confidence to the good sense of all men. Have not I made good the declaration with which I set out, that Christ should come of the SEED of ABRAHAM; of the TRIBE of JUDAH and of the HOUSE of DAVID, in the male line, the HEIR APPARENT to the THRONE of ISRAEL by virtue of the COVENANT and OATH of

---

"‖ David. Christ who is of the house of David."

"§ A bud of renown. Germen nominatum. He speaks of Christ our Lord, the illustrious bud of the house of David, renowned over all the earth. See Jeremias xxxiii. 15."

"¶ There shall not be cut off from David, &c. This was verified in Christ, who is of the house of David; and whose kingdom in his church shall have no end."

" Neither shall there be cut off from the priests, &c. This promise relates to the Christian priesthood; which shall also continue forever; the functions of which (more especially the great sacrifice of the altar) are here expressed by the name of holocausts, and other offerings of the law, which were so many figures of the Christian sacrifice."

God to David? and by consequence that he who does not thus come is not the Messiah?

(To be continued.)

For the Gospel Herald.

Voree, W. T., November 6th, 1847.

TO THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS—GREETING:—

Beloved Brethren,—I take this method to inform you of my whereabouts, and also of my welfare. Myself and family are all well as usual, and have planted ourselves in this place, among the few who adhere to the law of God and desire to keep the commandments of the Most High, and we greatly rejoice in God our Savior that we have not been left in darkness to follow those who have adopted false principles and wicked practices to their own destruction. But that the Lord in his mercy has been pleased to gather us to this place, where his saints enjoy peace and rest according to the promise of the Lord. We arrived here on the 4th day of July last as poor as ever. But you know the poor have the promise of the kingdom of heaven, and that is just what we are after. Well, say you, when are you going out to preach again? Well, I will tell you. I have traveled and preached most of my time for the last fourteen years, and now I am so poor, as to this world's goods, and my children so far in the rear in their education, that I am under the necessity of staying at home and laboring with all my might to feed, clothe and educate them, and this with my own hands, and which I am willing to do. Ah; and why are you not as well off as some others who have traveled and preached as much as you have? I will tell you. I have preached the gospel without money or price; traveling without purse or scrip, according to the commandment of the Lord, coveting no man's silver or gold, houses or lands; while those you hint at have heaped to themselves riches and women, and fled into the western wilds of North America to enjoy their own delusions, until the righteous judgment of the Lord, whom they have offended, shall overtake them to their destruction.

And how long I shall have to stay at home and labor to sustain my family, the Lord knows. But perhaps when I tell you my circumstances, you can guess as near as I can. In the first place I have to purchase a city lot, which will cost fifty dollars; then I have to purchase the materials and build a house, which will cost two hundred or two hundred and fifty dollars more at least to build anything of a comfortable house for a family in this place.

We now live, or stay, in a small cabin built of boards and slabs, with a small fire-place in one corner, and sodded up on the outside; and here we expect to stay until we can work and pay for a lot and build a house, unless some of our brethren and friends who have plenty of this world's goods shall take it into their hearts to send us some of the needful to assist us a little, that I may get out preaching the sooner. Should they do so, it would be thankfully received, as much so, I think, as they have received of our spiritual things with joy and rejoicing. But I lay no tax upon you, you are the Lord's free men, and so are we.

As ever, your brother
in the New Covenant,
JAMES BLAKESLEE.

Supremacy of the Human Animal.—The fear which all animals in America have of man is very singular seen in the Pampas. I often rode towards the ostriches and lamas crouching under the opposite side of my horse's neck; but I always found that although they would allow any loose horse to aproach them, they, even when young, ran from me, though little of my figure was visible; and when one saw them enjoy themselves in such full liberty, it was, at first not pleasing to observe, that one's appearance was every where a signal to them, that they should fly from their enemy. Yet it is by this fear that man hath dominion over the beasts of the fields; and there is no animal in South America that does not acknowledge this instinctive feeling. As a singular proof of the above, and of the difference between the wild beasts of America and of the Old World, I will venture to relate a circumstance which a man sincerely assured me had hppened to him in South America. He was trying to shoot some wild ducks, and in order to approach them unperceived he put the corner of his poncho (which is a sort of long, narrow blanket) over his head, and, crawling along the ground upon his hands and knees, the poncho not only covered his body, but trailed along the ground behind him. As he was thus creeping by a large bush of reeds, he heard a loud, sudden noise, between a bark and a roar; he felt something heavy strike his feet; and instantly jumping up, he saw, to his astonishment, a large lion actually standing on his poncho; and perhaps the animal was equally astonished to find him in the immediate presence of so athletic a man. The man told me he was unwilling to fire, as his gun was loaded with very small shot, and he therefore remained motionless, the lion standing on his poncho for many seconds! At last the creature turned his head, and walked very slowly about ten yards, stopped and turned again. The man still maintained his ground, upon which the lion tacitly acknowledged his supremacy and walked off.—[Sir Francis Head's Journey across the Pampas.

☞ We are under the necessity of asking indulgence of our friends once more. We have again failed of getting a supply of paper for the Herald, and this No. uses up all we have suitable, with an uncertainty as to when there will be more in market. We hope for it next week, but that is a matter of uncertainty. The most we can say is that we shall have it as soon as money will obtain it.

☞ The most perfect series of school reading books we have ever seen is Goodrich's Comprehensive Readers. The series consists of five reading books, beginning with reading and spelling lessons of one syllable, got up in the inimitable style of Peter Parley, and terminating, we presume, with lessons of the highest order of elocution. Of the last, however, we cannot speak so certainly, for, having the misfortune to have no large children, the enterprising bookseller has only furnished us with the beginning of the series.—But from what we have seen we most unhesitatingly recommend these school books to all our readers who have children to educate, especially to the school in Voree, where we hope to see it displace the variety of reading books now in use. For sale by I. A. Hopkins, 146 U. S. block, Milwaukee.

This man Strang, from what we have been able to learn of his movements and purposes, has more means and ability than any man who has yet aspired to the supremacy of the Church. His previous experience and individual means give us reason to expect that he will also be eminently successful.—St. Louis Republican.

Extract from "Instructions to Postmasters," Page 50, Section 118.—"In every instance in which papers that come to your office are not taken out by the persons to whom they are sent, you will give immediate notice of it to the publisher, that they are laying dead in the office.

"In all cases where Postmasters render themselves liable for the subscription money for a paper by a neglect to notify the publisher that it remains dead in the Post-office, the Postmaster General reserves the right to admonish the Postmaster for his neglect, and require him to pay for the paper or remove him from office."

God to David? and by consequence that he who does not THUS come is not the Messiah?

(To be continued.)

For the Gospel Herald.

Voree, W. T., November 6th, 1847.

TO THE BRETHREN AND SISTERS OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS—GREETING:—

BELOVED BRETHREN,—I take this method to inform you of my whereabouts, and also of my welfare. Myself and family are all well as usual, and have planted ourselves in this place, among the few who adhere to the law of God and desire to keep the commandments of the Most High, and we greatly rejoice in God our Savior that we have not been left in darkness to follow those who have adopted false principles and wicked practices to their own destruction. But that the Lord in his mercy has been pleased to gather us to this place, where his saints enjoy peace and rest according to the promise of the Lord. We arrived here on the 4th day of July last as poor as ever. But you know the poor have the promise of the kingdom of heaven, and that is just what we are after. Well, say you, when are you going out to preach again? Well, I will tell you. I have traveled and preached most of my time for the last fourteen years, and now I am so poor, as to this world's goods, and my children so far in the rear in their education, that I am under the necessity of staying at home and laboring with all my might to feed, clothe and educate them, and this with my own hands, and which I am willing to do. Ah; and why are you not as well off as some others who have traveled and preached as much as you have? I will tell you. I have preached the gospel without money or price; traveling without purse or scrip, according to the commandment of the Lord, coveting no man's silver or gold, houses or lands; while those you hint at have heaped to themselves riches and women, and fled into the western wilds of North America to enjoy their own delusions, until the righteous judgment of the Lord, whom they have offended, shall overtake them to their destruction.

And how long I shall have to stay at home and labor to sustain my family, the Lord knows. But perhaps when I tell you my circumstances, you can guess as near as I can. In the first place I have to purchase a city lot, which will cost fifty dollars; then I have to purchase the materials and build a house, which will cost two hundred or two hundred and fifty dollars more at least to build anything of a comfortable house for a family in this place.

We now live, or stay, in a small cabin built of boards and slabs, with a small fire-place in one corner, and sodded up on the outside; and here we expect to stay until we can work and pay for a lot and build a house, unless some of our brethren and friends who have plenty of this world's goods shall take it into their hearts to send us some of the needful to assist us a little, that I may get out preaching the sooner. Should they do so, it would be thankfully received, as much so, I think, as they have received of our spiritual things with joy and rejoicing. But I lay no tax upon you, you are the Lord's free men, and so are we.

As ever, your brother
in the New Covenant,
JAMES BLAKESLEE.

SUPREMACY OF THE HUMAN ANIMAL.—The fear which all animals in America have of man is very singular seen in the Pampas. I often rode towards the ostriches and lamas crouching under the opposite side of my horse's neck; but I always found that although they would allow any loose horse to aproach them, they, even when young, ran from me, though little of my figure was visible; and when one saw them enjoy themselves in such full liberty, it was, at first not pleasing to observe, that one's appearance was every where a signal to them, that they should fly from their enemy. Yet it is by this fear that man hath dominion over the beasts of the fields; and there is no animal in South America that does not acknowledge this instinctive feeling. As a singular proof of the above, and of the difference between the wild beasts of America and of the Old World, I will venture to relate a circumstance which a man sincerely assured me had hppened to him in South America. He was trying to shoot some wild ducks, and in order to approach them unperceived he put the corner of his poncho (which is a sort of long, narrow blanket) over his head, and, crawling along the ground upon his hands and knees, the poncho not only covered his body, but trailed along the ground behind him. As he was thus creeping by a large bush of reeds, he heard a loud, sudden noise, between a bark and a roar; he felt something heavy strike his feet; and instantly jumping up, he saw, to his astonishment, a large lion actually standing on his poncho; and perhaps the animal was equally astonished to find him in the immediate presence of so athletic a man. The man told me he was unwilling to fire, as his gun was loaded with very small shot, and he therefore remained motionless, the lion standing on his poncho for many seconds! At last the creature turned his head, and walked very slowly about ten yards, stopped and turned again. The man still maintained his ground, upon which the lion tacitly acknowledged his supremacy and walked off.—[Sir Francis Head's Journey across the Pampas.

☞ We are under the necessity of asking indulgence of our friends once more. We have again failed of getting a supply of paper for the Herald, and this No. uses up all we have suitable, with an uncertainty as to when there will be more in market. We hope for it next week, but that is a matter of uncertainty. The most we can say is that we shall have it as soon as money will obtain it.

☞ The most perfect series of school reading books we have ever seen is Goodrich's Comprehensive Readers. The series consists of five reading books, beginning with reading and spelling lessons of one syllable, got up in the inimitable style of Peter Parley, and terminating, we presume, with lessons of the highest order of elocution. Of the last, however, we cannot speak so certainly, for, having the misfortune to have no large children, the enterprising bookseller has only furnished us with the beginning of the series.—But from what we have seen we most unhesitatingly recommend these school books to all our readers who have children to educate, especially to the school in Voree, where we hope to see it displace the variety of reading books now in use. For sale by I. A. Hopkins, 146 U. S. block, Milwaukee.

This man Strang, from what we have been able to learn of his movements and purposes, has more means and ability than any man who has yet aspired to the supremacy of the Church. His previous experience and individual means give us reason to expect that he will also be eminently successful.—St. Louis Republican.

EXTRACT FROM "INSTRUCTIONS TO POSTMASTERS," PAGE 50, SECTION 118.—"In every instance in which papers that come to your office are not taken out by the persons to whom they are sent, you will give immediate notice of it to the publisher, that they are laying dead in the office.

"In all cases where Postmasters render themselves liable for the subscription money for a paper by a neglect to notify the publisher that it remains dead in the Post-office, the Postmaster General reserves the right to admonish the Postmaster for his neglect, and require him to pay for the paper or remove him from office."

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 25, 1847. [No. 36.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

THE CHINESE.

For centuries the Chinese have been almost shut out from the rest of the world. It is only about two hundred years since the English commenced trade with them, and in 1802 the first American flag was hoisted in their waters. They are a people peculiar to themselves—their manners, fashions, civilization, science and religion being their own. In their geography America is not to be found; and Russia, France, England, &c., are on their maps crowded into one corner. China is the world; other portions are mere specks. Notwithstanding, in many respects, they have attained to a high state of civilization.

After a certain age the Chinese women are veiled, and not allowed to associate even with their own brothers. It is the height of immodesty for a woman to appear in the presence of a man. At an early age they are betrothed to individuals, who are to be their husbands, without seeing them, and they are never permitted to look upon each other until they are married, when they retire into a room by themselves, and the husband takes the veil from his wife, and they partake of the first and last meal together. If the husband is pleased with his wife, well; if not, the first opportunity he takes one or more concubines. These are his slaves. The only end of woman's existence, in the mind of a China man, is the gratification of his carnal desires.

According to the Boodhist religion, woman is such, because of misconduct in a former state of being; and as a woman, she can never enter heaven.

It is probable the Chinese were the first inventors of the compass. Before Christ, 1,600 years, an embassy from Cochin China went to China. On their arrival, the country through which they had passed abounding in forests, they feared that they would not be able to find their way back to their own country. To obviate the difficulty, a minister at court furnished them with carriages, bearing what was termed the south pointing wheel—a compass. By means of this they were enabled to return to Cochin China. In enumerating the points of the compass, they say South, North, West and East. They consider the needle as pointing to the south. Thus in almost every thing they are antipodes to us. In the 13th century, Maco Polo, a Venetian, traveled in China, and returned to Italy and published an account of his travels.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Alexander, Genesee Co., N. Y., Oct. 31st, 1847.

PRES. J. J. STRANG:—

DEAR BROTHER,—I rejoice at the onward course of the work of the last days, as I learn by weekly perusing the Gospel Herald; and also that you hew to the line, not stopping for knots and gnarls; for work well done must be done by the rule and pattern. I labored faithful during the winter, organized a branch of five members in Livingston Co. My family is with me, nine and a half miles from Batavia. I expect to labor some in this district this winter. I found no one to labor with me. I have baptized nine since I left Voree in May, 1846. More promised but did not obey. I regretted much not seeing you at the Batavia Conference. I knew nothing of it until a week after. I want to see you and learn more perfectly the ways of the Lord. Circumstances render it impossible for me to gather this fall, yet I have hopes of being with you next fall. As I do not expect you to call this way soon, and brother J. E. Page proposes to labor first where he can do the most good, I would be pleased to see him this way. We need him here. I believe brother Page can have good congregations to preach to in these villages. Please to tell me how I had best to proceed with the labor of this district. If you and brother Page can, please write me to Alexander, Genesee Co., N. Y.

Your faithful friend,

REUBEN T. NICHOLS.

☞ It is not probable that elder Page can go that way this winter. He is just getting up a little cabin only twelve feet square in the ground, for his family to occupy while he goes out to places nearer at hand, from whence he can attend to their wants this winter. Faithful and honest men have had a hard time for three years past, but better times are at hand, when they that are tried and faithful shall have their reward. In your labor in the Genesee district work to the line and plummet, and if you find any obstinate in heresy or contending that the order and government of the church has changed, and the authority of the First Presidency has not been continued in regular succession, cut them off, for such have departed from the faith committed to the saints. [ED.

La Foefie tire fa force & fa juſteſſe de la Pholofophie, Dans Telem aque, on voit par tout une imagination riche, vive, agréable, & neanmoins un eſprit juſte & profond. Ces deux qualitez ſe rencontrent rarement dans la meme perſone. Il faut que l'ame ſoit dans un mouvement preſque continuel pour inventer, pour paſſionner, pour imiter & en meme-temps dans une tranquillité parfaite pour juger en produiſant, & choiſir entre mille penſées qui ſe preſentent, celle qui convient. Il faut que l'imagnvtion ſouffre une eſpece de transport & d'entouſiasme, pendant que l'eſprit paiſible dans ſon empire, la relient, & la tourne ou il veut. Sans celte paſſion qui anime tout, les diſcours paroiſſent froids languiſſans, abſtrails, hiſtoriques. Sans ce jugement qui regle tout, ils ſont faux & trompeurs.

MORMON DISCUSSION.

(Continued from No. 33.)

MR. McLELLIN.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

Mr. Strang professes to be a great geographer and historian. He told me when he visited me in Ohio that he understood a great deal of both, and he gets up here and tells us that, because the proud eagle of Spain cannot take the wings of the morning and fly away to the distant nations, and soaring up to the sun, fill its treasures with the gold of Golconda and Ophir, but has crouched before the British lion and can no longer whet her beak in blood and her talons in

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, NOV. 25, 1847. [No. 38.

"Truth will prevail."

GOSPEL HERALD.

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

THE CHINESE.

For centuries the Chinese have been almost shut out from the rest of the world. It is only about two hundred years since the English commenced trade with them, and in 1802 the first American flag was hoisted in their waters. They are a people peculiar to themselves—their manners, fashions, civilization, science and religion being their own. In their geography America is not to be found; and Russia, France, England, &c., are on their maps crowded into one corner. China is the world; other portions are mere specks. Notwithstanding, in many respects, they have attained to a high state of civilization.

After a certain age the Chinese women are veiled, and not allowed to associate even with their own brothers. It is the height of immodesty for a woman to appear in the presence of a man. At an early age they are betrothed to individuals, who are to be their husbands, without seeing them, and they are never permitted to look upon each other until they are married, when they retire into a room by themselves, and the husband takes the veil from his wife, and they partake of the first and last meal together. If the husband is pleased with his wife, well; if not, the first opportunity he takes one or more concubines. These are his slaves. The only end of woman's existence, in the mind of a China man, is the gratification of his carnal desires.

According to the Boodhist religion, woman is such, because of misconduct in a former state of being; and as a woman, she can never enter heaven.

It is probable the Chinese were the first inventors of the compass. Before Christ, 1,600 years, an embassy from Cochin China went to China. On their arrival, the country through which they had passed abounding in forests, they feared that they would not be able to find their way back to their own country. To obviate the difficulty, a minister at court furnished them with carriages, bearing what was termed the south pointing wheel—a compass. By means of this they were enabled to return to Cochin China. In enumerating the points of the compass, they say South, North, West and East. They consider the needle as pointing to the south. Thus in almost every thing they are antipodes to us. In the 13th century, Marco Polo, a Venetian, traveled in China, and returned to Italy and published an account of his travels.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Alexander, Genesee Co., N. Y., Oct. 31st, 1847.

ELDER J. J. STRANG:—

DEAR BROTHER,—I rejoice at the onward course of the work of the last days, as I learn by weekly perusing the Gospel Herald; and also that you hew to the line, not stopping for knots and gnarls; for work well done must be done by the rule and pattern. I labored faithful during the winter, organized a branch of five members in Livingston Co. My family is with me, nine and a half miles from Batavia. I expect to labor some in this district this winter. I found no one to labor with me. I have baptized nine since I left Voree in May, 1846. More promised but did not obey. I regretted much not seeing you at the Batavia Conference. I knew nothing of it until a week after. I want to see you and learn more perfectly the ways of the Lord. Circumstances render it impossible for me to gather this fall, yet I have hopes of being with you next fall. As I do not expect you to call this way soon, and brother J. E. Page proposes to labor first where he can do the most good, I would be pleased to see him this way. We need him here. I believe brother Page can have good congregations to preach to in these villages. Please to tell me how I had best to proceed with the labor of this district. If you and brother Page can, please write me to Alexander, Genesee Co., N. Y.

Your faithful friend,

REUBEN T. NICHOLS.

☞ It is not probable that elder Page can go that way this winter. He is just getting up a little cabin only [illegible] feet square in the ground, for his family to occupy while he goes out to places nearer at hand, from whence he can attend to their wants this winter. Faithful and honest men have had a hard time for three years past, but better times are at hand, when they that are tried and faithful shall have their reward. In your labor in the Genesee district work to the first [illegible] heresy or [illegible]

La Fogle tire fa force & fa juſteſſe de la Philoſophie, Dans Tolom aque, on voit par tout une imagination riche, vive, agreable, & meme moins un eſprit juſte & profond. Ces deux qualites ſe rencontrent rarement dans la meme perſone. Il faut que l'ame ſoit dans un mouvement preſque continuel pour inventer, pour paſſionner, pour imiter & en meme-temps dans une tranquillite parfaite pour juger en groſſeur, & choiſir entre mille perfies qui ſe preſentent, celle qui convient. Il faut que l'imagnotion ſouffre une eſpece de tranſport & d'entouſiaſme, pendant que l'eſprit paiſible dans ſon empire, la retient, & la tourne ou il veut. Sans cette paſſion qui anime tout, les diſcours paroiſſent froids languiſſans, abſtraits, hiſtoriques. Sans ce jugement qui regle tout, ſes ſont faux & trompeurs.

MORMON DISCUSSION.

(Continued from No. 32.)

Mr. McLELLIN.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

Mr. Strang professes to be a great geographer and historian. He told me when he visited me in Ohio that he understood a great deal of both, and he gets up here and tells us that, because the proud eagle of Spain cannot take the wings of the morning and fly away to the distant nations, and soaring up to the sun, fill its treasures with the gold of Golconda and Ophir, but has crouched before the British lion and can no longer whet her beak in blood and, her talons in the prey of the poor Hottentot, that her colonies which have declared themselves independent of her tyranny cannot take her name.—But that is not to the point. We have nothing to do with Spain.—The question is not about the name of Spain, but the name of the church. Spain itself has not fallen away or changed its name; but it remains the same government and the same name, because it is the same government. If Spain should change and become a different government, it would then change its name.

Mr. Strang says that Great Britain has changed her name. I don't dispute that Great Britain changed her name, but when she did so she changed her government. Ireland, an independent government, passed an act of her imperial Parliament to unite with Great Britain in a new government, to be formed by the union, and when that was done they were no longer the same government, and so took a new name. Did they have the same government? No. Was it the same nation? No. We have nothing to do with Great Britain. It is all flummery.

Mr. Strang is very anxious to tell us how much he knows. So he has brought France into this discussion too, and told us how she had changed her name; and he makes out that it has been changed just as often as the government has been changed, and no oftener. When France was a kingdom, it was named kingdom; when a republic, it was named republic; and when an empire, it was named empire. Every thing must have an appropriate name, and when the nation changed the name had to be changed. It is just like all his arguments. Didn't I tell you when I was here before that he hadn't got any claims? That all was flummery? He is ashamed of himself. All his followers are ashamed of him.—And I am ashamed of him. There ain't any argument in him.—It's all flummery! FLUMMERY!! He a prophet! and not know that when you change the name of a thing it ceases to be the same thing. What did they change the name for, if it was still the same thing? Why not stick to the old name? Isn't it as good as it ever was?—If the church had not changed they would not have thought of changing the name. They would not serve Christ, and so they took the name of Christ out of the name of the church, because then they could join the church without putting on the name of Christ.

Mr. Strang shows his ignorance of law by pretending that no specific amount of authority is necessary to change a name. Why do men apply to the Legislature to have their names changed if no specific amount of authority is necessary to change a name? Why call a Conference of the church to change the name of the church if no specific amount of authority was necessary? I have not got my library here, and do not expect to prove every thing by the documents, but Strang has overshot himself for once. He has brought in the document to prove that the name of the church was changed by council action. Here is the document which shows that a name given by revelation was changed by council action only. Mr. Strang has admitted that whatever amount of authority was necessary to make a law the same is necessary to abrogate it, and here is a name given by revelation and changed by council action, which is less authority, and consequently not sufficient.

Mr. Strang says if the authority of the Conference was not sufficient, then the change of name was void. That is all I want to prove. The change is void. They had no authority to change it, and it won't stand. Joseph thought he could do any thing, and Mr. Strang must stand up to him because he comes into his place; but he can't come it. It is all flummery. The authority that changed the name of the church was not sufficient, and the name of the church is not church of Latter Day Saints or church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, but church of Christ. That is the name.—That is the name that is registered in heaven. That is the name that was given by revelation. God don't acknowledge any other church, and Mr. Strang's church is not called by that name, and so it is not the church that God acknowledges.

I've got the documents, and I intend to do up this business so that Mr. Strang will wish he had let me alone. He twits me of nick-naming and calling him little Jimme J. I ain't in the habit of nick-naming any body. I don't intend to be unmannerly or to blackguard any body, but some how I can't help giving it to him a little, it comes so natural. But I will try to restrain myself, and if I should be too severe I hope the President will call me to order.—I don't believe in blackguarding or calling nick-names. But I intend to use him all up, so that there won't be a grease spot left.—Somebody has been telling that when I was here before I said I should preach the funeral sermon of Strangism. What if I did say so. I did not say that it would be dead, any more than that it was not right. I did not expect that they would all desert it or give it up. I consider any thing dead when I show it is wrong, if it does keep moving. I ain't disappointed that Mr. Strang keeps up some stir. But I showed that he was in the wrong and that his church is not the church of Christ, and he acknowledges that if the authority that changed the name was insufficient the change was void.—So the first proposition goes by the board. It is the same as giving up the point. All I wanted was to prove that the change of the name by council action was not by sufficient authority, for then it is void. Here I have got the "Book of Commandments" of the church of Christ, as published in Missouri. This is the law of the Lord, and there is no saintism about it. This is the true law, and I am a going to get it printed, and the church will be governed by it. This is the first publication of the law when the church put on the name of Christ, and when they got sick of that they called themselves Latter Day Saints. I have got the documents, and can prove what I say.

The name Wisconsin was given to this territory by the sovereign Congress of the United States of America, and nobody else can change it, because it takes the same authority to abrogate a law that it does to make it. Congress is the highest authority, and no less authority can undo what they have done. And if the people in Wisconsin, or any of them, should alter the name it would not be the same thing any longer, because the name was changed. Mr. Strang has said a great deal about changing the name of France, but it is all flummery. When France was a kingdom she sent her embassadors to the United States, but when she became a republic she took a new name, and then she sent a new embassador to the United States, because she was a different nation. This shows that she was not the same, for if she was the same she would keep the same embassadors to other nations. The change of embassadors shows that the nation is changed, and all his flummery about France turns out against him, like all the rest of his positions.—There never was such a thing as a nation changing its name without the nation was changed, and when the government changes it sends out new embassadors, because it is another government, and another nation.

Why is every thing raked up against me? Here is a string of papers brought in against me, but it has nothing to do with the business. All the revelations I have ever had were true. I don't pretend that I always applied them right, but they are all true. He has not proved that I gave that revelation at Hampton. Who testifies to it? No body. He has just read it, and that is all that any body knows about it. I never denied that I had been a member of the church of Latter Day Saints. I joined before the name was changed and continued some years after, but I began to pull back about the time the name of Latter Day Saints was put on, and kept the prey of the poor Hottentot, that her colonies which have declared themselves independent of her tyranny cannot take her name.—But that is not to the point. We have nothing to do with Spain.—The question is not about the name of Spain, but the name of the church. Spain itself has not fallen away or changed its name, but it remains the same government and the same name, because it is the same government. If Spain should change and become a different government, it would then change its name.

Mr. Strang says that Great Britain has changed her name. I don't dispute that Great Britain changed her name, but when she did so she changed her government. Ireland, an independent government, passed an act of her imperial Parliament to unite with Great Britain in a new government, to be formed by the union, and when that was done they were no longer the same government, and so took a new name. Did they have the same government? No. Was it the same nation? No. We have nothing to do with Great Britain. It is all flummery.

Mr. Strang is very anxious to tell us how much he knows. So he has brought France into this discussion too, and told us how she had changed her name; and he makes out that it has been changed just as often as the government has been changed, and no oftener. When France was a kingdom, it was named kingdom; when a republic, it was named republic; and when an empire, it was named empire. Every thing must have an appropriate name, and when the nation changed the name had to be changed. It is just like all his arguments. Didn't I tell you when I was here before that he hadn't got any claims? That all was flummery? He is ashamed of himself. All his followers are ashamed of him.—And I am ashamed of him. There ain't any argument in him.—It's all flummery! FLUMMERY!! He a prophet! and not know that when you change the name of a thing it ceases to be the same thing. What did they change the name for, if it was still the same thing? Why not stick to the old name? Isn't it as good as it ever was?—If the church had not changed they would not have thought of changing the name. They would not serve Christ, and so they took the name of Christ out of the name of the church, because then they could join the church without putting on the name of Christ.

Mr. Strang shows his ignorance of law by pretending that no specific amount of authority is necessary to change a name. Why do men apply to the Legislature to have their names changed if no specific amount of authority is necessary to change a name? Why call a Conference of the church to change the name of the church if no specific amount of authority was necessary? I have not got my library here, and do not expect to prove every thing by the documents, but Strang has overshot himself for once. He has brought in the document to prove that the name of the church was changed by council action. Here is the document which shows that a name given by revelation was changed by council action only. Mr. Strang has admitted that whatever amount of authority was necessary to make a law the same is necessary to abrogate it, and here is a name given by revelation and changed by council action, which is less authority, and consequently not sufficient.

Mr. Strang says if the authority of the Conference was not sufficient, then the change of name was void. That is all I want to prove. The change is void. They had no authority to change it, and it won't stand. Joseph thought he could do any thing, and Mr. Strang must stand up to him because he comes into his place; but he can't come it. It is all flummery. The authority that changed the name of the church was not sufficient, and the name of the church is not church of Latter Day Saints or church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, but church of Christ. That is the name.—That is the name that is registered in heaven. That is the name that was given by revelation. God don't acknowledge any other church, and Mr. Strang's church is not called by that name, and so it is not the church that God acknowledges.

I've got the documents, and I intend to do up this business so that Mr. Strang will wish he had let me alone. He twits me of nick naming and calling him little Jimme J. I ain't in the habit of nick-naming any body. I don't intend to be unmannerly or to blackguard any body, but some how I can't help giving it to him a little, it comes so natural. But I will try to restrain myself, and if I should be too severe I hope the President will call me to order.—I don't believe in blackguarding or calling nick-names. But I intend to use him all up, so that there won't be a grease spot left.—Somebody has been telling that when I was here before I said I should preach the funeral sermon of Strangism. What if I did say so. I did not say that it would be dead, any more than that it was not right. I did not expect that they would all desert it or give it up. I consider any thing dead when I show it is wrong, if it does keep moving. I ain't disappointed that Mr. Strang keeps up some stir. But I showed that he was in the wrong and that his church is not the church of Christ, and he acknowledges that if the authority that changed the name was insufficient the change was void.—So the first proposition goes by the board. It is the same as giving up the point. All I wanted was to prove that the change of the name by council action was not by sufficient authority, for then it is void. Here I have got the "Book of Commandments" of the church of Christ, as published in Missouri. This is the law of the Lord, and there is no saintism about it. This is the true law, and I am a going to get it printed, and the church will be governed by it. This is the first publication of the law when the church put on the name of Christ, and when they got sick of that they called themselves Latter Day Saints. I have got the documents, and can prove what I say.

The name Wisconsin was given to this territory by the sovereign Congress of the United States of America, and nobody else can change it, because it takes the same authority to abrogate a law that it does to make it. Congress is the highest authority, and no less authority can undo what they have done. And if the people in Wisconsin, or any of them, should alter the name it would not be the same thing any longer, because the name was changed. Mr. Strang has said a great deal about changing the name of France, but it is all flummery. When France was a kingdom she sent her embassadors to the United States, but when she became a republic she took a new name, and then she sent a new embassador to the United States, because she was a different nation. This shows that she was not the same, for if she was the same she would keep the same embassadors to other nations. The change of embassadors shows that the nation is changed, and all his flummery about France turns out against him, like all the rest of his positions.—There never was such a thing as a nation changing its name without the nation was changed, and when the government changes it sends out new embassadors, because it is another government, and another nation.

Why is every thing raked up against me? Here is a string of papers brought in against me, but it has nothing to do with the business. All the revelations I have ever had were true. I don't pretend that I always applied them right, but they are all true. He has not proved that I gave that revelation at Hampton. Who testifies to it? No body. He has just read it, and that is all that any body knows about it. I never denied that I had been a member of the church of Latter Day Saints. I joined before the name was changed and continued some years after, but I began to pull back about the time the name of Latter Day Saints was put on, and kept pulling back till I got clear of it. When I went in with Rigdon I contended against that name, and got it abandoned. I was always sick of saintism, and when I talked of going in with Strang that was in my way. I never liked it. He has published that I was one of his apostles, but I never was. I never had confidence in him. I had been in that church before, and a burnt cat dreads the fire. I never had any confidence in him. I never wrote that I had. I have heard it said he pretended I wrote so, and he published that I was one of his apostles. But it is false. I never joined him. I was not ordained one of his apostles. He never had his hands on my head. He need not try to rake my character. I won't be run over rough shod as some men have in this place, you can't come any such games over me. He has published in his paper that my character was good. He has written to David Whitmer that he should credit him too, and I have got the documents here in my valise, and can show them if any body doubts it. What he has published against me is false, and he knows it. I never wrote any such letters as he has pretended to publish. All this stuff about my character and my letters and Dr. Bennett is flummery! FLUMMERY!! FLUMMERY!!! I always knew that John C. Bennett and William Smith were corrupt men. I warned him against them.—I don't believe in taking a man into the church till you have tried him, and know how he will conduct. I told Mr. Strang what I thought. If he had taken my counsel we should have all been going on together. There would have been none of these divisions, which have used him up till there is hardly a grease spot left.—My character is well known where I have lived. I never would associate with bad men. I left the old church under Joseph because they were so wicked I could not stand them. I never had any confidence in Gen. Bennett. I told Strang so, and he can't prove the contrary. I don't care for all his flummery about w-h-a-t I W-R-O-T-E. IT IS FALSE! I NEVER W-R-O-T-E ANY SUCH THING. FLUMMERY!! FLUMMERY!!! BZO—oo—oo—oo—oh!!

What is the use of all this talk about Wm. Law? What has that to do with this debate? He says William Law was only a servant of God, as a member of the Latter Day Saints. And that because I called Wm. Law a servant of God, I acknowledged that to be the true church. Then, according to Mr. Strang, the Baptist church is the true church. The Lord called James Covill his "servant" in a revelation given in January, 1831.

Mr. McLellin here read the following from the Doctrine and Covenants:—

Sec. lix. par. 3, "And now behold I say unto you, my servant James, I have looked upon thy works and I know thee: and verily I say unto thee, thine heart is now right before me at this time, and behold I have bestowed great blessings upon thy head."

Mr. McLellin proceeded. I knew all about that man. He was a member of the Baptist church, and yet the Lord called him his servant. If the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true church because the Lord called Wm. Law as his servant when he was a member of it, then the Lord has two churches at least, for he called James Covill his servant when he was a member of the Baptist church. Then you see this comes out just like every thing he turns his hands to. Strang don't know so much as I thought he did, and I never thought he knew much. I never had any thing to do with Wm. Law. I always suspected he was concerned in the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and I would not have any thing to do with him till he proved himself innocent. I knew God would not let Joseph live, but I did not want any thing to do with a murderer. But Mr. Strang has got men here on his side that were with Wm. Law.

The President remarked that Mr. McLellin's time was up.

J. E. Page moved an adjournment till evening.

Mr. Strang said the control of the debate rested with the Pres. and parties. If his opponent had no objection he proposed that the Pres. adjourn the meeting till evening.

Mr. McLellin concurred.

Whereupon L. Royce, Esq., adjourned the meeting till evening.

Evening Session.

MR. STRANG.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

I am much pleased with the progress my opponent is making in manners. First he has quit using nick-names, and now he has resolved to try to quit blackguarding. It is to be hoped that your honor will respond to his pathetic appeal for assistance, and do what is in your power to make a decent man of him. However hopeless the final result may be, we need not despair of some temporary improvement in him while he remains among us.

I was not a little amused, Mr. President, at the odd turn my opponent took in his remarks, when he broke off the regular thread of his discourse to commence ranting about Gen. Bennett, and to deny that he had written certain letters to and concerning him. And if the act was amusing to me, I doubt not it was equally surprising to many here. You, Mr. President, will bear me witness, and so will every man in this congregation, that I had not said one word about Gen. Bennett or his letters to him, or his associating with him. Why these pointed and explicit denials of things that have not been charged? Why take so much pains to plead not guilty when no body accuses him? Why deny that he had written so and so to Gen. Bennett when no body said he had? The old saying is that "the galled jade winces and the hit bird flutters;" but it is a new thing for the jade to wince before it is galled, or the bird to flutter before it is hit. It can only be accounted for upon the principle contained in Webster's old American Spelling Book,—"THE WICKED FLEE WHEN NO MAN PURSUETH." He doubtless learned it when he was a boy, and has not forgotten to practice it yet. As this turn of his from the subject in hand to Gen. Bennett was so extremely sudden and unexpected, it may not be without amusement to tell how it happened. I had understood that my opponent denied the genuineness of his letters to myself and Gen. Bennett, some few of which have been published at various times. Having the original letters in his hand writing in my possession, I had calculated on this occasion to bring them before him and see if he would deny them with the originals before his eyes, and a full house to witness the falsehood. And when he denied the correctness of the publications of his letters you doubtless observed, as did several other persons sitting near the table, that I took a large roll of letters out of my pocket and spread them on the table. That was the wasp that stung. All this violence was produced by so simple a cause as that. The witness of his unmitigated falsehood has stirred up the violence of his passion. And he is endeavoring to drown the evidence of his corruption and falsehood by the violence of his denunciations of another man. Vain effort! The felon with stolen goods in his hands may shout stop thief, and my opponent, clothed with lies and blasphemy as with a garment, cries out against those whose sins are to his as a mole hill to a mountain; but it shall save neither the one nor the other from the meed of their crimes. Cry out against Gen. Bennett as he may, he cannot get over the fact that he was cheek by jowl with him when they came into the church. They were engaged in an intimate correspondence, the result of many years acquaintance and mutual friendship, real or pretended. And if my opponent succeeds in proving that he was not really the friend and confidential of Gen. Bennett, he simply proves lling back till I got clear of it. When I went in with Rigdon I ntended against that name, and got it abandoned. I was always ck of saintism, and when I talked of going in with Strang that as in my way. I never liked it. He has published that I was e of his apostles, but I never was. I never had confidence in im. I had been in that church before, and a burnt cat dreads the re. I never had any confidence in him. I never wrote that I had. have heard it said he pretended I wrote so, and he published that was one of his apostles. But it is false. I never joined him. I as not ordained one of his apostles. He never had his hands on y head. He need not try to take my character. I won't be run ver rough shod as some men have in this place, you can't come y such games over me. He has published in his paper that my haracter was good. He has written to David Whitmer that he hould credit him too, and I have got the documents here in my va- se, and can show them if any body doubts it. What he has pub- shed against me is false, and he knows it. I never wrote any such tters as he has pretended to publish. All this stuff about my char- ter and my letters and Dr. Bennett is flummery! FLUMMERY!! LUMMERY!!! I always knew that John C. Bennett and illiam Smith were corrupt men. I warned him against them.— don't believe in taking a man into the church till you have tried im, and know how he will conduct. I told Mr. Strang what I hought. If he had taken my counsel we should have all been go- g on together. There would have been none of these divisions, hich have used him up till there is hardly a grease spot left.— ly character is well known where I have lived. I never would ssociate with bad men. I left the old church under Joseph because ney were so wicked I could not stand them. I never had any con idence in Gen. Bennett. I told Strang so, and he can't prove the ontrary. I don't care for all his flummery about w-h-a-t I V-R-O-T-E. IT IS FALSE! I NEVER W-R-O-T-E ANY SUCH HING. FLUMMERY!! FLUMMERY!!! BZO–oo–oo–oo–oh!!

(Continued on the 158th page.)

What is the use of all this talk about Wm. Law? What has hat to do with this debate? He says William Law was only a servant of God, as a member of the Latter Day Saints. And that because I called Wm. Law a servant of God, I acknowledged that o be the true church. Then, according to Mr. Strang, the Baptist church is the true church. The Lord called James Covill his "servant" in a revelation given in January, 1831.

Mr. McLellin here read the following from the Doctrine and Covenants:—

Sec. lix. par. 3, "And now behold I say unto you, my servant James, I have looked upon thy works and I know thee: and verily I say unto thee, thine heart is now right before me at this time, and behold I have bestowed great blessings upon thy head."

Mr. McLellin proceeded. I knew all about that man. He was a member of the Baptist church, and yet the Lord called him his servant. If the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true church because the Lord called Wm. Law as his servant when he was a member of it, then the Lord has two churches at least, for he called James Covill his servant when he was a member of the Baptist church. Then you see this comes out just like every thing he turns his hands to. Strang don't know so much as I thought he did, and I never thought he knew much. I never had any thing to do with Wm. Law. I always suspected he was concerned in the murder of Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and I would not have any thing to do with him till he proved himself innocent. I knew God would not let Joseph live, but I did not want any thing to do with a murderer. But Mr. Strang has got men here on his side that were with Wm. Law.

The President remarked that Mr. McLellin's time was up.

J. E. Page moved an adjournment till evening.

Mr. Strang said the control of the debate rested with the Pres. and parties. If his opponent had no objection he proposed that the Pres. adjourn the meeting till evening.

Mr. McLellin concurred.

Whereupon L. Royce, Esq., adjourned the meeting till evening.

Evening Session.

MR. STRANG.

MR. PRESIDENT,—

I am much pleased with the progress my opponent is making in manners. First he has quit using nick-names, and now he has resolved to try to quit blackguarding. It is to be hoped that your honor will respond to his pathetic appeal for assistance, and do what is in your power to make a decent man of him. However hopeless the final result may be, we need not despair of some temporary improvement in him while he remains among us.

I was not a little amused, Mr. President, at the odd turn my opponent took in his remarks, when he broke off the regular thread of his discourse to commence ranting about Gen. Bennett, and to deny that he had written certain letters to and concerning him. And if the act was amusing to me, I doubt not it was equally surprising to many here. You, Mr. President, will bear me witness, and so will every man in this congregation, that I had not said one word about Gen. Bennett or his letters to him, or his associating with him. Why these pointed and explicit denials of things that have not been charged? Why take so much pains to plead not guilty when no body accuses him? Why deny that he had written so and so to Gen. Bennett when no body said he had? The old saying is that "the galled jade winces and the hit bird flutters;" but it is a new thing for the jade to wince before it is galled, or the bird to flutter before it is hit. It can only be accounted for upon the principle contained in Webster's old American Spelling Book,—"THE WICKED FLEE WHEN NO MAN PURSUETH." He doubtless learned it when he was a boy, and has not forgotten to practice it yet. As this turn of his from the subject in hand to Gen. Bennett was so extremely sudden and unexpected, it may not be without amusement to tell how it happened. I had understood that my opponent denied the genuineness of his letters to myself and Gen. Bennett, some few of which have been published at various times. Having the original letters in his hand writing in my possession, I had calculated on this occasion to bring them before him and see if he would deny them with the originals before his eyes, and a full house to witness the falsehood. And when he denied the correctness of the publications of his letters you doubtless observed, as did several other persons sitting near the table, that I took a large roll of letters out of my pocket and spread them on the table. That was the wasp that stung. All this violence was produced by so simple a cause as that. The witness of his unmitigated falsehood has stirred up the violence of his passion. And he is endeavoring to drown the evidence of his corruption and falsehood by the violence of his denunciations of another man. Vain effort! The felon with stolen goods in his hands may shout stop thief, and my opponent, clothed with lies and blasphemy as with a garment, cries out against those whose sins are to his as a mole hill to a mountain; but it shall save neither the one nor the other from the meed of their crimes. Cry out against Gen. Bennett as he may, he cannot get over the fact that he was cheek by jowl with him when they came into the church. They were engaged in an intimate correspondence, the result of many years acquaintance and mutual friendship, real or pretended. And if my opponent succeeds in proving that he was not really the friend and confidential of Gen. Bennett, he simply proves

(Continued on the 158th page.)

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from last week.)

Again: I ask you what was the testimony of all men, friends and foes, during the life of Christ on this subject? What said the Apostles, and what said he in the age immediately following?

Matt. ix. 27, "And as Jesus was departing from thence, there followed him two blind men, crying out, and saying: Son of David, have mercy on us."

xv. 22, "And behold, a woman of Chanaan who came out of those parts, crying out, said to him: Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David: my daughter is grievously troubled by a devil."

xxi. 30, "And, behold, two blind men, sitting by the way side, heard that Jesus passed by: and they cried out, saying: O Lord, son of David, have mercy on us."

xii. 23, "And all the multitudes were amazed, and said: Is not this the son of David?"

xxi. 9, "And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying: Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest."

John vii. 42, "And they said: Is not this Jesus the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How then saith he, I came down from heaven?"

Acts xiii. 22, "And when he had removed him, he raised them up David to be king.

23. Of this man's seed, God, according to his promise, hath raised up to Israel a Savior, Jesus."

Rom. i. 1, "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God;

3. Concerning his Son, who was made to him of the SEED of DAVID, according to the FLESH."

2 Tim. ii. 8, "Be mindful that the Lord Jesus Christ is risen from the dead, of the seed of David, according to my gospel."

Rev. v. 5, "And one of the ancients said to me: Weep not: behold, the lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, hath conquered to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof."

xxii. 16, "I Jesus have sent my angel, to testify to you these things in the churches. I am the root and stock of David, the bright and morning star."

Matt. i. 1, "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham."

Heb. vii. 14, "For it is evident that our Lord sprung out of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood."

Can you read these testimonies and still say Christ was not begotten by human generation? Do you still insist that he had no human father? Then, indeed, if all the angels in heaven should testify you would not believe. I tell you frankly and most truly there is not another such hot bed of infidelity on earth as the christian churches. I speak not of the Catholic church alone, but of both Catholic and Protestant; for if the Catholic church has preserved nothing of christianity but the husk, the Protestant churches have neither grain or husk.

Upon the fore front of almost every one of your creeds, catechisms, and confessions of faith, whether established by Catholic councils or Protestant convocations, stands out the doctrine "That there is but one true God, the creator of heaven and earth, WHO IS WITHOUT BODY, PARTS, or PASSIONS;" which is precisely equivalent to saying, "WHO DOES NOT EXIST AT ALL;" and is the creed of mere Atheism. Thus has this wind of doctrine carried you away from the Apostles' creed, which declared their faith in "God the Father Almighty," without immediately adding that he did not exist; because the Apostles who made it believed, with other men who receive revelations, that "God made man in his own image," (Gen. i. 26, 27. v. 1,) precisely in the same sense in which Adam begot his son Seth "in his own IMAGE," (Gen. v. 3,) to wit: having a body in the same general form, and the same number and kind of limbs, joined on in a similar manner. And, consequently, believed that God had both body and parts, which Moses also well knew when he BEHELD the FACE (not in its illumination or glory,) and the BACK PARTS of God. (Ex. xxxiii. 11 to 23.)

And Abraham not only talked with the Lord, but washed his feet and fed him, and did the like also for two angels; when, according to your creed, neither Lord or angels have any feet, or stomachs, or mouths; though they looked so like men that Abraham knew not that they were not men till he saluted them. (Gen. xviii.)—And Jacob named a certain place Phanuel, (the face of God,) saying, "I have seen God face to face." And all the ancients, having A CERTAIN STANDARD OR RULE of FAITH SUFFICIENT to DECIDE INFALLIBLY ALL QUESTIONS of DIVINE TRUTH which men need know, have concurred in speaking of God, not by way of figure, but reality, as a being in form similar to man, having the same limbs, members, parts and passions; a being walking, talking, eating, riding in a chariot, loving, hating, being angry, jealous, &c., &c. (Ex. xxxi. 18. xv. 8. Psa. vi. 11, 4. vii. 12. Ex. xx. 5. xxxiv. 14. Deut. iv. 24. v. 9. vi. 15. Josh. xxiv. 19. Eze. xxxix. 25. Nah. i. 2. Hab. iii. Zech. i. 14. viii. 2. 2 Cor. xi. 2. 1 John iii. 16. Eph. iii. 19. Jer. xxxi. 3. Deut. vii. 8. Hosea xiv. 5. John xiii. 1. 1 John iv. 16. John xvii. 23. Prov. xv. 3. Isa. lv. 11. xxx. 27. 2d (Doway 4th) Kings xix. 16. Eze. xliii. 7. i. 26 to ii. 1. Jer. xxi. 5.)

And so clearly have they set down these several facts, that he who should undertake to prove that the temple at Jerusalem was not a reality, but only a figure to make plain some theory or doctrine, would have a less task than he who should attempt to interpret the sayings of prophets and apostles according to these creeds. I have smiled at the vain efforts of Protestants to avoid the force of those texts quoted to show the real presence in the eucharist; but that smile would grow to a broad laugh upon any one struggling against the scriptures showing the reality of God's existence.

Not satisfied with making Atheism the first article in the Christian creed, Polytheism follows close after, in the declaration that Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit are equally the very and eternal God. To put it beyond doubt that these are THREE DISTINCT GODS they declare their faith in "God the Father Almighty, WITHOUT body, parts, or passions," and in Jesus Christ, very and eternal God, and very man, who was crucified, died, and raised again, and ascended to heaven, body and soul, flesh bones and all which he possessed as a man on earth, and that with such body and soul, flesh and bones, he has set down at the right hand of God the Father, as a God in heaven; consequently being a God, WITH body and parts, really in the image of a man, at the right hand of another God of an altogether different make; and God the Holy Spirit which emanated from these two, and necessarily must partake somewhat of the nature and likeness of both; and consequently a monster, partially without body, having some parts.

To make these creeds utterly, hopelessly, and irrevocably false and impossible, impossible with Omnipotence, as well as with man, it is next asserted that these three are one God, being and substance; that they are all like one another and alike eternal, Omnipotent, Omniscient, and Omnipresent; though the second emanated from the first, and the third emanated from both the others. I do not, I will not, speak of this as a mystery. It is a lie. A lie absolutely

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from last week.)

Again: I ask you what was the testimony of all men, friends and foes, during the life of Christ on this subject? What said the Apostles, and what said he in the age immediately following?

Matt. ix. 27, "And as Jesus was departing from thence, there followed him two blind men, crying out, and saying: Son of David, have mercy on us."

xv. 22, "And behold, a woman of Chanaan who came out of those parts, crying out, said to him: Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David: my daughter is grievously troubled by a devil."

xxi. 30, "And, behold, two blind men, sitting by the way side, heard that Jesus passed by: and they cried out, saying: O Lord, son of David, have mercy on us."

xii. 23, "And all the multitudes were amazed, and said: Is not this the son of David?"

xxi. 9, "And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying: Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Hosanna in the highest."

John vii. 42, "And they said: Is not this Jesus the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? How then saith he, I came down from heaven?"

Acts xiii. 22, "And when he had removed him, he raised them up David to be king.

23. Of this man's seed, God, according to his promise, hath raised up to Israel a Savior, Jesus."

Rom. i. 1, "Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God;

3. Concerning his Son, who was made to him of the SEED of DAVID, according to the FLESH."

2 Tim. ii. 8, "Be mindful that the Lord Jesus Christ is risen from the dead, of the seed of David, according to my gospel."

Rev. v. 5, "And one of the ancients said to me: Weep not: behold, the lion of the tribe of Juda, the root of David, hath conquered to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof."

xxii. 16, "I Jesus have sent my angel, to testify to you these things in the churches. I am the root and stock of David, the bright and morning star."

Matt. i. 1, "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham."

Heb. vii. 14, "For it is evident that our Lord sprung out of Judah; of which tribe Moses spake nothing concerning priesthood."

Can you read these testimonies and still say Christ was not begotten by human generation? Do you still insist that he had no human father? Then, indeed, if all the angels in heaven should testify you would not believe. I tell you frankly and most truly there is not another such hot bed of infidelity on earth as the christian churches. I speak not of the Catholic church alone, but of both Catholic and Protestant; for if the Catholic church has preserved nothing of christianity but the husk, the Protestant churches have neither grain or husk.

Upon the fore front of almost every one of your creeds, catechisms, and confessions of faith, whether established by Catholic councils or Protestant convocations, stands out the doctrine "That there is but one true God, the creator of heaven and earth, WHO IS WITHOUT BODY, PARTS, or PASSIONS;" which is precisely equivalent to saying, "WHO DOES NOT EXIST AT ALL;" and is the creed of mere Atheism. Thus has this wind of doctrine carried you away from the Apostles' creed, which declared their faith in "God the Father Almighty," without immediately adding that he did not exist; because the Apostles who made it believed, with other men who receive revelation, that "God made man in his own image," (Gen. i. 26, 27. v. 1.) precisely in the same sense in which Adam begot his son Seth "in his own IMAGE," (Gen. v. 3,) to wit: having a body in the same general form, and the same number and kind of limbs, joined on in a similar manner. And, consequently, believed that God had both body and parts, which Moses also well knew when he BEHELD the FACE (not in its illumination or glory,) and the BACK PARTS of God. (Ex. xxxiii. 11 to 23.)

And Abraham not only talked with the Lord, but washed his feet and fed him, and did the like also for two angels; when, according to your creed, neither Lord or angels have any feet, or stomachs or mouths; though they looked so like men that Abraham knew not that they were not men till he saluted them. (Gen. xviii.)—And Jacob named a certain place Phanuel, (the face of God,) saying, "I have seen God face to face." And all the ancients, having A CERTAIN STANDARD OR RULE of FAITH SUFFICIENT to DECIDE INFALLIBLY ALL QUESTIONS of DIVINE TRUTH which men need know, have concurred in speaking of God, not by way of figure, but reality, as a being in form similar to man, having the same limbs, members, parts and passions; a being walking, talking, eating, riding in a chariot, loving, hating, being angry, jealous, &c., &c. (Ex. xxii. 18. xv. 8. Psa. vi. 11, 4. vii. 12. Ex. xx. 5. xxxiv. 14. Deut. iv. 24. v. 9. vi. 15. Josh. xxiv. 19. Eze. xxxix. 25. Nah. i. 2. Hab. iii. Zech. i. 14. viii. 2. 2 Cor. xi. 2. 1 John iii. 16. Eph. iii. 19. Jer. xxxi. 3. Deut. vii. 8. Hosea xiv. 5. John xiii. 1. 1 John iv. 16. John xvii. 23. Prov. xv. 3. Isa. lv. 11. xxx. 27. 2d (Doway 4th) Kings xix. 16. Eze. xliii. 7. i. 26 to ii. 1. Ja. xxi. 5.)

And so clearly have they set down these several facts, that he who should undertake to prove that the temple at Jerusalem was not a reality, but only a figure to make plain some theory or doctrine, would have a less task than he who should attempt to interpret the sayings of prophets and apostles according to these creeds. I have smiled at the vain efforts of Protestants to avoid the force of those texts quoted to show the real presence in the eucharist; but that smile would grow to a broad laugh upon any one struggling against the scriptures showing the reality of God's existence.

Not satisfied with making Atheism the first article in the Christian creed, Polytheism follows close after, in the declaration that Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit are equally the very and eternal God. To put it beyond doubt that these are THREE DISTINCT GODS they declare their faith in "God the Father Almighty, WITHOUT body, parts, or passions," and in Jesus Christ, very and eternal God, and very man, who was crucified, died, and raised again, and ascended to heaven, body and soul, flesh bones and all which he possessed as a man on earth, and that with such body and soul, flesh and bones, he has set down at the right hand of God the Father, as a God in heaven; consequently being a God, WITH body and parts, really in the image of a man, at the right hand of another God of an altogether different make; and God the Holy Spirit which emanated from these two, and necessarily must partake somewhat of the nature and likeness of both; and consequently a monster, partially without body, having some parts.

To make these creeds utterly, hopelessly, and irrevocably false and impossible, impossible with Omnipotence, as well as with man, it is next asserted that these three are one God, being and substance; that they are all like one another and alike eternal, Omnipotent, Omniscient, and Omnipresent; though the second emanated from the first, and the third emanated from both the others. I do not, I will not, speak of this as a mystery. It is a lie. A lie absolutely and immutably. A lie that OMNIPOTENCE CANNOT MAKE TRUE. As well might you talk that three times four does not make twelve in abstract mathematics, but that it makes ten in a mysterious sense, and that we ought to subscribe to it as a Christian mystery, which we can believe but not comprehend.

To make the matter as ridiculous as it is infidel, heathenish as it is false, Catholics tell us of the "mother of God," as though it was God that was conceived in the womb of the Virgin Mary; begotten by himself on a creature he had made, that he might be eternally begotten. And Protestants not willing that the Catholics should monopolize all the folly and falsehood, have trumped up, or borrowed from their mother, the Catholic church, the doctrine of an "infinite atonement" by means of infinite sufferings in the crucifixion and death of one of the three Gods. And as they still insist that these three Gods are verily and in truth but one God, self-existent, indivisible and eternal, it follows that the eternal uncreated and self-existent God became a PRIEST unto HIMSELF, and offered HIMSELF a SACRIFICE unto HIMSELF, to make propitiation unto himself for sins against himself, and became Mediator between himself and his rebellious subjects. JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

ANTI-MORMON PAPERS.

We have received a remittance of subscription money, which, though directed to the Herald, we have reason to believe was intended for an Anti-Mormon paper. The money is subject to the order of the sender; and as papers of that stamp are not always at hand, we will give our correspondent and all others who want that kind of reading what information we are possessed of to assist them. The first Anti-Mormon paper of which we have any knowledge was issued at Nauvoo in 1844; we think it was called the "Nauvoo Expositor," and if our recollection serves us it was issued once a week nearly one fiftieth of a year, making in all one number. We do not recollect the names of editors or publishers, but think if they could be found possibly they might not refuse to receive subscription money. After that another was started at Elkhorn, called, we think, the "New Era," which appears to have fallen upon a better era; for in process of three or four months it succeeded in bringing out No. 2. But twice that time having since elapsed without its third appearance, the inference is that, like ghosts in ancient story, it is troubled with daylight and will not show itself a third time.—We are not able to say who were editors and publishers, though it was always suspected that certain persons in Voree were concerned in it. Indeed we believe the names of some of them were in the second number. Whether they would be willing to receive subscription money on it or not we cannot say. We do not know of any particular case in which they have refused; yet it is generally said that none has ever yet been taken. Possibly nobody ever offered to subscribe. We cannot say. We are somewhat surprised at its being so soon suspended. Certain we are that the famous "moon hoax" got many readers to the papers in which it was published. Possibly after all the Era would have continued if it had got three or four subscribers. It strikes us we have heard something about a suit for the printer's bill, or some such thing. We should like to hand over the dollar in our hands, (by permission of the owner,) if so we could galvanize it into life again. Highly spiced fiction is a treat to a laboring man, who has his shelves loaded only with ponderous volumes of sober reality. In case this could not be revived, we know of but one resort for those that cannot do without an Anti-Mormon paper. That is the Ensign of Liberty, edited and published by William E. McLellin, Kirtland, Ohio, and furnished to subscribers at $1,00 a year. This paper was started, we believe, about eight months since, and two numbers have appeared already, and we think it quite probable that the third will be out before the end of the year. It may be objected that a dollar is a large sum to pay for three papers, but it should be considered that in this case the editor gives his name and consequently the weight of his character to the paper, and we really think no man of respectability could afford to do so for less.

We can recommend the editor for his faithfulness to the cause he is engaged in, for a wise man has said that nothing was made in vain, and we are very sure he is not qualified for anything else.—Moreover it is said that he is trying to raise up a prophet, and has written several letters to one David Whitmer, down in Missouri, to be prophet for him; to which, however, Whitmer gave him no answer. And we partly believe it; for one very long and very importunate letter of that kind he has published through his Ensign, and said not a word about the answer. But nothing daunted with this failure, off he posted a journey of some fifteen hundred miles to see him face to face and persuade him that he really ought to be a prophet, and would if he would only speak in the name of the Lord. Such perseverance in such a cause ought to be remembered. What if the paper is not worth the money? Give it for the cause and the man. Besides, it is said that he has finally made a prophet of David and made counsellors to him of John Whitmer and Oliver Cowdery, and as the two Whitmers stay on their farms in Missouri, and Oliver in his law office in Wisconsin, paying no attention whatever to their new and responsible offices, why, you see, a double burden falls on William, and you ought not to be particular about small matters. It is not impossible that these men will all refuse to be prophets to Wm. E., and then his responsibility will be very great. Another objection has been raised to that paper, to wit: that Wm. E. was only editor for the present, and it was uncertain whose hands the Ensign would fall into. This is a matter of serious moment, but we think none should be deterred from subscribing on that account. We can assure all such that an individual abundantly able to fill the place of Wm. E. in the editorial chair has already gone up to Kirtland. Need we say we speak of the distinguished Robert Malby, who has doubtless belonged to as many churches and received as many revelations as McLellin himself—having commenced with the disciples of Johanna Southcote in London, and followed down from that to the least and last of all pretenders of the present day. This gentleman has had considerable experience as a public writer, having written a leading article in the New Era, which equals in invention, if not in interest, the recent war news published in the New York Sun. Whether he ever wrote anything else we cannot say, though we do not doubt he has sometimes signed his name. But in this case, at least, he has shown a full share of the talent of invention, for several editors have gone over the same subject since, and with the benefit of his labors to assist none have equaled him. Not even he of the Free Trader, who was supposed to be a match for almost anything. And Dr. Uutter, of the Star, gave in without trying, and simply copied friend Malby's article. Finally, if neither of these three will answer, we can only name to you the Warsaw Signal and the Elkhorn Star. Both have in their day been quite opposed to Mormonism, though not so much as the papers above named. They have this advantage however, that if you pay for them you will be very apt to get your papers.

P. S. Since the above was written we discover that the Star has come out on a sheet much diminished, and with a head line, apparently selected from a very ancient font of pine type that we owned before we came to Voree. We do not think, however, that the Star will set quite yet, though it is getting very dark. Possibly the Signal would be the safest. So many have lost their money in subscribing for Anti-Mormon papers it is best to use a little care.—They are as the Indian said of the white man, very uncertain.

d immutably. A lie that OMNIPOTENCE CANNOT MAKE TRUE. As ell might you talk that three times four does not make twelve in stract mathematics, but that it makes ten in a mysterious sense, d that we ought to subscribe to it as a Christian mystery, which e can believe but not comprehend.

To make the matter as ridiculous as it is infidel, heathenish as it false, Catholics tell us of the "mother of God," as though it as God that was conceived in the womb of the Virgin Mary; egotten by himself on a creature he had made, that he might be eternally begotten. And Protestants not willing that the Catholics hould monopolize all the folly and falsehood, have trumped up, or orrowed from their mother, the Catholic church, the doctrine of an "infinite atonement" by means of infinite sufferings in the crucifixion and death of one of the three Gods. And as they still insist that these three Gods are verily and in truth but one God, self-existent, indivisible and eternal, it follows that the eternal uncreated and self-existent God became a PRIEST unto HIMSELF, and offered HIMSELF a SACRIFICE unto HIMSELF, to make propitiation unto himself for sins against himself, and became Mediator between himself and his rebellious subjects.

JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

ANTI-MORMON PAPERS.

We have received a remittance of subscription money, which, though directed to the Herald, we have reason to believe was intended for an Anti-Mormon paper. The money is subject to the order of the sender; and as papers of that stamp are not always at hand, we will give our correspondent and all others who want that kind of reading what information we are possessed of to assist them. The first Anti-Mormon paper of which we have any knowledge was issued at Nauvoo in 1844; we think it was called the "Nauvoo Expositor," and if our recollection serves us it was issued once a week nearly one fiftieth of a year, making in all one number. We do not recollect the names of editors or publishers, but think if they could be found possibly they might not refuse to receive subscription money. After that another was started at Elkhorn, called, we think, the "New Era," which appears to have fallen upon a better era; for in process of three or four months it succeeded in bringing out No. 2. But twice that time having since elapsed without its third appearance, the inference is that, like ghosts in ancient story, it is troubled with daylight and will not show itself a third time. We are not able to say who were editors and publishers, though it was always suspected that certain persons in Voree were concerned in it. Indeed we believe the names of some of them were in the second number. Whether they would be willing to receive subscription money on it or not we cannot say. We do not know of any particular case in which they have refused; yet it is generally said that none has ever yet been taken. Possibly nobody ever offered to subscribe. We cannot say. We are somewhat surprised at its being so soon suspended. Certain we are that the famous "moon hoax" got many readers to the papers in which it was published. Possibly after all the Era would have continued if it had got three or four subscribers. It strikes us we have heard something about a suit for the printer's bill, or some such thing. We should like to hand over the dollar in our hands, (by permission of the owner,) if so we could galvanize it into life again. Highly spiced fiction is a treat to a laboring man, who has his shelves loaded only with ponderous volumes of sober reality. In case this could not be revived, we know of but one resort for those that cannot do without an Anti-Mormon paper. That is the Ensign of Liberty, edited and published by William E. McLellin, Kirtland, Ohio, and furnished to subscribers at $1,00 a year. This paper was started, we believe, about eight months since, and two numbers have appeared already, and we think it quite probable that the third will be out before the end of the year. It may be objected that a dollar is a large sum to pay for three papers, but it should be considered that in this case the editor gives his name and consequently the weight of his character to the paper, and we really think no man of respectability could afford to do so for less.

We can recommend the editor for his faithfulness to the cause he is engaged in, for a wise man has said that nothing was made in vain, and we are very sure he is not qualified for anything else.—Moreover it is said that he is trying to raise up a prophet, and has written several letters to one David Whitmer, down in Missouri, to be prophet for him; to which, however, Whitmer gave him no answer. And we partly believe it; for one very long and very importunate letter of that kind he has published through his Ensign, and said not a word about the answer. But nothing daunted with this failure, off he posted a journey of some fifteen hundred miles to see him face to face and persuade him that he really ought to be a prophet, and would if he would only speak in the name of the Lord. Such perseverance in such a cause ought to be remembered. What if the paper is not worth the money? Give it for the cause and the man. Besides, it is said that he has finally made a prophet of David and made counsellors to him of John Whitmer and Oliver Cowdery, and as the two Whitmers stay on their farms in Missouri, and Oliver in his law office in Wisconsin, paying no attention whatever to their new and responsible offices, why, you see, a double burden falls on William, and you ought not to be particular about small matters. It is not impossible that these men will all refuse to be prophets to Wm. E., and then his responsibility will be very great. Another objection has been raised to that paper, to wit: that Wm. E. was only editor for the present, and it was uncertain whose hands the Ensign would fall into. This is a matter of serious moment, but we think none should be deterred from subscribing on that account. We can assure all such that an individual abundantly able to fill the place of Wm. E. in the editorial chair has already gone up to Kirtland. Need we say we speak of the distinguished Robert Malby, who has doubtless belonged to as many churches and received as many revelations as McLellin himself—having commenced with the disciples of Johanna Southcote in London, and followed down from that to the least and last of all pretenders of the present day. This gentleman has had considerable experience as a public writer, having written a leading article in the New Era, which equals in invention, if not in interest, the recent war news published in the New York Sun. Whether he ever wrote anything else we cannot say, though we do not doubt he has sometimes signed his name. But in this case, at least, he has shown a full share of the talent of invention, for several editors have gone over the same subject since, and with the benefit of his labors to assist none have equaled him. Not even he of the Free Trader, who was supposed to be a match for almost anything. And Dr. Uutter, of the Star, gave in without trying, and simply copied friend Malby's article. Finally, if neither of these three will answer, we can only name to you the Warsaw Signal and the Elkhorn Star. Both have in their day been quite opposed to Mormonism, though not so much as the papers above named. They have this advantage however, that if you pay for them you will be very apt to get your papers.

P. S. Since the above was written we discover that the Star has come out on a sheet much diminished, and with a head line apparently selected from a very ancient font of pica type that we owned before we came to Voree. We do not think, however, that the Star will set quite yet, though it is getting very dark. Possibly the Signal would be the safest. So many have lost their money in subscribing for Anti-Mormon papers it is best to use a little caution. They are as the Indian said of the white man, very uncertain.

himself a hypocrite and a graceless scamp—that is all. I for one do not deny that I had a favorable opinion of both the men. They recommended each other as gentlemen, and I believed it till I proved them. The history of the whole matter is simply this,—when the gathering commenced at this place Dr. Bennet at Cincinnati, and Dr. McLellin at Shalersville, Ohio, entered into correspondence with each other on the subject as old confidential friends; the result of which was that they both agreed to come up here and join the church, and both commenced recommending each other as suitable men for responsible stations in the church. To me they were both total strangers. Gen. Bennett arrived in this place in July, 1846, and after making satisfaction was restored to the church by a perfectly unanimous vote of the whole congregation. Contrary to my opinion, but by a vote nearly as full and without any opposition, he was restored to his office. Early in August I left for the east, and took from Gen. Bennett a letter of introduction to Dr. Wm. E. McLellin. On this letter alone I was received into his society and confidence. Upon this sole commendation he professed to take me as his bosom friend and spiritual leader. It will do well enough for him to talk in other places that he was opposed to Gen. Bennett, but here it is perfectly understood that they came into the church the mutual endorsers of each others integrity and virtue, and that Dr. McLellin, both before and after joining the church, expressed the firmest friendship for and the most implicit confidence in Gen. Bennett, and that he continued so to express himself till he learned that the First Presidency was filled and he not in it. Whether he was only a traitor in malicious attempt to destroy his friend, or was a hypocrite from the first in his pretensions of friendship, I leave for him to decide. Perfectly satisfied that he is capable of both those crimes, I have no interest in inquiring which he was then engaged in.

(To be continued.)

THE HOLY LAND.

BY HARRIET MARTINEAU.

Bethlehem—Zion—Jerusalem.

As I sat on a tomb in the Turkish cemetery the next morning (March 30) watching the preparations for our departure, I almost dreaded the interest which every day would now bring, after the calm and quiet weeks which we had spent in the desert. Our encampment looked much the same as it had done every morning for a month past: the Arab servants busy in taking down and packing the tents, and a noisy quarrel going on in the midst—(this morning about a pistol having been stolen from one of the tents:)—and the differences were only that there were spectators standing by, and that our camels had given place to horses and asses. But instead of rocks and sands of the desert, Hebron was before our eyes, and the hills where Abraham spread his flocks, and the spot where he and his family lay buried. And before night I should see the place where David was born and lived his shepherd life, and where Jesus was born. We had only twenty miles to travel this day to Bethlehem; but it was quite enough, for we were eager about every old tree, and well, and hill top. The shrubs grew finer, and the wild flowers more abundant, the whole way; though the hills of Judah were wild and stony in parts, and no longer fit for pasturing such flocks as covered them when Abraham lived among them, or when the Hebrews drove in their cattle from the desert, or when David in his boyhood amused himself in slinging smooth stones from the brook while his father's sheep were feeding on the slopes. We sat down to rest and eat under the shade of a rock and a spreading tree; and for the hundredth time since we left Egypt, it occurred to me how little we in England can enter into this meaning of David, when in his Divine songs, he speaks of the shade of rocks, and of the beauty of "a tree planted by the rivers of water," and all such cool images. When one has been slowly pacing on, hour after hour, over glaring sands or heated rocks, under a sun which makes every bit of leather or metal, and even one's outer clothing, feel scorching hot, and oppressing one's breathing, the sight of a patch of dark shade is welcome beyond belief; and when one has dismounted and felt the coolness of the rocky wall and the ground beneath it, and gathering the fresh weeds which cluster in its crevices, phrase after phrase of the psalms and prophecies come over one's mind, with a life and freshness as sweet as the blossoms in one's lap.

Our sight of Bethlehem was beautiful. We saw it just as the yellow sunset light was richest. Bethlehem was on the rising ground on our right; massive looking (as all the villages of Palestine are,) and shadowy, as the last sun rays passed over it to gild the western hills, another village which there lay high up, embosomed in fig and olive orchards. The valley between, one of which we were rising, lay in shadow. Before us, perched upon a lofty ridge which rose between us and Jerusalem, was the convent of St. Elias, which we were to pass to-morrow. I was sorry to turn away from this view; but we had to take the right hand road, and ride through the narrow streets of the village to the great convent, built over the spot where Jesus is believed by the friars to have been born.

It was too late in the evening to see any of the sacred localities; but it was quite enough to have moonlight streaming in during the whole night through the window of my lofty convent chamber, and to think that on this hill took place the greatest event in the history of the world; and that in the fields near where the gentle Ruth went about after her gleaning, little dreaming, in those days of her poverty, and from meeting with Boaz among the reapers of his harvest, would arise such events to the human race; that the shepherd's grandchild, whose divine songs were to sooth his old age, should be the mighty king he was, and the father of a mightier, who should build the great temple of the Lord; and that a more distant descendant should make these glories appear as childish toys in the presence of His great sovereignty over the universal human soul. A wise man of the last century has nobly said that "prosperity is the promise of the Old Testament, and adversity that of the New." On this hill was born the prosperity of the Old Dispensation; and on this was born the man of Sorrows, who knew the secret of true peace, and taught it in the true saying that it profits not a man to gain the whole world if he lose his own soul.

In the morning we went into the church of the convent. I cared little for the upper part, with its chapels for Greek, Latin, and Armenian worship; and not much more for the caverns under ground, where the friars believe that Joseph and Mary remained while there was no room for them in the inn. If the town was too full to receive them while the people were collected for the census, it is hardly probable that they would repair to an under ground cave; but in this cave mass was going on this morning; and striking was the effect, after coming down from the sunshine of the crowded cavern, with its yellow light and their smoke, and the echoes of the chanting.—We returned when the service was over, and saw the star in the marble floor which marks, as the friars believe, the precise spot where Jesus was born, and the marble slab which is laid in the place of the manger. When I saw, through the country, how the Arabs now use the caves of the hills to bed their goats and cattle, this belief of the friars appears less absurd than it would with us; but still it is improbable that the precise spot of these transactions (whose importance was not known till afterward) should have been marked and remembered, that I felt little interested in them in comparison with the landscape outside, about whose leading features himself a hypocrite and a graceless scamp—that is all. I for one do not deny that I had a favorable opinion of both the men. They recommended each other as gentlemen, and I believed it till I proved them. The history of the whole matter is simply this,—when the gathering commenced at this place Dr. Bennet at Cincinnati, and Dr. McLellin at Shalersville, Ohio, entered into correspondence with each other on the subject as old confidential friends; the result of which was that they both agreed to come up here and join the church, and both commenced recommending each other as suitable men for responsible stations in the church. To me they were both total strangers. Gen. Bennett arrived in this place in July, 1846, and after making satisfaction was restored to the church by a perfectly unanimous vote of the whole congregation. Contrary to my opinion, but by a vote nearly as full and without any opposition, he was restored to his office. Early in August I left for the east, and took from Gen. Bennett a letter of introduction to Dr. Wm. E. McLellin. On this letter alone I was received into his society and confidence. Upon this sole commendation he professed to take me as his bosom friend and spiritual leader. It will do well enough for him to talk in other places that he was opposed to Gen. Bennett, but here it is perfectly understood that they came into the church the mutual endorsers of each others integrity and virtue, and that Dr. McLellin, both before and after joining the church, expressed the firmest friendship for and the most implicit confidence in Gen. Bennett, and that he continued so to express himself till he learned that the First Presidency was filled and he not in it. Whether he was only a traitor in malicious attempt to destroy his friend, or was a hypocrite from the first in his pretensions of friendship, I leave for him to decide. Perfectly satisfied that he is capable of both those crimes, I have no interest in inquiring which he was then engaged in.

(To be continued.)

THE HOLY LAND.

BY HARRIET MARTINEAU.

Bethlehem—Zion—Jerusalem.

As I sat on a tomb in the Turkish cemetery the next morning (March 30) watching the preparations for our departure, I almost dreaded the interest which every day would now bring, after the calm and quiet weeks which we had spent in the desert. Our encampment looked much the same as it had done every morning for a month past: the Arab servants busy in taking down and packing the tents, and a noisy quarrel going on in the midst—(this morning about a pistol having been stolen from one of the tents:)—and the differences were only that there were spectators standing by, and that our camels had given place to horses and asses. But instead of rocks and sands of the desert, Hebron was before our eyes, and the hills where Abraham spread his flocks, and the spot where he and his family lay buried. And before night I should see the place where David was born and lived his shepherd life, and where Jesus was born. We had only twenty miles to travel this day to Bethlehem; but it was quite enough, for we were eager about every old tree, and well, and hill top. The shrubs grew finer, and the wild flowers more abundant, the whole way; though the hills of Judah were wild and stony in parts, and no longer fit for pasturing such flocks as covered them when Abraham lived among them, or when the Hebrews drove in their cattle from the desert, or when David in his boyhood amused himself in slinging smooth stones from the brook while his father's sheep were feeding on the slopes. We sat down to rest and eat under the shade of a rock and a spreading tree; and for the hundredth time since we left Egypt, it occurred to me how little we in England can enter into this meaning of David, when, in his Divine songs, he speaks of the shade of rocks, and of the beauty of "a tree planted by the rivers of water," and all such images. When one has been slowly pacing on, hour after hour, over glaring sands or heated rocks, under a sun which makes even bit of leather or metal, and even one's outer clothing, feel scorching hot, and oppressing one's breathing, the sight of a patch of dark shade is welcome beyond belief; and when one has dismounted and felt the coolness of the rocky wall and the ground beneath it, and gathering the fresh weeds which cluster in its crevices, phrase after phrase of the psalms and prophecies come over one's mind, with a life and freshness as sweet as the blossoms in one's lap.

Our sight of Bethlehem was beautiful. We saw it just as the yellow sunset light was richest. Bethlehem was on the rising ground on our right; massive looking (as all the villages of Palestine are,) and shadowy, as the last sun rays passed over it to gild the western hills, another village which there lay high up, embosomed in fig and olive orchards. The valley between, one of which we were rising, lay in shadow. Before us, perched upon a lofty ridge which rose between us and Jerusalem, was the convent of St. Elias, which we were to pass to-morrow. I was sorry to turn away from this view; but we had to take the right hand road, and ride through the narrow streets of the village to the great convent, built over the spot where Jesus is believed by the friars to have been born.

It was too late in the evening to see any of the sacred localities; but it was quite enough to have moonlight streaming in during the whole night through the window of my lofty convent chamber, and to think that on this hill took place the greatest event in the history of the world; and that in the fields near where the gentle Ruth went about after her gleaning, little dreaming, in those days of her poverty, and from meeting with Boaz among the reapers of his harvest, would arise such events to the human race; that the shepherd's grandchild, whose divine songs were to sooth his old age, should be the mighty king he was, and the father of a mightier, who should build the great temple of the Lord; and that a more distant descendant should make these glories appear as childish toys in the presence of His great sovereignty over the universal human soul. A wise man of the last century has nobly said that "prosperity is the promise of the Old Testament, and adversity that of the New." On this hill was born the prosperity of the Old Dispensation; and on this was born the man of Sorrows, who knew the secret of true peace, and taught it in the true saying that it profits not a man to gain the whole world if he lose his own soul.

In the morning we went into the church of the convent. I cared little for the upper part, with its chapels for Greek, Latin, and Armenian worship; and not much more for the caverns under ground, where the friars believe that Joseph and Mary remained while there was no room for them in the inn. If the town was too full to receive them while the people were collected for the census, it is hardly probable that they would repair to an under ground cave; but in this cave mass was going on this morning; and striking was the effect, after coming down from the sunshine of the crowded cavern, with its yellow light and their smoke, and the echoes of the chanting.—We returned when the service was over, and saw the star in the marble floor which marks, as the friars believe, the precise spot where Jesus was born, and the marble slab which is laid in the place of the manger. When I saw, through the country, how the Arabs now use the caves of the hills to bed their goats and cattle, this belief of the friars appears less absurd than it would with us; but still it is improbable that the precise spot of these transactions (whose importance was not known till afterward) should have been marked and remembered, that I felt little interested in them in comparison with the landscape outside, about whose leading features there could be no mistake.

From the bottom of the garden we overlooked the great valley which expanded to the northeast; and one enclosure there—a green spot now occupied by olive trees—was pointed out to us as the field where the shepherds were abiding on the night when Christ was born. Behind it to the east, lay range behind range of hills, stretching off to the north; and among these, we knew, lay the Dead Sea, and the Jordan, where it pours its waters into that lifeless and melancholy lake. As we left the convent and village and descended the rocky road, with terraced vineyards and olive groves on either hand, we knew that Joseph and Mary must have come this way from Jerusalem when summoned to the census; and this was more to us than all the sights the friars had shown us in their zeal and kindness. We looked in at the Tomb of Rachel, and at the Convent of Elias; but our eyes and thoughts were bent towards Jerusalem. I remember, however, that I here first saw the waters of the Dead Sea lying blue in a little gap between the hills.

As soon as I had mounted my ass before the Convent of Elias, I saw from our ridge some buildings on the rising ground which now showed itself before us. I was not immediately certain what they were; but the news soon spread among us that rising ground was Zion, and those buildings belonged to Jerusalem, though they stood outside the walls. Immediately after, the walled city itself came into view, lying about the hills. Most of the party were disappointed. I was not—partly because I knew that we were approaching it from the least favorable side, and partly because my expectations had much underrated the size and grandeur of the city. What we now saw was a line of white walls on a hill side, with some square buildings and small white domes rising within.

I walked the rest of the way. On our right were hills, the summit of one of which was Aceldema, bought by the priests with the money which the wretched Judas returned to them, when he found too late what he had done in his attempt to force his Lord to assert his claim to a temporal sovereignty. On our left was the plain of Rephaim. When we arrived at the brow of the high ground we were on, we were taken by surprise by the grandeur of the scene.—Zion now appeared worthy of her name, and of her place in the hymns of David, and in his history. We were now overlooking the valley of Gihon, more commonly known by the name of Hinnom.—From its depth and its precipitous rocks on our side, I should call it a ravine. This deep dell contains the Lower Pool, now dry; and the aqueduct from Solomon's Pool is seen crossing it obliquely.—Its opposite side is Zion rising very steeply, still terraced for tillage in some parts, and crowned by the city wall. To the right, sweeping away from the ravine of Gihon, is the deep and grand valley of Jehosaphat, clustered with rocks, relieved by trees and leading the eye round to the slope of Olivet, which, however, is best seen from the other side of the city. The black dome of the Tomb of David was the next object; and after that, the most conspicuous roof in the city—the great dome of the Mosque of Omar, which occupies the site of Solomon's Temple.

By this time there was silence among us. I walked behind our cavalcade, as it slowly ascended the beautiful rocky way—glad of the silence permitted by each to all; for it was not possible at the moment—nor will it ever be possible—to speak of the impressions of that hour. We entered by the Jaffa gate; and every echo of the horses' feet in the narrow, stony, picturesque streets, told upon our hearts, we said to ourselves that we were taking up our rest in Jerusalem.

☞ Several brethren have inquired how to communicate by letter, and how to ship to Beaver Island. There is no post-office at Beaver. Letters for Beaver should be directed, Beaver Island, Lake Mich., Mackinac P. O. Persons coming from Lake Ontario and all places beyond will usually find it to their account to ship by the propellers passing up the Welland Canal directly for Beaver. Those coming from Lake Erie and places beyond should ship on steamboats or propellers in the Buffalo and Chicago line, and contract expressly to be landed at Beaver. Many of the boats in this trade stop there. But if you cannot get landed at Beaver, stop at Mackinac; whence you can go to Beaver at $1,00 a passenger, and 50 cts. a barrel for freight. Persons from Lake Michigan and beyond should ship from the most convenient port directly for Beaver.

Should the arrangements for next year's navigation be different, we shall be informed in season and give due notice through this paper. Any honest, industrious man who is able to take himself and family to Beaver with one month's provision has nothing to fear, and may be sure of as much labor as he ever needs, in an excellent country.

THE WISCONSIN STANDARD.

This is the name of a new paper about to appear at Geneva, under the directions of David M. Keeler. In politics it is Whig, but of the progressive stamp: goes for the freedom of the soil, that is, the free gift of public lands to actual settlers; the annexation of all North America to the United States, which seems to be rapidly progressing, and a big slice of both Illinois and Michigan to Wisconsin, of which there is not the least prospect. We wish Mr. Keeler success; not that we care a fig for his politics or his party, for we let those matters alone. But it is rather a scandal that with three Whig papers in Racine and Walworth, there should not be one but what is perfectly lousy with bigotry, and that put on just in a vain chase for influence. Bigotry that oozes from the heart is bad enough. That which is put on for a covering is a stink in the nostrils of Satan. Possibly one of these papers may have improved in its recent change of owners. Certainly they could not become worse, unless they swapped editors with each other.

☞ The following was found since printing the outside of this paper, and consequently inserted in this place:—

CONFERENCE AT WESTFORD, OTSEGO CO., N. Y.

Oct 2d. Conference assembled. Samuel P. Bacon, P. H. P., presiding. Elder Dennis Chidister was chosen Clerk. Present, one high priest, three elders, one priest. Sermon by the Pres. Evening session: meeting for prayer. Sunday, Oct. 3d. Preaching by the Pres. from Luke xxiv. 46, 47, 48, a very interesting and instructive discourse. Afternoon, prayer by elder Hewit, preaching by the Pres. from Mark xi. 27, &c., followed by elder Hewit. Administered the sacrament of the supper, and baptized two.

Voted to hold a Conference at Ilion the 2d Sunday in Jan. next, and the preceding Saturday.

2d. To send the proceedings of the Conference for publication in the Gospel Herald.

Benediction by elder Dennis Chidister.

S. P. BACON, Pres.

D. Chidister, Clerk.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Westford, Oct. 4th, 1847.

We have had a very good Conference here. Of late the cause is onward. I intend for one to gather, &c., &c. • • •
I preach Sundays most of the time, and the meetings are generally quite well attended. • • Yours, &c.,

Pres. Jas. J. Strang. ALANSON HEWIT.

☞ $7,00 received. Part of the books and tracts forwarded. The balance soon. Same to North Bay, and several other recent orders. (Ed.

here could be no mistake.

From the bottom of the garden we overlooked the great valley which expanded to the northeast; and one enclosure there—a green spot now occupied by olive trees—was pointed out to us as the field where the shepherds were abiding on the night when Christ was born. Behind it to the east, lay range behind range of hills, stretching off to the north; and among these, we knew, lay the Dead Sea, and the Jordan, where it pours its waters into that lifeless and melancholy lake. As we left the convent and village and descended the rocky road, with terraced vineyards and olive groves on either hand, we knew that Joseph and Mary must have come this way from Jerusalem when summoned to the census; and this was more to us than all the sights the friars had shown us in their zeal and kindness. We looked in at the Tomb of Rachel, and at the Convent of Elias; but our eyes and thoughts were bent towards Jerusalem. I remember, however, that I here first saw the waters of the Dead Sea lying blue in a little gap between the hills.

As soon as I had mounted my ass before the Convent of Elias, I saw from our ridge some buildings on the rising ground which now showed itself before us. I was not immediately certain what they were; but the news soon spread among us that rising ground was Zion, and those buildings belonged to Jerusalem, though they stood outside the walls. Immediately after, the walled city itself came into view, lying about the hills. Most of the party were disappointed. I was not—partly because I knew that we were approaching it from the least favorable side, and partly because my expectations had much underrated the size and grandeur of the city. What we now saw was a line of white walls on a hill side, with some square buildings and small white domes rising within.

I walked the rest of the way. On our right were hills, the summit of one of which was Aceldema, bought by the priests with the money which the wretched Judas returned to them, when he found too late what he had done in his attempt to force his Lord to assert his claim to a temporal sovereignty. On our left was the plain of Rephaim. When we arrived at the brow of the high ground we were on, we were taken by surprise by the grandeur of the scene.—Zion now appeared worthy of her name, and of her place in the hymns of David, and in his history. We were now overlooking the valley of Gihon, more commonly known by the name of Hinnom.—From its depth and its precipitous rocks on our side, I should call it a ravine. This deep dell contains the Lower Pool, now dry; and the aqueduct from Solomon's Pool is seen crossing it obliquely.—Its opposite side is Zion rising very steeply, still terraced for tillage in some parts, and crowned by the city wall. To the right, sweeping away from the ravine of Gihon, is the deep and grand valley of Jehosaphat, clustered with rocks, relieved by trees and leading the eye round to the slope of Olivet, which, however, is best seen from the other side of the city. The black dome of the Tomb of David was the next object; and after that, the most conspicuous roof in the city—the great dome of the Mosque of Omar, which occupies the site of Solomon's Temple.

By this time there was silence among us. I walked behind our cavalcade, as it slowly ascended the beautiful rocky way—glad of the silence permitted by each to all; for it was not possible at the moment—nor will it ever be possible—to speak of the impressions of that hour. We entered by the Jaffa gate; and every echo of the horses' feet in the narrow, stony, picturesque streets, told upon our hearts, we said to ourselves that we were taking up our rest in Jerusalem.

☞ Several brethren have inquired how to communicate by letter, and how to ship to Beaver Island. There is no post-office at Beaver. Letters for Beaver should be directed, Beaver Island, Lake Mich., Mackinac P. O. Persons coming from Lake Ontario and all places beyond will usually find it to their account to ship by the propellers passing up the Welland Canal directly for Beaver. Those coming from Lake Erie and places beyond should ship on steamboats or propellers in the Buffalo and Chicago line, and contract expressly to be landed at Beaver. Many of the boats in this trade stop there. But if you cannot get landed at Beaver, stop at Mackinac; whence you can go to Beaver at $1,00 a passenger, and 50 cts. a barrel for freight. Persons from Lake Michigan and beyond should ship from the most convenient port directly for Beaver.

Should the arrangements for next year's navigation be different, we shall be informed in season and give due notice through this paper. Any honest, industrious man who is able to take himself and family to Beaver with one month's provision has nothing to fear, and may be sure of as much labor as he ever needs, in an excellent country.

THE WISCONSIN STANDARD.

This is the name of a new paper about to appear at Geneva, under the directions of David M. Keeler. In politics it is Whig, but of the progressive stamp: goes for the freedom of the soil, that is, the free gift of public lands to actual settlers; the annexation of all North America to the United States, which seems to be rapidly progressing, and a big slice of both Illinois and Michigan to Wisconsin, of which there is not the least prospect. We wish Mr. Keeler success; not that we care a fig for his politics or his party, for we let those matters alone. But it is rather a scandal that with three Whig papers in Racine and Walworth, there should not be one but what is perfectly lousy with bigotry, and that put on just in a vain chase for influence. Bigotry that oozes from the heart is bad enough. That which is put on for a covering is a stink in the nostrils of Satan. Possibly one of these papers may have improved in its recent change of owners. Certainly they could not become worse, unless they swapped editors with each other.

☞ The following was found since printing the outside of this paper, and consequently inserted in this place:—

CONFERENCE AT WESTFORD, OTSEGO CO., N. Y.

Oct 2d. Conference assembled. Samuel P. Bacon, P. H. P., presiding. Elder Dennis Chidister was chosen Clerk. Present, one high priest, three elders, one priest. Sermon by the Pres. Evening session: meeting for prayer. Sunday, Oct. 3d. Preaching by the Pres. from Luke xxiv. 46, 47, 48, a very interesting and instructive discourse. Afternoon, prayer by elder Hewit, preaching by the Pres. from Mark xi. 27, &c., followed by elder Hewit. Administered the sacrament of the supper, and baptized two.

Voted to hold a Conference at Hion the 2d Sunday in Jan. next, and the preceding Saturday.

2d. To send the proceedings of the Conference for publication in the Gospel Herald.

Benediction by elder Dennis Chidister.

S. P. BACON, Pres.

D. Chidister, Clerk.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Westford, Oct. 4th, 1847.

We have had a very good Conference here. Of late the cause is onward. I intend for one to gather, &c., &c. * * * * I preach Sundays most of the time, and the meetings are generally quite well attended. * * Yours, &c.,

Pres. Jas. J. Strang. ALANSON HEWIT.

☞ $7,00 received. Part of the books and tracts forwarded. The balance soon. Same to North Bay, and several other recent orders. [Ed.

☞ We have the pleasure of seeing the Belfast Journal again on our table, and we can assure the editor we do not think that miracle he inquires about is a gentile lie. We are very sure that in a community where so many believe such a tale, few would be capable of inventing it. You should know also that it first got out by way of Utter of the Star. Why any body told him of it we do not know. He never could keep a secret. The Anti-Masons employed him to edit the Tory Argus at Troy, N. Y, because they knew he could not keep a secret. Besides that you know every body keep importuning him to say something. Every man says utter, utter, and he must say something. And he knows so much that it takes all his time to tell that. Certainly he can have no time to fib. More than all that, several judgments have recently been recovered against him for fibbing, and as none of them were assessed by the jury at over 6¼ cents, he cannot afford it. It won't pay. You should not doubt an editor merely because he is opposed to you in politics. And if you did, you know Long John of the Democrat backs him.—He is the tallest man in all "Sucker." We intend to make him a pretty considerable taller (measuring to the tip of the ears) next fourth of July—no, first of April. We shall have———no matter for that; but last April we had together as pretty a company of young people as can be found out of Yankee land, and when they set down to supper, as sure as you live, the ducks were all bran and cobs; the eggs were shells filled with dirt, well cooked; the sausages were cotton and wool, and the most beautiful frosted cakes were nothing but raw meal. I never! How strange! Dear me! If one of these miracle mongers had been here you would have said, "sure, it's the father of all rabbits."

About Mrs. Emma Smith. Pray when did we represent that she was a Mormon? Who told you she was not? We certainly are not aware of having said anything about it, though some of our correspondents have. But if she is not a Mormon, we have yet to learn that fact. About two years since a forged letter purporting to be from her was published in a New York paper and copied into nearly all the public journals, which represented her as an unbeliever.—This letter she most distinctly denied in one she caused to be published in the same paper. Most of the papers, religious as well as secular, which copied the forgery, took no notice of the genuine, because they love lies more than the truth.

MUSINGS.

Well, reader of the Herald, are you pleased with your weekly visitor any better since its enlargement? I am glad if you are.—It cerainly costs the editor enough toil. Did you ever write when your mind was dark, and your head seemed spinning round like a great wheel; or when all your ideas seemed lost in the bottom of a deep, dark well, from whence you could scarcely draw them up; and when, having got them marshaled in order, you would forget them or loose them in the darkness before you could write them down? Then you don't know what toil is. When you have been obliged to set down two or three days in the week and write thirty or forty pages per day of new matter, carefully considered, much of it controversial and requiring references to numerous books, and a most critical analysis of language, you will have learned a single chapter of the toils of those who are your spiritual pastors. And after doing that till your body was nearly worn out, if at the setting in of cold weather you should apply to a brother who had thirty acres of wood land for the privilege of cutting a little old down timber and limbs into fire wood on shares and he should refuse, would not you think some souls were too small to damn? I should.—"What of that?" O, nothing; I have not been served so, but I know who has. And with just the feelings I have been describing. I feel like saying———no matter. Every saint knows what I would say if I should speak out. On such a subject they can have but one opinion, and they all thank God that no such will be in heaven.

CONFERENCES.

We have received the proceedings of a Conference held at Westford, Otsego Co., N. Y., but by some means they have been mislaid. The Conference was an interesting season, and adjourned to meet again at Ilion some ten or twelve miles east of Utica. We do not recollect the time, but think it early in January. Will the Clerk send us the true time as soon as possible for publication?

A Conference was held at Franklin, McHenry Co., Ill., Nov. 6th and 7th. Among other business transacted, the following resolutions were passed:—

Resolved, That we uphold and sustain James J. Strang as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with our confidence, faith and prayers.

Resolved, That we uphold the law of tithing as given by the prophet Joseph.

Resolved, That we sustain the Gospel Herald.

The branch at Franklin is in a thriving state.

Harrison Bishop, Pres. of the branch.
Joseph Robinson, Wm. Carr, } Counsellors.
Joseph Morrill, Elder.
David Perdunn, Teacher.

Elder Shippy of this place attended the Conference, and on his return brought up the first fruits of the tithing.

Good.—When Sir Walter Scott was urged not to prop the failing credit of an acquaintance, he replied—"That man was my friend when friends were few; and I will be his, now that his enemies are many."

CHEWING TOBACCO IN THE HOUSE OF GOD.

A word I would drop to the Church-going folk
Of country and town, and not in a joke.
Now chewing tobacco and spitting the juice
In the House of the Lord, can find no excuse;
But want of politeness, or rather of grace,
Or want of respect for the hallowed place:
Yet here it is practised by A, B, and C,
And there it is followed by E, F, and G,
You never need ask where these gentry sit,
Just look on the wall and you'll see by the spit;
In dark filthy puddles it spreads on the floor,
From the pulpit all round each way to the door.
The scene is disgusting! and how must you feel
If, in such a place, you're expected to kneel?
Yet often it happens these men are so good,
They bend on their knees while others have stood.
This done, they return to their labor again,
Still chewing their quid and spreading the stain.
A scandal to men!—a scandal to grace!
Here decency blushes and covers her face!
Do throw out your chew ere you enter the door,
And never so rudely behave any more;
But down with your cash for the sand and the soap,
And the horrible job of cleaning all up.

☞ We have the pleasure of seeing the Belfast Journal again on our table, and we can assure the editor we do not think that miracle he inquires about is a gentile lie. We are very sure that in a community where so many believe such a tale, few would be capable of inventing it. You should know also that it first got out by way of Utter of the Star. Why any body told him of it we do not know. He never could keep a secret. The Anti-Masons employed him to edit the Toty Argus at Troy, N. Y, because they knew he could not keep a secret. Besides that you know every body keep importuning him to say something. Every man says utter, utter, and he must say something. And he knows so much that it takes all his time to tell that. Certainly he can have no time to fib. More than all that, several judgments have recently been recovered against him for fibbing, and as none of them were assessed by the jury at over 6¼ cents, he cannot afford it. It won't pay. You should not doubt an editor merely because he is opposed to you in politics. And if you did, you know Long John of the Democrat backs him.—He is the tallest man in all "Sucker." We intend to make him a pretty considerable taller (measuring to the tip of the ears) next fourth of July—no, first of April. We shall have———no matter for that; but last April we had together as pretty a company of young people as can be found out of Yankee land, and when they set down to supper, as sure as you live, the ducks were all bran and cobs; the eggs were shells filled with dirt, well cooked; the sausages were cotton and wool, and the most beautiful frosted cakes were nothing but raw meal. I never! How strange! Dear me! If one of these miracle mongers had been here you would have said, "sure, it's the father of all rabbits."

About Mrs. Emma Smith. Pray when did we represent that she was a Mormon? Who told you she was not? We certainly are not aware of having said anything about it, though some of our correspondents have. But if she is not a Mormon, we have yet to learn that fact. About two years since a forged letter purporting to be from her was published in a New York paper and copied into nearly all the public journals, which represented her as an unbeliever.—This letter she most distinctly denied in one she caused to be published in the same paper. Most of the papers, religious as well as secular, which copied the forgery, took no notice of the genuine, because they love lies more than the truth.

MUSINGS.

Well, reader of the Herald, are you pleased with your weekly visitor any better since its enlargement? I am glad if you are.—It cerainly costs the editor enough toil. Did you ever write when your mind was dark, and your head seemed spinning round like a great wheel; or when all your ideas seemed lost in the bottom of a deep, dark well, from whence you could scarcely draw them up; and when, having got them marshaled in order, you would forget them or loose them in the darkness before you could write them down? Then you don't know what toil is. When you have been obliged to set down two or three days in the week and write thirty or forty pages per day of new matter, carefully considered, much of it controversial and requiring references to numerous books, and a most critical analysis of language, you will have learned a single chapter of the toils of those who are your spiritual pastors. And after doing that till your body was nearly worn out, if at the setting in of cold weather you should apply to a brother who had thirty acres of wood land for the privilege of cutting a little old down timber and limbs into fire wood on SHARES and he should refuse, would not you think some souls were too small to damn? I should.—"What of that?" O, nothing; I have not been served so, but I know who has. And with just the feelings I have been describing. I feel like saying———no matter. Every saint knows what I would say if I should speak out. On such a subject they can have but one opinion, and they all thank God that no such will be in heaven.

CONFERENCES.

We have received the proceedings of a Conference held at Westford, Otsego Co., N. Y., but by some means they have been mislaid. The Conference was an interesting season, and adjourned to meet again at Ilion some ten or twelve miles east of Utica. We do not recollect the time, but think it early in January. Will the Clerk send us the true time as soon as possible for publication!

A Conference was held at Franklin, McHenry Co., Ill., Nov. 6th and 7th. Among other business transacted, the following resolutions were passed:—

Resolved, That we uphold and sustain James J. Strang as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with our confidence, faith and prayers.

Resolved, That we uphold the law of tithing as given by the prophet Joseph.

Resolved, That we sustain the Gospel Herald.

The branch at Franklin is in a thriving state.

Harrison Bishop, Pres. of the branch.
Joseph Robinson, Wm. Carr, } Counsellors.
Joseph Morrill, Elder.
David Perdunn, Teacher.

Elder Shippy of this place attended the Conference, and on his return brought up the first fruits of the tithing.

Good.—When Sir Walter Scott was urged not to prop the failing credit of an acquaintance, he replied—"That man was my friend when friends were few; and I will be his, now that his enemies are many."

CHEWING TOBACCO IN THE HOUSE OF GOD.

A word I would drop to the Church-going folk
Of country and town, and not in a joke.
Now chewing tobacco and spitting the juice
In the House of the Lord, can find no excuse;
But want of politeness, or rather of grace,
Or want of respect for the hallowed place:
Yet here it is practised by A, B, and C,
And there it is followed by E, F, and G,
You never need ask where these gentry sit,
Just look on the wall and you'll see by the spit;
In dark filthy puddles it spreads on the floor,
From the pulpit all round each way to the door.
The scene is disgusting! and how must you feel
If, in such a place, you're expected to kneel?
Yet often it happens these men are so good,
They bend on their knees while others have stood.
This done, they return to their labor again,
Still chewing their quid and spreading the stain.
A scandal to men!—a scandal to grace!
Here decency blushes and covers her face!
Do throw out your chew ere you enter the door,
And never so rudely behave any more;
But down with your cash for the sand and the soap,
And the horrible job of cleaning all up.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 2, 1847. [No. 37.

"TRUTH WILL PREVAIL."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

ANTIQUITY OF THE EARTH.

In the progress of geological inquiries we soon find that we have cleared the bounds of historic time, and are moving far back among the periods of an unmeasured and immeasurable antiquity, the geologist can demonstrate that the crust of the earth has a natural history. That he cannot determine the chronology of its successive strata is quite immaterial. We only ask him to prove the order of their position from the newest deposit to the lowest step of the series; and this he can do. For nature itself—by a force calculable only by the God of nature—lifting up in places the whole of the mighty series in a slanting, ladder-like direction to the surface, has revealed to him the order in which they were originally laid, and invites him to descend step by step to its awful foundations.

Let us descend with him, and traverse an ideal section of a portion of the earth's crust. Quitting the living surface of the green earth, and entering on our downward path, our first step may take us below the dust of Adam, and beyond the limits of recorded time.—From the moment we leave the mere surface soil, and touch even the nearest of the tertiary beds, all traces of human remains disappear, so that let our grave be as shallow as it may in even the latest stratified bed, we have to make it in the dust of a departed world.—Formation now follows formation, composed chiefly of sand, and clay, and lime, and presenting a thickness of more than a thousand feet each. As we descend through these, one of the most sublime fictions of mythology becomes sober truth; for at our every step an age flies past. We find ourselves on a road where the lapse of duration is marked—not by the succession of seasons and of years,—but by the slow excavation, by water, of deep valleys in rock marble; by the return of a continent to the bosom of an ocean in which, ages before, it had been slowly formed; or by the departure of one world, and the formation of another. And, accordingly, if our first step took us below the line which is consecrated by human dust, we have to take but a few steps more, before we begin to find that the fossil remains of all those forms of animal life with which we are most familiar, are diminishing, and that their places are gradually supplied by strange and yet stranger forms; till, in the last fossiliferous formation of this division, traces of existing species become extremely rare, and extinct species every where predominate.

The secondary receive us as into a new fossiliferous world, or into a new series of worlds. Taking the chalk formation as the first member of this series, we find a stratification upwards of a thousand feet thick. Who shall compute the tracts of time necessary for its slow sedimentary deposition! So vast was it, and so widely different was its physical conditions from those which followed, that only one trace of animal species still living to be found in it,—Crowded as it is with conchological remains, for example, not a shell of one of all the seven thousand existing species is discoverable. Types of organic life, before unknown, arrest our attention, and prepare us for still more surprising forms. Descending to the system next in order—the oolitic—with its many subdivisions, and its thickness of about half a mile, we recognize new proofs of the dateless antiquity of the earth. For enormous as this bed is, it was obviously formed by deposition from sea and river water. And so gradual and tranquil was the operation, that, in some places, the organic remains of the successive strata are arranged with a shelve-like regularity, reminding us of the well-ordered cabinet of a naturalist. Here, too, the last trace of animal species still living, has vanished. Even this link is gone. We have reached a point when the earth was in the possession of the gigantic forms of Saurian reptiles—monsters more appalling than the poet's fancy ever feigned; and these are their catacombs. Descending through the later red sandstone and saliferous marls of two thousand feet in thickness, and which exhibit, in their very variegated strata, a succession of numerous physical changes, our subterranean path brings us to the carboniferous system, or coal formations. These coal strata, many thousands of feet thick, consists entirely of the spoils of successive ancient vegetable worlds. But in rank jungles and luxuriant wildernesses which are here accumulated and compressed, we recognize no plant of any existing species. Here, too, we have passed below the last trace of reptile life. The speaking foot-prints impressed on the preceding rocks, are absent here. Nor is there a single convincing indication that these primeval forests ever echoed to the voice of birds. But between these strata, beds of limestone of enormous thickness are interposed; each proclaming the prolonged existance and final extinction of a creation. For these limestone beds are not so much the charnel-houses of fossil animals, as the remains of the animals themselves.

The mountain masses of stone which now surround us, extending for miles in length and breadth, were once sentient existences—testaceous and corraline—living at the bottom of the ancient seas and lakes. How countless the ages necessary for their accumulation; when the formation of only a few inches of the strata required the life and death of many generations! Here, the mind is not merely carried back through immeasurable periods, but, while standing amid the petrified remains of this succession of primeval forests, and extinct races of animals piled up into sepulchral mountains, we seem to be encompassed by the thickest shadow of the valley of death.

On quitting these stupendous monuments of death, we leave behind us the last vestige of land plants, and pass down to the old sandstone. The geological character of this vast formation, again tells of ages innumerable. For though many thousand feet in depth, it is obviously derived from the materials of more ancient rocks, fractred, decomposed and deposited in water. The gradual and quiet nature of the process and therefore its immense duration, are evident from the numerous "platforms of death" which mark its formation, each crowded with organic structures which lived and died where they are now seen; and which consequently must have perished by some destructive agency, too sudden to allow of their dispersion, and yet so subtle and quiet as to leave the place of their habitation undisturbed.

Immeasurably far behind us as we have already left the fair face of the extant creation, while traveling into the night of ancient time, we yet feel, as we stand on the threshhold of the next, or Silurian system, and look down towards "the foundations of the earth," that we are not half way on our course. Here, on surveying the fossil structures, we are at first struck with the total change in the petrified inhabitants of the sea as compared with what we found in the mountain limestone, employing the lapse of long periods of time during the formation of the intervening old red sandstone which we have just left. But still more are we impressed with the lapse of duration while descending the long succession of strata, of which this primary fossiliferous formation is composed, when we think of their slow derivation from the more ancient rocks; of their oft-repeated elevation and depression; of the long periods of repose, during which hundreds of animal species ran through their cycle of generations, and became extinct; and of the continuance of this stratifying process, until these thin beds had acquired, by union, the immense thickness of a mile and a half. Next below this we reach the Cambrian system, of almost equal thickness, and formed by the same slow process. Here the gradual decrease of animal remains admonishes us, that even the vast and dreary empire of death has its limits, and that we are in its outskirts. But there is a solitude greater than that of the boundless descent, and a dreariness more impressive than that which reigns in a world entombed. On leaving the slate rocks of the Cambrian, and descending to those of the next formation, we find that the worlds of organic remains are past, and that we have reached a region older than death, because older than life itself.—Here, at least, if life ever existed, all trace of it is obliterated by the fusing power of the heat below. But we have not even yet reached a resting place. Passing down through the beds of micha-schist, many thousand feet in depth, to the great gneiss formation, we find that we have reached the limits of stratification itself. The granitic masses below, of a depth which man can never explore, are not only chrystalized themselves but the igneous power acting through them has partially chrystalized the rocks above. Not only life, but the conditions of life, are here at an end.

Now, is it possible for us to look from our ideal position, backwards and upwards to the ten miles height—supposing the strata to be piled regularly—from which we have descended, without feeling that we have reached a point of immeasurable remoteness in terrestial antiquity? Can we think of the thin soil of man's few thousand years in contrast with the succession of worlds we have passed through; of the slow formation of each of these worlds on worlds, by the disintegration of more ancient materials and their subsidence in water; of the leaf-like thinness of a great proportion of the strata; of the consequent flow of time necessary to form only a few perpendicular inches of all these miles; or of the long periods of alternate elevation and depression, action and repose, which mark their formation, without acknowledging that the days and years of geology are ages and cycles of ages! Let us conceive, if we can, that the atoms of one of these strata have formed the sand of an hour-glass, and that each grain counted a moment, and we may then make some approximation to the past periods of geology; periods, in the computation of which the longest human dynaty and even the date of the pyramids, would form only an insignificant fraction. Or, remembering that only one species of animal has, so far as we know, died out during the sixty or seventy centuries of man's historic existence upon earth, can we think of the thousands not of generations, but of species, of races, which we have passed in our downward track, and which have all run through their ages of existence and ceased; of the recurrence of this change, again and again, over in the same strata; and of the many times over these strata must be repeated in order to equal the vast sum of the entire series, without feeling that we are standing, in idea, on ground so immeasurably far back in the night of time, as to fill the mind with awe? "How dreadful is this place!" Here at as incalculable a secular distance, probably from the first creation of organic life, as that is from the last creation; here silence once reigned; the only sound which occasionaly broke the intense stillness being the voice of subterranean thunder; the only motion, (not felt, for there was none to feel it,) an earthquake; the only phenomenon a molten sea shot up from the fiery gulf below to form the mighty framework of some future continent. And still that ancient silence seems to impose its quelling influence, and to allow in its presence the activity of nothing but thought. And what thought—what direction more natural for it to take than to plunge still farther back into the abyss of departed time, till it has reached a First or Efficient Cause?—Pre-Adamite Earth, by Dr. Harris.

"ANTIQUITY OF THE EARTH."

How vast and sublime are the truths of Geological science as developed and in progress of development; and in the contemplation of these truths, how greatly is the human mind enlarged and elevated and its conceptions of the dignity of its own nature, and of the dignity, wisdom and power of the Infinite Mind, purified and exalted!

Before the developements of this science the doubts of the sekptic, and the unbelief of the infidel, as to the existence of a great and intelligent First Cause, are compelled to give way. And when the perfect agreement of these developments, as regards the Creation, with a rational view of the Mosaic history, is made to appear, how irresistible is the weight of testimony thus added to the great truths of Revelation! The work of John Pye Smith, to say nothing of the writings of other scientific theologians, upon this subject, should suffice to put at rest the fears entertained that the authority of the Scriptures is likely to be overturned by the progress of the science of Geology, or any Science. The Word and the Works of the Infinite Mind cannot, in the nature of things, disagree. Science and Religion, which are emanations of the same great source, can never be at war with each other. In other words, the Almighty cannot be inconsistent with himself! And that professor of Christianity who sets himself against the truths of science because those truths interfere with points of a common theology, would do well first to institute a full and candid iniquiry in respect to the soundness of that theology, not as compared with or founded upon human creeds, but as tested by the Word and Works of the Infinite Mind, to be learned by a direct appeal to the great Books of Nature and of Revelation. He will thus be doing a far better work for himself—one more acceptable to his Master; will be contributing to the progress of Religious and Scientific truth, while, in the other case, he is but a stumbling block in the way of both.

The fact is in regard to the Religious and Scientific world, that both are derelict in duty. The one in attaching too little importance to the study of scientific truths, and the other in neglecting the not less interesting and important truths of moral and religious moment. A system of religion, in our view, is sound just in the proportion as it is founded, not merely upon correct views of scripture revelation and doctrine, but as it partakes of such of the elements of philosophy as are to be gathered alone by the study of nature and her laws, and as relate to the physical and consequently mental and moral well being of mankind. And the votaries of Science, by an attention to Religious truth, as to be learned alone in the written Word, would be vastly increasing their capacity for usefulness, and adding greatly to the onward progress of scientific truth. Science and genuine Religion are aids to each other. Separated, the progress of each is retarded. Joined, the progress of both is facilitated.—The most useful among the philosophers of any age, are those who have combined the religious with the scientific; and the most useful among theologians, are those who have combined the scientific with the religious.

But our object was not, when we commenced our article, to go into a dissertation of this kind, or, indeed into a dissertation of any kind. The remarks made were suggested by the objections we frequently hear stated to the grand and impressive truths of Geology —objections founded on the erroneous belief that these truths clash, in cardinal points, with Scripture, history and revelation. Our main object was to ask the attention of the reader to an extract, under the head "Antiquity of the Earth," on our first page, from a late work by Dr. Harris, entitled "The pre-Adamite Earth." The extract may present nothing new to the mind of the Geological student, so far as mere scientific fact is concerned; but we doubt much whether any can read it, without receiving impressions of a character at once new and indefinable, and without coming to the conclusion, that so far as human language can do justice to the great subject of the article, Dr. Harris has succeded beyond all other writers.

A friend who suggested the extract to our attention, said in reference to the work containing it—"The privilege of reading such a work, by such an author, if the extract is any thing like a specimen, would be worth a journey down east and back. The reading of it by those who can enter into the spirit of the writer, will be a substantial addition to the aggregate of universal happiness. It is an eternity piled up, or rather a score of eternities, that have left their foot-marks a score of miles deep, in the crust of our planet, as they passed over it."—Southport Telegraph.

MICROSCOPIC WONDERS.

Upon examining the edge of a very sharp lancet with a microscope, it will appear as broad as the back of a knife; rough, uneven, full of notches and furrows. An exceedingly small needle resembles a rough iron bar. But the sting of a bee, seen through the same instrument, exhibits everywhere a most beautiful polish, without the least flaw, blemish or inequality, and it ends in a point too fine to be discerned. The threads of a fine lawn seem coarser than the yarn with which ropes are made for anchors. But a silk worm's web appears perfectly smooth and shining, and every where equal. The smallest dot that can be made with a pen, appears irregular and uneven. But little specks on the wings and bodies of insects are found to be most accurately circular. The finest miniature paintings appear before the microscope rugged and uneven, entirely void of beauty, either in the drawing or coloring. The most even and beautiful varnishes will be found to be mere roughness. But the nearer we examine the works of God, even in the least of his productions, the more sensible shall we be of his wisdom and power. In the numberless species of insects, what proportion, exactness, uniformity and symmetry do we perceive in the organs! what profusion of coloring! azure, green and vermillion, gold, silver, pearls, rubies, and diamonds; fringe and embroidery on their bodies, wings, heads, and every part! how high the finishing, how inimitable the polish we every where behold!

☞ Progress and Reform are not confined to the Christianized portions of the globe, nor to any particular race of mankind. Mohammedanism has caught the spirit, as exhibited in the abolitton of slavery, and other reforms, in Turkey and Tunis. And even Hindooism is giving signs of "progress." Slave dealing, according to late accounts, has been abolished in the Rajpootana States; Suttees and Infanticide have been prohibited, and it is now declared a capital offence to aid or abet in such exhibitions.—Southport Telegraph.

ENDURANCE.

'Tis bitter to endure the wrong
Which evil hands and tongues commit,
The bold encroachments of the strong,
The shafts of calumny and wit;
The scornful bearing of the proud,
The sneers and laughter of the crowd.

And harder still it is to bear
The censure of the good and wise,
Who, ignorant of what you are,
Or blinded by the slanderer's lies,
Look coldly on, or pass you by
In silence, with averted eye.

But when the friends in whom your trust
Was steadfast as the mountain rock,
Fly, and are scattered like the dust,
Before Misfortune's whirlwind shock
Nor Love remains to cheer your fall,
This is more terrible than all.

But even this and these—aye more,
Can be endured, and hope survive;
The noble spirit still may soar,
Although the body fails to thrive;
Disease and want may wear the frame—
Thank God the soul is still the same.

Hold up your head, then, man of grief,
Nor longer to the tempest bend;
For soon or late must come relief;
The coldest, darkest night will end;
Hope in the true heart never dies!
Trust on—the day star yet shall rise.

Conscious of purity and worth,
You may with calm assurance wait
The tardy recompense of earth;
And e'en should justice come too late
To soothe the spirit's homeward flight,
Still Heaven, at last, the wrong shall right.

HONESTY OF THE TURK.

The traveler, Mr. Barrell, was walking in Constantinople, through a street not open to Christians without an attending Turk. The stores were supplied with the richest assortments of merchandise; among them he saw one pre-eminent for the costly array of goods. As he discovered one or two articles which he should like to purchase, and by doing so gain a full view of the contents of the store, he proposed his attendant to enter.

"That is impossible," replied the Turk, "as the owner has gone out."

"But" said Mr. Barrell, "the door is open."

"True," replied the Turk, "but do you not see at the door a chair, with its back turned towards the street? a sign that no one is within, and that no person must enter."

"But," said Mr. B., "is the owner not exposing his immense amount of property to depredation?"

"Not at all, not at all," said the Turk, "do you not know that no Christians are allowed to enter this street without a Turk to attend them?"

Yet men boast of the civilizing and moralizing of what they falsely call Christianity.

MORMON DISCUSSION.

(Continued from last week.)

I shall therefore proceed to make good these assertions by presenting to your honor and this audience the original letters of Dr. Wm. E. McLellin in his own hand writing, signed by his name.—And as there are many here acquainted with his hand writing, I wish you to observe them particularly. And I call upon him to answer whether these are HIS LETTERS or not. And I tell you he don't DARE say THESE LETTERS ARE FORGERIES here in my presence with the LETTERS before the eyes of this people to WITNESS HIS FALSEHOOD, as he has MANY TIMES BEFORE in this VERY HOUSE when there was none PRESENT to face him with them. Hell's own impudence is no match for him. A half dozen times in PUBLIC CONGREGATIONS he has denied writing any such letters. He may go a half mile from here to-morrow and DENY IT AGAIN! BUT HERE THEY WILL STAND UNCONTRADICTED.

Mr. Strang exhibited to the President, his opponent, and the congregation a letter in the hand writing of Dr. W. E. McLellin, post marked "Ravenna, O., Aug. 20," directed "Dr. J. C. Bennett, Voree, (Burlington,) Wisconsin," and read the same as follows:—

"Shalersville Portage Co., Ohio, Aug. 14th, 1846.

MY OLD AND MUCH RESPECTED FRIEND,—

I reached home last night about 11, P. M., from Kirtland, where I had been attending a Botanico Medico Convention. Some fifteen or twenty Dr.'s were present, and we had a very good and interesting time. Dr. Tilletson, from Thompson, lectured in the afternoon of the 12th on the history of the different modes of practice, and was very ingenious, amusing and interesting. By unanimous vote I was requested to lecture in the evening. I consented, and for two hours I guess the walls of that supurb edifice, "the Temple of God," re-echoed with the sound of "marcury, marcury, and the marcury dealers." J. J. Strang, from Voree, was one of my audience.

I arrived in this place with my family, from Pittsburgh, on the 12th of April. Since which I have been engaged in my old profession of medicine. I have secured already a very considerable ride, and my business is increasing as the people become more and more acquainted with me * *

On last Friday Pres. Strang commenced his Conference in old Kirtland, and continued it some four days. He organized a stake of Zion there. All, I believe, of the originals, united with him except A. Cowls. Leonard Rich, Martin Harris, Hazen Allrich, Jacob Bumb, &c., &c., are among his principal men. Rich is President of stake, Bump Bishop, and Harris says he is going to England.

On the morning that I left home to attend the Convention Pres. Strang left Kirtland to visit me in Shalersville, but traveling different routes we did not meet. He, however, returned to Kirtland the next day and found me in the Temple listening to Dr. T.'s lecture. When it closed he introduced himself to me and requested an interview. We met in the evening after the close of my lecure in a room at (his honor) Bishop J. Bump's. We conversed until after midnight and then retired to dream about it, and at daylight we renewed our acquaintance again; but he was soon called to go to the water to baptize two more. Again, from 9 till 2 o'clock, we were alone in continued conversation. Upon the whole I found him a very intelligent as well as pleasant and gentlemanly man. I was much more pleased with him than I had thought I should be. I left him with a promise that he would visit and spend next Monday night with me, after which I will give you more particulars.

Since I have been here old Sid. has written an anonymous letter to the P. M. of this place—among the meanest things that ever was penned—the intent of which was to injure my private as well as professional character. It is filled with lies of the blackest die.—The P. M. was kind enough to send the letter to me, and I have it and shall hold it for future uses.

I want to hear from you immediately on the receipt of this, and if you please I would be glad that you would enclose a half sheet on which (dated back at the college in Cin.) you write me such a recommendation as a physician and gentleman as you may think me entitled to. I would be glad that you would be short, but Spartonian pithy.

I would remark that your acquaintance with me was formed during the winter of thirty-one and two, and that during '44 you lived and practiced where I had lived for years, &c., &c.

Pres. S. tells me that you are at your old tricks again of dosing people with "roots and yerbs;" and I was glad to hear that the prospects before you were bright, and still growing brighter every day. How would you like to have A PARTNER? I WISH I WAS WITH YOU. And if I thought that there would be business for two I would try to gather up and spend the winter with you. What say you? I have a good stock of most of the Botanic remedies on hand. I have a good horse, buggy and cutter, all of which I could bring. * *

Aug. 18th, '46.

DEAR DR.,—I continue my remarks this eve. Elder J. J. S. was true to his word, and about sunset last eve rapt at my door. I endeavored to examine his claims to the Presidency of the "church of Christ" with care and without prejudice, and I feel favorably impressed. This morning I took him and his trunk in my buggy and carried them about 8 miles, where he could take passage for Pittsburgh. I left him about 2 this afternoon. We spent several hours in the woods together to-day, and when I parted from him there was a feeling sensibly thrilled through my heart, saying: "How happy would we be to enjoy each others society continually." * *

Could a house be had for a small family in Burlington or Voree, and if so at what price? Is there much building doing on the city plot? Does harmony prevail in the new settlement? Are they intelligent, enterprising inhabitants generally? &c., &c. Now, I want you should write me a long, full and candid letter immediately. Write every thing that you think would be interesting to me relative to your location; to the advantages and location of the city; to its inhabitants; to the feelings of the people in the adjoining country relative to the new settlement, &c., &c. I should not be surprised if old Sid. or some of his satellites had lied to you respecting your old friend; if so, who and what? * *

Health, happiness and prosperity attend you while ever you walk in the paths of truth and virtue.

I am, and shall ever remain yours,

W. E. McLELLIN."

By this letter you will perceive that at the very beginning of my acquaintance with my opponent he regarded Gen. Bennett as an old and valued friend; that he appealed to him to assist him in a variety of ways; especially to bolster up his character against the attacks of Mr. Rigdon, and was very anxious to go into partnership with him. What are we to think of him who asks another to bolster up his character by a written commendation; rejoices in his standing and prospects in the church; seeks a professional partnership with him, and then turns about and says he never had any confidence in him; that he always knew he was a scamp, and gives the very fact of his having a standing in the church as a cause of all divisions and dissentions, and a full justification for leaving the true church of God and going off and establishing another church and attempting to palm it off on the world as the true church?

Mr. Strang in like manner exhibited a letter in the hand writing of W. E. McLellin, post marked "Ravenna, O., Oct. 2," directed "Dr. J. C. Bennett, Burlington, (Voree,) Wisconsin," and read the same as follows:—

"Shalersville, Portage Co., O., Sep. 30, '46.

DEAR DOCTOR:—Yours of the 1st inst. was duly received, and the recommendatory you were pleased to send me as duly appreciated. The kindness of friends is sweetly consolatory to the heart, especially to one who is so lonely as I. The great work of God of the latter day is interwoven in the finest feelings of my heart, never to be rooted out. Nay, verily. Would to God that this morning I was wending my way (instead of writing this) to Voree in order to attend the Conference to be holden there on the 6th proximo, and to commingle in social converse in the house of God with all those noble hearts and spirits who will meet there.

My heart this morning aches within me with strong desire to see all my brethren in Voree at Conference, but my circumstances have been and are such that I could not surmount the difficulties, and therefore I must try to be reconciled. But the Lord preserving my life it will only be a few months at farthest before I will be among you.

My practice for two months past has been continual both night and day. How much I have booked I have not had time to calculate, but not so much as you say you have, because the rates of charging here are much lower than in the west.

I enclose a confidential line to Pres. Strang, please hand it to him without delay. He will probably be pleased to tell you my future occupation and business when I reach the place of rest that God has appointed and had his eye upon from times of old. Ah! Sir, I do not feel to envy you your happiness in being there and enjoying so high privileges. I look upon you, sir, as being one of my very best friends in the world, and to you I am going to say a few things in confidence, not to be exposed to others.

[The confidential here omitted.]

Hence you may see some of my anxiety to be with you, and especially to be with him in all his walks of life. The nearer the relation and the more the intimacy between J. J. S. and myself the better for the cause. I realize it, and I am on nettles to be in my calling.

I shall look to you, sir, as a friend—and a friend indeed in all matters, especially during the Conference. You need have no fears of my faltering while the principles of truth are and advocated and righteousness practiced. You may promise in my name all that you may think I am (by indefatigable perseverance) capable of performing.

I am, as ever, your sincere friend in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ,

W. E. McLELLIN.

P. S. Some things in this you will show to none save my friend Pres. J. J. Strang. In him I have all confidence.

Write me a long letter immediately. But I must drop my pen and gallop off to visit the sick. Farewell. Peace and success crown all your labors.

W. E. M."

Mr. Strang proceeded. Here, Mr. President, we have another letter of my opponent to this same Gen. Bennett, professing his friendship for him in the strongest possible language; appealing to him as an old tried friend to sustain him at the coming Conference. Ah! that is a rich idea: to sustain him, W. E. McLellin, at a Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and now he says he was not ordained by me and did not join the church. What office was he to be sustained in? Why was this church asked to sustain him if he held neither office or membership in it?—When my opponent can answer these questions possibly a few among all men will cease to call him a liar, that prohibited word which you know is not to be applied to him in this discussion. Precious privilege! seldom before enjoyed! Such reckless falsehood! such cool unblushing impudence and hypocrisy as the course of my opponent in this matter hell seldom witnessed. I will not stand here to say one word in defense of Gen. Bennett; but hell itself would blush to hear any one say he was a fit object of such a man's friendship. There he writes "some things in confidence, not to be told to any body but his particular friend 'Pres. Strang,' in whom he has all confidence," though now he never had any confidence in either. I doubt not my opponent is nearer the truth now than then. Some men are too far gone in corruption to hope for any improvement in them. Among these my opponent has proved himself to occupy the first rank. Still I cannot doubt he now is much nearer the truth than then. I cannot conceive it possible that one whose heart is so perfectly steeped in corruption should have any confidence in another. Yes, I acknowledge I believe my opponent has told the truth in the last instance. But here is another of those curious documents.

Mr. Strang in like manner exhibited a letter in the hand writing of W. E. McLellin, post marked "Ravenna, O., Sep. 29," directed "J. J. Strang, Esq., Burlington, (Voree,) Wisconsin," and read the same in the following words:—

Shalersville, Portage Co., O., Sep. 27, '46.

PRES. J. J. STRANG:—

MY DEAR SIR,—I have long waited to receive further intelligence from you, according to your promise to me when we parted,—"I will write to you every week, or at least frequently." I would have written ere this, but I supposed that you would not reach Voree until near the time of your Conference. We have enjoyed good health since you were with us. I received your "line" from West Elizabeth—written at the house of Hushi—but have heard nothing from or of you since. I think you have either neglected me or your letters have miscarried. Since you were with us my professional business has been constant and unremitting, both day and night, until I feel much worn down—especially for the want of sleep—and now I have calls ahead that will take me two days and nights to fill.

And now, I wish it was my privilege to seat myself in Voree around some of your peaceful fire-sides and there freely talk over all matters of interest to us. But in as much as I could not raise means and in any way consistently leave home to come to Conference, I feel it my duty to express my mind and feelings by letter. My mind relative to the work of God, and my determination to be an active MEMBER in the church of Christ just as soon as circumstances will any way permit, are firm in every particular. And my anxiety to be immediately engaged in Our Father's business becomes sometimes almost unbounded.

I write this to assure you that your almost unbounded anxiety for me, and your great trouble and expense to visit me, were not in vain. I feel redeemed from uncertainty! O! that we dwelt where the saints of God will have their future peaceful home! O! how my soul pants to dwell among BRETHREN!—charming name!—instead of living where Satan's seat is, as we are here.

Permit me to suggest—and believing as I do that it will (by yourself) be received in the same kindly spirit in which I write, therefore I will be free to say that I think it would be wisdom to hold your next general Conference in Voree on the sixth of June, '47, instead of April. And that the further appointment of all important presiding officers in the church be deferred until that Conference. Many can then be present who cannot be in Oct. next.—I feel great anxiety on this point, knowing as I do the very great, influence that the Leaders of a religious community exercise over them either for good or for evil. The evils I have seen, but now I want to see "all things work together for good."

As to my taking the oversight and management of some important business on my arrival, my mind has undergone no change since we parted, and I shall be very much disappointed if yours has.

I could not leave home so as to be with you at your Conference, but if it is all-important I will move my family to Kirtland to spend the winter, and then come myself and devote my whole energies in the cause of truth. But I would prefer remaining with my family until spring, and then bring them with me. I am open for advice on all matters of importance, but I do not want that advice to be given in haste.

I want you to write immediately, and give me a history of your tour east—all important incidents—when you went, &c., &c. By all means send me the "Herald." Write to me all matters that you think would be interesting to me. Do write to me often and long letters. Now be sure to do so. I hate short letters. I would delight to receive a letter from you every two weeks at farthest.—O! how I shall want to hear from Conference! I have written this in a hurry when I should have been visiting my patients, but my heart is more taken up with the truth's shining forth again than all other matters.

Give my respects to Dr. Bennett. Tell him that I am W. E. M. as of old, and to any other of my acquaintance who are in Voree or may be at Conference.

If a press and fixtures are not purchased before next spring, I now think that I shall be able to do something in that matter myself. But as I said, I shall be subject to advice. No mortal can have a stronger desire to be with his friends than I—remember that. But be sure to write, and don't keep me so long on suspense as I have been this time. I anticipate much happiness in the society of men of principle and of honor in the faith. Time would pass more sweetly with me, it seems to me, than it ever did in life before.

You said in your last, "I have that line for you," &c. I have watched every mail closely to receive it, but it has not yet come.—Be sure to send it along immediately.

It is late at night and I have lost so much sleep that I must retire. In the morning I will send this to Ravenna so that it will go immediately, and be received before your Conference. If I had more time I would be more explicit, and would have written in better style.

My best wishes and feelings for your future welfare and happiness in establishing truth on a firm basis among the children of God. Shunning all the bogs and quicksands of all apostates of all former time, but especially of our age.

Be sure to write immediately after the close of your Conference.

Yours with all due respect,

W. E. McLELLIN.

Mr. Strang proceeded. Mr. President,—It is hardly necessary to say that these letters speak for themselves. I know you will agree with me that it is impossible for any two men to be more perfectly antagonistic than these letters and their author. Let us compare them. He is constantly asserting that he was never a member of the church under my Presidency; that he never held any office or priesthood under me; that he never had confidence in me; that he was always opposed to Gen. Bennett; that he warned me against him, and never would consent to have any thing to do with him. Yet, in these letters, he calls Gen. Bennett HIS OLD FRIEND, his VERY BEST FRIEND, &c.; tells him things IN CONFIDENCE to be communicated to no body but his particular friend PRES. STRANG, and immediately adds, "IN HIM I HAVE ALL CONFIDENCE." And if he was not a member of the church, perhaps he will tell us what he means when he talks of going to Voree to DWELL AMONG BRETHREN, and be an ACTIVE MEMBER. Moreover, some of us would like to hear from him what particular thing he expected a MORMON CONFERENCE to do for him, when he applied to Gen. Bennett TO STAND BY HIS INTERESTS AS "A FRIEND INDEED DURING CONFERENCE," if he held no priesthood in the church. It really looks as though he wished to be sustained in some capacity, when he authorizes his "VERY PARTICULAR FRIEND," GEN. BENNETT, to promise all that he possibly can PERFORM. Why was he willing to promise all he could possibly perform to a church of which he was not so much as a member? A precious lover of Mormonism he must be. Perhaps, too, he will tell us what "CAUSE" he was speaking of when he said "THE NEARER the RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PRES. STRANG AND ME the better it will be for the CAUSE; I realize it, and am on nettles to be in my CALLING;" and what his CALLING was that made HIM so IMPORTANT to the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" that the nearest possible relationship and intimacy between him and the Pres. was necessary; and he not a member of the church. The idea is rich indeed of a mere gentile having so important a calling in the church.

(To be continued.)

HERE WE ARE.

Yes, here we are, seated in a rough board shanty only twelve feet square, and that set in a hole dug in the ground for the want of means to make a warm house above ground. And who cares any thing about that? O, no body, as we know of. Our Savior said, when he lived among the proud and covetous on this earth, "that he had not WHERE to lay his head." He also said, "the servant should not be above his Lord." Jesus says again, "except a man deny himself, and take up his cross daily, he cannot be my disciple."—How thrilling the thought, that men, belonging to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, who profess to believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the word of God given through his prophets Joseph Smith and James J. Strang, which all go to confirm the doctrinal fact that the generation has now come that shall not all pass away before the Lord of glory shall be revealed from heaven in flaming fire and burn up all the proud, the covetous idolaters, and all that do wickedly, with all of these unbelieving and equally disobedient offsprings, that there shall not be left of them root or branch to encumber the heritage of God.

With these facts so plainly delineated before the eyes of men, and clear as language can make them, yet there are some on whom a kind providence has lavished more than a mere competence of this world's goods, who will quietly look on and leave the faithful, tried servants of God to live on less and coarser fare than what their horses or cattle do. If this was not a fact we would not say it, and was it not for the cause of God and his eternal truth's sake we would not say it at all. Oh! false hearted! Oh! hypocrite! Oh! idolater! How do you expect to escape the damnation of HELL!

We realize the importance of our calling and station in this last dispensation, in which God has placed us, and not ourselves.—There are many no doubt who are still following the old fashioned custom of the world of by-gone time, which is to lay up in store a goodly supply for posterity to enjoy when you are dead and gone.—But let me tell you in great plainness that the time is near at hand that it shall be with you and your posterity as it was to the antediluvians when Noah had finished the ark and himself, wife and children had entered into it and God shut them in, only this difference, your destruction will be by fire sent down from heaven, while theirs (the antediluvians) was by water. What then will avail all the accumulated wealth of the wicked who withhold their substance from the servants of God, who are called to build a place of deliverance for the righteous, viz., Mount Zion, according to the word of God.

We are often asked the question, brother Page, when are you going out to preach again? In point of strength and constitution of body we are about 33⅓ per cent. when compared with most other men who engage in common labor for a living; that is to say, in six days we can earn the wages of two days work, which is about $1,50. When, by this scanty income, I can supply my wife and children with daily bread and can lay up in store enough for them to subsist upon a few weeks in my absence, if God please, we shall then go out, and tell the church and the world to repent of all their ungodliness, worldly lusts and COVETOUSNESS, which is IDOLATRY. Besides the above, my wife must have a pair of shoes so that she can go to meeting, for at present she cannot for the want of them; and more, my children must have some winter clothes and shoes that they may go to school, and especially to our Sunday school taught by Pres. Strang. Ah! that is the place for our children to unlearn sectarian thinkso's, maybeso's, &c., and learn the knowledge of things as they are. Now, reader, draw your own conclusion when we shall go out to preach. If we should realize any thing at any time from any person to assist us in this matter why we should go the sooner, if not we shall go when it is consistent, for then it will become an imperative duty, and there we have it. This we have written not for the sake of ourself alone, but for all the well tried and faithful elders in the church who have given themselves entirely to the ministry for a series of years, and are worthy of the confidence of all good people, and especially the saints.

God bless the rich and poor who labor for Zion.

JOHN E. PAGE.

PRESIDENT STRANG.

Ye saints! how long shall it be so? that a man of the talent, intellect, high and holy calling of Pres. James J. Strang, with all the care and well being of the church of God on his hands, and the responsibility of editing the Gospel Herald, and the greatest share of the matter it contains originates with him. I ask, how long shall he be left to do that which, in the business of life, could be done by a mere dolt, whose talents are not adequate to any higher business than to carry stone in a basket to wait on a mason in the repairing of Pres. Strang's dwelling house. With my own eyes I witnessed this thing done by the person of Pres. Strang. Who does not know that if Pres. Strang had means to pay a common laborer for doing that business, at the simple pittance of 50 or 75 cts. per day, that he would do in the same time with his pen a thousand times more good for the church and the world. Ye rich! suppose you try the experiment of sending him some of your V's, X's and C's, if you please, and then patiently wait the Lord's time and see what will be your reward in the kingdom of God. As the Lord liveth, you will rejoice for so doing in the day of the coming of the Lord to sever the wicked from among the just.

JOHN E. PAGE.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Centreville, Crawford Co., Pa., Nov. 10th, 1847.

James J. Strang, President of "the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," by the will of God—Greeting:—

I feel to rejoice that the work of God progresses; that there is a prospect of more united and concentrated action by the members of the church generally for their own good and the welfare of Zion.—Zion must be built up in purity, or it cannot be built up at all.—God draws the line and we must walk by it, or our walk will not be accepted. I see the authorities in Voree are dealing in a summarily manner with those who profess to believe and to practice spiritual wifery. That is a very mischievous doctrine, and I fear it will be long before all its roots will be eradicated from the church. It is a doctrine which seizes upon and encourages all the lusts of the flesh, and professes to sanctify them by the power and authority of the holy priesthood. Better preach Christ and him crucified, and "say nothing but repentance unto this generation," and whereunto we have attained in righteousness walk by the same rule. I expect to get to heaven through the merit of Jesus Christ by keeping his commandments. May I be enabled to keep them and teach men to do the same, also not neglecting the least of them. God has blessed my labors in the gospel this season. I have baptized nine persons, five males and four females. May God preserve them for his kingdom. Enclosed I send you two dollars, &c.

I would that every male member would encourage the paper until its size could not only be doubled, but quadrupled. The brethren generally do not lay it to heart enough. The press is a mighty engine to spread truth when in right hands, and papers will reach people in numerous instances where preaching never can, until their minds are turned towards the truths of heaven in some other manner, to divest them of their prejudices.

Your brother in Christ,

STEPHEN POST.

☞ Do not talk of being a saint when you take the advantage of another's necessities to extort his means, or when you wilfully withhold from another his honest due. Remember, the eyes of God taketh cognizance of all you do. The world was made for Peter as well as Paul.

☞ There is no such a thing in truth that one man's time is worth more than another's. The difference exists only in the superior amount of good he can do in the same time.

An Indian Prophetess.—The Cherokee Advocate says, a young girl of the Creek nation recently fell into a trance, and has since been prophecying to the tribe. She says that while in this inanimate state she held communication with invisible spirits, who learned her a song, which she sings with great beauty, and effect. She has predicted one or two deaths which have come to pass and told from her own feelings of a murder at the very time it was committed at the distance of several miles from her home. She has also purchased her burial clothes, foretold at what time her death would take place and certain signs which would then be seen, and from which they could judge of the sincerity of her professions and the truth of her revelations.

Depth of Jacob's Well.—A recent English traveler, Dr. Wilson, gives the depth of 'Jacob's Well,' obtained by lowering an Arab down by a rope, as seventy-five feet. The bottom was scarcely covered with water at the time.

☞ The Arkansas battalion had arrived at Fort Leavenworth. The Omahas had attacked the Mormons and driven off their cattle. Two companies were sent to repress the disturbance.—St. Louis Union.

☞ The aristocracy of England now maintain the following standing army:—300,000 servants; 200,000 dogs; 200,000 horses; 600,000 of different kinds of game to minister to their indolence, pride, and hollow pomp, while hundreds and thousands have been starving for a morsel of food.—N. Y. Herald.

COMPARATIVE COST OF CHURCHES.

Up to the year 1694—almost a century and a half since, it was estimated that the total cost of St. Peter's at Rome, was fifty-two millions five hundred thousand dollars. It is stated in a late New York paper that the whole number of churches of all denominations in that city is 172, and their total cost amounts to $5,067,775, which is not one-tenth part of the cost of St. Peters at the time specified.—It seems, at first, hard to realize, how one Cathedral could have cost so much, but, when it is remembered that mere items of decoration in that superb edifice cost more than many modern churches, the gross amount for its structure is readily accounted for. For instance, the canopy over the high altar of St. Peter's cost $114,000, and the gilding of the same $45,000, whilst the total cost of twenty nine paintings, in mosaic, (one over each altar,) $668,000, or twenty-two thousand dollars each.

A Puzzler.—If a Mr. Randall is blessed with a son whom he names Ezra, and if Mr. Randall, upon the death of Ezra's mother, marries the daughter of Mr. Alvord, who a few years before had lost his wife, and subsequently, by a second wife, is blessed with a daughter that is named Mary, but who lives not long to lament the death of his first daughter, Mrs Randall, nor enjoy the society of his companion and daughter Mary; and if, after his death, Mr. Randall takes for his third wife the former wife of his father-in-law, and if his son Ezra, choose to marry the daughter of his father's third wife, Miss Mary Alvord, will any law, human or divine, be broken, and what relation will Ezra be to his father, or his children to his father's wife?

Six hundred and sixty-five of the eight hundred men who composed the South Carolina regiment of volunteers have either been killed or wounded.

PROSPECTUS FOR THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE AND APPENDIX.

We issue this Prospectus to apprise the public of renewed preparations on our part to publish the Congressional Globe and Appendix for the approaching session, and to invite subscriptions.—The two Houses having contracted with us for the work, on such terms as enable us now to make complete reports, to multiply and issue the numbers in quicker succession than heretofore, and without increasing the price to subscribers, we hope to make a good return for the liberality and high official sanction thus bestowed on the publication. We shall increase the volume at least one-third beyond the ordinary bulk, and endeavor to add to its usefulness by extending still further its large circulation.

This last is not the least important point in the view of Congress. Faithful and durable reports of the debates of the body are of value in proportion to the extent of their circulation among the people.—It is in this way that Congress is brought into the presence of its remote constituents—that it obtains easy access and holds communication with them from day to day, and renders the government really representative.

Having received from all parties in Congress the strongest marks of approbation and confidence, in the liberal means and permanent contract voted to continue the work, we shall not be found wanting in the impartiality and industry necessary to the fulfillment of the engagement on our part. The next session will task to the utmost the best efforts of those connected with the undertaking. It will be distinguished by discussions of extraordinary interest and results of abiding concern. The war, its origin and conduct by the officers in the cabinet and in the field, will furnish subjects of profound inquiry and consideration. The terms of peace, the disposition to be made of conquests, the consequences to be drawn from all that has been done, as affecting parties in this country, and especially as bearing on the approaching Presidential election, will open up novel and powerfully operating discussions, rendering the councils at Washington during the next year as pregnant of good or evil to this continent as those of Rome were to the Old World in the days of her early energy. Such a field for deliberation and action was never presented to any previous Congress. All that has transpired, or may hereafter transpire before the close of the approaching session of Congress, in New Mexico, California, in the capitol of Mexico, and the provinces still dependant on it, will come under the consideration of the next Congress. Its debates will contain the history of the war, and its action determine its results, whether they be decided by arms or diplomacy. And whatever is developed concerning this vast and interesting matter on the floor of Congress or in the Executive messages, will be found recorded in the Congressional Globe and Appendix.

The Congressional Globe is made up of the daily proceedings of the two Houses of Congress, and printed on superfine double royal paper, with small type, (brevier and nonpareil,) in quarto form, each number containing sixteen royal quarto pages. The speeches of the members, in this first form, are condensed—the full report of the prepared speeches being reserved for the Appendix. All resolutions, motions, and other proceedings, are given in the form of the Journals, with the yeas and nays on every important question.

Every member will have an opportunity to read his remarks before they are put to press, and alter our report if he shall think it incorrect.

The Appendix is made up of the President's annual message, the reports of the principal officers of the government that accompany it, and all speeches of members of Congress, written out or revised by themselves. It is printed in the same form as the Congressional Globe, and usually makes about the same number of pages during a session.

During the first month or six weeks of a session there is rarely more business done than will make two numbers a week—one of the Congressional Globe and one of the Appendix; but during the remainder of a session there is usually sufficient matter for two or three numbers of each every week. The next session will be unusually interesting, therefore we calculate that the Congressional Globe and Appendix together will make near 3,000 large quarto pages, printed in small type—brevier and nonpareil. We furnish complete indexes to both at the end of a session.

We will endeavor to print a sufficient number of surplus copies to supply all that may be miscarried, or lost in the mails; but subscribers should be very particular to file their papers carefully, for fear we should not be able to supply all the lost numbers.

We have a few surplus copies of the Congressional Globe for the last session of Congress, which we will sell for the original subscription price—$1,00 a copy. We have no surplus copies of the Appendix for that session.

TERMS.

For one copy of the Congressional Globe	$2,00
For one copy of the Appendix	2,00
For six copies of either	10,00

Our prices for these papers are so low that we cannot afford to trust them out. Therefore no person need consume time in writing for them unless the money accompanies the order.

Subscriptions should be here by the 13th of December, at farthest, to ensure all the numbers.

BLAIR & RIVES.

Washington, Oct. 4, 1847.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 9, 1847. [No. 38.

"TRUTH WILL PREVAIL."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

CATHOLIC VIEW OF PROTESTANT FALLACIES.

LETTER FROM JOHN MILINER TO JAMES BROWN, ESQ.

DEAR SIR,—Among serious Christians, who profess to make the discovery and practice of religion their first and earnest care, three different methods or rules have been adopted for this purpose. The first consists in a supposed private inspiration, or an immediate light and motion of God's spirit, communicated to the individual. This was the rule of faith and conduct formerly professed by the Montanists, the Anabaptists, the Family of Love, and is now professed by the Quakers, the Moravians, and different classes of the Methodists. The second of these rules, is the written word of God, or THE BIBLE, according as it is understood by each particular reader or hearer of it. This is the professed rule of the more regular sects of Protestants, such as the Lutherans, the Calvinists, the Socinians, the Church-of-England-men. The third rule is THE WORD OF GOD, at large, whether written in the Bible, or handed down from the apostles in continued succession by the Catholic Church, and as it is understood and explained by this church. To speak more accurately, besides their rule of faith, which is scripture and tradition, Catholics acknowledge an unerring judge of controversy, or sure guide in all matters relating to salvation,—namely, THE CHURCH. I shall now proceed to show that the first-mentioned rule, namely, a supposed private inspiration, is totally fallacious, inasmuch as it is liable to conduct, and has conducted many into acknowledged errors and impiety.

About the middle of the second age of Christianity, Montanus, Maximilla, and Priscilla, with their followers, by adopting this enthusiastical rule, rushed into the excess of folly and blasphemy.—They taught that the Holy Spirit, having failed to save mankind, by Moses, and afterwards by Christ, had enlightened and sanctified them to accomplish this great work. The strictness of their precepts, and the apparent sanctity of their lives, deceived many; till at length, the two former proved what spirit they were guided by, in hanging themselves.* Several other heretics became dupes of the same principles in the primitive and the middle ages; but it was reserved for the time of religious licentiousness, improperly called the Reformation, to display the full extent of its absurdity and impiety. In less than five years after Luther had sounded the trumpet of evangelical liberty, the sect of Anabaptists arose in Germany and the Low Countries. They professed to hold immediate communication with God, and to be commanded by him to despoil and kill all the wicked, and to establish a kingdom of the just,† who to become such, were all to be re-baptized. Carlostad, Luther's first disciple of note, embraced this ultra-reformation; but its acknowledged head, during his reign, was John Bockhold, a tailor of Leyden, who proclaimed himself King of Sion, and, during a certain time, was really sovereign of Munster, in Lower Germany. Here he committed the greatest imaginable excesses, marrying eleven wives at a time, and putting them, and numberless others of his subjects, to death, at the motion of his supposed interior spirit.‡ He declared that God had made him a present of Amsterdam and other cities, which he sent parties of his disciples to take possession of. These ran naked through the streets, howling out, "Wo to Babylon; wo to the wicked;" and, when they were apprehended, and on the point of being executed for their seditions and murders, they sang and danced on the scaffold, exulting in the imaginary light of their spirit.‖ Herman, another Anabaptist, was moved by his spirit to declare himself the Messiah, and thus to evangelize the people, his hearers: "Kill the priests, kill all the magistrates in the world. Repent: your redemption is at hand."§ One of their chief and most accredited preachers, David George, persuaded a numerous sect of them, that "the doctrine both of the Old and the New Testament was imperfect, but that his own was perfect, and that he was the true Son of God."¶ I do not notice these impieties and other crimes for their singularity or their atrociousness, but because they were committed upon the principle and under a full conviction of an individual and uncontrollable inspiration, on the part of their dupes and perpetrators.

Nor has our own country been more exempt from this enthusiastic principle than Germany and Holland. Nicholas, a disciple of the above-mentioned David George, came over to England with a supposed commission from God, to teach men that the essence of religion consists in the feelings of divine love, and that all other things relating either to faith or worship, are of no moment. He extended this maxim even to the fundamental precepts of morality, professing to continue in sin that grace might abound. His followers, under the name of the Familists, or the Family of Love, were very numerous at the end of the sixteenth century, about which time, Hacket, a Calvinist, giving way to the same spirit of delusion, became deeply persuaded that the spirit of the Messiah had descended upon him; and having made several proselytes, he sent two of them, Arthington and Coppinger, to proclaim, through the streets of London, that Christ was come thither with his fan in his hand. This spirit, instead of being repressed, became still more ungovernable, at the sight of the scaffold and the gibbet prepared in Cheapside for his execution. Accordingly he continued, till the last, exclaiming, "Jehovah, Jehovah; don't you see the heavens open and Jesus coming to deliver me!" &c.†† Who has not heard of Venner, and his Fifth Monarchy-men? who, guided by the same private spirit of inspiration, rushed from their meeting house in Cole-

*Euseb. Eccles. Hist. l. v. c. 15.

†"Cum Deo colloquium esse et mandatum habere se dicebant, ut, impiis omnibus interfectis, novum constituerent mundum, in quo pii solum et innocentes viverent et rerum potirentur."——Sleidan, De Stat. Rel. et Reip. Comment. l. iii. p. 45.

‡Hist. abrge. de la Reform. par Gerard Brandt, tom. i. p. 46.—Mosheim, Eccles. Hist. by Maclaine, vol. iv. p. 452.

‖Brandt, p. 49, &c.

§Idem, p. 51.

¶Mosheim, vol. iv. p. 484.

Ibid. Brandt.

††Fuller's Church Hist. b. ix. p. 113. Stow's Annals, A. D. 1591.

man street, proclaiming that they would "acknowledge no sovereign but King Jesus, and that they would not sheath their swords, till they had made Babylon (that is, monarchy) a hissing and a curse, not only in England, but also throughout foreign countries; having an assurance that one of them would put a thousand enemies to flight, and two of them ten thousand." Venner being taken and led to execution, with several of his followers, protested "it was not he, but Jesus, who had acted as their leader."

It was in the midst of these religious and civil commotions that the most extraordinary people, of all those who have adopted the fallacious rule of private inspiration, started up at the call of George Fox a shoemaker of Leicestershire. His fundamental propositions, as laid down by the most able of his followers, * are: that the Scriptures are not the adequate, primary rule of faith and manners,—but a secondary rule, subordinate to the Spirit, from which they have their excellency and certainty: that, "the testimony of the Spirit is that alone by which the true knowledge of God hath been, is, and can be revealed:" "that all true and acceptable worship of God is offered in the inward and immediate moving and drawing of his own Spirit, which is neither limited to places, times, nor persons."—Such are the avowed principles of the people called Quakers: let us now see some of the fruits of those principles, as recorded by themselves in their founder and first apostles.

George Fox tells of himself, that at the beginning of his mission he was "moved to go to several courts and steeplehouses (churches) at Mansfield and other places, to warn them to leave off oppression and oaths, and to turn from deceit, and to turn to the Lord. On these occasions the language and behavior of his spirit was very far from the meekness and respect for constituted authorities of the Gospel Spirit, as appears from different passages in his journal. He tells us of one of his disiples, William Simpson, who was "moved of the Lord to go, at several times, for three years, naked and barefoot before them, as a sign unto them, in markets, courts, towns, cities, to priests' houses, and to great men's houses, telling them, so should they all be stripped naked." Another Friend, one Robert Huntingdon, was moved of the Lord to go into Carlisle steeple-house, with a white sheet about him. We are told of a female Friend who went "stark naked, in the midst of public worship, into Whitehall chapel, when Cromwell was there;" and of another woman, who came into the parliament house with a trencher in her hand, which she broke in pieces, saying, "Thus shall he be broke in pieces." One of these Friends came to the door of the parliament house with a drawn sword, and wounded several, saying, "he was inspired by the Holy Spirit to kill every man that sat in that house." † But in no occurrence has George Fox and his followers been so embarrassed to save their rule of faith, as they have been to reconcile with it the conduct of the noted James Naylor.‡ When certain low and disorderly people, in Hampshire, disgraced their society, and became obnoxious to the laws, G. Fox disowned them,‖ but when a Friend, of James Naylor's character and services, became the laughing stock of the nation, for his presumption and blasphemy, there was no other way for the society to separate his cause from their own, but by abandoning their fundamental principle, which leaves every man to follow the spirit within him, as he himself feels it. The fact is, James Naylor, like so many other dupes of a supposed private spirit, fancied himself to be the Messiah, and in this character rode into Bristol, his disciples spreading their garments before him, and crying, Holy, holy, holy, Hosannah in the highest! Being scourged by order of Parliament, for his impiety, he permitted the fascinated women, who followed him, to kiss his feet and his wounds, and to hail him "the Prince of Peace, the Rose of Sharon, the fairest of 'ten thousand,'" &c.

I pass over many sects of less note, as the Muggletonians, the Labbadists, &c., who, by pursuing the meteor of a supposed inward light, were led into the most impious and immoral practices. Allied to these are the Moravian Brethren, or Hernhutters, so called from Hernhuth, in Moravia, where their apostle, Count Zindendorf, made an establishment for them. They are now spread over England, with ministers and bishops appointed by others resident in Hernhuth. Their rule of faith, as laid down by Zindendorf, is an imaginary inward light, against which the true believer cannot sin.—This they are taught to wait for in quiet, omitting prayer, the reading of the Scriptures, and other works.§ They deny that even the moral law contained in the Scriptures is a rule of life for believers. Having considered this system in all its bearings, we are the less surprised at the disgusting obscenity, mingled with blasphemy, which is to be met with in the theological tracts of the German count.

The next system of delusion which I shall mention, as proceeding from the fatal principle of an interior rule of faith, though framed in England, was also the work of a foreign nobleman, the Baron Swedenborgh. His first supposed revelation was at an eating house in London, about the year 1745. "After I had dined," says he, "a man appeared to me sitting in the corner of the room, who cried out to me with a terrible voice, don't eat so much. The following night the same man appeared to me, shining with light, and said to me, I am the Lord, your Creator and Redeemer: I have chosen you to explain to men the interior and spiritual sense of the Scriptures: I will dictate to you what you are to write. His imaginary communications with God and the angels were as frequent and familiar as those of Mahommed, and his conceptions of heavenly things were as gross and incoherent as those of the Arabian impostor. Suffice it to say, that his God is a mere man, his angels are male and female, who marry together and follow various trades and professions. Finally, his New Jerusalem, which is to be spread over the whole earth, is so little different from this sublunary world, that the entrance to it is imperceptible. So far is true, that the New Jerusalemites are spread throughout England, and have chapels in most of its principal towns.¶

---

* Robert Barclay's Apology for the Quakers.

† Maclaine's note on Mosheim, vol. v. p. 470.

‡ See History of the Quakers, by William Sewel, folio, p. 138.—Journal of G. Fox, p. 220.

‖ Journal of G. Fox, p. 320.

§ Wesley, in a letter which he inscribes, "To the Church of God at Hernhuth," says, "There are many whom your brethren have advised, though not in their public preaching, not to use the Ordinances—reading the Scripture, praying, communicating; as the doing of these things is seeking salvation by works. Some of our English brethren (Moravians) say: you will never have faith till you leave off the church and the sacraments: as many go to hell by praying as by thieving." Journal, 1740.—John Nelson in his journal tells us that the Moravians call their religion the Liberty of the Poor Sinnership; adding, that they "sell their prayer books, and leave off reading and praying, to follow the Lamb."

¶ Since the above letter was written, another sect, the Joannites, or disciples of Joanna Southcote, have risen to notice by their number and the singularity of their tenets. This female apostle has been led by her spirit to believe herself to be the woman of Genesis, destined to crush the head of the infernal spirit, with whom she supposes herself to have had daily battles, to the effusion of his blood. She believes herself to be, likewise, the woman of the Revelations crowned with twelve stars, which are so many ministers of the Established Church. In fact, one of these, a richly beneficed rector,

I am sorry to be obliged to enter upon the same list with these enthusiasts, a numerous class, many of them very respectable, of modern religionists, called Methodists; yet, since their avowed system of faith is, that this consists in an instantaneous illapse of God's Spirit into the souls of certain persons, by which they are convinced of their justification and salvation, without reference to Scripture or any other proof, they cannot be placed, as to their rule of faith, under any other denomination. This, according to their founder's doctrine, is the only article of faith; all other articles he terms opinions, of which he says, "the Methodists do not lay any stress on them whether right or wrong." He continues, "I am sick of opinions; I am weary to bear them; my soul loathes this frothy food." Conformably with this latitudinarian system, Wesley opens heaven indiscriminately to Churchmen, Presbyterians, Independents, Quakers, and even to Catholics. Addressing the last named, he exclaims, "O that God would write in your hearts the rules of self-denial and love laid down by Thomas a Kempis; or that you would follow, in this and in good works, the burning and shining light of your own church, the Marquis of Renty. Then would all who know and love the truth, rejoice to acknowledge you as the church of the living God."

At the first rise of Methodism in Oxford, A. D. 1729, John Wesley and his companions were plain, serious, Church-of-England-men, assiduous and methodical in praying, reading, fasting, and the like. What they practiced themselves, they preached to others both in England and in America; till becoming intimate with the Moravian brethren, and particularly with Peter Bohler, one of their elders, John Wesley "became convinced of unbelief, namely, a want of that faith whereby alone we are saved." Speaking of his past life and ministry, he says, "I was fundamentally a Papist, and knew it not." Soon after this persuasion, namely, on May 24, 1739, "going into a society in Aldersgate street," he says, "whilst a person was reading Luther's preface to the Romans, about a quarter before nine, I felt my heart strangely warmed; I felt I did trust in Christ, in Christ alone for salvation, and an assurance was given me that he had taken away my sins, even mine, and saved me from the law of sin and death."

What were, now, the unavoidable consequences of a diffusion of this doctrine among the people at large? Let us hear them from Wesley's most able disciple and destined successor, Fletcher of Madeley. "Antinomian principles and practices," he says, "have spread like wild-fire among our societies. Many persons, speaking in the most glorious manner of Christ, and their interest in his complete salvation, have been found living in the greatest immoralities. How few of our societies, where cheating, extorting, or some other evil hath not broke out, and given such shakes to the ark of the Gospel, that, had not the Lord interposed, it must have been overset! I have seen them who pass for believers, follow the strain of corrupt nature; and when they should have exclaimed against Antinomianism, I have heard them cry out against the legality of their wicked heurts, which, they said, still suggested that they were to DO something for their salvation." "How few of our celebrated pulpits, where more has not been said for sin than against it! The same candid writer, laying open the foulness of his former system, charges Richard Hill, Esq., who persisted in it, with maintaining that, "Even adultery and murder do not hurt the pleasant children, but rather work for their good." "God sees no sin in believers, whatever sin they commit. My sins might displease God; my person is always acceptable to him. Though I should outsin Manasses, I should not be less a pleasant child, because God always views me in Christ. Hence, in the midst of adulteries, murders, and incests, he can address me with, 'Thou art all fair, my love, my undefiled, there is no spot in thee.'" "It is a most pernicious error of the schoolmen to distinguish sins according to the fact and not according to the person." "Though I blame those who say, let us sin that grace may abound, yet adultery, incest, and murder, shall upon the whole, make me holier on earth and merrier in heaven."

These doctrines and practices, casting great disgrace on Methodism, alarmed its founder. He therefore held a synod of his chief preachers, under the title of a conference, in which he and they unanimously abandoned their past fundamental principles, in the following confession which they made:—"Quest. 17. Have we not, unawares, leaned too much to Calvinism? Ans. We are afraid we have. Q. 18. Have we not also leaned too much to Antinomianism? A. We are afraid we have. Q. 20. What are the main pillars of it? A. 1. That Christ abolished the moral law: 2. That Christians therefore are not obliged to observe it: 3. That one branch of Christian liberty is liberty from observing the commandments of God," &c. The publication of this retraction, in 1770, raised the indignation of the more rigid Methodists, namely, the Whitfeldites, Jumpers, &c., all of whom were under the particular patronage of Lady Huntingdon: accordingly her chaplain, the Hon. and Rev. Walter Shirley, issued a circular letter by her direction, calling a general meeting of her connection, as it is called, at Bristol, to censure this "dreadful heresy," which, as Shirley affirmed, injured the very fundamentals of Christianity.

Having exhibited this imperfect sketch of the errors, contradictions, absurdities, impieties, and immoralities, into which numberless Christians, most of them, no doubt, sincere in their belief, have fallen, by pursuing phantoms of their imagination for Divine illuminations, and adopting a supposed, immediate, and personal revelation, as the rule of their faith and conduct, I would request any one of your respectable society, who may still adhere to it, to reconsider the self-evident maxim laid down in the beginning of this letter; namely, That cannot be the rule of faith and conduct which is liable to lead us, and has led very many well-meaning persons, into error and impiety; I would remind him of his frequent mistakes and illusions respecting things of a temporary nature; then, painting to his mind the all-importance of ETERNITY, that is, of happiness or misery inconceivable and everlasting, I would address him in the words of St. Augustine, "What is it that you are trusting to, poor, weak soul, and blinded with the mists of the flesh: what is it you are trusting to?"

JOHN MILNER.

☞ We are compelled for want of room to omit many interesting passeges of this letter, relating to foreign sects, which we hope to notice hereafter.

☞ If any body wants a first rate fit out of the outward man we commend them to S. C. Child, whose shop is going up next west of the Temple. We have a coat of his make that we should like to see beat at any shop in Wisconsin. He can be found at Phineas Wright's.

---

and of a noble family, acts as her secretary in writing and sealing passports to heaven, which she supposes herself authorized to issue, to the number of 144,000, at a very moderate price. One of these passports in due form is in the writer's possession. It is sealed with three seals. The first exhibits two stars, namely, the morning star, to represent Christ, the evening star to represent herself.—The second seal exhibits the lion of Juda, supposed to allude to the insane prophet, Richard Brothers. The third shows the face of Joanna herself. Of late her inspiration has taken a new turn: she believes herself to be pregnant of the Messiah, and her followers have prepared silver vessels of various sorts for his use, when he shall be born.

INSPIRATION OF THE JEWISH PROPHETS.

BY ALEXANDER KEITH, D. D.

So abundant and obvious are the proofs of the want of true faith in a Redeemer from all iniquity, and so clear and conclusive, when impartially and fully investigated, are the evidences of Christianity, that it is infinitely more needful to urge on professing Christians in compliance with the Scriptural precept, to examine themselves whether they be in the faith, than to ask the unbeliever to abate one jot of his skepticism, till, if not altogether inveterate, it yield to positive evidence and demonstrative proof.

It is one great office of reason to distinguish between truth and error, to weigh the evidence which may be adduced on both sides of a question, and rejecting that which is false, and adhering to that which is true, to "judge what is right, and, trying all things, to hold fast what is good." While the undisguised enemies of the Christian religion have maintained, in contradiction to these Christian precepts, that it is not to be defended on the principles of human reason, nor fitted by any means to undergo such a trial, the decision may be left to the arbitrament of reason, whether the disbelief of the truth of Christianity be not of all things the most irrational as well as dangerous. Man has more understanding than the beasts that perish; and, in the exercise of that high faculty of our nature, it behooves him, undeceived either by vain imaginations or false pleasures, to see that—in the way in which he is going, or in which others would lead him—he neither go nor be led "like an ox to the slaughter," or be as "a bird that hasteth to the snare, and knoweth not that it is for his life."

"A wise man," says Hume, "proportions his belief to the evidence:" and we ask no other rule for the confirmation of faith, and the extinction of skepticism. Let us thus reason together from the first line to the last; let faith be proportioned to evidence; let the testimony of enemies be heard; let facts be looked at; and let the most direct inferences be drawn in the plainest exercise of unbiased reason, and every reader may decide for himself, on the soundest dictates of an enlightened judgment, on which side, to an absolute certainty and entire conviction, truth must lie, in respect to the question here to be discussed, whether that which was spoken by the prophets of old has come or not, or whether they spake as the Spirit gave them utterance, or out of the imaginations of their own hearts. "We speak as unto wise men, judge ye what we say."

Holding to the principle of rejecting, as entirely unnecessary, any preliminary assumption or supposition, we begin with the occular demonstration given by existing facts to the inspiration of the Old Testamenr prophets, whose writings were translated into Greek above three hundred and forty years before the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans.

Reason and Scripture alike warrant that the precedence in the Christian testimony should now be given to visible facts, which at the end do speak and cannot lie, and are not to be gainsaid. A divine doctrine might be taught, and yet the question be asked, Who hath believed our report? Human testimony may have been borne to it in ages past by a thousand tongues, and written by a thousand pens, and the same question be as often repeated. The light might shine in darkness, and yet the darkness comprehend it not. But though men will not judge what is right, nor, if told, believe what is true, yet, if they close not their eyes, and wilfully choose the darkness rather than the light, they must see what is set before their eyes, not in abstract forms, but in palpable facts. It is thus that the truth of the word of the Lord by the prophets may be seen; and the prediction more frequently repeated than any other, and affixed to many threatened judgments, may itself be thus verified—"they shall know that I am the Lord."

"If by a prophet," says Paine, "we are to suppose a man to whom the Almighty communicated some event that would take place in future, either there were such men or there were not. If there were, it is consistent to believe that the event so communicated would be told in terms that could be understood." It is the purpose of this article to show that there were such men; because the events communicated to them were told in terms not only easy to be understood, but impossible to be misapprehended; because the events were also such as no foresight or sagacity of man could ever have discovered or conceived; and because that, instead of having to be searched for in the records of a high antiquity, they have, in manifold instances, been recently or newly ascertained, so that all controversy may be here cut short by abundantly adducing existing facts and modern discoveries in literal fulfillment of manifold prophecies, the antiquity of which, as preceding these events, is altogether indisputable.

To accumulate opposing facts is not the worst mode of subverting wild and baseless theories; and positive proof may safely be set against unsubstantial and fanciful objections. The prophets of Israel have all been stigmatized as "impostors and liars," and the book as "a book of lies;" their writings, those especially of Isaiah, have been designated as "bombastical rant, full of extravagant metaphor, without application, and destitute of meaning." But, as every reader must see on comparing the predictions with their respective events, our enemies being witnesses, that which so far surpassed all conjecture as to be deemed extravagant metaphor, is uniformly made manifest to be the literal truth; and words could not have a clearer meaning or more precise application than those prophecies of which, after the lapse of many ages, we now see the fulfillment.

In a guilty world, where his laws are transgressed and his word is disregarded, the Lord is known by the judgment which he executes. In the development of them, so great a change in manifold instances has passed on human things, that these have become the reverse of what they were; and, in token that mercy rejoiceth against judgment, they shall yet again, as predicted, be the reverse of what they are. From one extreme to another, their changeful forms are ever shaped, in their appointed time, according to the prophetic word. And, while past history is a corroboration of that word, when the desolations of many generations shall be raised up, all flesh shall know that He, who hath spoken it and caused it to be done, is the Lord. But, restricting our view to existing facts, the inspiration of the prophets of Israel may be visibly and vividly demonstrated. "In the latter days" we may "consider it perfectly." And we may come and see the desolations which, because of iniquity, the Lord hath wrought in the earth. Ancient cities and kingdoms have borne "the burden" of his word. Before it, all the nations which in ancient times were the enemies of Israel, have been utterly destroyed, the Arabs excepted, who still dwell in the presence of their brethren. The Jews have been scattered among all nations, are yet dispersed in all countries, and distinct from every people; and their unparalleled fate is a perfect parallel of the prophecies. Judea, Ammon, Moab, Edom, and Philistia, bear their brand in every feature. A plain, whereon fishers spread their nets, is the prophetic representative of princely Tyre. Cottages of shepherds have supplanted the palaces of the lords of the Philistines; and wherever the rest of the land has not been given up to the desert, folds for flocks occupy the places of the hosts of the enemies of Israel. The chief city of Ammon is a stable for camels; that of Moab is a ruinous heap; flocks lie down in the empty cities, and the wandering tenants of the land flee for a refuge to the rocks. The temples of Petra are courts for owls; and the word of the Lord against the capital of Edom, amid perpetual monuments of its ancient glory, is written with a pen of iron on the rock forever. Babylon the great has been converted into heaps; and its walls, utterly broken, have been swept from off the face of the earth; and not a phantom evoked by vain fancy, but the spirit of prophecy, sits on every ruin, and each, as addressed, is an echo of its voice; and the whole diversified and yet discriminated scene is one of the rolls of its literal testimony spread forth before the world at this hour, although all the combined intelligence of Europe was unequal to the task, at the beginning of the present century, of depicting the ruins of Babylon with half the accuracy with which the prophets of Israel delineated the "grave," as now it lies, of "the greatest city," as Pliny termed it, "on which the sun ever shone."

While the multiplicity of predictions respecting Judea and the adjacent regions of Syria demands our primary consideration, Volney, from the copiousness of his details and the discriminating nature of his descriptions, as well as from his inveterate hostility to the Christian cause, has a right to be a leading witness. The prophecies are so luminous and appesite, that a word to point out their meaning or application would be superfluous. They are so numerous that, when viewed collectively, they in a great measure disclaim the aid of farther argument to elucidate the inspiration of which they testify. And in regard to the facts which render their fulfillment obvious, they are so striking and abundant as to render complete the triumph of truth over error. And as no man has contributed to this triumph so greatly as an enemy of the faith has unconsciously done, it is only needful to prefix a remark or two respecting the validity of his testimony before we bring those FACTS which he himself has stated to refute the arguments which he and all others have urged against the inspiration of the Old Testament prophets.

The name of Volney is too well known as that of a most zealous partisan and successful promoter of infidelity, for the possibility of his testimony ever being objected to as partial to the Christian cause. It assuredly was no intention of his to elucidate Scripture prophecy. And, whatever his theoretical tenets may have been, his character is now universally established—and he stands indisputably in the very first rank—as an accurate and intelligent delineator of the various features of the countries which he visited, and the character, condition, and manners of the inhabitants. His "Travels in Syria and Egypt" are justly characterized as "a treatise on the country which he visited;" "an admirable book," and of "extraordinary merit." (Edinburgh Review, No. 50, p. 417.) And the following "testimony of great value" is given by the Honorable Mountstuart Elphinstone, late Governor of Bombay, in his "Account of the Kingdom of Caubul." "Among many other talents, M. Volney possesses, in a remarkable degree, the merit of pointing out what is peculiar in the manners and institutions of the East, by comparing and contrasting them with those of Europe. So far does he excel all other writers in this respect, that if one wishes thoroughly to understand other travelers in Mohammedan countries, it is necessary to have read Volney first." And in reference to the fulness and accuracy of his descriptions, it must suffice to quote the following testimony of high and unqualified approbation, with which Malte Brun, the first authority in geography, introduces his description of Syria and Palestine:—

"The countries belonging to Asiatic Turkey which remain to be described, have so frequently attracted the attention of travelers, that a large library might be formed of the accounts of them which have been published. Two or three volumes could scarce contain the names of the pilgrims who have left journals of their travels in the Holy Land; works full of repetition and puerility, yet claiming the examination of the enlightened critic. From these, compared with the writings of Abulfeda and Josephus, the learned Bushing has formed an excellent geographical treatise. In modern times we have judicious missionaries, such as Dandini; antiquaries, as Wood; and naturalists, as Mandrel and Hesselquist, who have ably elucidated particular parts of these countries. It was received for the genius of Volney to combine their detatched accounts with the fruits of his own observation and study, so as to PRESENT THE WORLD WITH A COMPLETE DESCRIPTION OF SYRIA."

The description of Syria and Palestine given by Volney has not, therefore, to be considered as only that of a single eye witness, but as the collation and combination of many accounts. But though he sojourned long in the land, and saw what he described; though he might have searched into journals of travels so numerous that it would require a volume to contain their names; although the substance of these was made ready to his hand, and although his description of Syria be justly esteemed "a model," and accounted complete; yet even he after all his observation and study, however satisfactory may be the result to the geographer, presents not information sufficiently discriminating and copious to satisfy the inquirer who seeks, but seeks in vain, for any description of Syria so full and complete as to supply of itself every predicted fact, or to cope with the vision of the prophets. To the evidence of Volney that of other and more recent travelers must therefore be superadded.

It needs not a syllable to tell how clearly his description, which was written towards the close of the 18th century, and those of others, written in the present, accord with those prophecies, the latest of which were indisputably delivered at least several centuries before the Christian era, seeing that the perfect parallelism between the predictions and the events, in reference to Palestine and many countries besides, may be thus set before the sight.

PROPHECY.

"The generation to come of your children that shall rise up after you, and THE STRANGER THAT SHALL COME FROM A FAR LAND, when they see the plagues of that land, and the sicknesses which the Lord hath laid upon it, shall say," Deut. xxix. 22.

FULFILLMENT.

"I journeyed in the empire of the Ottomans, and traversed the provinces, which formerly were kingdoms of Egypt and Syria."—"I wandered over the country"—"I enumerated the kingdoms of Damascus and Idumea, of Jerusalem and Samaria. This Syria, said I to myself, now almost depopulated, then contained a hundred flourishing cities, and abounded with towns, villages, and hamlets. What are become of so many productions of the hand of man?—What are become of these ages of abundance and of life?" &c.—Volney's Ruins, c. i., 11, p. 1, 2, 7.

PROPHECY.

"Wherefore hath the Lord done this unto this land? What meaneth the heat of this great anger?"—Deut. xxix. 24.

FULFILLMENT.

"Great God! from whence proceed such melancholy revolutions? For what cause is the fortune of these countries so strikingly changed? Why are so many cities destroyed? Why is not that ancient population re-produced and perpetuated?"—Ib., c. ii., p. 8.

"I will scatter you among the heathen, and will draw out a sword after you: and your land shall be desolate."—Lev. xxvi. 33.

RULFILLMENT.

The Jews, as all know, have been scattered among the heathen.—"I have traversed this desolate country," says Volney.—Ruins, c. ii., p. 7.

PROPHECY.

"Then shall the land enjoy her Sabbaths," (or rest, or be untilled.)

FULFILLMENT.

"Every day I found in my route, fields abandoned by the plough."—Ib. c. i. "The art of cultivation is in the most deplorable state."—Volney's Travels, v. ii., p. 413.

PROPHECY.

"As long as it lieth desolate, and ye be in your enemies' land; even then shall the land rest."—Lev. xxvi. 34. "The land also shall be left of them, and shall enjoy her Sabbaths, or rest, while she lieth desolate without them," 43. "They (the Jews on their final return) shall raise up the former desolations, the desolations of many generations." Isa. lxi. 4. See also Isa. xxxiii. 15. lviii. 12. Ezek. xxxvi. 24, 25, 33, 36. xxxviii. 8. Dan. ix. 27. Hosea iii. 4.

FULFILLMENT.

"Why do these lands no longer boast their former temperature and fertility? Why have these favors been transferred, as it were, for so many ages, to other nations and different climes?"—Volney's Ruins, c. xi. p. 9.

PROPHECY.

"Your land, strangers devour it in your presence, and it is desolate, as overthrown by strangers." Isa. i. 7.

FULFILLMENT.

"Within two thousand five hundred years we may reckon ten invasions which have introduced into Syria a succession of foreign nations."—Volney's Travels, vol. i., p. 356.

"Destruction upon destruction is cried." Jer. iv. 20. "Mischief shall come upon mischief." Ezek. vii. 22, 26. "Tell your children of it, and let your children tell their children, their children another generation. For a nation is come up upon my land, strong, and without number," &c. Joel i.

FULFILLMENT.

"Syria became a province of the Roman empire. In the year 622 (636) the Arabian tribes collected under the banners of Mohammed, seized, or rather laid it waste. Since that period, torn to pieces by the civil wars of the Fatimites and the Ommiades, wrested from the caliphs by their rebellious governors, taken from them by the Turkmen soldiery, invaded by the European crusaders, retaken by the Mamelukes of Egypt, and ravaged by Tamerlane and his Tartars, it has at length fallen into the hands of the Ottoman Turks."—Volney's Travels, p. 357.

PROPHECY.

"I will give it into the hands of strangers for a prey."

FULFILLMENT.

Judea has been the scene of frequent invasions, "which have introduced a succession of foreign nations (des peuples etrangers.")—Travels, p. 365.

PROPHECY.

"And into the wicked of the earth for a spoil." Ezek. vii. 21.

FULFILLMENT.

"When the Ottomans took Syria from the Mamelukes, they considered it only as the spoil of a vanquished enemy. According to the law, the life and property of the vanquished belong to the conquerors."—Travels, vol. ii. p. 370.

PROPHECY.

"The robbers shall enter into it and defile it." Ezek. vii. 22.

FULFILLMENT.

"The government is far from disapproving a system of robbery and plunder."—Travels, p. 381.

PROPHECY.

"The holy places shall be defiled."

FULFILLMENT.

"The holy places were polluted with the monuments of idolatry."—Gib. Hist., vol. iv., p. 100. The Mosque of Omar now stands on the site of the Temple of Solomon.

PROPHECY.

"Zion shall be plowed over like a field." Jer. xxvi. 18. Micah iii. 12.

FULFILLMENT.

"After the final destruction of the Temple by the arms of Titus and Hadrian, a ploughshare was drawn over the consecrated ground as a sign of perpetual interdiction."—Gibbon, vol. iv. p. 100. "At the time when I visited this sacred spot (Mount Zion) one part of it supported a crop of barley, another was undergoing the labor of the plough."—Mic. iii. 12.—Richardson's Travels.

PROPHECY.

"I will bring the land into desolation; and your enemies which dwell therein shall be astonished at it." Lev. xxvi. 32. "Every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished." Jer. xviii. 6.

FULFILLMENT.

"So feeble a population in so excellent a country may well excite our astonishment; but this will be increased if we compare the present number of inhabitants with that of ancient times."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii. p. 366.

PROPHECY.

"Your highways shall be desolate." Lev. xxvi. 22.

FULFILLMENT.

"Everywhere one might have seen cultivated fields, frequented roads, and crowded habitations. Ah! what are become of those ages of abundance and of life!"—Ruins, c. ii. p. 7. "In the interior parts of the country there are neither great roads, nor canals, nor even bridges, &c. The roads in the mountains are extremely bad. It is remarkable that we never see a wagon nor a cart in all Syria."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii. p. 417, 419.

PROPHECY.

"The wayfaring man ceaseth." Isa. xxxiii. 8.

FULFILLMENT.

"Nobody travels alone. Between town and town there are neither posts nor public conveyances," &c.—Travels, vol. ii. p. 418.

PROPHECY.

"I will destroy your high places, and bring your sanctuaries into desolation." Lev. xxvi. 30, 31. Amos ii. 5.

FULFILLMENT.

"The temples are thrown down."

PROPHECY.

"The palaces shall be forsaken." Isa. xxxii. 14.

FULFILLMENT.

"The palaces demolished."

PROPHECY.

"I will destroy the remnant of the sea-coast." Ezek. xxv. 16.

FULFILLMENT.

"The ports filled up."

PROPHECY.

"I will make your cities waste." Lev. xxix. 31.

FULFILLMENT.

"The towns destroyed."

PROPHECY.

"Few men left." Isa. xxiv. 6.

FULFILLMENT.

"And the earth stripped of inhabitants."

PROPHECY.

"I will make the land desolate; yea, more desolate than the wilderness towards Diblath, in all their habitations."

FULFILLMENT.

"Seems a dreary burying-place."*—Ruins, c. ii. p. 8.

PROPHECY.

"Behold, the Lord maketh the land empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down; and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. And it shall be as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with the master, &c." Isa. xxiv. 1.

---

* In this single sentence, without the addition or exception of a word, Volney thus clearly and unconsciously shows the fulfillment of no less than six predictions.

FULFILLMENT.

"Syria has undergone revolutions which have confounded the different races of the inhabitants."—Volney's Travels, vol. i. p. 356.

PROPHECY.

"The earth is defiled under the inhabitants thereof." Isa. xxiv. 1. "The worst of the heathen shall possess their houses." Ezek. vii. 24.

FULFILLMENT.

"The barbarism of Syria is complete."—Travels, vol. i. p. 442.

PROPHECY.

"Because they have transgressed the law, changed the ordinances, broken the everlasting covenant."

FULFILLMENT.

"The pure Gospel of Christ, everywhere the herald of civilization and science, is almost as little known in the Holy Land as in California or New Holland."—Dr. Clarke's Travels, vol. ii. p. 405.

PROPHECY.

"Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth."

FULFILLMENT.

"God has, doubtless, pronounced a secret malediction against the earth."—Volney's Ruins, c. ii. p. 11.

PROPHECY.

"And they that dwell therein are desolate." Isa. xxiv. 5, 6.

FULFILLMENT.

"I wandred over the country and examined the condition of the peasants, and no where perceived aught but robbery and devastation, misery and wretchedness."—Volney, c. ii. p. 2.

PROPHECY.

"The vine languisheth." Isa. xxiv. 5, 6.

FULFILLMENT.

"In the mountains they do not prune the vines, and they no where ingraft trees."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii. p. 335.

PROPHECY.

"The new wine mourneth; they shall not drink wine with a song." Isa. xxiv. 9.

FULFILLMENT.

"Good cheer would infalibly expose them to extortion, and wine to a corporeal punishment."—Travels. vol. i. p. 480.

PROPHECY.

"Strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it." Isa. xxiv. 9.

FULFILLMENT.

"The wines of Jerusalem are most execrable."—Jolilffe's Letters from Palestine. vol i. p. 184. "The wine drank in Jerusalem is probably the very worst to be met with in any country."—Wilson's Travels. p. 130

PROPHECY.

"All the merry-hearted do sigh. The shouting shall be no shouting."

FULFILLMENT.

"The Arabs (in singing) may be said to excel most in the melancholy strain. To hear his plaintive tones, his sighs, and sobs, it is almost impossible to refrain from tears."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii. p. 440.

PROPHECY.

"The mirth of tabrets ceaseth; the joy of the harp ceaseth." Isa. xxiv. 8.

FULFILLMENT.

"They (the inhabitants) have no music but vocal, for they neither know nor esteem instrumental. Such instruments as they have not excepting their flutes, are detestable."—Volney's Travels, p. 439.

PROPHECY.

"The noise of them that rejoice endeth: all joy is darkened; the mirth of the land is gone." Isa. xxiv. 8, 11.

FULFILLMENT.

"They have a serious, nay, even sad and melancholy countenance. They rarely laugh; and the gaiety of the French appears to them a fit of delirium."—Volney's Travels, vol. i. p. 476, 461.

PROPHECY.

"Many days and years shall ye be troubled, ye careless women. Tremble, ye women that are at ease; be troubled, ye careless ones; strip you and make you bare, and gird sackcloth upon your loins." Isa. xxxii. 10, 11.

FULFILLMENT

"In Palestine you may see married women almost uncovered."—Volney's Travels, vol. i. p. 361.

PROPHECY.

"Upon the land of my people shall come up thorns and briers." Isa. xxxii. 10, 11.

FULFILLMENT.

"The earth produces only briers and wormwood."—Volney's Ruins, p. 9.

PROPHECY

"The forts and towers shall be for dens for ever." Isa. xxxii. 14.

FULFILLMENT.

"At every step we meet with ruins of towers, dungeons, and castles with fosses, frequently inhabited by jackalls, owls, and scorpions."—Volney's Travels, vol. ii. p. 336.—Advent Herald.

(To be continued.)

☞ The only excuse we have to make for the almost entire want of original matter in this No. is, that we have been employed constantly in repairing our house for winter, which we expect will set in shortly. We had plenty of means in hand with which we could have hired a hand, but these means all properly belong to the Temple and we would not on any account divert them to any other purposes.

☞ A public feast will be held at the house of the prophet, in Voree, on the first day of the new year, and all the saints are invited to meet with him. Saints in distant places are requested to hold feasts with one another on the same occasion, but if their circumstances will admit we should be most happy to entertain them here that day and the following, (Sabbath.) JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, December 9th, 1847.

MUSINGS.

What is the reason that men have so little confidence in their own words? I can see none, except that they know themselves liars.—We always find in the church more or less men who are constantly telling of the things God has revealed to them, things that no body else knows any thing about perhaps; and what is most singular few of them have any continuing faith in their own revelations.—So often as we hear of any man's pretending that God has revealed to him things that do not belong to his place, or are not necessary to the accomplishment of his ministry, we set him down as deceived; and when any one undertakes to dictate by pretended revelation to his pastors and leaders, we set him down as on the way to apostacy.

FORGETFUL PROPHETS.

One principle of the gospel as taught by Jesus Christ is, that the "Holy Ghost" shall teach his servants all things, and bring all things to their remembrance which he had said unto them. John xii. 26.

Wm. E. McLellin, who now is trying to wake up one David Whitmer of Mo. to a remembrance that he (Whitmer) is a prophet, says that he was present when Joseph Smith ordained Whitmer to the office of First President of the church, sometime in the summer of 1834, constituting Whitmer Smith's legal successor from that instant. After that McLellin joins Geo. M. Hinkle of Buffalo, Iowa Territory. After that he joins S. Rigdon of Pa. After that he acknowledges J. J. Strang as the true successor of Joseph Smith. After all this chase to find Smith's successor, lo and behold! he rises up as out of a snooze and says, "O, I forgot that Smith ordained Whitmer;" and further says, "that God has manifested it unto him by revelation." O! how forgetful such prophets are.—Again: we have just squinted at a hand bill signed Wm. Smith and Aaron Hook Pres. The bill is headed in large capitals, "WILLIAM SMITH, PATRIARCH (father) AND PROPHET OF THE MOST HIGH GOD." The analysis of his assumed title is this,—"Father of God." He further says, "which right of authority (the First President) I claim by revelation from God, and by the ordination which I received from under the hands of Joseph Smith, which was to be a Prophet, Seer and Revelator. Notice, the gift of being a "Translator" is left out.

It is well known that, after Joseph Smith's death, Wm. Smith set himself up as the "guardian" of the church till Joseph, the prophet's son, should become of lawful age to take his place as the President of the church. Wm., why did you not take the President's office at the first? O, I suppose you forgot that you was ordained to that office by Joseph. Why did you adhere to James J. Strang as the President of the church as Joseph's successor, when you say you have "renounced him (Strang) because he has no claims?"—Why, if you know that now you knew it from the first. O, you "forgot it." Oh! what a set of forgetful prophets! who ever heard the like! David Whitmer forgot that he was a prophet. Brigham Young forgot for a long season that he was a prophet. And now William Smith, the martyred prophet's own natural brother, till lately, forgot that he was a prophet. I wonder who the old prince of tophet will send next to say that they were ordained by Joseph Smith to be his successor and they "forgot it." Infidels, if you laugh the saints have reason to mourn over the depravity of man.

JOHN E. PAGE.

THE SABBATIC RIVER.—Those who have read the celebrated historian Josephus, will recollect that in the Jewish wars, he gives an account of a river in Palestine, that he says was visited by Titus Cæsar, as he was journeying through Syria, which flowed only one day in seven, and rested on the other six days. His description is so minute and particular as to exclude the idea that he was dealing in fiction, yet the most distinguished modern authorities have considered it as either entirely fabulous or the river as extinct, but a writer in Silliman's Journal declares that he discovered a river answering in locality to the Sabbatical River of Josephus, while traveling through Syria in 1845. It now, however, only intermits two days in three, although the natives in the neighborhood still contend that it runs but one mile in seven, and call it the Sabbatic River. It proceeds, says this writer, from a cave in which is an intermitting spring.

The difference in time may be caused by changes in the fountain from which it proceeds as it must have flowed as represented by the ancient and faithful Jewish historian to have obtained its name. Several instances are recorded by geographers of periodical rivers and fountains so that there is nothing impossible in the present instance, although it has been so long regarded as fabulous.—Mississippi Free Trader.

COURTESY A MEANS OF SUCCESS.—Uncourteous habits have prevented many a man's success in life. Hasty, hot-brained, care-for-nobody individuals often plunge themselves into difficulties in consequence of their arrogant or overbearing manners: or their rude and ungentlemanly language, though it may be thoughtlessly expressed. It is often not the great but the little acts of incivility that are treasured up and remembered.—Exchange Paper.

CHINESE NEWSPAPERS.

A foreigner in China has started a newspaper in the Chinese language. Whether it succeeds or not remains to be seen. It is a novelty to the people. The only paper published by the Chinese that can at all be depended upon is the Pekin Gazette. This is published at irregular periods at the Capital, and thence distributed throughout the Empire. It is a matter of great importance for the Madarins to secure an early reading of the Gazette, in order that they may be enabled to proceed on their official duties; for it generally seems that the only means by which the officers of government arrive at a knowledge of the will of their sovereign, is through the medium of that Gazette.

Express riders are in readiness in Pekin to carry the Gazette in different directions over the Empire as soon as it is published.—The same rider carries the Gazette from Pekin to any one city, as for instance Canton, performing the distance on horseback by means of relays of horses at short distances. The distance from Pekin to Canton is performed in six days, riding incessantly night and day; and, as you may readily imagine, proves fatal to a great portion of the riders. As a general rule, no rider is able to make more than two trips, as he either dies or becomes permanently disabled.—Jour. Com.

HYMN.

Though in the outward church below,
The wheat and tares together grow;
Jesus ere long will weed the crop,
And pluck the tares in anger up.
For soon the reaping time will come,
And angels shout the harvest home.

Will it relieve their horrors there,
To recollect their stations here;
How much they heard, how much they knew,
How much among the wheat they grew?

No! this will aggravate their case,
They perish'd under means of grace;
To them the word of life and faith
Became an instrument of death.

We seem alike when thus we meet,
Strangers might think we all were wheat;
But to the Lord's all-searching eyes,
Each heart appears without disguise.

The tares are spared for various ends,
Some for the sake of praying friends:
Others the Lord, against their will,
Employs his counsels to fulfill.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 16, 1847. [No. 39.

"TRUTH WILL PREVAIL."

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

For the Gospel Herald.

PRESIDENT STRANG:—

SIR,—By poring over the "Advent Herald" of Oct. the 9th, 1847, I noticed an article headed, "The Kingdom Within You."—In the main we view the article to be a sound one, yet there are some points in it which we deem to be heretical, which serves to cast a dark shade over the whole article, as well as over the whole book of God, (the Bible.) Those points which we consider to be objectionable in the article alluded to we enclose in indexes, which we consider worthy of a few remarks, to expose the errors embraced in them.

If you think the article, with our remarks, worthy a place in your valuable paper, we think it possibly may be of some use to your readers.

JOHN E. PAGE.

"THE KINGDOM WITHIN YOU.

"BRO. HIMES:—There is one passage that is difficult for me to understand: "The kingdom of heaven is within you." Some of my brethren bring this to prove that the kingdom of heaven has been set up. I want you to send me your views on that scripture.

HUGH MCQUILLAN.

"This text is found in Luke xvii. 21. It seems that the Savior had been "demanded of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should come?" They therefore admitted that it was future, and had not then come. Immediately the Savior answered the Pharisees, and said unto them, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation," (parateereesis,*) or outward display: or as Wesley says, "with outward pomp:" "neither shall they say, Lo here! or, Lo there! for behold, the kingdom of God is within you."—There are seven different words in the New Testament which are translated "within." The word which is most commonly used, is "en." The word which is here used, is "entros," and occurs but in one other place, (Matt. xxiii. 26,) where it is also rendered within. It is also defined by Donnegan, Pickering, and others, as "in, within, within reach of," "inside," "at this side," &c. This text is quoted to prove that the kingdom of God is in the hearts of his children, and consequently a spiritual kingdom. This conclusion we consider to be lame. For had the Pharisees inquired for a kingdom that was in their hearts, they would not have inquired when it would come. Again: it will be noticed that the Savior, in reply, directed his remarks to the Pharisees; and with such an interpretation, it would be asserting that the kingdom of God was in their hearts. Now this could not be; for they were the enemies of Christ's kingdom. And yet the kingdom of God was within those Pharisees whom he was addressing; for the Savior thus asserts it, and we have seen that it is correctly translated. As we have seen that the kingdom of God was within them, and could not be in their hearts, it must be within them in a different sense. As the Savior could not have asserted that it was within each one of those wicked, hypocritical Pharisees individually, it follows that it must have been within them collectively, i. e., in the midst of those to whom he was speaking, or as Wesley and some others translate it, among them.

"As we have seen that the kingdom of God could not be in the hearts of the Pharisees, in what sense could it be among them? A kingdom may be represented by its King, as well as by the territory; and in their midst he stood who "was born King of the Jews." It was therefore true that the kingdom of God was within the circle of Pharisees to whom he spake, even in the person of their King.

"When the Savior had thus spoken to the Pharisees, in reply to their interrogation, he turned and "said unto the disciples, The days will come, when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of man, and ye shall not see it. And they shall say to you, See here! or, See there! go not after them, nor follow them. For as the lightning that lighteneth out of the one part under heaven, shineth unto the other part under heaven; so shall also the Son of man be in his day. But first must he suffer many things, and be rejected of this generation. And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all.—Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot: they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom, it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all: even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed. In that day, he which shall be upon the house-top, and his stuff in the house, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewise not return back. Remember Lot's wife. Whosoever shall seek to save his life, shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life, shall preserve it. I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two men shall be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. And they answered and said unto him, Where, Lord? And he said unto them, Wheresoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together."

"From these remarks of the Savior we learn, that before the kingdom could be established under the whole heaven, its King must be rejected of the Jews, and suffer many things of them; that when he should come to reign, he would appear as apparent as the lightning, which is seen from one end of heaven to the other; and that at his coming there would be a division of those living, and whether they were found on the house-top, in the field, in the bed, or in the mill, one portion of them would be taken—caught up to meet him, and the other left, to be burned in the conflagration.

"The question of the Pharisees, when the kingdom of God should appear, shows their expectation of its near appearing. Such an expectation was in accordance with the teaching of the Savior and the disciples, that the kingdom of heaven was at hand, and within the reach of the Jews. Christ was offered to the Jews as their Savior and King, and was rejected of them. Nothing is plainer than that for this rejection, they were rejected of him, their city destroyed, and they led into captivity. Now, if these judgments fell on them as the consequence of their rejection of the Savior, it follows that had they not rejected him, these judgments would not have followed, but contrawise, blessings."

* "The act of observing, or remarking.—observation—observance—a superstitious observance."—DONNEGAN.

It equally follows too that Isaiah and all the rest of the prophets who had spoken of Christ's crucifixion, would have proved false, and thus left the Bible believer to turn infidel or reject Christ as an impostor.

"We cannot avoid the conclusion, that, had the Jews accepted of Christ as their Savior and king, it would have restored them from dependence on the heathen nations, and he would have reigned over them as their king."

The conclusion follows too that all that the prophets had said concerning the scattering of the Jews into all nations and kingdoms of the earth would also have proved untrue.

"And that in view of this offer which was to be made to them, many of the promises in the Old Testament were conditionally made to the Jews, which, therefore, on account of their rejection, ☞ will never be fulfilled to them." ☜

Mr. Himes, if the "promises in the Old Testament" are "never to be fulfilled to the Jews" literally from Moses to Malachi, the Old Testament is nothing but a bundle of nonsense and folly, a tissue of lies, and the OATHS and COVENANTS of God as therein set forth are but falsehoods expressed in the name of God. We understand the term IF to be conditional, but the terms SHALL and WILL to be positives, yea and amen. Please read Deut. xxviii. xxx. 1 to 10 inclusive. Also, Jer. xxx. xxxi. xxxii. xxxiii. Isaiah xi. lx. to the end of the book. Zech. viii. to the end of the book. Joel iii. Ezek. xxxvi. to the end of the book. If the scriptures above quoted do not prove to you and all other men that the "covenants" and "promises" of God made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and their literal seed after them will be fulfilled to the Jews as a nation and people, the "Old Testament" is of no use to you or any other man more than it has been to you and others to prove that Christ would make his second advent in 1813.

"To this conditional offer, we think the prophecy of Malachi particularly applies. That prophecy was "the burden of the word of the Lord to Israel." There God shows to the nation how he had elected Jacob and loved him; and had hated and rejected Esau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness. Thus God had chosen Israel, and made a covenant with them of life and peace, had bestowed on them unnumbered privileges, and sourrounded them with his favor and protection.—And yet they had abused their privileges, had been corrupted as a people, and had become indifferent to the God of heaven. They offered polluted bread upon the altar of God; and in asking wherein they had polluted him, they pronounced his table contemptible.—They had offered the blind for sacrifice, the lame and the sick,—offering to God what they would not offer to their governor; therefore God had no pleasure in them, and would not accept an offering at their hands. They had pronounced the table of the Lord polluted; they had snuffed at the service of the Lord, and pronounced it a weariness. Therefore God declared that if they would not learn, nor lay it to heart, to give glory unto his name, he would even send a curse upon them, and curse their blessings; would corrupt their seed, and spread dung upon their faces. They had departed out of the way, had caused many to stumble at the law, and corrupted the covenant of Levi; and so God made them contemptible and base before all the people, acording as they kept not his ways, but had been partial in the law, and had wearied the Lord with their words. Therefore the Lord declared, iii. 1,—"Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me; and the Lord whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in; behold, he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts." Has this portion of the prophecy been fulfilled? Has the messenger been sent to prepare the way before the Lord? ☞ It has been fulfilled as predicted by Malachi." ☜

We as emphatically say it has not been fulfilled. Did Christ ever come "suddenly to his temple?" We say never, in the sense of the prophet. Did the Jews "delight" in Christ? Never, as a people. Did Christ ever set as a refiner of the Jews? No! Did Christ ever purify the sons of Levi? No! Did the sons of Levi ever offer offerings in Jerusalem pleasant and acceptable to the Lord, in or since the days of Christ till now? No, never!

The question may arise, to whom does Malachi have reference as the "messenger?" We answer,—When the Jews have fully effected their return to the land of Canaan from the "four corners of the earth," and their brethren, the ten tribes, return with them from the "north country," according to Jer. iii. and xvi., then look for the armies of the "chief prince of Meshech Tubal ("Gog and Magog") to wage a war with Israel according to Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. Joel iii.; which war will continue for three years and a half. The army of Magog will succeed in taking "one half of the city," (Jerusalem,) Zech. xiv. 2, and when they are in this siege then look for "Elijah the prophet," or, in other words, the "messenger," whom, with one other constituting the "two witnesses," Rev. xi., which the army of Magog will kill; after their "dead bodies have laid for three days and a half in the streets of the city, then look for Christ to make his advent on the Mount of Olives according to Zech. xiv.; THEN, and not till THEN, will Christ "sit as a refiner of the Jews, and purge the sons of Levi that they may offer an offering in righteousness," that the "offerings of Judah and Jerusalem may be pleasant in the sight of the Lord."

It happened to the Jews at the first advent of Christ as it is now happening in some manner to the Millerites, or "second advent advocates." The Jews overlooked the first advent of Christ in his "humiliation," and looked for his advent as described relative to his second appearing by the prophets, although that subject was quite as much in the dark to their bewildered understandings as the gathering of Israel is to a Millerite before the second advent of Christ.—It appears by the following texts that Christ undertook to explain to the Jews the difference there was between John the Baptist, "as the voice of one crying in the wilderness," and the "messenger" spoken of by Malachi, iii. 1.

Luke vii. 24, "And when the messengers of John were departed, he began to speak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out unto the wilderness for to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

25. But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously appareled, and live delicately, are in king's courts.

26. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet.

27. This is he of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

28. For I say unto you, Among those that are born of women there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist; but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he.

29. And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John."

By reference to Dan. vii. 21 to 27 inclusive the "everlasting kingdom" of God (which should have no end on the earth) was not to be set up until the Ancient of days should come. The most ancient person of days can be no other than father Adam, the first man created on the earth. The 13th verse shows us that Christ,

"the son of man, should come to the Ancient of days." Consequently the kingdom of God is to be given to the saints of God before Christ should come in his glory and power. Therefore as John the Baptist was not (in his day) a member of that kingdom, the "messenger" which precedes the second advent of Christ should be greater than he, (John the Baptist.)

Thus Christ, in instructing the Jews in the nature of John's mission, endeavored to show them their mistake in their views concerning John, that he was not as a reed shaken with the wind as though he had no mission from God at all, neither was he a man clothed "in soft raiment," as the Jews vainly supposed he should be to be a "messenger" sent of God. "This is he," i. e., the prophet you Jews are looking for is not John the Baptist, but the one "of whom it is written," Malachi iii. 1; the one for whom you are looking is greater than John the Baptist, because he is "as the voice of one crying in the wilderness, prepare ye the way of the Lord in humiliation; but the "messenger" which is yet future, preceding my (Christ's) second advent when I shall be "revealed from heaven" in glory and power, shall have power to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children and the hearts of the children to the fathers, which power John the Baptist never possessed only in a partial degree when compared with the Elias, (Elijah,) which shall precede my second advent, "the day of the Lord which shall burn as an oven, and all the proud and all that do wickedly shall be stubble," and they become "ashes under the soles of the feet of the righteous." Read Malachi iv. To conclude on this point,—If John the Baptist was the person alluded to by the prophet Malachi either in the 3d or 4th chapter, most certainly it failed to be fulfilled in the case of John, or Christ in his first advent; although the angel told Zechariah that his son John should be clothed with the "spirit and power of Elias." Luke i. 17.

"Isaiah had previously given utterance to the same prediction: xl. 3—"The voice of him that crieth in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way for our God." These predictions, the evangelist affirms, were fulfilled in John. Matt. iii. 1, 3. "In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea."

"John was sent as his fore-runner, saying, "Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand;" "prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight;" "there cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose;" "bring forth, therefore, fruits worthy of repentance." The Savior followed, and the Spirit of God like a dove decended upon him; "and there came a voice from heaven saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Our Savior then began "preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying the time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye and believe the gospel." And he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all proclaiming "the acceptable year of the Lord." He himself preached the kingdom of God throughout Jerusalem and in the cities of Judea. Then he called his twelve disciples; and "sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick;" "and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying the kingdom of heaven is at hand. But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your way out into the streets of the same and say, Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth to us, we do wipe off against you: notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." "And they departed, and went through the towns, preaching the gospel, and healing everywhere." "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come." And he commanded them that into whatsoever city they enter, and they were received, to heal the sick, and "say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." And Jesus himself received those that followed him, "and spake unto them of the kingdom of God," exhorting them to seek "first the kingdom of God and his righteousness," and said, "If I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you." The kingdom was therefore at hand for the Jews to accept or reject.

"It was predicted of Israel's King, that when he should come, he would come upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass. Zech. ix. 9—"Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion: shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation; lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass." In this very manner, and to fulfill the prophecy, our Savior came as their King, to give them ☞ the last opportunity which as a nation they would ever possess of regaining the kingdom." ☜

Astonishing what manifest ignorance there is in men when they have some speculative dogma to sustain, in which the word of God will not bear them out. We have rendered ourself somewhat familiar with the writings of Miller, Himes, Litch, Storrs and others of the "advent" advocates, and they all seem to be quite familiar with the scripture. Therefore we can scarcely consider them to be honest men when they say that the "Jews in the four corners of the earth," with "Israel in the north country," will not return to the land of Palestine as a nation, or kingdom, or people, before the next advent of their king Messiah. One half of the books of Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel and almost all of Hosea, Zechariah, Micah, Joel, Amos, Zephaniah and Obadiah go to prove that Judah and Israel shall become "one nation and one kingdom" again on the land given by an "everlasting covenant" to their father Abraham, Isaac and Jacob for an "everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. We have in our possession a treatise on this subject by one Storrs (a Millerite) which at some future time we mean to show up in all its naked horrible deformity, if we can be favored with space sufficient in your columns. The Old Testament scriptures abounds with the word of the Lord in denouncing the judgments and indignations of the Lord on that people for their idolatry and wicked perverseness, which have been fulfilled to the letter of the word literally. And the scriptures equally abound in the thus saith the Lord that they "shall yet become his people and he become their God in truth and in righteousness," and that the iniquity of Israel and the sins of Judah shall be blotted out of remembrance from before the Lord of hosts. The prophets are so prolix on this subject that the reader can scarcely open the book (Bible) amiss.

(To be continued.)

SPIRITUAL GIFTS.—The doctrine of spiritual gifts is so plainly laid down in the scriptures that we should wonder that any one could be ignorant of it, but for the fact that so few understand it. There are two marvels in the matter, one that any body should think the church could be perfected without them, and the other that any one should pretend that the gifts are infallible. If the church could be perfected without the gifts, what are they for? If the gifts are infallible, is not he that possesses them already perfected?

☞ A brother in Nauvoo writes that he has repented of his apostacy, and as he has said many hard things of Pres. Strang, he expresses deep repentance therefor, and wishes forgiveness. We can assure him he was forgiven before he asked it. Pres. Strang does not treasure up wrongs. He keeps a book of remembrance of kindnesses, not of injuries.

From the (Boston) Advent Herald.

INSPIRATION OF THE JEWISH PROPHETS.

BY ALEXANDER KEITH, D. D.

(Continued from last week.)

PROPHECY.

EGYPT. "I will lay the land waste, and all that is therein, by the hand of strangers." Ezek. xxx. 12.

FULFILLMENT.

"Deprived twenty-three centuries ago of her natural proprietors, she (Egypt) has seen her fertile fields successively a prey to the Persians, the Macedonians, the Romans, the Greeks, the Arabs, the Georgians, and, at length, the race of Tartars distinguished by the name of Ottoman Turks."—Travels. v. i. p. 74, 103.

PROPHECY.

"It shall be a base kingdom, the basest of kingdoms." Ezek. xxix. 15.

FULLILLMENT.

"Egypt above five hundred years has been under the arbitrary dominion of strangers and slavers."—Gibbon. v. vi. p. 109.

PROPHECY.

THE ARABS "I will make him (Ishmael) a great nation. His hand shall be against every man, and every man's hand shall be against him." Gen. xvi. 12.

FULFILLMENT.

They are "armed against mankind." "A single robber, or a few associates, are branded with their genuine name; but the exploits of a numerous band (of Arabs) assume the character of a lawful and honorable war."—Gibbon, vol. ix. p. 237.

PROPHECY.

CHALDEA, OR BABYLONIA. "I will punish the land of the Chaldeans." Jer. xxv. 2. "I will send unto Babylon fanners, that shall fan her, and empty her land," &c. Jer. li. 2.

FULFILLMENT.

"These splendid accounts of the Babylonian lands yielding crops of grain two or three hundred fold, compared with the modern face of the country, afford a remarkable proof of the singular desolation to which it has been subjected."—Transactions of the Literary Society, Bombay, v. i. p. 123.

It is an "immeasurable wild, bounded only by the desert," "a barren waste," "a bare desert," "a barren country," &c.—Capt. Mignan's Trav., p. 31; Major Keppel's Narrative, v. i. p. 260; Buckingham's Trav., v. ii. p. 242, &c.

PROPHECY.

"A drought is upon her waters, and they shall be dried up." Jer. l. 38. "Behold the hindermost of the nations, a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert." Jer. l. 12. li. 43.

FULFILLMENT.

"The canals at present can only be traced by their decayed banks."—Bombay Lit. Trans., p. 138.

"They are now dry and neglected."—Rich's Memoirs, p. 4.

"The absence of all cultivation, the steril, arid, and wild character of the scene, formed a contrast to the rich and delightful accounts delineated in Scripture."—Mignan's Trav., p. 5.

PROPHECY.

"Her cities are a desolation." Jer. l. 12. li. 43.

FULFILLMENT.

The ancient cities of Chaldea "no longer exist."—Major Rennell's Geography of Herodotus, p. 235.

The more modern cities, which flourished under the empire of the caliphs, "are all in ruins."—Mignan's Travels, Appendix.

"The whole country is strewed over with the debris of Grecian, Roman, and Arabian towns, confounded in the same mass of rubbish."—Malte Brun, v. ii. p. 119.

PROPHECY.

"Babylon * shall become heaps." Jer. li. 31. Isa. xiii. 14. Jer. l. 51.

FULFILLMENT.

Babylon has become "a vast succession of mounds," "a great mass of ruined heaps," "uneven heaps of various sizes. The larger ruins have the appearance of irregular and misshapen hills, the lesser form a succession of little hillocks."—Keppel, Porter, Rich, Mignan, Buckingham, &c.

PROPHECY.

"Cast her up as heaps." Jer. l. 26.

FULFILLMENT.

"In seeking for bricks, the workmen pierce into the mound in every direction, hollowing out deep ravines and pits, and throwing up the rubbish in heaps on the surface."—Rich's Memoir, p. 22.

PROPHECY.

"And destroy her utterly." Jer. l. 26.

FULFILLMENT.

"From the excavations in every possible shape and direction, the regular lines of the original ruins have been so broken that nothing but confusion is seen to exist."—Sir R. K. Porter's Travels, vol. ii. p. 338.

PROPHECY.

"Let nothing of her be left." Jer. l. 26.

FULFILLMENT.

"Vast heaps constitute all that now remains of ancient Babylon." Keppel, v. i. p. 196.

Some of the heaps are "completely exhausted of all building materials; and nothing is now left but heaps of earth, and fragments of brick."—Mignan, p. 199, 200. Porter, p. 356, 338, &c.

PROPHECY.

"I will make it pools of water." Isa. xiv. 23.

FULFILLMENT.

"The ground is sometimes covered with pools of water in the hollows." "The plain is covered at intervals with small pools of water."—Buckingham's Trav., v. ii. p. 296.

PROPHECY.

"Sit on the dust, sit on the ground, O daughter of the Chaldeans." Isa. xlvii. 1.

FULFILLMENT.

"The whole face of the country is covered with vestiges of buildings."—Rich, p. 2.

PROPHECY.

"Thy nakedness shall be uncovered." Isa. xlvii. 3.

FULFILLMENT.

"I am perfectly incapable of conveying an adequate idea," says Capt. Mignan, "of the dreary, lonely nakedness that appeared before me."—P. 116.

PROPHECY.

"Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness." Isa. xlvii. 5.

FULFILLMENT.

"A silent and sublime solitude, a silence profound as the grave."—Porter's Trav., v. ii. p. 294, 407.

PROPHECY.

"Because of the wrath of the Lord it shall not be inhabited, but it shall be wholly desolate." Jer. l. 13.

FULFILLMENT.

Babylon, "the tenantless and desolate metropolis."—Mignan, p. 234.

---

* The prophetic history of the decline and fall of Babylon, from its first capture to its present desolation, is so copious as to occupy ninety pages of the "Evidence of Prophecy," in illustration of as many predictions.

"The eye wandered over a barren desert, in which the ruins were nearly the only indication that it had been inhabited."—Keppel, p. 196.

PROPHECY.

"It shall never be inhabited." Jer. xii. 20. Ib. l. 40, &c.

FULFILLMENT.

"Ruins, composed like those of Babylon, of heaps of rubbish impregnated with nitre, cannot be cultivated."—Rich, p. 16.

"The decomposing materials of a Babylonian structure doom the earth on which they perish to a lasting sterility."—Sir R. K. Porter's Trav., v. ii. p. 391.

PROPHECY.

"Nor dwelt in from generation to generation." Isa. xiii. 20.

FULFILLMENT.

In the sixteenth century, "there was not a house to be seen" at Babylon.—Ray's Collection of travels, Rawolff, p. 174.

In the nineteenth century it is still "desolate and tenantless."—Mignan, p. 231.

PROPHECY.

"Neither shall the Arabian pitch tent there." Isa. xiii. 20.

FULFILLMENT.

"I saw the sun sink behind the Mujelibah," says Capt. Mignan, "and obeyed with infinite regret the summons of my guides," Arabs completely armed. He "could not persuade them to remain longer, from the apprehension of evil spirits. It is impossible to eradicate this idea from the minds of these people."—Trav., p. 2, 168, 201, 235. Buckingham, &c.

PROPHECY.

"Neither shall the shepherds make their folds there." Isa. xiii. 21.

FULFILLMENT.

"All the people of the country assert that it is extremely dangerous to approach this mound after night-fall, on account of the multitude of evil spirits by which it is haunted."—Rich, p. 27. "By this superstitious belief they are prevented from pitching a tent by night, or making a fold."

PROPHECY.

"But wild beasts of the desert shall lie there."

FULFILLMENT.

"There are dens of wild beasts in various parts."—Rich, p. 30.—Porter, Keppel, Buckingham, &c.

PROPHECY.

"And their houses shall be full of doleful creatures."

FULFILLMENT.

These dens or caverns "are the retreat of jackalls, hyenas, and other noxious animals." "The 'strong ordure,' or 'loathsome smell,' which issues from most of them, is sufficient warning not to proceed into the den."—Keppel, p. 179, 180. Porter, v. ii. p. 342, &c.

PROPHECY.

"And owls shall dwell there."

FULFILLMENT.

"In most of the cavities are numbers of bats and owls." "Thousands of bats and owls have filled many of these cavities."—Rich, p. 30. Mignan, p. 167.

PROPHECY.

"And satyrs (goats) shall dance there."

FULFILLMENT.

"The caves" and "their entrances are strewed with bones of sheep and goats."—Mignan, p. 167. Porter, v. ii. p. 342.

(To be continued.)

☞ The foundations of the Temple are being laid this week.

TO THE SAINTS IN ALL THE WORLD.

It is with no ordinary feeling that we resume our pen to congratulate you with the flattering prospects that seem to present themselves to the saints in this place. As we advertised to you last summer, in a "proclamation" to the churches, so we have endeavored to do. The authorities of the church here have, from the beginning of the gathering of the saints to this place, duly taken into consideration the condition of the church at the time of the martyrdom of its President, Joseph Smith, and since, until Pres. J. J. Strang could make fully known to the church his appointment by Joseph Smith as his successor. Eighteen months elapsed from Pres. Smith's death to the publication of the first No. of the Voree Herald, in which Pres. Strang made known in full his claims to the office of First President of the church; which, by the by, none have been able to successfully refute on fair logical common sense principles. The church had been, by sophistical leaders, plunged into circumstances almost irredeemable, and into a perversion of its doctrine and discipline; so palpably contradictory to original order that it seemed to human view almost impossible to restore it to its former state and character. It therefore called together a rallying of all the energies, means and powers of all those who were interested in its welfare, also the exercise of all that prudence, patience, faith, wisdom and understanding that the faithful part of the ministry were in possession of. We have been, and are still, willing to bear and forbear with the weaknesses of the weak and the infirmities of the infirm, until all can have a chance to learn over again the true faith and order of the church, from which it had in so great a degree fallen by self-willed and self-blinded leaders, who sought their own ease, aggrandizement and gratification instead of the good of the church. Under these precarious circumstances Pres. Strang commenced his administration as President of the church, and that too under the oppressing hand of poverty that would almost forbid a successful effort in so important a calling, had he not been sustained by that hand that holdeth the foundations of the earth and numbereth the sands on the sea-shore. Yet with that diligence and perseverance that becometh a man of God, called and qualified for the work, he set in array the battlements of truth and commenced his attack on the strong holds of Anti-Christ that had crept into the church. And with that diligence that would become a Paul or Peter of old time he has succeeded to prune the church of its dead branches and disorderly members in a good degree, but still the pruning hook cannot be laid by yet; and the good effects of pruning seems to give life, health and encouragement to the lively branches—faith brightens, confidence strengthens, and the prospects of better days gladdens the hearts of the humble, self-denying saints.

We feel to say to you, dear brethren and sisters, be of good cheer, and begin from the receipt of this to set your affairs in order to gather here or to Beaver Island as soon as possible. There is nothing to fear as far as the discipline of the church is concerned. None need think that perverseness, self-assumption and bigotry is going to go unchecked under the present administration of the church. There is one thing worthy of remark in the character of many of those on whom the discipline of the church is brought to bear, that is this,—they are persons who have professed the strongest confidence and faith for the President of the church in his "appointment," qualification and talent to lead this people of any others generally, but when they seek to be gratified in the practice of some licentiousness and it can't be granted, rather than to bear a denial they will suffer themselves to be expelled from the communion of the church; and when this is done there is scarcely a wicked expression known to be used by wicked men but they will use to express their indignation and disrespect they have for Pres. Strang and his associate authorities; which goes to prove that the root of the true faith was never in them, if it had been they could not forget it so soon as they pretend; no sane person can lose sound affections for a faithful and tried friend all in a jerk.

Brethren of the priesthood, we exhort you to diligence in your calling, co-operate with us in this matter, you that have authority to do so, in great patience, wisdom and humility. Right up the churches abroad, and report to Pres. Strang or us from time to time, and let us know of your success. Preach the word wherever opportunity presents; let no time be lost. Magnify your callings in the ministry, and the God of Israel will bless your efforts with a rich harvest. Let not your hands be stained with the unfruitful works of darkness, but give strength to the word by a sober and godly walk before all men, by rendering to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's, and to God the things that are God's. JOHN E. PAGE.

CORRUPTING INFLUENCE OF APOSTACY.

No man can have a long acquaintance with the church of Jesus Christ without observing the exceedingly corrupting influence of apostacy from that church. Unlike all the sectarian churches, a man can scarcely abandon its principles without a visible and rapid change taking place in his general character and conduct. Though one separates from the church on mere questions of abstract theology, yet in a few days you will hear him railing bitterly against some who but a brief time previously he professed to love, and seeking to take undue advantage of those who have shown him the greatest kindnesses. Many things have we experienced within the last two years proving this, but one little incident which has just transpired has more fully brought out all the malignance and wickedness of apostacy than any other, and we cannot well forbear putting it on record. Something over a year ago two brethren, both high priests, and somewhat aged and infirm, came to Voree. One of them, brother Reynelds is possessed of a small property. The other, brother Tyler, was in a state of destitution and want, and it is generally understood that brother Reynolds paid his expenses here, as well as assisting him in various ways till last fall. At the beginning of winter Reynolds rented a shop, put it in repair, obtained a set of tools, stove, furniture, provisions and lumber to carry on business through the winter. The entire expense of this to the last cent was paid by Reynolds, but from the beginning he took in Tyler with him, intending, as a mere matter of charity, to support him, receiving in return what little assistance Tyler could render in work.

Very soon after this arrangment was made brother Reynolds was sent out on a mission, from which he has not since returned. He left his son, a mere boy, and Tyler in the shop. Soon after his departure Tyler drove off his son from the shop. In the course of the winter and spring Tyler worked up the stock which Reynolds had provided and except a mere trifle, which Reynolds' son obtained, sold it for his own use—ate up the provisions—had the sole use of shop, tools and furniture at Reynolds expense till fall.

During this time Tyler apostatized. Late in the summer brother Reynolds wrote to some of the brethren to get what remained of the stuff and take charge of it for him, but Tyler refused to give up anything. After negotiation he agreed to submit the question to arbitration. And the arbitrators being agreed on met and heard the allegations and proofs. M. M. Aldrich, in behalf of brother Reynolds, (who is in Pennsylvania,) proved that every article claimed was purchased solely at Reynolds' expense; and that a large amount of other articles had also been purchased by Reynolds, which Tyler had put to his own use. He also proved that Reynolds left his son in the shop, and that Tyler mal-treated him till he left. Tyler then presented an account of some twenty-six dollars for time spent in getting together lumber and material, every article of which Reynolds paid for and Tyler used, and for damages for waiting doing nothing before Reynolds charitably furnished home, provisions and business. On this account Tyler was his own witness, and stoutly insisted, among other things, on day wages for several days doing nothing; and also for traveling expenses to Racine, when Reynolds furnished him money to go with and to purchase with, and he has had EVERY ARTICLE purchased. The arbitrators, Aaron Smith and James J. Strang, unhesitatingly decided that Reynolds was entitled to and should have what remained of his property. Tyler refused to abide by this award or to give up a single article of the property, and in this course he was sustained by the chief of the Pseudoes, notwithstanding Aaron Smith, their leader, had decided against him. Brother Aldrich then wrote to brother Reynolds the state of the matter, and several Pseudoes also wrote to dissuade brother Reynolds from an act beneficial to the church; determined to at least prevent his donating his furniture and tools for the Temple, which it was then understood he intended to do. Brother Reynolds sent the following reply:—

Newcastle, Pa., Oct. 20th, 1847.

Dear Brother,—I received your letter dated the 5th of September, but I must say not until more time had rolled away than I could have wished, for I must say I received not your letter until the 19th of Oct. By the reception of which favor you informed me of the dark and un-saint-like course which Tyler has pursued in respect to my business and property in Voree. And now, brother, I would inform you that I know not that I owe Tyler one shilling in law and equity, and it was truly a source of surprise to me when you informed me by way of letter that he, Ezra Tyler, should make any demand on me excepting for the two books which I borrowed of him, which books I requested you in one of my letters to pay Tyler for. The books I borrowed are these,—the Book of Mormon and the book of Doctrine and Covenants, making two. Now he, Tyler, may probably trump up an account of some kind or other unknown to me. He may possibly tell you that he made two trips to Racine to purchase tools and lumber for the use of the shop. If he did I furnished him with money to bear his expenses; and in addition to this he may say that he labored at the shop by way of repairing the same. It is true he made some repairs to no great amount. And it must appear evident to you and all who have a knowledge of these things that he, Tyler, was transacting business and laboring for himself and not me. For it is certain I have derived no benefit from the shop whatever, notwithstanding the money which I expended in order to put the shop in operation there. Tyler, as a usurper, [in my absence seized upon my shop and property, and strove fraudulently to make the whole his own to my serious loss.

And again, in reference to the letters which you have received from me. My signature not being attached rendered them inefficient. Hence I now acknowledge the letters to be the production of my mind and pen, and as such I wish you, brother Aldrich, to proceed as your wisdom may dictate to take hold of the property and apply it to the purpose designated in one of the letters you received from me, to wit: as a donation to the building of the Temple of our God. The true and essential cause of our God does not flourish here. Sectarianism abounds to a great extent. I have not preached much among the people here for this reason,—they appear fearful to hear the gospel preached by any other preachers than those they have heaped up unto themselves, having itching ears. I know not of any saints living near this place. How long I shall stay here I know not, perhaps not long. I should truly like to visit Voree and all my dear brethren and saints there, for true it is I love the sacred spot which God hath sanctified by his holy word; our God thus preparing a place where his holy feet may rest while all his holy saints do fall around in humble adoration to their king and Savior; thus rendering to God that which is God's. My health is not very good for this reason,—I still feel that my old disease, which I suppose to be a dropsical affection, seems to remain with me. Please to write to me and inform me of your success in settling my business there. My love in truth to my beloved brother Strang, and all the dear saints of God in that section of country, hoping to see you all where we shall talk face to face that our joy may be full.

To M. M. Aldrich. HENRY REYNOLDS.

The necessary arrangements having been made to carry out the directions of brother Reynolds as expressed in this and various other letters, several brethren called on Tyler to obtain what remained of furniture and tools, and he again refused to give them up, and fell upon and attempted to beat with a club one of those that asked him for them. In this he was stopped, and was then told that he would not be suffered any longer to rob his benefactor; that the matter was now to a crisis and must be decided and disposed of. After much negotiation Tyler agreed to submit the matter to a gentleman whom he selected, on condition that NOTHING, either in the way of TESTIMONY, ARGUMENT or SUGGESTION, should be said, only what he should say himself; and no one but the arbitrator should ask him a question. To these strange terms the brethren consented, believing that it was impossible for him to trump up a story that would excuse his robbery. And the result justified this confidence in their cause, for Tyler refused to answer the questions asked by the arbitrator, upon which he reproved him for his dishonesty, refused to decide on the question without the answers, and advised him to give up the property. After all this Tyler could not be induced to give them up, even with the assurance of immediate legal proceedings, till the brethren paid him five dollars, which they consented to do only because he had hid more than that value of tools which they could not otherwise find. Not content with this outright robbery, and backed up by some of the principal Pseudoes in this vicinity, Tyler succeeded subsequently in obtaining surreptitious possession of the stove, and locked it up in a house to which he had not the least right, and bargained to sell it at half price to a wealthy apostate who was willing to speculate on stolen property, if so the church suffered the loss. And before the stove could be obtained we had to send to the owner of the house to break open his own door for its removal.

It would seem that malignity could go no further. But with apostates all hopes fail. They are now trying to stir up bitterness in the public mind by charging us with lawless violence, because the owner of a house, then in his own possession, broke it open to let the agent of the owner take out property locked up by the robber. We thank God that our lot has fallen in pleasant places, where community know how to scorn such villainy. As for the poor fools who have tried by falsehood to raise an excitement out of this matter, we despise but do not hate them. And though we shall not fail to treat their conduct as it deserves, we shall never reciprocate their bitterness and falsehood. The wealthy apostate who wished to speculate out of property stolen from the Temple funds, is welcome to all he has made. May his dreams be pleasant. In this matter we look upon Tyler only as the tool of the little clique of apostates. We think his sins should not be laid to his charge.

☞ The hypocrite loves opulence, wealth, grandeur and an oppressive ascendency, but a saint loves equality.

☞ He that keeps alive the christian faith feeds it every morning, noon and evening with good works. "Without works faith is dead, being alone."—PAUL.

MUSINGS.

What has come of all the talk about prophet Whitmer? Is he yet in a brown study, trying to determine in his own mind whether he is prophet or not? It is now nearly a year since a nest of old apostates of various dates, from 1833 to 1846, have been trying to call him out as their leader. But all that time they have only floundered along like the body of a beheaded snake looking up its head. It is said the serpent will look up its head and join on, unless the parts are kept too long separate. But whether it can be done after a thirteen years separation we doubt.

Well, now, what a pretty story it is for apostates to tell that David Whitmer was made the shepherd of the true fold in 1834, and the rod of the priesthood put in his hands, and the charge of the flock given him because wolves were prowling about; and immediately he turned his back on the flock, and run to the wilderness of Missouri, leaving wolves to devour the sheep.

When is Whitmer's proclamation coming out? One would think enough men had waked up from twelve years forgetfulness to convince him that he really was the shepherd of the true flock. What an exhibition the apostates really do make bleating up a shepherd and finding none. McLellin reported that Whitmer acknowledged himself a prophet and that he had appointed his brother John, and Oliver Cowdery, Esq., a destinguished lawyer in Wisconsin, his counsellors. Why don't they show themselves? Will it take them as long to find out themselves counsellors as it did him to find himself out a prophet? We should like to hear them speak out.—Is Oliver Cowdery one of the Presidents of any church claiming the name of Mormon? Does he respond to the call of W. E. McLellin? We have left with us a standing offer of five dollars to any man who will present a written document in his hand writing acknowledging himself President or counsellor, in accordance with McLellin's pretensions, and a like offer for the like evidence that Whitmer acknowedges himself a prophet in that connection. We just look on the whole matter as a mere humbug, and don't more than half believe that either Whitmer or Cowdery have lent themselves to it.

☞ Wealth in the hands of the covetous is like treasures in the centre of the globe, it is useless to community.

☞ He that belongs to a society and will not seek to bear his proportion of the expenses of it according to the advantages he enjoys therein, the sooner he is out of it the better for that association.

☞ He that respects no body but himself, stands a great chance to see the time that he is respected by no body.

☞ He that thinks himself wise above all others, runs a great chance to be considered a fool by all others.

☞ Christ has only one church, Anti-Christ many.

A Trio.—A few days since we received a letter from one of the brethren distant from here giving us some important directions about the affairs of the church, and recommending himself by the following assurances:—

I can do as much as the next man with the same means, and I consider that I am about as smart as some others, and as capable of managing the affairs of the church. And as regards doctrine, I stand next to you. Some may think I am a novice and don't know much, but there is not one in the church except you that can teach me any thing. I know more about the kingdom than any other one. You know that a man to be a teacher must know more than his pupils. Now it is no use for you to appoint a man to teach me that does not know so much as I do. The sequel in regard to myself is this,—I am a prophet, and I know it, even to this people, but I ain't the law-giver.

I have ever been true to you and the cause, and have did as much as any other in the church with the same means, and more; for I have did all that I could. But you don't know what I have done for the cause. I have been a law-abiding man; I have kept the faith; paid my tithing; borne my testimony, and kept all the covenants that I ever made; I have taught no false doctrine, neither pro nor con.

The Presidency belongs to me, and you might as well give it to me now as any time, for I shall get it. There is no body else that can do any thing here that you may appoint, for I am bound to have more influence here than any other one, both with Jew and Gentile.

☞ We certainly deemed this matchless, but a very short experience proved that such a folly could be beat. A short time since we were visited by three brethren from a branch some thirty miles off, who assuredly have got several steps beyond the above. Two of them personally presented the best evidence of sincerity and devotion and a deep interest in the prosperity of the church, but they got clear beyond the foregoing, by claiming not exactly the place next to the prophet, but by absolutely assuming to stand between him and God. One of them went on to point out certain members of the church as haters of their brethren, &c., &c., and among them various reforms in the affairs of the church were directed; and as the church did not altogether hear them, they went off prophecying that the prophet had fallen and another would speedily be placed in his stead. One of them was constantly speaking in strange tongues and interpreting them. And these interpretations they held as revelations, and claimed for them absolute infallibility; and, consequently, refused to try them by the gospel test:

1st John iv. 1, "Beloved, believe not in every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world.

6. We are of God: he that knoweth God heareth us; he that is not of God, heareth not us. Hereby know we the spirit of truth, and the spirit of error."

They were severely rebuked for stepping out of their place and attempting to dictate to those whom God has made their pastors.—Before being rebuked two of them purchased lots which they professed that God pointed out by revelation, and had required them to build on and occupy speedily. If they do so we shall still believe them sincere. While they were here we received a letter from Isaac Sheen, of Cincinnati, containing seven pages foolscap written two lines to a line ruling; the most of it made up of mere scripture reference by chapter and verse. We have read but a few lines of it, but the drift of it seems to be that God has appointed him a prophet to set the church in order; that after a little time Joseph will be raised to life to stand again in his place, and that then all the prophecies concerning Egypt will be fulfilled in Mexico, and all prophecies on Babylon and nearly all the countries about Palestine will be fulfilled on the United States. There is one point in which this trio all agree; and that is the pretensions that the work of God will be accomplished by an order contrary to what he has established in his church, and that the inferior priesthood can dictate to the superior. We pity the vagaries of all such, and the folly of all that are deceived by them. There is a perfect order in the priesthood, and whatever communication God makes to any in the church, it will invariably come to the superior. No one, under any circumstances, can give a law or commandment or revelation to those above him.

For the Gospel Herald.

HYMN.

Tune—"The White Pilgrim."

When God formed from chaos the earth and the seas,
In order and beauty they stood:
And beasts, birds and fishes, with man at their head,
Were then all pronounced very good.

The garden of Eden, that celestial place,
Was clothed with flowers and trees;
The fruit most delightful, and pleasant the taste,
Whilst fanned by the soft balmy breeze.

Our Father and Mother walked forth in the shade,
No sorrows to sadden their breast:
They talked with their Maker, and walked side by side,
And calmly reposed to rest.

How happy this couple might thus spent their days,
Had they but obeyed God's command;
But when the old serpent brought Eve to disgrace
She eat, and gave unto the man.

Behold! what a change in this once happy pair!
Now doomed to hard labor for life!
The thorn and the thistle in plenty appear;
And naked the man and his wife.

The voice of their God now in music no more,
But in tones harsh and fearful the sound:
In sorrow their children henceforth shall be borne,
Until they return to the ground.

Wars, blood and confusion have since taken place,
The beasts a wild aspect now wear;
And man by a flood is swept off in disgrace,
And dangers stand thick every where.

But thanks be to God, who the vict'ry will gain,
For the earth shall again be restored:
The saints here together on earth shall yet reign,
One thousand bless'd years with their Lord.

The lion and lamb shall again sport and play,
And the serpent, all harmless and mild,
In green pleasant pastures together shall stray,
And be led by the young fearless child.

All tears shall be wiped from the eyes of the saints,
No sickness nor sorrow be known;
The leaves of the trees shall heal all their complaints,
When Jesus their vict'ry shall gain:

The milk of an heifer a household maintain,
The mountains in grapes shall abound;
The trees yield their fruit in abundance again,
And heaven on earth shall be found.

Roswell Packard.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 23, 1847. [No. 40.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID; or they will not be taken from the post-office.

"THE KINGDOM WITHIN YOU."

(Continued from last week.)

"He sent his disciples into the villages over against them; "and they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him. And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches of trees and strewed them in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord: Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest." "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven and glory in the highest." And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved saying, who is this? "And Jesus went into the temple and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves; and would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple."

"Thus our Savior came as their King to give them again the kingdom, which had been preached as at hand, and the multitude were willing to receive him as their King, and hailed him as such. This homage our Savior accepted and admitted it to be his: for when "some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master rebuke thy disciples;" "He answered and said unto them, I tell you, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." But the builder rejected the head-stone of the corner: he came unto his own, and his own received him not.—The chief priests and the elders of the people came to him and said, "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" "And they sought how they might destroy him." They would not have this man to reign over them; notwithstanding his miracles, they believed not on him. John xii. 38, 41. "That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed? Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardended their hearts; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their hearts, and be converted, and I should heal them.—These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory and spake of him."

"Accordingly, when they had thus rejected Christ, as "he beheld the city he wept over it saying, If thou hadest known even thou at least in this thy day the things which belong unto thy peace! but now are they hid from thine eyes: for the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and they shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles (the seven times) are fulfilled." "Fill ye up the measure of your fathers." "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

"Thus did the Jews shut up the kingdom of heaven against men, and neither went in themselves, nor suffered those who were entering to go in; they took our Savior and cast him out of the vineyard and killed him. Then the Lord of the vineyard slew those wicked husbandmen, and gave the vineyard to others. The kingdom of God was taken from them, to be offered to them no more, and the Romans fulfilled upon that stiff-necked race, all that Moses and our Savior had predicted: they were scattered among the heathen, their land laid desolate, and their cities waste.

"The Jews did not abide the day of his coming, nor stand when he appeared. ☞ He sat as a refiner and purifier of silver, to purify the sons of Levi, and to purge them as gold and silver, that they might offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." ☜

Will Mr. Himes be so kind as to tell us where and at what time the Levitical priesthood offered "an offering in righteousness" to the Lord, since the day of the offering made by Zechariah the father of John the Baptist? Will you also tell us where and when the offering of Judah and Jerusalem was "pleasant" in the "sight of the Lord," since the days of Christ? If you will not do so, then hush your nonsense in saying that Christ sat as a refiner and purifier of the sons of Levi at his first advent.

"He was that prophet, like unto Moses, that the Lord their God had promised (Deut. xviii. 18, 19) to raise up to them from among their brethren, whom they were to hear when he should speak the words of the Lord, in all things whatsoever he should say unto them. And it should come to pass, that every soul which would not hear that prophet, should be destroyed from among the people. Acts iii. 23. Then began a new dispensation; and had the Jewish nation consented to have become purged from their transgressions, their counsellors would have been restored as at the first, and their judges as at the beginning; and then should the offerings of Judah and Jerusalem have been pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years. Had the mass of the nation then turned to the Lord, all who refused to hear Christ would have been destroyed, and the nation would have been perpetuated; but as they rejected him, those only who feared the Lord will be his, in that day when he shall make up his jewels. God then came near to them in judgment, and was a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against the false swearers, and against those who oppressed the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turned aside the stranger from his right, and feared not God. But God is the Lord; he changeth not; and therefore the sons of Jacob were not then consumed. He still bore with them,

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 23, 1847. [No. 40.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

"THE KINGDOM WITHIN YOU."

(Continued from last week.)

"He sent his disciples into the villages over against them; "and they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him. And many spread their garments in the way; and others cut down branches of trees and strewed them in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna, Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord: Blessed be the kingdom of our father David, that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest." "Blessed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord; peace in heaven and glory in the highest." And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved saying, who is this? "And Jesus went into the temple and began to cast out them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money changers, and the seats of them that sold doves; and would not suffer that any man should carry any vessel through the temple."

"Thus our Savior came as their King, to give them again the kingdom, which had been preached as at hand, and the multitude were willing to receive him as their King, and hailed him as such. This homage our Savior accepted and admitted it to be his: for when "some of the Pharisees from among the multitude said unto him, Master rebuke thy disciples;" "He answered and said unto them, I tell you, if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." But the builder rejected the head-stone of the corner; he came unto his own, and his own received him not.—The chief priests and the elders of the people came to him and said, "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" "And they sought how they might destroy him." They would not have this man to reign over them; notwithstanding his miracles, they believed not on him. John xii. 38, 41. "That the saying of Esaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he spake, Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed? Therefore they could not believe, because that Esaias said again, He hath blinded their eyes, and hardended their hearts; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their hearts, and be converted, and I should heal them.—These things said Esaias, when he saw his glory and spake of him."

"Accordingly, when they had thus rejected Christ, as "he beheld the city he wept over it saying, If thou hadest known even thou at least in this thy day the things which belong unto thy peace! but now are they hid from thine eyes; for the days shall come upon thee, that thine enemies shall cast a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side, and they shall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within thee; and they shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations: and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles (the seven times) are fulfilled." "Fill ye up the measure of your fathers." "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate. For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."

"Thus did the Jews shut up the kingdom of heaven against men, and neither went in themselves, nor suffered those who were entering to go in; they took our Savior and cast him out of the vineyard and killed him. Then the Lord of the vineyard slew those wicked husbandmen, and gave the vineyard to others. The kingdom of God was taken from them, to be offered to them no more, and the Romans fulfilled upon that stiff-necked race, all that Moses and our Savior had predicted: they were scattered among the heathen, their land laid desolate, and their cities waste.

"The Jews did not abide the day of his coming, nor stand when he appeared. ☞ He sat as a refiner and purifier of silver, to purify the sons of Levi, and to purge them as gold and silver, that they might offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. ☜

Will Mr. Himes be so kind as to tell us where and at what time the Levitical priesthood offered "an offering in righteousness" to the Lord, since the day of the offering made by Zechariah the father of John the Baptist? Will you also tell us where and when the offering of Judah and Jerusalem was "pleasant" in the "sight of the Lord," since the days of Christ? If you will not do so, then hush your nonsense in saying that Christ sat as a refiner and purifier of the sons of Levi at his first advent.

"He was that prophet, like unto Moses, that the Lord their God had promised (Deut. xviii. 18, 19) to raise up to them from among their brethren, whom they were to hear when he should speak the words of the Lord, in all things whatsoever he should say unto them. And it should come to pass, that every soul which would not hear that prophet, should be destroyed from among the people. Acts iii. 23. Then began a new dispensation; and had the Jewish nation consented to have become purged from their transgressions, their counsellors would have been restored as at the first, and their judges as at the beginning; and then should the offerings of Judah and Jerusalem have been pleasant unto the Lord, as in the days of old, and as in former years. Had the mass of the nation then turned to the Lord, all who refused to hear Christ would have been destroyed, and the nation would have been perpetuated; but as they rejected him, those only who feared the Lord will be his, in that day when he shall make up his jewels. God then came near to them in judgment, and was a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against the false swearers, and against those who oppressed the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turned aside the stranger from his right, and feared not God. But God is the Lord; he changeth not; and therefore the sons of Jacob were not then consumed. He still bore with them, even as he had borne with them from the days of their fathers, when they had gone away from his ordinances, and had not kept them.—Had they returned unto the Lord, he would have returned unto them. But they insulted the Lord in asking, "Wherein shall we return?" and "Wherein have we robbed thee?" And yet they robbed God in tithes and offerings, even that whole nation; and therefore they were cursed with a curse. Had they brought all their tithes into the store-house, and proved him therewith, he would have opened to them the windows of heaven and poured them out a blessing, so that there would not have been room enough to receive it. And he would have rebuked the devourer for their sakes, so that the fruits of their ground should not have been any more destroyed; neither should their vine cast her fruit in the field before her time; and all nations should call them blessed; for they should be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts.

"But their words were still stout against the Lord. They said it is vain to serve God; and, what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts? They called the proud happy, they that worked wickedness were set up; and they that tempted God were delivered. But they would not hearken unto the Lord. Jesus came, and offered to them his grace; but they refused. Therefore the kingdom was taken from them, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

"There were then a few in Israel that feared the Lord, and spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened and heard it, their names were recorded in the Lamb's book of life, a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. Not only those among the Jews, but from thenceforth the name of the Lord was to be great among the Gentiles; and in every nation he that feared God and worked righteousness, was to be accepted of him. And in the day when the Lord of hosts shall make up his jewels, they shall be his, and he will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then it will be known who of all the generations of the earth have feared God, and who have feared him not. Then the Israel of God will return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not; for that day which cometh will burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, and that it shall leave them neither root nor branch; but unto those who fear the name of the Lord shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and they shall go forth and grow up as the calves of the stall, and shall tread down the ashes of the wicked under their feet.

"Because Jews fell to a level with the heathen nations about them, and were no more, as Jews, the children of God."

Behold another specimen of ignorance in Mr. Himes.—That of the Jews "falling to a level with the heathen nations"—wonderful! Did Mr. Himes never know that God made two covenants with Abraham, one a spiritual covenant, and the other a temporal one? The temporal covenant ceded to Abraham and his seed the land of Canaan for an "everlasting possession," from which covenant they never can fall, nor the "heathen" ever gain possession of that land, only on account of their apostacy.—As far as the spiritual covenant is concerned with the Jews, they have always stood on a "level" with the "heathen nations about them;" neither it required the same effort of grace on the part of God to save a Jew that it did a Gentile, and it required the same effort of grace in a Jew to be saved that it did a Gentile. The word to Abraham was, "in thee and thy seed (Christ) shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

The middle wall of partition was broken down, and there was "neither Jew nor Greek" between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. They were now to be Jews, who were such inwardly: and circumcision was to be of the heart, in the spirit: whose praise is not of men, but of God. They were not to be all Israel who were of Israel; but the blessing of Abraham was to come on the Gentiles, through Jesus Christ. Abraham was to be the father of all them that believed, not of the Jews only, but of all who should be of the faith of our father Abraham; for if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. And they who should be the heirs of the kingdom, are to be the redeemed out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, who will reign upon the earth, when Christ shall have judged the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom: for when God shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, (Dan. xii. 7,) all the things spoken of in the book of Daniel will be finished; the Son of Man will then send forth his angels and gather his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven. He will also gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, slay those of his enemies who would not that he should reign over them, restore the earth to its Eden state, and give the kingdom to Israel—the saints of the Most High, who shall possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever. Then the kingdom of this world shall have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

A LATE MORMON MIRACLE.

The Ottawa Free Trader gives the following with an indorsement of its truth:"—

"It appears that the prohpet Strang needed a house, and he determined his followers should build it for him. So he called them together, and told them, that in consideration that they would erect the house, the Lord had authorized him to promise them an extraordinary endowment. The building was soon completed, and now they apply for their reward. All the saints are gathered together in the church, the prophet takes them through a variety of ceremonies, such as head washing, feet washing, &c., and concludes by anointing the heads of all with a composition 'that had a queer smell.' They are then directed to adjourn to another room that was totally dark, where they were to receive the endowment, which was to be in the shape of an extraordinary and visible manifestation of the spirit, rendering them at once impregnable thereforth to all the shafts of Satan. Arrived in the dark room sure enough, the heads of all shone as if lit up by the brightness of the sun, and great was the rejoicing of the saints thereat. But the prophet William, who was present, although staggered a little, mistrusted that 'all was not gold that glittered;' so he took some of the ointment and submitted it to an examination, and lo, the discovery! He found that it was a mixture of oil and phosphorus! and that hence the whole illuminating operation was a gross cheat. He took the first opportunity to accuse prophet Strang publicly and before the whole congregation of the imposition, who so far from denying it coolly acknowledged the fact, and then preached a sermon justifying the act, and maintaining that all the miracles of Christ, Moses, &c., were wrought in the same way—that is by natural means."

We find the foregoing in the "Watchman of the Prairies," a Baptist paper recently started at Chicago, a copy of which some unknown friend has sent us. A sister in Voree has received a copy of the same, cut from a Vermont paper by some of her friends there. Though we have not seen the article otherwise, yet we understand even as he had borne with them from the days of their fathers, when they had gone away from his ordinances, and had not kept them.—Had they returned unto the Lord, he would have returned unto them. But they insulted the Lord in asking. "Wherein shall we return?" and "Wherein have we robbed thee?" And yet they robbed God in tithes and offerings, even that whole nation; and therefore they were cursed with a curse. Had they brought all their tithes into the store-house, and proved him therewith, he would have opened to them the windows of heaven and poured them out a blessing, so that there would not have been room enough to receive it. And he would have rebuked the devourer for their sakes, so that the fruits of their ground should not have been any more destroyed; neither should their vine cast her fruit in the field before her time; and all nations should call them blessed; for they should be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts.

"But their words were still stout against the Lord. They said it is vain to serve God; and, what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the Lord of hosts? They called the proud happy, they that worked wickedness were set up; and they that tempted God were delivered. But they would not hearken unto the Lord. Jesus came, and offered to them his grace; but they refused. Therefore the kingdom was taken from them, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

"There were then a few in Israel that feared the Lord, and spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened and heard it, their names were recorded in the Lamb's book of life, a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. Not only those among the Jews, but from thenceforth the name of the Lord was to be great among the Gentiles; and in every nation he that feared God and worked righteousness, was to be accepted of him. And in the day when the Lord of hosts shall make up his jewels, they shall be his, and he will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him. Then it will be known who of all the generations of the earth have feared God, and who have feared him not. Then the Israel of God will return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God, and him that serveth him not; for that day which cometh will burn as an oven, and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, and that it shall leave them neither root nor branch; but unto those who fear the name of the Lord shall the sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and they shall go forth and grow up as the calves of the stall, and shall tread down the ashes of the wicked under their feet.

☞ "Thus the Jews fell to a level with the heathen nations about them, and were no more, as Jews, the children of God." ☜

The above is another specimen of ignorance in Mr. Hines.—Talk of the Jews "falling to a level with the heathen nations"—what folly! Did Mr. Hines never know that God made two covenants with Abraham, one a spiritual covenant, and the other a temporal one? The temporal covenant ceded to Abraham and his seed the land of Canaan for an "everlasting possession," from which covenant they never can fall, nor the "heathen" ever gain possession of but for a season, to chastise the Jews for their apostacy.—As far as the spiritual covenant is concerned with the Jews, they have always stood on a "level" with the "heathen nations about them;" so that it required the same effort of grace on the part of God to save a Jew that it did a Gentile, and it required the same effort on the part of a Jew to be saved that it did a Gentile. The word to Abraham was, "in thee and thy seed (Christ) shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

"The middle wall of partition was broken down, and there was henceforth no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. They were now to be Jews, who were such inwardly: and circumcision was to be of the heart, in the spirit: whose praise is not of men, but of God. They were not to be all Israel who were of Israel; but the blessing of Abraham was to come on the Gentiles, through Jesus Christ. Abraham was to be the father of all them that believed, not of the Jews only, but of all who should be of the faith of our father Abraham; for if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. And they who should be the heirs of the kingdom, are to be the redeemed out of every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, who will reign upon the earth, when Christ shall have judged the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom: for when God shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, (Dan. xii. 7.) all the things spoken of in the book of Daniel will be finished; the Son of Man will then send forth his angels and gather his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven. He will also gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, slay those of his enemies who would not that he should reign over them, restore the earth to its Eden state, and give the kingdom to Israel—the saints of the Most High, who shall possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever. Then the kingdom of this world shall have become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ. And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."

"A LATE MORMON MIRACLE.

The Ottawa Free Trader gives the following with an indorsement of its truth:"—

"It appears that the prohpet Strang needed a house, and he determined his followers should build it for him. So he called them together, and told them, that in consideration that they would erect the house, the Lord had authorized him to promise them an extraordinary endowment. The building was soon completed, and now they apply for their reward. All the saints are gathered together in the church. the prophet takes them through a variety of ceremonies, such as head washing, feet washing, &c., and concludes by anointing the heads of all with a composition 'that had a queer smell.' They are then directed to adjourn to another room that was totally dark, where they were to receive the endowment, which was to be in the shape of an extraordinary and visible manifestation of the spirit, rendering them at once impregnable thenceforth to all the shafts of Satan. Arrived in the dark room sure enough, the heads of all shone as if lit up by the brightness of the sun, and great was the rejoicing of the saints thereat. But the prophet William, who was present, although staggered a little, mistrusted that 'all was not gold that glittered;' so he took some of the ointment and submitted it to an examination, and lo, the discovery! He found that it was a mixture of oil and phosphorus! and that hence the whole illuminating operation was a gross cheat. He took the first opportunity to accuse prophet Strang publicly and before the whole congregation of the imposition, who so far from denying it coolly acknowledged the fact, and then preached a sermon justifying the act, and maintaining that all the miracles of Christ, Moses, &c., were wrought in the same way—that is by natural means."

We find the foregoing in the "Watchman of the Prairies," a Baptist paper recently started at Chicago, a copy of which some unknown friend has sent us. A sister in Vorce has received a copy of the same, cut from a Vermont paper by some of her friends there. Though we have not seen the article otherwise, yet we understand that it has gone the rounds of the papers generally. Will the editors of any of these papers tell why it is that they always pick up and circulate every such falsehood, and so seldom say any thing favorable to our cause? We can answer for them if they will not speak. It is this: They and their readers, for whose tastes they cater, are of that numerous class who love and make lies. It is impossible to attribute such falsehoods to mere mistake. The story is a self-convicted falsehood. We do not conceive it possible that any man could ever attain to the editorial charge of a respectable paper who could for a moment credit such a tale. The strong features of falsehood are marked on it from beginning to end. The substance of the matter is summed up thus:—

"1st. Prophet Strang wanted a house built by his disciples.

"2d. He promised them, as their REWARD for building it, an outpouring of the SPIRIT of GOD upon them in a VISIBLE MANIFESTATION; which should render them INVULNERABLE to all the shafts of Satan.

"3d. That they built the house.

"4th. That he palmed off upon them, AS THE PROMISED REWARD, an anointing of their heads with phosphorus and oil.

"5th. That prophet William was present, and detected the imposition.

"6th. That prophet Strang acknowledged the imposition, and in his defense preached a sermon to prove that all miracles were impositions of the same kind, in other words, made a public confession that himself and all other prophets before him were mere impostors and graceless scamps, whose whole lives were one living lie."

No man of sense can for one moment believe such a tale. No wonder the editors who re-published it did not send us their papers. They would never wish to see the face of one of their readers after serving up such falsehood for them, unless they knew him a man of like kidney, loving lies as they do. The man who is capable of believing such a tale, to say nothing of inventing it, is a villain, not fit to live among men. If, by any possibility, the authors of such tales should find a place in heaven, Christ would scourge them out with a lash of twisted wires, as he scourged thieves and money changers out of the Temple at Jerusalem. Not content with garbling and caricaturing the truth, the author of the above has made his story out of whole cloth. Not a single one of the leading points of the tale (as we have analyzed it) is true. If there is one truth in it, it is a mere matter of incident. Such for instance as that prophet Strang did have a house built; a small plain house, which still lacks both floors and doors, more than half the expense of which he paid.

But the editor of the Ottawa Free Trader vouches for the truth of it! Ah! well that makes a difference. How does he know any thing about it? Was he an eye witness to any such transaction? If he was, until impeached, his testimony is legal evidence (whether true or not) in those States where colored men are allowed to be witnesses against whites, and no where else. The long and short of the matter is this,—The editor of the Ottawa Free Trader knows nothing about the matter more than any other person, living, as he does, more than one hundred miles from here. But William Smith attended Conference here last spring, three months after the dedication of prophet Strang's house, and after hearing all that every clique of apostates could say against prophet Strang and the church, and all their tales about the illumination, went before the Conference and publicly rendered as strong testimony of his confidence in the prophet and the church as any man has at any time given. But before the close of Conference a complaint was lodged against him (William Smith) for adultery, which was pursued to final trial and excommunication. And this is all the illumination which has disturbed him, or shaken his faith. And this William is, the informant of the Ottawa Free Trader, and he was not in Yorke nor within 150 miles of there at the time this endowment is alledged to have taken place, nor for ten weeks before and after that time. He knows as little about the matter as the emperor of Japan. But it has become fashionable for every man when he is cut off from the church to cry iniquity! INIQUITY!! for the purpose of covering up his wickedness in the fierceness of his outcry against others. And the public press, secular and religious, has become scavengers of such men's filth and falsehood. We pity the degradation of such editors, and are glad that a race of corrupt wretches are vomiting forth filth enough to keep them from starvation. If they had not the disgorgings of the most corrupt of apostate Mormons for food, we know not where they would obtain any thing rotten enough, except by devouring one another. We can assure them that there is plenty of food of the same kind in store for them. We know a small clique now engaged in masticating another large and more delectable mass, still higher spiced, which they intend to vomit forth early in the spring ready chewed, for all such editors and their patrons. And we can assure them that it is not only equally false with the article from the Free Trader, but much more filthy. And if their lips water so that they cannot wait for it, we presume that for a reasonable consideration they can get a taste beforehand sufficient to save them from starvation.

One word we have to say to apostates who wish to write an expose on the church. Remember that you cannot tell too tough a yarn. No matter though it is impossible. Some respectable editor will vouch for the truth of it. Though you have been a mean man all your life; though you was a liar and a backbiter before you joined the church; a heretic and a swindler while in it, and are an apostate and a hypocrite now—just get up the biggest lie you can possibly invent upon the prophet and the church. Spice it strongly with criminal accusations; enrich it with incongruities and impossibilities, and you will suddenly find yourself a respectable man and a gentleman, and both editors and preachers will vouch for the truth of whatever you please tell the very first time they see you. Have no fears. Try it boldly, and the steeper, the surer is your success. But we need not counsel you. A clique consisting of one from every apostacy which has taken place in the last three years will understand how to do any thing wicked. And they have had experience enough in telling tales to need no monitor in writing them, and as for matter, they have only to accuse the saints of doing what themselves have attempted. The Vulture and Turkey Buzzard of the editorial corps will cry out, "it is enough."—"it is enough."

RELIGIOUS DESTITUTION IN VIRGINIA.—Bishop Johns, of Virginia, related the following in the General Episcopal Convention, in New York:—"At a recent meeting of the Bible Society for Virginia, it was reported that there are 16,000 families without the Word of God. He knew of more than one county where there was no edifice to the worship of God, and no minister of any denomination whatever. The depth of their ignorance was amazing. A minister was summoned to attend the couch of a dying man, and on examining him as to his religious faith, found that he had never even heard of Jesus Christ, but as an oath. Nor was this a solitary case. Two females were called to testify in court on an important business. On questioning them, it was ascertained, to the astonishment of both judge and jury, that they had never heard of either the Bible or of God!"—Advent Herald.

And this among people who have always been Christian! Don't tell any thing more of the civilizing effect of your religion.

☞ To begin well is good, but to end well is better.

it has gone the rounds of the papers generally. Will the editor of any of these papers tell why it is that they always pick up and circulate every such falsehood, and so seldom say any thing favorable to our cause? We can answer for them if they will not speak. It is this: They and their readers, for whose tastes they cater, are of that numerous class who love and make lies. It is impossible to attribute such falsehoods to mere mistake. The story is self-convicted falsehood. We do not conceive it possible that any man could ever attain to the editorial charge of a respectable paper who could for a moment credit such a tale. The strong features of falsehood are marked on it from beginning to end. The substance of the matter is summed up thus:—

"1st. Prophet Strang wants a house built by his disciples.

"2d. He promised them, as their REWARD for building it, an outpouring of the SPIRIT of GOD upon them in a VISIBLE MANIFESTATION, which should render them INVULNERABLE to all the shafts of Satan.

"3d. That they built the house.

"4th. That he palmed off upon them, AS THE PROMISED REWARD, the anointing of their heads with phosphorus and oil.

"5th. That prophet William was present, and detected the imposition.

"6th. That prophet Strang acknowledged the imposition, and in his defense preached a sermon to prove that all miracles were impositions of the same kind, in other words, made a public confession that himself and all other prophets before him were mere impostors and graceless scamps, whose whole lives were one living lie."

No man of sense can for one moment believe such a tale. No wonder the editors who re-published it did not send us their papers. They would never wish to see the face of one of their readers after serving up such falsehood for them, unless they knew him a man of like kidney, loving lies as they do. The man who is capable of believing such a tale, to say nothing of inventing it, is a villain, not fit to live among men. If, by any possibility, the authors of such lies should find a place in heaven, Christ would scourge them out with a lash of twisted wires, as he scourged thieves and money changers out of the Temple at Jerusalem. Not content with garbling and caricaturing the truth, the author of the above has made his story out of whole cloth. Not a single one of the leading points of the tale (as we have analyzed it) is true. If there is one truth in it, it is a mere matter of incident. Such for instance as that prophet Strang did have a house built; a small plain house, which still lacks both floors and doors, more than half the expense of which he paid.

But the editor of the Ottawa Free Trader vouches for the truth of it! Ah! well that makes a difference. How does he know any thing about it? Was he an eye witness to any such transaction? If he was, until impeached, his testimony is legal evidence (whether true or not) in those States where colored men are allowed to be witnesses against whites, and no where else. The long and short of the matter is this,—The editor of the Ottawa Free Trader knows nothing about the matter more than any other person, living, as he does, more than one hundred miles from here. But William Smith attended Conference here last spring, three months after the dedication of prophet Strang's house, and after hearing all that every clique of apostates could say against prophet Strang and the church, and all their tales about the illumination, went before the Conference and publicly rendered as strong testimony of his confidence in the prophet and the church as any man has at any time given. But before the close of Conference a complaint was lodged against him (William Smith) for adultery, which was pursued to final trial and excommunication. And this is all the illumination which has disturbed him, or shaken his faith. And this William is the informant of the Ottawa Free Trader, and he was not in Voree nor within 150 miles of there at the time this endowment is alledged to have taken place, nor for ten weeks before and after that time. He knows as little about the matter as the emperor of Japan. But it has become fashionable for every man when he is cut off from the church to cry iniquity! INIQUITY!! for the purpose of covering up his wickedness in the fierceness of his outcry against others. And the public press, secular and religious, has become scavengers of such men's filth and falsehood. We pity the degradation of such editors, and are glad that a race of corrupt wretches are vomiting forth filth enough to keep them from starvation. If they had not the disgorgings of the most corrupt of apostate Mormons for food, we know not where they would obtain any thing to eat enough, except by devouring one another. We can assure them that there is plenty of food of the same kind in store for them. We know a small clique now engaged in masticating another large and more delectable mass, still higher spiced, which they intend to vomit forth early in the spring ready chewed, for all such editors and their patrons. And we can assure them that it is not only equally false with the article from the Free Trader, but much more filthy. And if their lips water so that they cannot wait for it, we presume that for a reasonable consideration they can get a taste beforehand sufficient to save them from starvation.

One word we have to say to apostates who wish to write an expose on the church. Remember that you cannot tell too tough a yarn. No matter though it is impossible. Some respectable editor will vouch for the truth of it. Though you have been a mean man all your life; though you was a liar and a backbiter before you joined the church; a heretic and a swindler while in it, and are an apostate and a hypocrite now—just get up the biggest lie you can possibly invent upon the prophet and the church. Spice it strongly with criminal accusations; enrich it with incongruities and impossibilities, and you will suddenly find yourself a respectable man and a gentleman, and both editors and preachers will vouch for the truth of whatever you please tell the very first time they see you. Have no fears. Try it boldly, and the steeper, the surer is your success. But we need not counsel you. A clique consisting of one from every apostacy which has taken place in the last three years will understand how to do any thing wicked. And they have had experience enough in telling tales to need no monitor in writing them, and as for matter, they have only to accuse the saints of doing what themselves have attempted. The Vulture and Turkey Buzzard of the editorial corps will cry out, "it is enough."—"it is enough."

RELIGIOUS DESTITUTION IN VIRGINIA.—Bishop Johns, of Virginia, related the following in the General Episcopal Convention, in New York:—"At a recent meeting of the Bible Society for Virginia, it was reported that there are 16,000 families without the Word of God. He knew of more than one county where there was no edifice to the worship of God, and no minister of any denomination whatever. The depth of their ignorance was amazing. A minister was summoned to attend the couch of a dying man, and on examining him as to his religious faith, found that he had never even heard of Jesus Christ, but as an oath. Nor was this a solitary case. Two females were called to testify in court on an important business. On questioning them, it was ascertained, to the astonishment of both judge and jury, that they had never heard of either the Bible or of God!"—Advent Herald.

And this among people who have always been Christian! Don't tell any thing more of the civilizing effect of your religion.

To begin well is good, but to end well is better.

The Catholic discussion is suspended, not closed. Why Mr. Rafferty does not resume on his part, we are unable to say; but presume it is solely for this reason: that the champions of that faith have met a foe which they never before contended with, and which they feel themselves unable to contend against. The letter from Mr. Rafferty which opened the discussion is the only communication we have ever received from him. Our columns have ever been and still are open to him, but whether he shall undertake to defend the faith which he has so clearly stated or not, we are under great obligations to him for giving us so perfect a text-book on which to examine the faith of Mother Babylon and her daughters.—Though Mr. Rafferty modestly speaks of himself as a mere layman, we understand he is a gentleman of superior talent, and was educated for a clergyman. We are anxious to hear from him again, or from any Catholic who will take up his cause with similar ability. The matter has now gone too far for them to give it the go by.—Having entered the lists, they must defend their cause or confess beat.

THE MORMONS.—From the Mormon paper at Voree, W. T., we learn that the Mormons have commenced their temple in that place. James J. Strang has succeeded in appropriating to himself the mantle of Joseph Smith, and is acknowledged as his successor by a branch of the Mormons. Another branch follow Sidney Rigdon, and a third branch are under the government of the twelve, on their way to Oregon or California. The Strangites denounce strongly the immoralities of the other branches. Quite a list of excommunications for various immoralities appear in the last paper, against different members of the Mormon church, some of whom are "sealed up against all gospel privileges on earth;" and others have the privilege of repentance extended to them!!—Advent Herald.

Why does the Advent Herald put marks of astonishment to this paragraph? Is he really astonished to see a people thus fulfilling the law of God? Thus practicing according to Apostolic example? Or is he ignorant of the fact that power was given to the priesthood to bind and loose? and that in Apostolic excommunications persons were delivered up to the buffetings of Satan for such period as their crimes deserved? The Herald is in error also in supposing that Sidney Rigdon presides over any part of the church. His followers are scattered. Many persons have tried to set themselves up without authority, but all have fallen or are in process of decay.

The decrease of the Methodist Church has been so great within the bounds of the New York Conference, that a day of fasting and prayer has been appointed on account of it. One of the bishops stated in a recent address, that there had been a falling off of two thousand members in the New York Conference in one year; and in the whole "Connexion," a falling off of fifty thousand within the same period! He also called attention to a most extraordinary state of things in that communion. He is reported in the "Christian Advocate" as saying: "Our rules required of members received into the church, that they be subjects of experimental religion; yet it is the practice in more than half the church to receive persons who have not experienced a change of heart; and there are probably not less than 50,000 persons whose names on the church books have the letter S attached, to denote that they are 'seekers,' and not believers."

From the returns just published of the number of Methodists in the Wesleyan Society in Great Britain, it appears that within the last year there has been a decrease of 4,749 members in the British and Irish Conferences.—Advent Herald.

There is nothing surprising in this. Methodism lived only on excitement. It is but the Pseudoism of Episcopacy, and had its origin not in any right, but merely in the attempted reformation of a wrong, and can last only so long as it has that erroneous system as fuel to feed upon. It has run its race and commenced decay. The staid and formal sects are as straw, and Methodism is a flame among them; and when it has burnt them out, where is it?

SOWING AND REAPING.

Who are sowing? Who are sowing?
These young children now at play;
And the scattered seeds are growing
Night by night, and day by day.
Some with fruitful grain are shooting,
Some will only weeds produce,
Which, alas! will need uprooting
Ere the soil be fit for use.

Who are sowing? Who are sowing?
Children, manhood, youth and age,
And the scattered seeds a e growing,
Putting forth at every stage;
All along life's pathway springing,
Bearing fruit, or flower or weed,
On the air their odor flinging,
Either for our bane or need.

Soon will dawn the day of reaping,
Soon the gathering time will come,
When each seed, its promise keeping,
All shall bear their harvest home.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

The day is fast approaching
When Jesus shall descend,
And call upon all nations
The judgment to attend.

The sky begins to brighten
Before my ravished eye,
The glory, it appeareth,
Of Jesus drawing nigh.

The fig-tree is in blossom,
The promis'd time is near
When in the clouds of heaven
The Bridegroom shall appear.

O friends can you not see it!
The clear and radiant bow
Of signs that speak his coming,
As winter doth its snow?

The stars have fell from heaven,
The sun has took his veil,
The moon also has given
Her bloody sign of wail.

The great deep too is roaring,
Its waves are mounting high,
Distress among the nations
Bespeak his coming nigh.

The notes of war are sounded,
And deeds of blood are done
By the most Christian nation
That dwells beneath the sun.

The time of peace has ended,
And echoing from afar,
With famine notes are blended
The horrid cry of war.

Hell's yawning pit is open,
And Satan is at work,
His frog-like fiends are croaking
Amid the growing dark,

They know the night is wasting,
And soon they'll cease to ring,
For Jesus Christ is coming,
Eternal day to bring.

The scoffer sees no promise,
And thinks that we are mad,
Because such blessed tokens
Are making our hearts glad.

But if no signs you've witness'd,
Your eyes are dull as lead;
Or else the Savior's teachings
You've not attentive read.

So turn your Bible over,
And note the tokens there,
That speak the Savior coming
In glory in the air.

God's word will give thee wisdom,
And make thy face to shine,
And teach thee Christ is coming
At the appointed time.

And that that time is nearing,
Its periods will thee show,
While signs in earth and heaven
Unite to prove it so.

So lay aside your scoffing,
And join the faithful few,
Who pray and look for Jesus
Creation to renew.

And when he comes in glory,
To make the earth his home,
You'll gladly bid him welcome,
And mount up to his throne.

And with the saints forever
In joyous strains will sing,
Our Savior and deliv'rer,
Our great and coming king.

☞ The Catholic discussion is suspended, not closed. Why Mr. Rafferty does not resume on his part, we are unable to say; but presume it is solely for this reason: that the champions of that faith have met a foe which they never before contended with, and which they feel themselves unable to contend against. The letter from Mr. Rafferty which opened the discussion is the only communication we have ever received from him. Our columns have ever been and still are open to him, but whether he shall undertake to defend the faith which he has so clearly stated or not, we are under great obligations to him for giving us so perfect a text-book on which to examine the faith of Mother Babylon and her daughters.—Though Mr. Rafferty modestly speaks of himself as a mere layman, we understand he is a gentleman of superior talent, and was educated for a clergyman. We are anxious to hear from him again, or from any Catholic who will take up his cause with similar ability. The matter has now gone too far for them to give it the go by.—Having entered the lists, they must defend their cause or confess beat.

THE MORMONS.—From the Mormon paper at Voree, W. T., we learn that the Mormons have commenced their temple in that place. James J. Strang has succeeded in appropriating to himself the mantle of Joseph Smith, and is acknowledged as his successor by a branch of the Mormons. Another branch follow Sidney Rigdon, and a third branch are under the government of the twelve, on their way to Oregon or California. The Strangites denounce strongly the immoralities of the other branches. Quite a list of excommunications for various immoralities appear in the last paper, against different members of the Mormon church, some of whom are "sealed up against all gospel privileges on earth;" and others have the privilege of repentance extended to them!!—Advent Herald.

Why does the Advent Herald put marks of astonishment to this paragraph? Is he really astonished to see a people thus fulfilling the law of God? Thus practicing according to Apostolic example? Or is he ignorant of the fact that power was given to the priesthood to bind and loose? and that in Apostolic excommunications persons were delivered up to the buffetings of Satan for such period as their crimes deserved? The Herald is in error also in supposing that Sidney Rigdon presides over any part of the church. His followers are scattered. Many persons have tried to set themselves up without authority, but all have fallen or are in process of decay.

The decrease of the Methodist Church has been so great within the bounds of the New York Conference, that a day of fasting and prayer has been appointed on account of it. One of the bishops stated in a recent address, that there had been a falling off of two thousand members in the New York Conference in one year; and in the whole "Connexion," a falling off of fifty thousand within the same period! He also called attention to a most extraordinary state of things in that communion. He is reported in the "Christian Advocate" as saying: "Our rules required of members received into the church, that they be subjects of experimental religion; yet it is the practice in more than half the church to receive persons who have not experienced a change of heart; and there are probably not less than 50,000 persons whose names on the church books have the letter S attached, to denote that they are 'seekers,' and not believers."

From the returns just published of the number of Methodists in the Wesleyan Society in Great Britain, it appears that within the last year there has been a decrease of 4,749 members in the British and Irish Conferences.—Advent Herald.

There is nothing surprising in this. Methodism lived only on excitement. It is but the Pseudoism of Episcopacy, and had its origin not in any right, but merely in the attempted reformation of a wrong, and can last only so long as it has that erroneous system to feed upon. It has run its race and commenced decay. Its staid and formal sects are as straw, and Methodism is a fire among them; and when it has burnt them out, where is it?

SOWING AND REAPING.

Who are sowing? Who are sowing?
These young children now at play;
And the scattered seeds are growing
Night by night, and day by day.
Some with fruitful grain are shooting,
Some will only weeds produce,
Which, alas! will need uprooting
Ere the soil be fit for use.

Who are sowing? Who are sowing?
Children, manhood, youth and age,
And the scattered seeds are growing,
Putting forth at every stage;
All along life's pathway springing,
Bearing fruit, or flower or weed,
On the air their odor flinging,
Either for our bane or need.

Soon will dawn the day of reaping,
Soon the gathering time will come,
When each seed, its promise keeping,
All shall bear their harvest home.

THE COMING OF CHRIST.

The day is fast approaching
When Jesus shall descend,
And call upon all nations
The judgment to attend.

The sky begins to brighten
Before my ravished eye,
The glory, it appeareth,
Of Jesus drawing nigh.

The fig-tree is in blossom,
The promis'd time is near
When in the clouds of heaven
The Bridegroom shall appear.

O friends can you not see it!
The clear and radiant bow
Of signs that speak his coming,
As winter doth its snow?

The stars have fell from heaven,
The sun has took his veil,
The moon also has given
Her bloody sign of wail.

The great deep too is roaring,
Its waves are mounting high,
Distress among the nations
Bespeak his coming nigh.

The notes of war are sounded,
And deeds of blood are done
By the most Christian nation
That dwells beneath the sun.

The time of peace has ended,
And echoing from afar,
With famine notes are blended
The horrid cry of war.

Hell's yawning pit is open,
And Satan is at work,
His frog-like fiends are croaking
Amid the growing dark.

They know the night is wasting,
And soon they'll cease to sing,
For Jesus Christ is coming,
Eternal day to bring.

The scoffer sees no promise,
And thinks that we are mad,
Because such blessed tokens
Are making our hearts glad.

But if no signs you've witness'd
Your eyes are dull as dead;
Or else the Savior's teachings
You've not attentive read.

So turn your Bible over,
And note the tokens there,
That speak the Savior coming
In glory in the air.

God's word will give thee wisdom
And make thy face to shine,
And teach thee Christ is coming
At the appointed time.

And that that time is nearing,
Its periods will thee show,
While signs in earth and heaven
Unite to prove it so.

So lay aside your scoffing,
And join the faithful few,
Who pray and look for Jesus
Creation to renew.

And when he comes in glory,
To make the earth his home,
You'll gladly bid him welcome,
And mount up to his throne.

And with the saints forever
In joyous strains will sing,
Our Savior and deliverer,
Our great and coming king.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 30, 1847. [No. 41.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

For the Gospel Herald.

MR. EDITOR:—SIR,—We see that you have copied into the Herald a lengthy article from the "Advent Herald," the Millerite organ, in which there is an attempt made to show the "inspiration of the Jewish prophets," copying numerous texts of scripture and then copying numerous extracts of history to show their fulfillment. We do not doubt the divinity of the scriptures, but we are more than astonished to see the wild perversion that people make of them to show their divinity. As for ourself if we had no other evidence of the divine inspiration of the Jewish prophets than the sayings of many of the texts they have referred to and the application they have made of them, by taking them (the texts) in their proper connection, we should be left to be an infidel at once. Why so? We answer, we discover numerous references made to the 24th chapter of Isaiah as signifying some events that have taken place with Jerusalem, when, in fact, there is not one word in the whole chapter that, in the least sense whatever, has any reference to Jerusalem at all, except the last verse, and that pertains to an event that is yet future, when the Lord Jesus Christ shall reign on the throne of his father David in Jerusalem, and by the resurrection power to him committed by God the Father bring all the saints, both "ancient" and modern, and reign before them "gloriously." The chapter referred to evidently pertains to the whole earth. The term "earth" occurs thirteen times in the chapter. The term "Jerusalem" but once, as stated above. The reader is here requested to read the chapter.

The first verse contains a swerping declaration of what the Lord will do with the inhabitants of the earth in the last days, because of their apostacy from the true gospel covenant.

The second verse is a declaration of the fate of priests, people-masters, servants, buyers and sellers, &c.

The fifth verse tells the reason why it shall thus be. Because they have "transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broken the everlasting covenant," (gospel.)

This apostacy has evidently taken place, as the contradictory doctrines, laws and ordinances of the professedly christian churches plainly exemplify at the present time in their principles, let alone their private characters.

The tenth verse,—"The city of confusion is broken down." This city evidently refers to what is called "mystery Babylon," spoken of in the 17th and 18th chapters of Revelations—the whole apostate religious world. The terms "Babylon" and "Confusion" are evidently synonymous.

Isaiah xxiv. 17, "Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

18. And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit: and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake.

19. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

20. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.

21. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth.

22. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited."

Any person of mature age, with but a common intellect, reading the above texts with the whole chapter and then saying that there is even one word in the chapter referring to old Jerusalem or any event that has transpired with her, only in connection with the whole professed christian world in the general apostacy of the christian church, needs to study his dictionary to find the difference in the signification of the proper nouns "Earth" and "Jerusalem."

Again: In the article alluded to above we noticed frequent references made to the 50th and 51st chapter of Jeremiah for texts said to have been fulfilled in the destruction of old literal Babylon. No doubt that the destruction of literal Babylon took place exactly as set forth in the chapters referred to. But to say that the prophet had reference to literal Babylon only, is as foreign to truth as the antipodes of the earth are to each other.

We take the following bold position:—If the prophet had reference to the destruction of literal Babylon only, in the chapters referred to, his prophecy is false, for the following reason: there are many texts in those chapters that speak of things that should take place with Israel and Judah at the time Babylon should be destroyed, which have never yet been fulfilled with them. The reader is here requested to read both chapters referred to.

Before we proceed further it becomes necessary to give the original signification of some terms used in the chapters quoted.

BABYLON—"wickedness and confusion."

MERODACH—"bitter contention."

CHALDEA—"as demons, as robbers or murderers."

BEL—"vain, or subject to change, the name of an idol."

Literal Babylon may be justly considered a type of "Mystery Babylon" in her moral, religious and political character. Literal Babylon was divided into 676 blocks by her cross streets, so is Mystery Babylon divided into 666 denominations by her crossing or contradictory doctrines. According to the best historical account of literal Babylon, in her best moral character, she was given to all manner of licentiousness, intemperance and debauchery. So is mystery Babylon.

Literal Babylon was given to all kinds of religious idolatry, and so is mystery Babylon worshipping as many imaginary idol gods as literal Babylon did molten ones.

Literal Babylon, in her political character, was arbitrary, tyrannical, cruel and oppressive. And so is mystery Babylon in every

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, DEC. 30, 1847. [No. 41.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

For the Gospel Herald.

MR. EDITOR:—SIR,—We see that you have copied into the Herald a lengthy article from the "Advent Herald," the Millerite organ, in which there is an attempt made to show the "inspiration of the Jewish prophets," copying numerous texts of scripture and then copying numerous extracts of history to show their fulfillment. We do not doubt the divinity of the scriptures, but we are more than astonished to see the wild perversion that people make of them to show their divinity. As for ourself if we had no other evidence of the divine inspiration of the Jewish prophets than the sayings of many of the texts they have referred to and the application they have made of them, by taking them (the texts) in their proper connection, we should be left to be an infidel at once. Why so? We answer, we discover numerous references made to the 24th chapter of Isaiah as signifying some events that have taken place with Jerusalem, when, in fact, there is not one word in the whole chapter that, in the least sense whatever, has any reference to Jerusalem at all, except the last verse, and that pertains to an event that is yet future, when the Lord Jesus Christ shall reign on the throne of his father David in Jerusalem, and by the resurrection power to him committed by God the Father bring all the saints, both "ancient" and modern, and reign before them "gloriously." The chapter referred to evidently pertains to the whole earth. The term "earth" occurs thirteen times in the chapter. The term "Jerusalem" but once, as stated above. The reader is here requested to read the chapter.

The first verse contains a sweeping declaration of what the Lord will do with the inhabitants of the earth in the last days, because of their apostacy from the true gospel covenant.

The second verse is a declaration of the fate of priests, people-masters, servants, buyers and sellers, &c.

The fifth verse tells the reason why it shall thus be. Because they have "transgressed the laws, changed the ordinances, and broken the everlasting covenant," (gospel.)

This apostacy has evidently taken place, as the contradictory doctrines, laws and ordinances of the professedly christian churches plainly exemplify at the present time in their principles, let alone their private characters.

The tenth verse,—"The city of confusion is broken down." This city evidently refers to what is called "mystery Babylon," spoken of in the 17th and 18th chapters of Revelations—the whole apostate religious world. The terms "Babylon" and "Confusion" are evidently synonymous.

Isaiah xxiv. 17, "Fear, and the pit, and the snare, are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth.

18. And it shall come to pass, that he who fleeth from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit: and he that cometh up out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the snare: for the windows from on high are open, and the foundations of the earth do shake.

19. The earth is utterly broken down, the earth is clean dissolved, the earth is moved exceedingly.

20. The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgression thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall, and not rise again.

21. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall punish the host of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth.

22. And they shall be gathered together, as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison, and after many days shall they be visited."

Any person of mature age, with but a common intellect, reading the above texts with the whole chapter and then saying that there is even one word in the chapter referring to old Jerusalem or any event that has transpired with her, only in connection with the whole professed christian world in the general apostacy of the christian church, needs to study his dictionary to find the difference in the signification of the proper nouns "Earth" and "Jerusalem."

Again: in the article alluded to above we noticed frequent references made to the 50th and 51st chapter of Jeremiah for texts said to have been fulfilled in the destruction of old literal Babylon. No doubt that the destruction of literal Babylon took place exactly as set forth in the chapters referred to. But to say that the prophet had reference to literal Babylon only, is as foreign to truth as the antipodes of the earth are to each other.

We take the following bold position:—If the prophet had reference to the destruction of literal Babylon only, in the chapters referred to, his prophecy is false, for the following reason: there are many texts in those chapters that speak of things that should take place with Israel and Judah at the time Babylon should be destroyed, which have never yet been fulfilled with them. The reader is here requested to read both chapters referred to.

Before we proceed further it becomes necessary to give the original signification of some terms used in the chapters quoted.

BABYLON—"wickedness and confusion."

MERODACH—"bitter contention."

CHALDEA—"as demons, as robbers or murderers."

BEL—"vain, or subject to change, the name of an idol."

Literal Babylon may be justly considered a type of "Mystery Babylon" in her moral, religious and political character. Literal Babylon was divided into 676 blocks by her cross streets, so is Mystery Babylon divided into 666 denominations by her crossing or contradictory doctrines. According to the best historical account of literal Babylon, in her best moral character, she was given to all manner of licentiousness, intemperance and debauchery. So is mystery Babylon.

Literal Babylon was given to all kinds of religious idolatry, and so is mystery Babylon worshipping as many imaginary idol gods as literal Babylon did molten ones.

Literal Babylon, in her political character, was arbitrary, tyrannical, cruel and oppressive. And so is mystery Babylon in every form of government she has established on the whole earth, whether of a political or religious nature.

And as literal Babylon has been destroyed by the Medes and Persians, to be a "perpetual desolation," so shall mystery Babylon be destroyed by the ten tribes of Israel coming from the "north country as the battle axe" of God.

When the thing foretold in the 50th chapter 2d and 3d verses was fulfilled by the Medes and Persians, was the 4th & 5th verses fulfilled? We say NO! Here we have it, read and think earnestly:—

Jer. l. 4, "In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the Lord their God.

5. They shall ask the way to Zion, with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten."

Has it been fulfilled? We say no!

17. "Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away: first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18. Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

19. And I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20. In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom I reserve,"

In the 4th and 20th verses we have the definite words, "In those days, and at that time" the Lord would do certain things for "Israel and Judah." What time? The time the Lord would destroy literal Babylon? If so, it failed to be fulfilled. Therefore the only rational conclusion is, that the prophet not only had in view the overthrow of literal Babylon, but mystery Babylon also, of which literal Babylon was a prototype; not only in her moral, religious and political character, but also in her destruction and perpetual desolation.

The following verses certainly never have been fulfilled, as far as the return of Judah and Israel is concerned. Certainly the time has not yet come that the iniquity of Israel and the sins of Judah were sought for and could not be found, because there was none, as quoted above.

Jer. l. 33, "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together; and all that took them captives held them fast: they refused to let them go.

34. Their Redeemer is strong; The Lord of hosts is his name: he shall thoroughly plead their cause, that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon."

When this is done, then look for the ten tribes (who were captivated by the Assyrians some 720 years before Christ) to return from the "north country." Read Jer. iii. 17, 18. xvi. 14, 15. xxxi. 8, 9, 10, 11.

When the above takes place, then look for them to execute the following on mystical Babylon:—

Jer. li. 19, "The portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things; and Israel is the rod of his inheritance: The Lord of hosts is his name.

20. Thou art my battle-ax and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21. And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22. With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23. I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

24. And I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the Lord."

When the above is executed it will then be known whether Israel and Judah, the literal "seed" of Abraham, have been forsaken of their God or not, or whether their "sin" has forever disannuled the oaths and covenants God has made and confirmed to their fathers, as the Millerites vainly talk. Then it will be known whether God is able or not to fulfill all his word, even every jot and tittle thereof. Then it will be known whether the Israel of God will be successful in battle as the "battle axe" of God as quoted above, and set forth in the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezek. It will also be known whether the following means something or nothing:—

Isa. xli. 14, "Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel; I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

15. Behold, I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth: thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff.

16. Thou shalt fan them, and the winds shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou shalt rejoice in the Lord, and shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.

17. When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them.

18. I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water.

19. I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah-tree, and the myrtle, and the oil-tree; I will set in the desert the fir-tree, and the pine, and the box-tree together;

20. That they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the Lord hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it."

If the above means something spiritual, and not literal, we would like to know what a spiritual "threshing instrument" and spiritual "teeth" are; also what spiritual "cedar," "shittah," "myrtle," "oil-tree," "fir-tree," "pine" and "box-trees" are.

Here follows the "Lord's" challenge to all the uninspired of all denominations that shall exist in all the world, at the time he destroys the gentiles by Israel, his "battle-axe:"—

Isa. xli. 21, "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons saith the King of Jacob.

22. Let them bring them forth, and show us what shall happen: let them show the former things, what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come.

23. Show the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods: yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together.

24. Behold, ye are of nothing, and your work of nought: an abomination is he that chooseth you."

What do you think of the challenge, ye that say the days of miracles and revelation are passed and gone, do you think you will accept? To the "second advent" advocates,—do you think you form of government she has established on the whole earth, whether of a political or religious nature.

And as literal Babylon has been destroyed by the Medes and Persians, to be a "perpetual desolation," so shall mystery Babylon be destroyed by the ten tribes of Israel coming from the "north country as the battle axe" of God.

When the thing foretold in the 50th chapter 2d and 3d verses was fulfilled by the Medes and Persians, was the 4th & 5th verses fulfilled? We say NO! Here we have it, read and think earnestly:—

Jer. l. 4, "In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and seek the Lord their God.

5. They shall ask the way to Zion, with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us join ourselves to the Lord in a perpetual covenant that shall not be forgotten."

Has it been fulfilled? We say no!

17. "Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away: first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18. Therefore thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as I have punished the king of Assyria.

19 And I will bring Israel again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20. In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom I reserve."

In the 4th and 20th verses we have the definite words, "In those days, and at that time" the Lord would do certain things for "Israel and Judah" What time? The time the Lord would destroy literal Babylon? If so, it failed to be fulfilled. Therefore the only rational conclusion is, that the prophet not only had in view the overthrow of literal Babylon, but mystery Babylon also, of which literal Babylon was a prototype; not only in her moral, religious and political character, but also in her destruction and perpetual desolation.

The following verses certainly never have been fulfilled, as far as the return of Judah and Israel is concerned. Certainly the time has not yet come that the iniquity of Israel and the sins of Judah were sought for and could not be found, because there was none, as quoted above.

Jer. l. 33. "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together; and all that took them captives held them fast: they refused to let them go.

34. Their Redeemer is strong; The Lord of hosts is his name: he shall thoroughly plead their cause, that he may give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon."

When this is done, then look for the ten tribes (who were captivated by the Assyrians some 720 years before Christ), to return from the "north country." Read Jer. iii. 17, 18. xvi. 14, 15. xxxi. 8, 9. 10. 11.

When the above takes place, then look for them to execute the following on mystical Babylon:—

Jer. li. 19, "The portion of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things: and Israel is the rod of his inheritance: The Lord of hosts is his name.

20. Thou art my battle-ax and weapons of war: for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21. And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22. With thee also will I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23. I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers:

24. And I will render unto Babylon and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the Lord."

When the above is executed it will then be known whether Israel and Judah, the literal "seed" of Abraham, have been forsaken of their God or not, or whether their "sin" has forever disannuled the oaths and covenants God has made and confirmed to their fathers, as the Millerites vainly talk. Then it will be known whether God is able or not to fulfill all his word, even every jot and tittle thereof. Then it will be known whether the Israel of God will be successful in battle as the "battle axe" of God as quoted above, and set forth in the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezek. It will also be known whether the following means something or nothing:—

Isa. xli. 14, "Fear not, thou worm Jacob, and ye men of Israel; I will help thee, saith the Lord, and thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel.

15. Behold, I will make thee a new sharp threshing instrument having teeth: thou shalt thresh the mountains, and beat them small, and shalt make the hills as chaff.

16. Thou shalt fan them, and the winds shall carry them away, and the whirlwind shall scatter them: and thou shalt rejoice in the Lord, and shalt glory in the Holy One of Israel.

17. When the poor and needy seek water, and there is none, and their tongue faileth for thirst, I the Lord will hear them, I the God of Israel will not forsake them.

18. I will open rivers in high places, and fountains in the midst of the valleys: I will make the wilderness a pool of water, and the dry land springs of water.

19. I will plant in the wilderness the cedar, the shittah-tree, and the myrtle, and the oil-tree; I will set in the desert the fir-tree, and the pine, and the box-tree together;

20. That they may see, and know, and consider, and understand together, that the hand of the Lord hath done this, and the Holy One of Israel hath created it."

If the above means something spiritual, and not literal, we would like to know what a spiritual "threshing instrument" and spiritual "teeth" are; also what spiritual "cedar," "shittah," "myrtle," "oil-tree," "fir-tree," "pine" and "box-trees" are.

Here follows the "Lord's" challenge to all the uninspired of all denominations that shall exist in all the world, at the time he destroys the gentiles by Israel, his "battle-axe:"—

Isa. xli. 21, "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons saith the King of Jacob.

22. Let them bring them forth, and show us what shall happen: let them show the former things, what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them; or declare us things for to come.

23. Show the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods: yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together.

24. Behold, ye are of nothing, and your work of nought: an abomination is he that chooseth you."

What do you think of the challenge, ye that say the days of miracles and revelation are passed and gone, do you think you will accept? To the "second advent" advocates,—do you think you gained the argument when you tried to show that Christ would come in 1843? Since you have met with such a signal failure, will you attempt to comply with the 23d verse, or will you conclude that the 24th verse is more applicable to your case?

Isa. xli. 25, "I have raised up one from the north, and he shall come: from the rising of the sun shall he call upon my name: and he shall come upon princes as upon mortar, and as the potter treadeth clay."

By this we learn that the Lord will raise "up one from the north" to lead Israel when they shall come upon the gentile "princes" "as upon mortar," as he raised up Cyrus the Persian to destroy literal Babylon. Here follows an important interrogation, with an equally important declaration:—

Isa. xli. 26, "Who hath declared from the beginning, that we may know? and beforetime, that we may say, He is righteous? yea, there is none that showeth, yea, there is none that declareth, yea, there is none that heareth your words."

Whose words? Him that the Lord shall "raise up from the north." Who are those that "sheweth" not and "declareth" not the word of the Lord? The whole mystical Babylon empire, who are "destitute of the truth," because they have not the spirit of revelation, which is truth, to "lead them into all truth."

Isa. xli. 27, "The first shall say to Zion, Behold, behold them: and I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tidings."

"The first" implies there is more than "one" whom the Lord will "raise up," even "one" from the "north;" but the "first" one is to "say to Zion, Behold, behold them," and the third "one" is to bring "good tidings to Jerusalem." The reason why the Lord is to do this, is because there was none in all mystical Babylon that could declare the will of God, neither in former nor future things, as the following verses declare:—

Isa. xli. 28, "For I beheld, and there was no man; even among them, and there was no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could answer a word.

29. Behold, they are all vanity; their works are nothing; their molten images are wind and confusion."

In consequence of this will the Lord execute upon the inhabitants of the earth the things declared in the 24th chapter of Isaiah.

Isa. lvi. 8, "The Lord God, which gathereth the outcast of Israel, saith, Yet will I gather others to him, besides those that are gathered unto him.

9. All ye beasts of the field, come to devour; yea, all ye beasts in the forest."

Compare this with the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezek., and the reader will readily perceive who are those that are gathered to Israel to take them as a "spoil," besides those that are gathered unto Israel to be delivered with them.

Isa. lvi. 10, "His watchmen are blind, they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber.

11. Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand; they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter.

12. Come ye, say they, I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day, and much more abundant."

The above needs no comment to make more plain the character of the gentile nations at the time God gathers Israel and Judah, preparatory to the advent of Christ, to lay fully waste the empire of Babylon, according to Jer. 50th and 51st chapters.

JOHN E. PAGE.

☞ We this week commence the republication of the following article from the "Spiritual Magazine," the organ of a sect called Perfectionists; a people who have got a long way ahead of the other sects, and with whom we wish a better acquaintance. The Perfectionists seem to truly understand one principle of the law of God.—Do they know whom God has made the keepers, the expounders, and the administrators of the law of the gospel? Then are they wise unto salvation. We have further remarks to make on this subject hereafter.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

The following comunication, though anoymous, is supposed to be from the pen of Rev. H. Eastman, Methodist clergyman of this village:—

Putney, Sept. 28, 1847.

Mr. Editor:—In your paper of Sept. 1st, a few passages are quoted by your contributor, J. H. N., and laid down as the 'true standard of Christanity,' and the test by which all professed Christians are to be tried. Among the passages referred to is the following:—'In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover.' Mark xvi. 17, 18.

Will you permit me, in reference to this passage, to propound a few plain questions? Is this rule applicable in all ages? Are modern Perfectionists willing to be tried by this standard? Can they cast out devils? Have they the gift of tongues similar to that conferred upon the apostles on the day of Pentecost? Are they proof against the poisonous fangs of the venomous serpent? Can they drink the most deadly poisons without injury? Can they heal the sick by the laying on of hands? The language of the passage under consideration is plain and unequivocal. Can Perfectionists, by well attested facts, substantiate their claim to miraculous endowments; and show by 'signs infallible' that they are in 'communication with Omnipotence?' Passing by other points, Have they the gift of healing? If so, then diseases of every description, whether chronic or acute, whether in an incipient or advanced stage, are subject to their control. And the person diseased must be made every whit whole to prove a real miracle. And if all the signs mentioned are to follow, or rather, accompany every true believer in all ages, then no person can justly lay claim to evangelical faith who cannot perform these wounderful works. This, according to the doctrine of the writer alluded to, is the criterion by which we are to judge; and if a person has not power to do these mighty works, it is proof positive that he has not true faith, and, consequently, has 'not seen Christ, neither know him.' Can Perfectionists do these works? E.

ANSWER.

The terms of the rule in Mark xvi. 17, plainly determines the extent of its application. Christ says, 'These signs shall follow them that believe.' If he had said, 'These signs shall follow them that believe in the present age of the world,' we could not have applied the test to subsequent ages; but as his statement stands, we are bound to apply it to all ages; and the laboring oar of proof must be put into the hands of those who object to this application. Let them produce some scriptural authority for limiting the expression, 'them that believe,' to believers of a particular age. Let them show the chapter and verse in the Bible where it is said or hinted that the 'age of miracles' was, or is to pass away. If we attend to what goes before the rule in Mark xvi. 17, we cannot mistake Christ's meaning. 'Go ye,' he says, 'into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. And these signs gained the argument when you tried to show that Christ would come in 1843? Since you have met with such a signal failure, will you attempt to comply with the 23d verse, or will you conclude that the 24th verse is more applicable to your case?

Isa. xli. 25, "I have raised up one from the north, and he shall come: from the rising of the sun shall he call upon my name: and he shall come upon princes as upon mortar, and as the potter treadeth clay."

By this we learn that the Lord will raise "up one from the north" to lead Israel when they shall come upon the gentile "princes" "as upon mortar," as he raised up Cyrus the Persian to destroy literal Babylon. Here follows an important interrogation, with an equally important declaration:—

Isa. xli. 26, "Who hath declared from the beginning, that we may know? and beforetime, that we may say, He is righteous? yea, there is none that showeth, yea, there is none that declareth, yea, there is none that heareth your words."

Whose words? Him that the Lord shall "raise up from the north." Who are those that "sheweth" not and "declareth" not the word of the Lord? The whole mystical Babylon empire, who are "destitute of the truth," because they have not the spirit of revelation, which is truth, to "lead them into all truth."

Isa. xli. 27, "The first shall say to Zion, Behold, behold them: and I will give to Jerusalem one that bringeth good tidings."

"The first" implies there is more than "one" whom the Lord will "raise up," even "one" from the "north;" but the "first" one is to "say to Zion, Behold, behold them," and the third "one" is to bring "good tidings to Jerusalem." The reason why the Lord is to do this, is because there was none in all mystical Babylon that could declare the will of God, neither in former nor future things, as the following verses declare:—

Isa. xli. 28, "For I beheld, and there was no man; even among them, and there was no counsellor, that, when I asked of them, could answer a word.

29. Behold, they are all vanity; their works are nothing; their molten images are wind and confusion."

In consequence of this will the Lord execute upon the inhabitants of the earth the things declared in the 24th chapter of Isaiah.

"Isa. lvi. 8, "The Lord God, which gathereth the outcast of Israel, saith, Yet will I gather others to him, besides those that are gathered unto him.

9. All ye beasts of the field, come to devour; yea, all ye beasts in the forest."

Compare this with the 38th and 39th chapters of Ezek., and the reader will readily perceive who are those that are gathered to Israel to take them as a "spoil," besides those that are gathered unto Israel to be delivered with them.

Isa. lvi. 10, "His watchmen are blind, they are all ignorant, they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; sleeping, lying down, loving to slumber.

11. Yea, they are greedy dogs which can never have enough, and they are shepherds that cannot understand; they all look to their own way, every one for his gain, from his quarter.

12. Come ye, say they, I will fetch wine, and we will fill ourselves with strong drink; and to-morrow shall be as this day, and much more abundant."

The above needs no comment to make more plain the character of the gentile nations at the time God gathers Israel and Judah, preparatory to the advent of Christ, to lay fully waste the empire of Babylon, according to Jer. 50th and 51st chapters.

JOHN E. PAGE.

☞ We this week commence the republication of the following article from the "Spiritual Magazine," the organ of a sect called Perfectionists; a people who have got a long way ahead of the other sects, and with whom we wish a better acquaintance. The Perfectionists seem to truly understand one principle of the law of God.—Do they know whom God has made the keepers, the expounders, and the administrators of the law of the gospel? Then are they wise unto salvation. We have further remarks to make on this subject hereafter.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

The following communication, though anoymous, is supposed to be from the pen of Rev. H. Eastman, Methodist clergyman of this village:—

Putney, Sept. 28, 1847.

Mr. Editor:—In your paper of Sept. 1st, a few passages are quoted by your contributor, J. H. N., and laid down as the 'true standard of Christanity,' and the test by which all professed Christians are to be tried. Among the passages referred to is the following:—'In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover.' Mark xvi. 17, 18.

Will you permit me, in reference to this passage, to propound a few plain questions? Is this rule applicable in all ages? Are modern Perfectionists willing to be tried by this standard? Can they cast out devils? Have they the gift of tongues similar to that conferred upon the apostles on the day of Pentecost? Are they proof against the poisonous fangs of the venomous serpent? Can they drink the most deadly poisons without injury? Can they heal the sick by the laying on of hands? The language of the passage under consideration is plain and unequivocal. Can Perfectionists, by well attested facts, substantiate their claim to miraculous endowments; and show by 'signs infallible' that they are in 'communication with Omnipotence?' Passing by other points, Have they the gift of healing? If so, then diseases of every description, whether chronic or acute, whether in an incipient or advanced stage, are subject to their control. And the person diseased must be made every whit whole to prove a real miracle. And if all the signs mentioned are to follow, or rather, accompany every true believer in all ages, then no person can justly lay claim to evangelical faith who cannot perform these wounderful works. This, according to the doctrine of the writer alluded to, is the criterion by which we are to judge; and if a person has not power to do these mighty works, it is proof positive that he has not true faith, and, consequently, has 'not seen Christ, neither know him.' Can Perfectionists do these works?

E.

ANSWER.

The terms of the rule in Mark xvi. 17, plainly determines the extent of its application. Christ says, 'These signs shall follow them that believe.' If he had said, 'These signs shall follow them that believe in the present age of the world,' we could not have applied the test to subsequent ages; but as his statement stands, we are bound to apply it to all ages; and the laboring oar of proof must be put into the hands of those who object to this application. Let them produce some scriptural authority for limiting the expression, 'them that believe,' to believers of a particular age. Let them show the chapter and verse in the Bible where it is said or hinted that the 'age of miracles' was, or is to pass away. If we attend to what goes before the rule in Mark xvi. 17, we cannot mistake Christ's meaning. 'Go ye,' he says, 'into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned. And these signs shall follow them that believe,' &c. It is certainly puerile and lawless to set up an essential distinction between 'them that believe' in the last verse, and 'he that believeth' in the verse preceding.—The meaning of one of these expressions is manifestly as unlimited in regard to time as that of the other. If then we modify the promise, 'These signs shall follow them that believe,' so as to restrict it to the apostolic age, we are bound by all good sense to modify in like manner the promise, 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;' and then the comfortable doctrine that 'the age of miracles is past,' will have its appropriate complement in the uncomfortable doctrine that the age of salvation is past. Either the promise of salvation to 'him that believeth' is limited, or the promise of signs to 'them that believe' is unlimited. We must take our choice.—Perfectionists choose to believe that the gospel carries both salvation and its primitive signs 'into all the world,' and into all ages of the world.

To the question whether 'modern Perfectionists are willing to be tried by this standard,' we answer on behalf of all with whom we are connected, YES; we are ready for trial. But let it here be premised that the truth of the position that the promise of signs is as unlimited as the promise of salvation, does not depend on the issue of our trial. If we should fail to substantiate our claim to miraculous endowments, still the word of Christ will stand, and will condemn the faith of all churches which are not endowed with miraculous power. 'Let God be true and every man a liar.'

It must also be premised here that we do not accept our inquisitor's rule of interpreting and applying the test of Christ. He says 'the language of the passage under consideration is plain and unequivocal.' So say we. But that language by no means authorizes the inferences which he has drawn from it, and which enables him to set before us such a hopeless job of proof. We must look at the passage with our own eyes before we undertake the monstrous task which he would impose upon us. 'These signs shall follow them that believe,' &c. Here is no specification or fair ground of inference that all the signs referred to shall attend directly every individual believer, and be in manifestation at all times. The plain unequivocal meaning is, that the various signs of miraculous power shall follow 'them that believe,' i. e., the body of true believers; and the specific distribution of those signs, both with reference to persons and times, is left undetermined. The intent of the rule, so far as this distribution is concerned, is fairly to be ascertained by reference to the state of facts in the primitive church. That church was a genuine embodiment of the faith of Christ's gospel. The signs promised to 'them that believe' followed it; and its history, of course, in respect to those signs is fair commentary on the rule. We accept that commentary, and hold ourselves bound to make out a case substantially like that of the primitive church, or to surrender all pretensions of being a true Christian church. But our inquisitor requires us to make out a case which the primitive church could not make out—nor even Christ himself. In the first place 'E's' general theory of applying the test separately to every individual believer, (which he foists upon us without any warrant from the language of our article,) is at variance with the state of facts in the primitive church. In 1 Cor. xii. 4, 30, we have a sketch of the actual distribution of the several gifts of the Spirit, in that church. Paul says—'To one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge; to another, faith; to another, gifts of healing; to another, prophecy,' &c., &c.; and he asks, 'Are all workers of miracles? have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues?' (Vers. 8, 30.) Paul's general theory, as set forth in that chapter and elsewhere, is, that the church of believers is a unit—the body of Christ—and that the gifts or signs belong to it as such, and not every separate member of it. To every fair mind this theory commands itself as entirely accordant with the language of Mark xvi. 17. This is our theory, and we are willing to be tried by it. But the stringent demands of 'E.' are based on entirely another theory, and bear as hard against the primitive church as against Perfectionists. Very few, if any, of the members of that church could substantiate by facts a claim to all the powers of the Spirit; and probably a large propotion of them were not endowed individually with any of the notable gifts. Yet the church as a body was attended by signs sufficient to answer to the spirit and letter, liberally interpreted, of Mark xvi. 17—sufficient to convince, not the 'wicked and adulterous' bigots of Judaism, who were so forward to demand signs on all occasions, but all honest observers, that they were in communication with Omnipotence. Perfectonists certainly do not expect to give the world any more satisfaction than they did.

But to come to particulars, 'E.' asks if Perfectionists can drink deadly poison without injury? If this power must be substantiated by specific facts before we can admit a church to be within the rule, then the primitive church and Christ himself must be cut off; for there is no evidence that Christ or any of his followers in the apostolic age ever made the experiment of drinking deadly poisons; unless indeed we adopt the sentiment of the Temperance fanatics that wine is a deadly poison, and in that case Perfectionists even can produce some successful experiments.

(To be continued.)

Before the First Presidency. Trial of J. W. Crane, Dec. 23d, 1847. Present, James J. Strang.

Josiah Sumner proved that he had been duly notified. Crane sent in a scurilous letter, declining to attend.

He was proved guilty on the following charges, by the number of witnesses mentioned against each specification:—

1. Of bearing false witness. 3 witnesses.

2. Of profanity and profane swearing. 3 witnesses.

3. Heresy. Teaching that it is right to plunder unbelievers. 3 witnesses. Teaching that saints may have other women than one wife. 5 witnesses.

4. Of attempting to seduce two young women. 3 witnesses.

5. Of making a hypocritical confession before the High Council, and professing to retract a doctrine which he continued in. 5 witnesses.

6. Of misrepresenting the teachings of the Presidency. 7 witnesses.

7. Suing a brother at the law. 1 witness and the summons.

8. Of obtaining property by false pretenses. 2 witnesses.

9. Of attempting to rob the church of property entrusted to his official keeping, and violently seizing on church property. Several witnesses on different items.

And he having been faithfully admonished before, and refusing to attend his trial or to hear the church, it is adjudged that his priesthood and authority be taken from him. He is excommunicated from the church and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent and make satisfaction, and bring forth works meet for repentance. Let him be to you as a heathen man. Amen.

GILBERT WATSON, Clerk. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres.

☞ He that would train up a child in the way he should go, should walk therein himself.

☞ Christ's sheep live in green pastures, the wolves of Anti-Christ in the wilderness.

☞ A good shepherd that cares for the flock stays with it, a bad one stays by himself.

shall follow them that believe,' &c. It is certainly puerile and lawless to set up an essential distinction between 'them that believe' in the last verse, and 'he that believeth' in the verse preceding.—The meaning of one of these expressions is manifestly as unlimited in regard to time as that of the other. If then we modify the promise, 'These signs shall follow them that believe,' so as to restrict it to the apostolic age, we are bound by all good sense to modify in like manner the promise, 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;' and then the comfortable doctrine that 'the age of miracles is past,' will have its appropriate complement in the uncomfortable doctrine that the age of salvation is past. Either the promise of salvation to 'him that believeth' is limited, or the promise of signs to 'them that believe' is unlimited. We must take our choice.—Perfectionists choose to believe that the gospel carries both salvation and its primitive signs 'into all the world,' and into all ages of the world.

To the question whether 'modern Perfectionists are willing to be tried by this standard,' we answer on behalf of all with whom we are connected, YES; we are ready for trial. But let it here be premised that the truth of the position that the promise of signs is as unlimited as the promise of salvation, does not depend on the issue of our trial. If we should fail to substantiate our claim to miraculous endowments, still the word of Christ will stand, and will condemn the faith of all churches which are not endowed with miraculous power. 'Let God be true and every man a liar.'

It must also be premised here that we do not accept our inquisitor's rule of interpreting and applying the test of Christ. He says 'the language of the passage under consideration is plain and unequivocal.' So say we. But that language by no means authorizes the inferences which he has drawn from it, and which enables him to set before us such a hopeless job of proof. We must look at the passage with our own eyes before we undertake the monstrous task which he would impose upon us. 'These signs shall follow them that believe,' &c. Here is no specification or fair ground of inference that all the signs referred to shall attend directly every individual believer, and be in manifestation at all times. The plain unequivocal meaning is, that the various signs of miraculous power shall follow 'them that believe,' i. e., the body of true believers; and the specific distribution of these signs, both with reference to persons and times, is left undetermined. The intent of the rule, so far as this distribution is concerned, is fairly to be ascertained by reference to the state of facts in the primitive church. That church was a genuine embodiment of the faith of Christ's gospel. The signs promised to 'them that believe' followed it; and its history, of course, in respect to these signs is fair commentary on the rule. We accept that commentary, and hold ourselves bound to make out a case substantially like that of the primitive church, or to surrender all pretensions of being a true Christian church. But our inquisitor requires us to make out a case which the primitive church could not make out—nor even Christ himself. In the first place 'E's' general theory of applying the test separately to every individual believer, (which he foists upon us without any warrant from the language of our article,) is at variance with the state of facts in the primitive church. In 1 Cor. xii. 4, 30, we have a sketch of the actual distribution of the several gifts of the Spirit in that church. Paul says—'To one is given, by the Spirit, the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge; to another, faith; to another, gifts of healing; to another, prophecy,' &c., &c.; and he asks, 'Are all workers of miracles? have all the gifts of healing? do all speak with tongues?' (Vers. 8, 30.) Paul's general theory, as set forth in that chapter and elsewhere, is, that the church of believers is a unit—the body of Christ—and that the gifts or signs belong to it as such, and not every separate member of it. To every fair mind this theory commands itself as entirely accordant with the language of Mark xvi. 17. This is our theory, and we are willing to be tried by it. But the stringent demands of 'E.' are based on entirely another theory, and bear as hard against the primitive church as against Perfectionists. Very few, if any, of the members of that church could substantiate by facts a claim to all the powers of the Spirit; and probably a large propotion of them were not endowed individually with any of the notable gifts. Yet the church as a body was attended by signs sufficient to answer to the spirit and letter, liberally interpreted, of Mark xvi. 17—sufficient to convince, not the 'wicked and adulterous' bigots of Judaism, who were so forward to demand signs on all occasions, but all honest observers, that they were in communication with Omnipotence. Perfectionists certainly do not expect to give the world any more satisfaction than they did.

But to come to particulars, 'E.' asks if Perfectionists can drink deadly poison without injury? If this power must be substantiated by specific facts before we can admit a church to be within the rule, then the primitive church and Christ himself must be cut off; for there is no evidence that Christ or any of his followers in the apostolic age ever made the experiment of drinking deadly poisons; unless indeed we adopt the sentiment of the Temperance fanatics that wine is a deadly poison, and in that case Perfectionists even can produce some successful experiments.

(To be continued.)

Before the First Presideney. Trial of J. W. Crane, Dec. 23d, 1847. Present, James J. Strang.

Josiah Sumner proved that he had been duly notified. Crane sent in a scurilous letter, declining to attend.

He was proved guilty on the following charges, by the number of witnesses mentioned against each specification:—

1. Of bearing false witness. 3 witnesses.
2. Of profanity and profane swearing. 3 witnesses.
3. Heresy. Teaching that it is right to plunder unbelievers. 3 witnesses. Teaching that saints may have other women than one wife. 5 witnesses.
4. Of attempting to seduce two young women. 3 witnesses.
5. Of making a hypocritical confession before the High Council, and professing to retract a doctrine which he continued in. 5 witnesses.
6. Of misrepresenting the teachings of the Presidency. 7 witnesses.
7. Suing a brother at the law. 1 witness and the summons.
8. Of obtaining property by false pretenses. 2 witnesses.
9. Of attempting to rob the church of property entrusted to his official keeping, and violently seizing on church property. Several witnesses on different items.

And he having been faithfully admonished before, and refusing to attend his trial or to hear the church, it is adjudged that his priesthood and authority be taken from him. He is excommunicated from the church and delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until he repent and make satisfaction, and bring forth works meet for repentance. Let him be to you as a heathen man. Amen.

GILBERT WATSON, Clerk. JAMES J. STRANG, Pres.

☞ He that would train up a child in the way he should go, should walk therein himself.

☞ Christ's sheep live in green pastures, the wolves of Anti-Christ in the wilderness.

☞ A good shepherd that cares for the flock stays with it, a bad one stays by himself.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 6, 1848. [No. 42.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

From the Spiritual Magazine.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

(Continued from last week.)

Again, 'E.' asks if Perfectionists are 'proof against the poisonous fangs of the venomous serpent?' Now every one who is familiar with the Bible knows that there is but one instance in which this power was substantiated in the primitive church—viz., that of Paul. (Acts xxviii. 3, 5.) Previous to that instance, Christ and all his followers might have been challenged to prove their faith by this sign, as triumphantly as Perfectionists are challenged now. When Perfectionism has lived thirty years, (the length of time from the ministery of Christ to the sign in the case of Paul,) if a single instance of victory over serpent-poison cannot be found among us, it will be time to think of setting us aside as being out of the primitive rule of faith.

It is apparent then that 'E.'s' screw of rigorous interpretation has been turned upon us too far, and must fly back, or the primitive church will be pinched with us. We must have as much room to turn in as they had. Two of the signs mentioned in Mark xvi. 17, were certainly very rare in the apostolic age, and that simply because there were very few proper occasions for them. If primitive believers had been under the necessity of drinking poisons or suffering the bite of serpents daily, doubtless the instances of miraculous impunity in reference to these evils would have been as frequent as the instances of the other signs. But God did not go out of his way to make occasions, for the sake of fulfilling the letter of his promise or of gratifying sign-seekers; and the result was that only a single instance of victory over serpent-poison, and not one of drinking poison without injury, was placed on record.

The principle which is thus established, that the signs promised in Mark xvi. 17, are not to be expected, all in a lump, without regard to occasions, must be applied to the gift of tongues. This is the sign which fanatics and impostors are usually most fond of, and which miracle-haters generally challenge. But it should be noticed that Christ never spoke in an unknown tongue. Why? Because his ministry was confined to a single nation, and he had no occasion to speak foreign languages. When there was a proper occasion for this gift, as on the day of Pentecost when strangers were gathered at Jerusalem from many nations, and in the foreign missions of the apostles, this sign attended the church. But Paul regarded this as one of the least valuable of the gifts of the Spirit, and discouraged the use of it when there was no occasion for it, as may be seen by any one who will read the 14th chapter of 1 Corinthians. Our answer then to the call for this gift, is, that we are not in circumstances which make occasion for it. We are not dealing with foreigners. If God should speak by us in unknown tongues, the population we are among would not see any sign, for they know only their mother-tongue. It will be time to call for the gift of tongues when we are called to foreign missions. Till then we are content with such gifts of utterance as are needful for edification and exhortation and comfort. See 1 Cor. xiv. 1, 4, and Matt. x. 19, 20.

As to the power of casting out devils, it should be observed that, inasmuch as devils, according to the Bible, are the causes of all maadies, both of body and soul, the gift of expelling them cannot be very clearly distinguished from the gift of healing diseases, on the one hand, and the power of salvation from sin, on the other.—In every case of regeneration the devil is certainly cast out; and the same may be said of nearly every case of the cure of disease.—It is true, however, that in the practice of Christ and the apostles the casting out of devils was recognized as in some measure a distinct department. But the cases which belonged peculiarly to this department in their day, viz., those of epilepsy, insanity, &c., are now classed with other bodily diseases. Unbelief and sensual wisdom have advanced so far, that no cases of possession of devils are admitted to exist. Indeed it is quite fashionable to doubt whether there is any devil at all. Of course the power to cast out devils cannot be proved to those who believe that there are no devils to be cast out. All we can say, then, in reply to the question whether Perfectionists can 'cast out devils,' is, that we are sure, in our own minds, that this power has been manifested among us in many cases; but as those cases, according to the prevailing theory, or rather no theory about devils, are not distinguished from cases of simple healing, we are obliged to merge this matter, so far as proof is concerned, in the general department of curing disease.

Passing by then, other points,' as 'E.' suggests, (and we trust we have not passed by any without giving him satisfaction,) we now come to the main question—'Have Perfectionists the gift of healing?' But before going to trial on this issue, we must still further correct 'E.'s' theory of miracles, by appeal to primitive facts. He says if Perfectionists have the gift of healing, 'then diseases of every description, whether chronic or acute, whether in an incipient or an advanced stage, are subject to their control.' This is a very broad statement, and certainly needs some modification. It is clear that the power of God, which is the source of the gift of healing in believers, has entire control of all diseases in all stages. But whether the whole of that power is bestowed and placed at the believer's full command in all cases where any measure of it is bestowed, is not so clear. We must remember, when we speak of the 'gift of healing,' that the power thus designated is not inherent in the instrument of it, like the power of a medical education—that it is not a gift in such a sense that it belongs to the believer separately from God. We must remember, too, that the power of God is one thing, and his will to exert that power in specific instances, is another; that a miracle is the result, not merely of his general power, but of his specific will; and that one who has the 'gift of healing,' and so in conjunction with the general power over disease, is still limited in his operations by the discretionary will of the Giver. If we lose sight of these principles, and imagine that the 'gift of heal-

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 6, 1848. [No. 42.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

From the Spiritual Magazine.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

(Continued from last week.)

Again, 'E.' asks if Perfectionists are 'proof against the poisonous fangs of the venomous serpent?' Now every one who is familiar with the Bible knows that there is but one instance in which this power was substantiated in the primitive church—viz., that of Paul. (Acts xxviii. 3, 5.) Previous to that instance, Christ and all his followers might have been challenged to prove their faith by this sign, as triumphantly as Perfectionists are challenged now. When Perfectionism has lived thirty years, (the length of time from the ministery of Christ to the sign in the case of Paul,) if a single instance of victory over serpent-poison cannot be found among us, it will be time to think of setting us aside as being out of the primitive rule of faith.

It is apparent then that 'E.'s' screw of rigorous interpretation has been turned upon us too far, and must fly back, or the primitive church will be pinched with us. We must have as much room to turn in as they had. Two of the signs mentioned in Mark xvi. 17, were certainly very rare in the apostolic age, and that simply because there were very few proper occasions for them. If primitive believers had been under the necessity of drinking poisons or suffering the bite of serpents daily, doubtless the instances of miraculous impunity in reference to these evils would have been as frequent as the instances of the other signs. But God did not go out of his way to make occasions, for the sake of fulfilling the letter of his promise or of gratifying sign-seekers; and the result was that only a single instance of victory over serpent-poison, and not one of drinking poison without injury, was placed on record.

The principle which is thus established, that the signs promised in Mark xvi. 17, are not to be expected, all in a lump, without regard to occasions, must be applied to the gift of tongues. This is the sign which fanatics and impostors are usually most fond of, and which miracle-haters generally challenge. But it should be noticed that Christ never spoke in an unknown tongue. Why? Because his ministry was confined to a single nation, and he had no occasion to speak foreign languages. When there was a proper occasion for this gift, as on the day of Pentecost when strangers were gathered at Jerusalem from many nations, and in the foreign missions of the apostles, this sign attended the church. But Paul regarded this as one of the least valuable of the gifts of the Spirit, and discouraged the use of it when there was no occasion for it, as may be seen by any one who will read the 14th chapter of 1, Corinthians. Our answer then to the call for this gift, is, that we are not in circumstances which make occasion for it. We are not dealing with foreigners. If God should speak by us in unknown tongues, the population we are among would not see any sign, for they know only their mother-tongue. It will be time to call for the gift of tongues when we are called to foreign missions. Till then we are content with such gifts of utterance as are needful for edification and exhortation and comfort. See 1 Cor. xiv. 1, 4, and Matt. x. 19, 20.

As to the power of casting out devils, it should be observed that, inasmuch as devils, according to the Bible, are the causes of all maladies, both of body and soul, the gift of expelling them cannot be very clearly distinguished from the gift of healing diseases, on the one hand, and the power of salvation from sin, on the other.—In every case of regeneration the devil is certainly cast out; and the same may be said of nearly every case of the cure of disease.—It is true, however, that in the practice of Christ and the apostles the casting out of devils was recognized as in some measure a distinct department. But the cases which belonged peculiarly to this department in their day, viz., those of epilepsy, insanity, &c., are now classed with other bodily diseases. Unbelief and sensual wisdom have advanced so far, that no cases of possession of devils are admitted to exist. Indeed it is quite fashionable to doubt whether there is any devil at all. Of course the power to cast out devils cannot be proved to those who believe that there are no devils to be cast out. All we can say, then, in reply to the question whether Perfectionists can 'cast out devils,' is, that we are sure, in our own minds, that this power has been manifested among us in many cases; but as those cases, according to the prevailing theory, or rather no theory about devils, are not distinguished from cases of simple healing, we are obliged to merge this matter, so far as proof is concerned, in the general department of curing disease.

'Passing by then, other points,' as 'E.' suggests, (and we trust we have not passed by any without giving him satisfaction,) we now come to the main question—'Have Perfectionists the gift of healing?' But before going to trial on this issue, we must still further correct 'E.'s' theory of miracles, by appeal to primitive facts. He says if Perfectionists have the gift of healing, 'then diseases of every description, whether chronic or acute, whether in an incipient or an advanced stage, are subject to their control.' This is a very broad statement, and certainly needs some modification. It is clear that the power of God, which is the source of the gift of healing in believers, has entire control of all diseases in all stages. But whether the whole of that power is bestowed and placed at the believer's full command in all cases where any measure of it is bestowed, is not so clear. We must remember, when we speak of the 'gift of healing,' that the power thus designated is not inherent in the instrument of it, like the power of a medical education—that it is not a gift in such a sense that it belongs to the believer separately from God. We must remember, too, that the power of God is one thing, and his will to exert that power in specific instances, is another; that a miracle is the result, not merely of his general power, but of his specific will; and that one who has the 'gift of healing,' and so is in conjunction with the general power over disease, is still limited in his operations by the discretionary will of the Giver. If we lose sight of these principles, and imagine that the 'gift of healing' places all diseases absolutely at the control of the believer, we shall not be able to account for the fact that deaths occurred in the primitive church, as they certainly did, notwithstanding the 'gift of healing' was present in abundant measure. Paul testified, in 1 Cor. xv. 6, that some of the witnesses of Christ's resurrection had 'fallen asleep;' and it is not improbable that some even of those who had the gift of healing were among the number. Stephen, though he was 'full of faith and power, and did great wonders and miracles among the people,' was stoned, and God did not interpose to prevent his death, though he could have done it as easily as he did when Paul was stoned. (Acts xiv. 19, 20.) Trophimus was left sick at Miletum, by an apostle who certainly had a full measure of the gift of healing. (2 Tim. iv. 20.) These and many similar facts show that the gift of healing in the primitive church did not absolutely make over to men the omnipotence of God against disease and death. 'E.'s' broad statement must be modified at least so far as to leave the actual dispensation of the power to control disease still in the hands of God. We are not bound to cure every malady that crosses our path and abolish death at once all around us, without waiting on the will of God, in order to substantiate a claim to the gift of healing.

Again, the power of those who have the gift of healing is limited not only by the discretion of God, but also by the measure of their own faith. Christ gave his disciples 'power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases;' (Luke ix. 1;) and 'they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel and healing every where.' (Ver. 6.) But after all this we find that they encountered a devil which they were not able to cast out. A man brought his son to Jesus, complaining that he had besought his disciples to cast the devil out of him, 'and they could not.' (Ver. 40.) Afterwards they asked Jesus why they could not cast out that devil, and he said—'Because of your unbelief. This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.' (Matt. xvii. 20, 21.) Here is a case that clashes directly with 'E.'s' rigid rule, that if any one has the gift of healing, 'all diseases, whether chronic or acute, whether in an incipient or an advanced stage, are subject to his control.' The disciples certainly had the gift of healing, and yet they met with a disease which was not subject to their control. That disease was subject to the control of Christ, for he cast the devil out. Of course it was subject to the power which was the source of the gift of healing in the disciples. But their faith was not large enough to give that power vent sufficient for a difficult case.

We perceive also in the light of this transaction, with Christ's commentary on it, that the difference between diseases in regard to strength and virulence is to be taken into account, even in faith-practice, 'E.'s' ruling to the contrary notwithstanding. 'This kind [of devils,'] says Christ, 'goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.' Other kinds had yielded to the immature faith of the disciples; but this was a strong, fast-seated devil, (as appears vividly in the account in Mark ix. 17,) to be dealt with successfully only by a master workman. The disciples needed more 'prayer and fasting,' i. e., more spirituality and communication with God, before they could handle the worst class of devils. It fairly follows from the principle which is thus established, that a person having the gift of healing may be able to cure acute or incipient diseases, and yet not have faith enough to encounter chronic or advanced cases. This runs in the teeth of 'E.'s' dogma. He must either lower his terms, or deny that the disciples had the gift of healing.

It is further to be observed, that the power of healing diseases is limited by unbelief in the patients, and in those around them. Christ in almost all cases connected the efficacy of his power with the faith of its subjects or their friends. His constant langrage was—'Believest thou that I am able to do this?'—'Only believe, and thou shalt be made whole'—'Thy faith hath saved thee,' &c. When the friends of the dead maiden laughed him to scorn, he 'put them all out' before he attempted to raise her. He certainly had the highest power of the gift of healing, and yet he 'could not' do many mighty works in a place where he was known only as the carpenter's son and his divinity was repulsed by unbelief. (See Matt. xiii. 58, and Mark vi. 5.)

We find, then, that 'E.'s' sweeping assertion that the power of the gift of healing, when it is possessed at all, is altogether unlimited, is not sustained by Bible facts. On the contrary, it appears that in the primitive church that power was limited in three ways; 1, by the discretion of God; 2, by the degree of faith in the practitioner; 3, by the degree of faith in the patient and those around him.

(To be continued.)

SCIENTIFIC EXPEDITION TO THE DEAD SEA.

We stated, a few days since, says the New York Herald, that a party of naval officers, under the command of Lieut. W. F. Lynch, would shortly sail from this port, in the United States store ship Supply, to the Mediterranean, for the purpose of making an exploration and survey of the Dead Sea. We have since received the following interesting communication relative to the expedition:—

For upwards of four thousand years, the Dead Sea has laid in its deep and wonderous chasm a withering record of the visitation of God's wrath upon his sinful creatures! Itself once a fertile vale, teeming with population and redundant with the products of a favored clime it now lies inert and sluggish, a mass of dark and bitter waters, with no living thing upon its shore, or above, or beneath its surface. Receiving at one extreme the mighty volume of a swift and unfailing river; and the numerous torrents that plunge into it through the clefts in its sides, it slowly rises and falls in its own solitary bed, with no visible outlet for its tributary waters. Its lofty and fretted sides riven by earthquakes:—here blanched by the rain, there blackened by the tempest—rise perpendicularly fifteen hundred feet on one side, and two thousand feet on the other; while from the summit the awe-struck spectator beholds floating upon its surface huge masses of bitumen, thrown up from its mysterious vortex. Mount Lebanon is 9,000 feet above the Mediterranean, and 10,300 above the Dead Sea, which is little more than one hundred miles distant from it. The "Corral" on the island of Madeira is wonderful, for it is the bed of a crater nearly level with the ocean; but here is a sea, forty miles distant from another sea, and upwards of thirteen hundred feet below it. The unhappy Costigan, the only man who has undertaken to circumnavigate this sea, and who perished in the attempt, could, in one place, find no bottom, and it was indicated by incessant bubbles and also an agitated surface.—Whether or not this be the crater of a submerged volcano, forming a subterraneous acqueduct with the ocean, who can tell? This unfathomable spot, whether or not through an extinct volcano, in connection with depression of surface and the height of a contiguous mountain, forms the most extraordinary vault or fissure in the known world.

One great object of investigation will be to ascertain whether the sea and its shores are of volcanic or non-volcanic origin, and to refute the position of infidel philosophers with regard to its formation. The elucidation of this subject is a desideratum to science, and would be most gratifying to the whole Christian world. It is a mystery which has remained impenetrable since the awful moment when the waters of that wonderous sea first rose above the smoldering ruins of the vale of Sidim. The configuration of one-half of its shores, and its very extent are unknown. Its waters of a petriing' places all diseases absolutely at the control of the believer, we shall not be able to account for the fact that deaths occurred in the primitive church, as they certainly did, notwithstanding the 'gift of healing' was present in abundant measure. Paul testified, in 1 Cor. xv. 6, that some of the witnesses of Christ's resurrection had 'fallen asleep;' and it is not improbable that some even of those who had the gift of healing were among the number. Stephen, though he was 'full of faith and power, and did great wonders and miracles among the people,' was stoned, and God did not interpose to prevent his death, though he could have done it as easily as he did when Paul was stoned. (Acts xiv. 19,. 20.) Trophimus was left sick at Miletum, by an apostle who certainly had a full measure of the gift of healing. (2 Tim. iv. 20.) These and many similar facts show that the gift of healing in the primitive church did not absolutely make over to men the omnipotence of God against disease and death. 'E.'s' broad statement must be modified at least so far as to leave the actual dispensation of the power to control disease still in the hands of God. We are not bound to cure every malady that crosses our path and abolish death at once all around us, without waiting on the will of God, in order to substantiate a claim to the gift of healing.

Again, the power of those who have the gift of healing is limited not only by the discretion of God, but also by the measure of their own faith. Christ gave his disciples 'power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases;' (Luke ix. 1;) and 'they departed and went through the towns, preaching the gospel and healing every where.' (Ver. 6.) But after all this we find that they encountered a devil which they were not able to cast out. A man brought his son to Jesus, complaining that he had besought his disciples to cast the devil out of him, 'and they could not.' (Ver. 40.) Afterwards they asked Jesus why they could not cast out that devil: and he said—'Because of your unbelief. This kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.' (Matt. xvii. 20, 21.) Here is a case that clashes directly with 'E.'s' rigid rule, that if any one has the gift of healing, 'all diseases, whether chronic or acute, whether in an incipient or an advanced stage, are subject to his control.' The disciples certainly had the gift of healing, and yet they met with a disease which was not subject to their control. That disease was subject to the control of Christ, for he cast the devil out. Of course it was subject to the power which was the source of the gift of healing in the disciples. But their faith was not large enough to give that power vent sufficient for a difficult case.

We perceive also in the light of this transaction, with Christ's commentary on it, that the difference between diseases in regard to strength and virulence is to be taken into account, even in faith-practice, 'E.'s' ruling to the contrary notwithstanding. 'This kind [of devils,'] says Christ, 'goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.' Other kinds had yielded to the immature faith of the disciples; but this was a strong, fast-seated devil, (as appears vividly in the account in Mark ix. 17,) to be dealt with successfully only by a master workman. The disciples needed more 'prayer and fasting,' i. e., more spirituality and communication with God, before they could handle the worst class of devils. It fairly follows from the principle which is thus established, that a person having the gift of healing may be able to cure acute or incipient diseases, and yet not have faith enough to encounter chronic or advanced cases. This runs in the teeth of 'E.'s' dogma. He must either lower his terms, or deny that the disciples had the gift of healing.

It is further to be observed, that the power of healing diseases is limited by unbelief in the patients, and in those around them.—Christ in almost all cases connected the efficacy of his power with the faith of its subjects or their friends. His constant language was—'Believest thou that I am able to do this?'—'Only believe, and thou shalt be made whole'—'Thy faith hath saved thee,' &c. When the friends of the dead maiden laughed him to scorn, he 'put them all out' before he attempted to raise her. He certainly had the highest power of the gift of healing, and yet he 'could not' do many mighty works in a place where he was known only as the carpenter's son and his divinity was repulsed by unbelief. (See Matt. xiii. 58, and Mark vi. 5.)

We find, then, that 'E.'s' sweeping assertion that the power of the gift of healing, when it is possessed at all, is altogether unlimited, is not sustained by Bible facts. On the contrary, it appears that in the primitive church that power was limited in three ways: 1, by the discretion of God; 2, by the degree of faith in the practitioner; 3, by the degree of faith in the patient and those around him.

(To be continued.)

SCIENTIFIC EXPEDITION TO THE DEAD SEA.

We stated, a few days since, says the New York Herald, that a party of naval officers, under the command of Lieut. W. F. Lynch, would shortly sail from this port, in the United States store ship Supply, to the Mediterranean, for the purpose of making an exploration and survey of the Dead Sea. We have since received the following interesting communication relative to the expedition:—

For upwards of four thousand years, the Dead Sea has laid in its deep and wonderous chasm a withering record of the visitation of God's wrath upon his sinful creatures! Itself once a fertile vale, teeming with population and redundant with the products of a favored clime it now lies inert and sluggish, a mass of dark and bitter waters, with no living thing upon its shore, or above, or beneath its surface. Receiving at one extreme the mighty volume of a swift and unfailing river; and the numerous torrents that plunge into it through the clefts in its sides, it slowly rises and falls in its own solitary bed, with no visible outlet for its tributary waters. Its lofty and fretted sides riven by earthquakes:—here blanched by the rain, there blackened by the tempest—rise perpendicularly fifteen hundred feet on one side, and two thousand feet on the other; while from the summit the awe-struck spectator beholds floating upon its surface huge masses of bitumen, thrown up from its mysterious vortex. Mount Lebanon is 9,000 feet above the Mediterranean, and 10,300 above the Dead Sea, which is little more than one hundred miles distant from it. The "Corral" on the island of Madeira is wonderful, for it is the bed of a crater nearly level with the ocean; but here is a sea, forty miles distant from another sea, and upwards of thirteen hundred feet below it. The unhappy Costigan, the only man who has undertaken to circumnavigate this sea, and who perished in the attempt, could, in one place, find no bottom, and it was indicated by incessant bubbles and also an agitated surface.—Whether or not this be the crater of a submerged volcano, forming a subterraneous acqueduct with the ocean, who can tell? This unfathomable spot, whether or not through an extinct volcano, in connection with depression of surface and the height of a contiguous mountain, forms the most extraordinary vault or fissure in the known world.

One great object of investigation will be to ascertain whether the sea and its shores are of volcanic or non-volcanic origin, and to refute the position of infidel philosophers with regard to its formation. The elucidation of this subject is a desideratum to science, and would be most gratifying to the whole Christian world. It is a mystery which has remained impenetrable since the awful moment when the waters of that wonderous sea first rose above the smoldering ruins of the vale of Sidim. The configuration of one-half of its shores, and its very extent are unknown. Its waters of a petri-fying quality, and limpid as a mountain stream, doubtless hold within their bosom, and holding, will reveal those ruins, upon the non-existence of which the unbeliever stakes his incredulity.

Strabo, Diodorus, Pliny, and Josephus, among the ancients—and Maundrell, Pococke, Abbe, Martins, Chateaubriand, La Martine, Stephens and Robinson, among the moderns, all differ as to the extent, and many of the pecularities of this sea. Considerable streams are said to empty into it, the very names of which are unknown. Some have heard the gambolings of fish upon its surface, while others deny that any animated thing whatever can exist within its dense and bitter waters. Fruits, luscious to the eye, but of nauseous taste, and crumbling in the grasp, are said to be found upon its shores. Many travelers deny the existence of all vegetation, and Chateaubriand asserts that he found branches of the tamarind tree strewn upon the beach. Its southern coast is said to consist of masses of solid salt; while, as far as the eye can reach from its northern extreme, it beholds only the wasted and barren hills of Judea on one side, and those of Arabia Petrea on the other.—All is vague, uncertain and mysterious.

Are the questions answered? Or, shall a small pecuniary consideration withhold a country such as this from such an undertaking?

I admit that it is not a summer's excursion, and that British officers are said to have twice failed in a like attempt. Should that circumstance deter us? I venture to say, that within the broad periphery of this land which, cradled between oceans, stretches from the frigid zone to the tropics, there is not one native born or true hearted adopted citizen who will answer in the affirmative. We owe something to the scientific and Christian world, and while extending the blessings of civil liberty in the south and west, may well afford to foster science and strengthen the bulwarks of Christianity in the east. W. F. LYNCH, U. S. N.

We shall look forward to the result of this expedition with no little interest.

MUSINGS.

It is a singular fact that more infidelity is produced in the face of direct fulfillment of prophecy, than at those periods on which prophecies do not fall so abundantly. And it is exceedingly singular that so many of the most violent unbelievers and apostates have fulfilled prophecies, in their own persons, which they determined should not be fulfilled, when the thing seemed to rest entirely in their own volition. We saw an instance very recently which, if we had not previously seen many like it, would have astonished us. Certain men coming to Voree, and professing the strongest possible faith in the administration of the prophet, but at the same time dictating various matters not within the jurisdiction of their priesthood; he publicly admonished them of their faults, and told them that unless they immediately turned back and repented of their errors, they would apostatize within twenty-four hours, and in twice that time would denounce and hate him. After hearing their admonition they professed to be still unshaken in the faith, and to have the firmest confidence in the prophet. A half hour wrought a visible change; twelve hours after they commenced railing against the prophet, and during the next day heaped many railing accusations on him.—What is the reason they did not wait two days, and thus cause his words to fail? Thus are the haters of the Lord made the ministers of his purposes and the witnesses of his truth. Thus does God confound the iniquity of the rebellious. Who can contend against him?

THE JEWS.

Many of the Jews—a very large portion of them—are infidels.—And this in the face of the fact that the whole history of that people, in even its minute relations, from the time of Abraham to the judgment of the great day, was written beforehand, and the millions of that race are standing monuments of God's truth. Singular it is that the very Jews who deny all the prophets are pertinacious of the peculiar institutions that prophets have given them. How much do they resemble that servant that said I will not, but straitway did what his lord commanded. But the Gentiles much more resemble the servant that said "I will," but went not.

THE RESURRECTION OF JOSEPH.

A little too fast.

We have been aware for some time that the Brighamites were preparing a gigantic humbug for such of their followers as remain scattered, and as a means of getting supplies in their present necessities. But it has developed itself a little faster than we looked for. The story is now (Dec. 24th) abroad that Joseph is raised from the dead and gone on to the Brighamite camp. This humbug has been brewing for a long time, but we did not expect them to fix his resurrection earlier than Dec. 27th, and consequently did not expect to hear of it abroad for about a month to come. How many poor souls will start for the western wilderness in the vain hope of seeing him, we cannot say. But of this we are quite sure: that as many as go will be followed with some kind of juggling till they will have no means of returning. Thus two objects will be gained by Brigham, present supplies and future subjects. Of course the game will not be tried on those already in the camp.

THE PRETENSE.

This humbug is founded on a perversion of Revelations xi. 3 to 13. We think this will be more successful than any other of Brigham's recent undertakings. We know of not less than thirty factions which have fallen off from the church at various times claiming to themselves some superior sanctity or some higher power of priesthood, all now in a state of despondency, waiting anxiously for some rare folly to seize upon. We have often laughed at sectarian folly, but it is necessary to converse with an apostate before one can realize the force of Christ's exclamation, "If the light that is in you be darkness, how great is that darkness." To say nothing of minor points; the following leading facts in regard to the two witnesses in Revelations never happened in the history of Joseph:—

1st. They prophesied 1260 days clothed in sackcloth. 3.

2d. Fire proceeded out of their mouths and slew their enemies. 5.

3d. They have power to shut heaven that it rain not, and to turn water to blood, &c. 6.

4th. They are to be slain by pagan power. 7.

5th. Their dead bodies are to be unburied in Jerusalem, the city where Christ was crucified, three days and a half. 8, 9.

6th. Their enemies beheld them ascend up to heaven, and great fear fell on them. 11, 12.

7th. At the time of their ascension there was a great earthquake, which slew seven thousand men and destroyed a tenth part of the city, in which their bodies laid unburied. 13.

Infidelity is more credulous than strong faith. Consequently men who could not credit the every day matters of Mormonism will undoubtedly be gullable enough to believe that Joseph and Hyrum are the two witnesses here spoken of, though they entirely fail of likeness in so many leading points, and without one word of affirmative evidence. If a fact is clearly stated and some very strong evidences introduced, men will scan that evidence with ten fold doubts and criticisms. But let a thing be insinuated and put afloat without one word of proof, and enough will seize on and credit it.—No wonder that error prevails.

☞ Most of the righteous professors make a good beginning, but few make a good ending.

fying quality, and limpid as a mountain stream, doubtless hold within their bosom, and holding, will reveal those ruins, upon the non-existence of which the unbeliever stakes his incredulity.

Strabo, Diodorus, Pliny, and Josephus, among the ancients—and Maundrell, Pococke, Abbe, Martins, Chateaubriand, La Martine, Stephens and Robinson, among the moderns, all differ as to the extent, and many of the pecularities of this sea. Considerable streams are said to empty into it, the very names of which are unknown. Some have heard the gambolings of fish upon its surface, while others deny that any animated thing whatever can exist within its dense and bitter waters. Fruits, luscious to the eye, but of nauseous taste, and crumbling in the grasp, are said to be found upon its shores. Many travelers deny the existence of all vegetation, and Chateaubriand asserts that he found branches of the tamarind tree strewn upon the beach. Its southern coast is said to consist of masses of solid salt; while, as far as the eye can reach from its northern extreme, it beholds only the wasted and barren hills of Judea on one side, and those of Arabia Petrea on the other.—All is vague, uncertain and mysterious.

Are the questions answered? Or, shall a small pecuniary consideration withhold a country such as this from such an undertaking?

I admit that it is not a summer's excursion, and that British officers are said to have twice failed in a like attempt. Should that circumstance deter us? I venture to say, that within the broad periphery of this land which, cradled between oceans, stretches from the frigid zone to the tropics, there is not one native born or true hearted adopted citizen who will answer in the affirmative. We owe something to the scientific and Christian world, and while extending the blessings of civil liberty in the south and west, may well afford to foster science and strengthen the bulwarks of Christianity in the east.

W. F. LYNCH, U. S. N.

We shall look forward to the result of this expedition with no little interest.

MUSINGS.

It is a singular fact that more infidelity is produced in the face of direct fulfillment of prophecy, than at those periods on which prophecies do not fall so abundantly. And it is exceedingly singular that so many of the most violent unbelievers and apostates have fulfilled prophecies, in their own persons, which they determined should not be fulfilled, when the thing seemed to rest entirely in their own volition. We saw an instance very recently which, if we had not previously seen many like it, would have astonished us. Certain men coming to Voree, and professing the strongest possible faith in the administration of the prophet, but at the same time dictating various matters not within the jurisdiction of their priesthood; he publicly admonished them of their faults, and told them that unless they immediately turned back and repented of their errors, they would apostatize within twenty-four hours, and in twice that time would denounce and hate him. After hearing their admonition they professed to be still unshaken in the faith, and to have the firmest confidence in the prophet. A half hour wrought a visible change; twelve hours after they commenced railing against the prophet, and during the next day heaped many railing accusations on him.—What is the reason they did not wait two days, and thus cause his words to fail? Thus are the haters of the Lord made the ministers of his purposes and the witnesses of his truth. Thus does God confound the iniquity of the rebellious. Who can contend against him?

THE JEWS.

Many of the Jews—a very large portion of them—are infidels.—And this in the face of the fact that the whole history of that people, in even its minute relations, from the time of Abraham to the judgment of the great day, was written beforehand, and the millions of that race are standing monuments of God's truth. Singular it is that the very Jews who deny all the prophets are pertinacious of the peculiar institutions that prophets have given them. How much do they resemble that servant that said I will not, but straitway did what his lord commanded. But the Gentiles much more resemble the servant that said "I will," but went not.

THE RESURRECTION OF JOSEPH.

A little too fast.

We have been aware for some time that the Brighamites were preparing a gigantic humbug for such of their followers as remain scattered, and as a means of getting supplies in their present necessities. But it has developed itself a little faster than we looked for. The story is now (Dec. 24th) abroad that Joseph is raised from the dead and gone on to the Brighamite camp. This humbug has been brewing for a long time, but we did not expect them to fix his resurrection earlier than Dec. 27th, and consequently did not expect to hear of it abroad for about a month to come. How many poor souls will start for the western wilderness in the vain hope of seeing him, we cannot say. But of this we are quite sure: that as many as go will be followed with some kind of juggling till they will have no means of returning. Thus two objects will be gained by Brigham, present supplies and future subjects. Of course the game will not be tried on those already in the camp.

THE PRETENSE.

This humbug is founded on a perversion of Revelations xi. 3 to 13. We think this will be more successful than any other of Brigham's recent undertakings. We know of not less than thirty factions which have fallen off from the church at various times claiming to themselves some superior sanctity or some higher power of priesthood, all now in a state of despondency, waiting anxiously for some rare folly to seize upon. We have often laughed at sectarian folly, but it is necessary to converse with an apostate before one can realize the force of Christ's exclamation, "If the light that is in you be darkness, how great is that darkness." To say nothing of minor points, the following leading facts in regard to the two witnesses in Revelations never happened in the history of Joseph:—

1st. They prophesied 1260 days clothed in sackcloth. 3.

2d. Fire proceeded out of their mouths and slew their enemies. 5.

3d. They have power to shut heaven that it rain not, and to turn water to blood, &c. 6.

4th. They are to be slain by pagan power. 7.

5th. Their dead bodies are to be unburied in Jerusalem, the city where Christ was crucified, three days and a half. 8, 9.

6th. Their enemies beheld them ascend up to heaven, and great fear fell on them. 11, 12.

7th. At the time of their ascension there was a great earthquake, which slew seven thousand men and destroyed a tenth part of the city, in which their bodies laid unburied. 13.

Infidelity is more credulous than strong faith. Consequently men who could not credit the every day matters of Mormonism will undoubtedly be gullable enough to believe that Joseph and Hyrum are the two witnesses here spoken of, though they entirely fail of likeness in so many leading points, and without one word of affirmative evidence. If a fact is clearly stated and some very strong evidences introduced, men will scan that evidence with ten fold doubts and criticisms. But let a thing be insinuated and put afloat without one word of proof, and enough will seize on and credit it.—No wonder that error prevails.

☞ Most of the righteous professors make a good beginning, but few make a good ending.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We undertook some time since to enlarge the Herald to eight pages and issued several numbers of that size, but have since returned to the four page form. We wish our subscribers to understand that we expect to issue it on the larger size the principal part of the time, but the necessity of doing other printing has precluded our doing so for a short time past. We are quite behind in printing the hymn book and tracts. The small remittances we have received for these works have kept us crippled for means and embarrassed in all our operations. In December last we finished paying up for the printing establishment, and in anticipation of embarrassment at that time we some time since obtained assurances from various brethren of an accommodation loan in small sums to sustain us, but on all these promises we have been disappointed. Not one of them has been realized. However the engagement has been faithfully met, and the printing establishment purchased some fifteen months since under the most unpromising circumstances is now paid for. Let no one suppose, however, that this means has been made as so much profits. Not one dollar of profits has ever been realized. The liberality of a very few men, and they comparatively poor, has done all. The entire income of the printing office has been expended in the issue of our publications. The editor receives nothing. Yet there are men, professed saints, who have taken the paper a year and more and never paid one cent, who are possessed of twenty times as much property as he; but as we said we intend to return to the eight page form and keep it up the principal part of the time in future, and we earnestly hope to find our efforts in the cause of truth seconded in real earnest by the saints. We have not completed striking off from our list all the non-paying subscribers, but shall do so speedily. Consequently those who wish for the paper and are in arrears must pay. It is now one year since the commencement of volume two, but we intend to fill it up to 52 numbers, according to the original expectation. We hope, however, that those who intend to continue their subscriptions will not postpone remitting the money till they have none to remit. Now, while you are selling your crops and have the means, secure your papers, and thus put it in our power to send you a good paper.

We have a very few orders for tracts, &c., not yet filled up. If our friends will be patient a very short time we will attend to them. A little delay was necessary in order to give them as great a variety as is desirable. Be sure that we do our best all the time in our efforts to serve you.

NEVER RAIL AT THE WORLD.

Never rail at the world—it is just as we make it,
We see not the flower if we set not the seed;
And as for ill-luck, why it's just as we take it,
The heart that's in earnest no bars can impede.
You question the justice that governs man's breast,
And say that the search for true friendship is vain;
But remember, this world, tho' it be not the best,
Is next to the best we shall ever attain.

Never rail at the world, nor attempt to exalt
That feeling which questions society's claim,
For often poor Friendship is less in the fault,
Less changeable oft than the selfish who blame.
Then ne'er by the changes of Fate be deprest,
Nor wear like a fetter Time's sorrowful chain;
But believe that this world, tho' it be not the best,
Is next to the best we shall ever attain.

DIED,

In this place, on the 1st inst., after an illness of five days, Mrs. AMANDA, wife of PHINEAS WRIGHT, aged 26 years.

By this bereavement a most affectionate husband, 4 young children, and a large circle of brothers, sisters, and near friends, together with all the saints, were cast into mourning. With us the day of feasting truly became the day of mourning. She was followed to the grave Sunday, Jan. 2d, by the whole church and a numerous concourse of neighbors, all made sad by the loss of one of the best of God's creatures; and was the first to find a resting place in the cemetery at Voree.

We have seen thee pass
From the earth away,
As fadeth the light
Of a summer day:
Peaceful and glad were its early hours,
Beautiful—bright were its budding flowers,
Glorious its sun in its noontide strength,
Holier when sinking to rest at length.

So peaceful and glad
Was thy life, sweet one;
So gently, so holy
Its setting sun.
Bright were the ties that bound thee here,
Many the friends who held thee dear;
But tranquil thy spirit as death drew on,
For the will of the Lord thine own had won.

The light of thy home
Is darkened now;
Around its altar
How sadly they bow!
He who so tenderly pillowed thy head,
And guarded thy footsteps till laid with the dead—
The motherless ones, who talked of thy "sleep,"
And waited thy waking, but waited to weep.

Thy God will comfort;
He only can stay,
In the dark, dark hour,
When the loved pass away.
Thy love has been strong, but stronger His arm,
To guard them from sin, to shield them from harm;
His presence be with them, their darkness illume!
His promises LOOSEN the GRASP of the TOMB!

Aye, they "shall come forth
WHO SLEEP IN THE LORD,"
The gates of the grave
UNCLOSE AT HIS WORD.
How blessed before them the NEW EARTH SHALL RISE.
How sweet then the chorus that wakens the skies!
That earth which shall never by sin be defiled—
That song of thanksgiving from parent and child.

Rest, then, sweet sister,
For brief is the night;
The morning light beameth
E'en now on our sight!
How joyous that greeting
Of kindred and friend!
How blissful that meeting,
Where partings SHALL END.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

We undertook some time since to enlarge the Herald to eight pages and issued several numbers of that size, but have since returned to the four page form. We wish our subscribers to understand that we expect to issue it on the larger size the principal part of the time, but the necessity of doing other printing has precluded our doing so for a short time past. We are quite behind in printing the hymn book and tracts. The small remittances we have received for these works have kept us crippled for means and embarrassed in all our operations. In December last we finished paying up for the printing establishment, and in anticipation of embarrassment at that time we some time since obtained assurances from various brethren of an accommodation loan in small sums to sustain us, but on all these promises we have been disappointed. Not one of them has been realized. However the engagement has been faithfully met, and the printing establishment purchased some fifteen months since under the most unpromising circumstances is now paid for. Let no one suppose, however, that this means has been made as so much profits. Not one dollar of profits has ever been realized. The liberality of a very few men, and they comparatively poor, has done all. The entire income of the printing office has been expended in the issue of our publications. The editor receives nothing. Yet there are men, professed saints, who have taken the paper a year and more and never paid one cent, who are possessed of twenty times as much property as he; but as we said we intend to return to the eight page form and keep it up the principal part of the time in future, and we earnestly hope to find our efforts in the cause of truth seconded in real earnest by the saints. We have not completed striking off from our list all the non-paying subscribers, but shall do so speedily. Consequently those who wish for the paper and are in arrears must pay. It is now one year since the commencement of volume two, but we intend to fill it up to 52 numbers, according to the original expectation. We hope, however, that those who intend to continue their subscriptions will not postpone remitting the money till they have none to remit. Now, while you are selling your crops and have the means, secure your papers, and thus put it in our power to send you a good paper.

We have a very few orders for tracts, &c., not yet filled up. If our friends will be patient a very short time we will attend to them. A little delay was necessary in order to give them as great a variety as is desirable. Be sure that we do our best all the time in our efforts to serve you.

NEVER RAIL AT THE WORLD.

Never rail at the world—it is just as we make it,
We see not the flower if we set not the seed;
And as for ill-luck, why it's just as we take it,
The heart that's in earnest no bars can impede.
You question the justice that governs man's breast,
And say that the search for true friendship is vain;
But remember, this world, tho' it be not the best,
Is next to the best we shall ever attain.

Never rail at the world, nor attempt to exalt
That feeling which questions society's claim,
For often poor Friendship is less in the fault,
Less changeable oft than the selfish who blame.
Then ne'er by the changes of Fate be depress,
Nor wear like a fetter Time's sorrowful chain;
But believe that this world, tho' it be not the best,
Is next to the best we shall ever attain.

DIED,

In this place, on the 1st inst., after an illness of five days, Mrs. AMANDA, wife of PHINEAS WRIGHT, aged 26 years.

By this bereavement a most affectionate husband, 4 young children, and a large circle of brothers, sisters, and near friends, together with all the saints, were cast into mourning. With us the day of feasting truly became the day of mourning. She was followed to the grave Sunday, Jan. 2d, by the whole church and a numerous concourse of neighbors, all made sad by the loss of one of the best of God's creatures; and was the first to find a resting place in the cemetery at Voree.

We have seen thee pass
From the earth away,
As fadeth the light
Of a summer day:
Peaceful and glad were its early hours,
Beautiful—bright were its budding flowers,
Glorious its sun in its noontide strength,
Holier when sinking to rest at length.

So peaceful and glad
Was thy life, sweet one;
So gently, so holy
Its setting sun.
Bright were the ties that bound thee here,
Many the friends who held thee dear;
But tranquil thy spirit as death drew on,
For the will of the Lord thine own had won.

The light of thy home
Is darkened now;
Around its altar
How sadly they bow!
He who so tenderly pillowed thy head,
And guarded thy footsteps till laid with the dead—
The motherless ones, who talked of thy "sleep,"
And waited thy waking, but waited to weep.

Thy God will comfort;
He only can stay,
In the dark, dark hour,
When the loved pass away.
Thy love has been strong, but stronger His arm,
To guard them from sin, to shield them from harm;
His presence be with them, their darkness illume!
His promises LOOSEN the GRASP of the TOMB!

Aye, they "shall come forth
WHO SLEEP IN THE LORD,"
The gates of the grave
UNCLOSE AT HIS WORD.
How blessed before them the NEW EARTH SHALL RISE,
How sweet then the chorus that wakens the skies!
That earth which shall never by sin be defiled,—
That song of thanksgiving from parent and child.

Rest, then, sweet sister,
For brief is the night;
The morning light beameth
E'en now on our sight!
How joyous that greeting
Of kindred and friend!
How blissful that meeting,
Where partings SHALL END.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 13, 1848. [No. 43.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

DAVID WHITMER, ENSIGN OF LIBERTY, AND McLELLINISM.

The third number of the Ensign has really made its appearance—every word of it by the pen of Wm. E. Our first curiosity on getting our eye on it was to see what he would say about his visit to D. Whitmer. As he had gone a journey of 3,000 miles to persuade David to pretend to be a prophet, after failing in doing so by writing, and as we had vainly tried every possible expedient to induce him to tell the result of his mission, we of course came to the conclusion that something had gone wrong. Things looked rather squally when Wm. E. returned from Mo., without any epistle from David to the flock that were bleating after him. A strong anxiety was felt to know what Whitmer had to say in the premises. When it was learned that he had given nothing for the public eye at present, some were quite uneasy; but when, after assuring them that David had really accepted his calling and appointed his brother John and Oliver Cowdery his counsellors, he charged them not to write to David and John lest the Missourians should mob them, several were so wicked as to suspect Mc. of humbugging them. Finally, Oliver, though he lives only 12 miles from Voree, would not come down and speak to the 41 apostates living in this region, whom Mc. falsely pretends to have drawn from the church here.—All these things were onerous of deception and false pretenses.—Yet a few, probably 8 or 10, hung on with some little hope, more or less, that some great things would burst out in a perfect blaze as soon as the Ensign could be got out. Whisperings were constant that David had written a proclamation which would do up all opposition, and set himself on a pinnacle of glory. The few who had any hope remaining looked most anxiously, and we curiously for the proclamation in the forthcoming Ensign. But——the Ensign has finally got along—and not one word from Whitmer or either of his counsellors. And all that Mc. ventures to say about them is the following:—"Thence we passed directly to Richmond, Mo.—We reached there on Saturday, the 4th of Sept., and put up with our old friend D. Whitmer. One o'clock at night still found us communing in close conversation. On Monday, the 6th, David and Jacob Whitmer and Hiram Page accompanied me to Far West to visit with their brother, and our old friend John Whitmer. We remained with him two days and nights, and never did men since the world began have a more pleasant time. Union of feeling and harmony of action governed our every movement. Brethren and friends, let me say to you, 'all is right, all is well' with those witnesses! Our visit with Oliver Cowdery we will lay over for want of room."

We look upon this as decidedly rich. More than a year since McLellin proclaimed Whitmer a prophet, and commenced building up a church under his presidency. Some months after he published in his Ensign a long and most importunate letter from himself to said Whitmer, to prove that he really had a right to that station, and urging him to assume it; which letter appears not to have elicited any answer whatever from Whitmer. So off posts Wm. E. on a journey of four months to visit Whitmer and converse face to face, and returns without one scrap from him, and not even the assurance that he will accept the station of prophet. We have for a long time suspected that Whitmer and Cowdery did not lend themselves to Mc.'s humbug, and now we are more assured of it than ever. If all was union and harmony, what was done so harmoniously? If you all harmoniously agreed that Mc. had practiced a rare humbug on a few apostates and a less number of saints, you did well in saying so little on the subject. But if David, John and Oliver really consented to be your puppets, you ought to say so at once. It is time to say something more than "I know"—"all is well," and the like. If WM. E. MCLELLIN COULD HAVE GOT ONE SINGLE WORD from DAVID WHITMER OR OLIVER COWDERY, wherewith to prop up his cause, he would have made speed to give it the GREATEST POSSIBLE PUBLICITY.

A decent respect for truth and honesty now imperiously require them to speak out. If they are prophets and counsellors the times require them to speak the word of God. And if they are not, self-respect and every principle of integrity require them to disclaim and put an end to this imposition. If they continue thus to lay back and allow him thus to use their names, they give real occasion for others to believe that they are experimenting on the possibility of successful imposition, and are ready to come forward as associates and partners of McLellin, if he can get up a considerable church.—We have hitherto respected them as honest and well disposed, but this non-committal game has been carried quite too far. They cannot but know that many persons have been led off with the delusive hope that they were at the head of McLellin's church; and that a large portion of these have fallen back to stupor and apathy, because they do not show themselves. And if they have not learned it, they may now, that the few who here left the true church on that hope are returning to it. If they are not God's priesthood, it is wicked for them to knowingly allow their names to be used for such deceptive purposes. And if they are, it is cruel and unpardonable to allow their flock to go to destruction for want of one word from them. We say again a decent respect to common honesty renders it imperative on them to speak out and put an end to this imposition. If they really wish to practice such folly let them own it, and if not let them disclaim it. Our papers are read by many thousand saints. If Whitmer has the word of God and will send it along, we will publish it to them. If he thinks he is a prophet let him say it, and we will publish it; and if he has any proofs to give we will publish them also. If ye be honest men speak.

☛ The reward of all good done by all men, whether little or much, is as sure as the laws that governs the universe.

☛ To read is well, but to remember is the good of it.

☛ That which rises by falsehood falls by truth.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 13, 1848. [No. 43.

GOSPEL HERALD,

Printed and published WEEKLY, for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Terms—$2 per annum, payable, invariably, IN ADVANCE. All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, POST PAID, or they will not be taken from the post-office.

DAVID WHITMER, ENSIGN OF LIBERTY, AND McLELLINISM.

The third number of the Ensign has really made its appearance—every word of it by the pen of Wm. E. Our first curiosity on getting our eye on it was to see what he would say about his visit to D. Whitmer. As he had gone a journey of 3,000 miles to persuade David to pretend to be a prophet, after failing in doing so by writing, and as we had vainly tried every possible expedient to induce him to tell the result of his mission, we of course came to the conclusion that something had gone wrong. Things looked rather squally when Wm. E. returned from Mo., without any epistle from David to the flock that were bleating after him. A strong anxiety was felt to know what Whitmer had to say in the premises. When it was learned that he had given nothing for the public eye at present, some were quite uneasy; but when, after assuring them that David had really accepted his calling and appointed his brother John and Oliver Cowdery his counsellors, he charged them not to write to David and John lest the Missourians should mob them, several were so wicked as to suspect Mc. of humbugging them. Finally, Oliver, though he lives only 12 miles from Voree, would not come down and speak to the 41 apostates living in this region, whom Mc. falsely pretends to have drawn from the church here.—All these things were onerous of deception and false pretenses.—Yet a few, probably 8 or 10, hung on with some little hope, more or less, that some great things would burst out in a perfect blaze as soon as the Ensign could be got out. Whisperings were constant that David had written a proclamation which would do up all opposition, and set himself on a pinnacle of glory. The few who had any hope remaining looked most anxiously, and we curiously for the proclamation in the forthcoming Ensign. But——the Ensign has finally got along—and not one word from Whitmer or either of his counsellors. And all that Mc. ventures to say about them is the following:—"Thence we passed directly to Richmond, Mo.—We reached there on Saturday, the 4th of Sept., and put up with our old friend D. Whitmer. One o'clock at night still found us communing in close conversation. On Monday, the 6th, David and Jacob Whitmer and Hiram Page accompanied me to Far West to visit with their brother, and our old friend John Whitmer. We remained with him two days and nights, and never did men since the world began have a more pleasant time. Union of feeling and harmony of action governed our every movement. Brethren and friends, let me say to you, 'all is right, all is well' with those witnesses! Our visit with Oliver Cowdery we will lay over for want of room."

We look upon this as decidedly rich. More than a year since McLellin proclaimed Whitmer a prophet, and commenced building up a church under his presidency. Some months after he published in his Ensign a long and most importunate letter from himself to said Whitmer, to prove that he really had a right to that station, and urging him to assume it; which letter appears not to have elicited any answer whatever from Whitmer. So off posts Wm. E. on a journey of four months to visit Whitmer and converse face to face, and returns without one scrap from him, and not even the assurance that he will accept the station of prophet. We have for a long time suspected that Whitmer and Cowdery did not lend themselves to Mc.'s humbug, and now we are more assured of it than ever. If all was union and harmony, what was done so harmoniously? If you all harmoniously agreed that Mc. had practiced a rare humbug on a few apostates and a less number of saints, you did well in saying so little on the subject. But if David, John and Oliver really consented to be your puppets, you ought to say so at once. It is time to say something more than "I know"—"all is well," and the like. If WM. E. MCLELLIN COULD HAVE GOT ONE SINGLE WORD from DAVID WHITMER OR OLIVER COWDERY, wherewith to prop up his cause, he would have made speed to give it the GREATEST POSSIBLE PUBLICITY.

A decent respect for truth and honesty now imperiously require them to speak out. If they are prophets and counsellors the times require them to speak the word of God. And if they are not, self-respect and every principle of integrity require them to disclaim and put an end to this imposition. If they continue thus to lay back and allow him thus to use their names, they give real occasion for others to believe that they are experimenting on the possibility of successful imposition, and are ready to come forward as associates and partners of McLellin, if he can get up a considerable church.—We have hitherto respected them as honest and well disposed, but this non-committal game has been carried quite too far. They cannot but know that many persons have been led off with the delusive hope that they were at the head of McLellin's church; and that a large portion of these have fallen back to stupor and apathy, because they do not show themselves. And if they have not learned it, they may now, that the few who here left the true church on that hope are returning to it. If they are not God's priesthood, it is wicked for them to knowingly allow their names to be used for such deceptive purposes. And if they are, it is cruel, and unpardonable to allow their flock to go to destruction for want of one word from them. We say again a decent respect to common honesty renders it imperative on them to speak out and put an end to this imposition. If they really wish to practice such folly let them own it, and if not let them disclaim it. Our papers are read by many thousand saints. If Whitmer has the word of God, and will send it along, we will publish it to them. If he thinks he is a prophet let him say it, and we will publish it; and if he has any proofs to give we will publish them also. If ye be honest men speak.

☞ The reward of all good done by all men, whether little or much, is as sure as the laws that governs the universe.

☞ To read is well, but to remember is the good of it.

☞ That which rises by falsehood falls by truth.

REVIEW—"THE SUCCESSOR OF JOSEPH, THE SEER."

We find an article under the above caption in McLellin's Ensign of Liberty, which seems to have been drawn up specially with reference to the points raised in his debate here, and to counteract the effect of the publication of that by raising new issues and introducing new references. p. 41. The writer complains that various persons have sprung up in different places who say severally that they are successors to Joseph Smith. What he intends this fact to prove does not appear, unless it is that professing to be a seer is evidence that he is not. Consequently David Whitmer's professing NOT to be a seer may be construed as evidence that he is one. We are sorry for any human being who is so far gone in iniquity as to presume every word spoken false, simply because it asserted to be true.

"Again, in order to make the matter of a successor, both in his appointment and duties, perfectly plain, in Feb. 1831, the Lord addresses himself to the Elders of his church, thus:—'And this shall ye know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations, until he be taken, if he abide in me. But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift, except it be through him; for if it be taken from him, he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead. And this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived: that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate, and be ordained as I have told you before.' Now the question is, how had the Lord told before that a successor to a seer should be ordained? We answer, that in the law of the church, which was given immediately preceding the above, the principle upon which ordinations should take place thereafter, is forevever settled. 'Again, I, the Lord, say unto you, that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority, and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church.'" p. 42.

This is a most gross perversion of the word of God. The paragraph last qnoted is given expressly in regard to elders going forth to preach; applies solely to the inferior priesthood, and requires that they be ordained by some one who is KNOWN by the CHURCH to have AUTHORITY. Not ordained by the heads of the church, but by some elder who was thus ordained, and holds a lawful jurisdiction. A regularly appointed presiding elder of any BRANCH, ordained by the heads of the church, is known by the church to have authority. Will any one pretend that he can ordain a Seer and First President? Certainly not; but he can ordain the inferior priesthood up to the elder. But says the writer, "how had the Lord told before that a Seer with the keys of the kingdom should be ordained?" Ans. By the the ministration of angels. The revelation given previous to Feb., 1831, concerning the ordination of Joseph to his high calling, and the only one before given concerning the ordination of any to that office, says, I have sent unto you (Joseph) John, (the Baptist,) by whom I have ordained you to this first priesthood. Also, Peter, James and John, (angels,) by whom I have ordained you (Joseph and Oliver) to be apostles, &c., and to bear the keys of the kingdom and of this dispensation of the last times. D. & C. sec. 50, p. 2, 3.

"In the appointment of a Successor in the prophetic office, one thing we observe throughout the word of God, viz. the successor was always brought into the immediate presence of his Predecessor, and there received his appointment, his ordination, or his anointing, and his charge. First we will instance the case of Moses and Joshua.—'And Moses spake unto the Lord saying, let the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation, who may go out and in before them, and who may lead them out and bring them in; that the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd. And the Lord said unto Moses, take thee Joshua, the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him: and set him before Eleazor the priest, and before all the congregation; and give him a charge in their sight. * * And Moses did as the Lord commanded him. Num. xxvii. 15. Secondly, when the Lord called the child Samuel, it was where he was under the immediate eye, care, and tuition of Eli, who preceded him. 1. Sam. iii. Thirdly, Elijah anointed Elisha prophet in his room.' 1. Kings, xix. 16." p. 45.

This statement is ridiculously untrue, and not one of the instances referred to justify the statement that the successor was brought into the presence of the predecessor. In the case of Moses and Joshua, Joshua was not a successor. He did not hold the same priesthood that Moses did, but an inferior one. The Lord commanded Moses expressly: "Put SOME of thine honor (priesthood) upon Joshua." Num. xxvii. 20. These words Wm. E. has carefully left out, regardless of the fact that telling but half the truth may be a palpable lie. With our view of the matter stand D. & C. sec. 4, p. 4, which says that "God took Moses out of the midst of Israel, and the holy priesthood also." But the Lord had previously promised Moses that he should have a successor in his priesthood.

Deut. xviii. 15, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy bretherin, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken.

18. I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.

19. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

And Christ was that successor.

Acts iii. 20. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you."

Acts iii. 22, "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you."

The next question is, from whence did Christ obtain that priesthood? Answer. From God the Father.

Heb. v. 5. "So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee."

vii. 21, "The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec."

i. 8, "But unto the Son he said, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom:

9. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."

"When the Lord called the child Samuel it was where he was under the immediate eye, care, and tuition of Eli, who preceded him." Yes, a truth told, but a lie implied, and so intended. Samuel lived in the Temple under the eye of Eli, but he DID NOT RECEIVE HIS PRIESTHOOD UNDER HIS HAND, CARE, or EYE. God spake to Eli, and put him out of the priesthood.

1 Sam. iii. 12, "In that day will I perform against Eli all things which I have spoken concerning his house; when I begin, I will also make an end.

13. For I have told him that I will judge his house forever for the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons made themselves

REVIEW—"THE SUCCESSOR OF JOSEPH, THE SEER."

We find an article under the above caption in McLellin's Ensign of Liberty, which seems to have been drawn up specially with reference to the points raised in his debate here, and to counteract the effect of the publication of that by raising new issues and introducing new references. p. 41. The writer complains that various persons have sprung up in different places who say severally that they are successors to Joseph Smith. What he intends this fact to prove does not appear, unless it is that professing to be a seer is evidence that he is not. Consequently David Whitmer's professing NOT to be a seer may be construed as evidence that he is one. We are sorry for any human being who is so far gone in iniquity as to presume every word spoken false, simply because it asserted to be true.

"Again, in order to make the matter of a successor, both in his appointment and duties, perfectly plain, in Feb. 1831, the Lord addresses himself to the Elders of his church, thus:—'And this shall ye know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations, until he be taken, if he abide in me. But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift, except it be through him; for if it be taken from him, he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead. And this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived: that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate, and be ordained as I have told you before.' Now the question is, how had the Lord told before that a successor to a seer should be ordained? We answer, that in the law of the church, which was given immediately preceding the above, the principle upon which ordinations should take place thereafter, is forevever settled. 'Again, I, the Lord, say unto you, that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority, and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church.'" p. 42.

This is a most gross perversion of the word of God. The paragraph last qnoted is given expressly in regard to elders going forth to preach; applies solely to the inferior priesthood, and requires that they be ordained by some one who is KNOWN by the CHURCH to have AUTHORITY. Not ordained by the heads of the church, but by some elder who was thus ordained, and holds a lawful jurisdiction. A regularly appointed presiding elder of any BRANCH, ordained by the heads of the church, is known by the church to have authority. Will any one pretend that he can ordain a Seer and First President? Certainly not; but he can ordain the inferior priesthood up to the elder. But says the writer, "how had the Lord told before that a Seer with the keys of the kingdom should be ordained?" Ans. By the the ministration of angels. The revelation given previous to Feb., 1831, concerning the ordination of Joseph to his high calling, and the only one before given concerning the ordination of any to that office, says, I have sent unto you (Joseph) John, (the Baptist,) by whom I have ordained you to this first priesthood. Also, Peter, James and John, (angels,) by whom I have ordained you (Joseph and Oliver) to be apostles, &c., and to bear the keys of the kingdom and of this dispensation of the last times. D. & C. sec. 50, p. 2, 3.

"In the appointment of a Successor in the prophetic office, one thing we observe throughout the word of God, viz. the successor was always brought into the immediate presence of his Predecessor, and there received his appointment, his ordination, or his anointing, and his charge. First we will instance the case of Moses and Joshua.—'And Moses spake unto the Lord saying, let the Lord, the God of the spirits of all flesh, set a man over the congregation, who may go out and in before them, and who may lead them out and bring them in; that the congregation of the Lord be not as sheep which have no shepherd. And the Lord said unto Moses, take thee Joshua, the son of Nun, a man in whom is the spirit, and lay thine hand upon him: and set him before Eleazor the priest, and before all the congregation; and give him a charge in their sight. * * And Moses did as the Lord commanded him. Num. xxvii. 15. Secondly, when the Lord called the child Samuel, it was where he was under the immediate eye, care, and tuition of Eli, who preceded him. 1. Sam. iii. Thirdly, Elijah anointed Elisha prophet in his room.' 1. Kings, xix. 16." p. 45.

This statement is ridiculously untrue, and not one of the instances referred to justify the statement that the successor was brought into the presence of the predecessor. In the case of Moses and Joshua, Joshua was not a successor. He did not hold the same priesthood that Moses did, but an inferior one. The Lord commanded Moses expressly: "Put SOME of thine honor (priesthood) upon Joshua." Num. xxvii. 20. These words Wm. E. has carefully left out, regardless of the fact that telling but half the truth may be a palpable lie. With our view of the matter stand D. & C. sec. 4, p. 4, which says that "God took Moses out of the midst of Israel, and the holy priesthood also." But the Lord had previously promised Moses that he should have a successor in his priesthood.

Deut. xviii. 15, "The Lord thy God will raise up unto thee a Prophet from the midst of thee, of thy bretherin, like unto me; unto him ye shall hearken.

18. I will raise them up a Prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.

19. And it shall come to pass, that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

And Christ was that successor.

Acts iii. 20. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you."

Acts iii. 22, "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you."

The next question is, from whence did Christ obtain that priesthood? Answer. From God the Father.

Heb. v. 5. "So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, to-day have I begotten thee."

vii. 21, "The Lord sware, and will not repent, Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec."

i. 8, "But unto the Son he said, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom:

9. Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."

"When the Lord called the child Samuel it was where he was under the immediate eye, care, and tuition of Eli, who preceded him." Yes, a truth told, but a lie implied, and so intended. Samuel lived in the Temple under the eye of Eli, but he DID NOT RECEIVE HIS PRIESTHOOD UNDER HIS HAND, CARE, or EYE. God spake to Eli, and put him out of the priesthood.

1 Sam. iii. 12, "In that day will I perform against Eli all things which I have spoken concerning his house; when I begin, I will also make an end.

13. For I have told him that I will judge his house forever for the iniquity which he knoweth; because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not."

Then the LORD came and stood before Samuel and put him in the priesthood.

1 Sam. iii. 10, "And the Lord came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, speak; for thy servant heareth.

19. And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground.

20. And all Israel from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord."

After this Eli, having been told by the Lord that he had rejected him, and would not accept of sacrifice or offering in his behalf, and knowing that the Lord had spoken to Samuel, but not knowing what he had said or done, inquired of Samuel what the Lord said. 1 Sam. iii. 17, 18.

By these authorities it appears most clearly that Eli had nothing to do with conferring the priesthood on Samuel, and yet that God gave the revelation of the fact of his rejection to Eli and made both Eli and Samuel witnesses that Samuel was placed in the stead of Eli. The successor and predecessor were not brought together.

"Thirdly, Elijah anointed Elisha prophet in his room." No.—He did no such thing. The words "TO BE" are left out in the quotation. Elijah did not anoint him prophet, but to be a prophet at a future time.

1 Kings xix. 16, "And Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha the son of Shaphat, of Abelmeholah, shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room."

Elijah remained prophet a long time. And in order to receive the prophetic authority from him, Elisha had to be with him when he was taken up, so that AFTER he had entered the CHARIOT of the LORD he might, AS A MESSENGER of HEAVEN, and not as a prophet on earth, confer the authority on him.

2 Kings ii. 1, "And it came to pass, when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal.

9. And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10. And he said, Thou hast asked a hard thing; nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so.

11. And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

12. And Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof! And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces.

13. He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan.

15. And when the sons of the prophets which were to view at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him."

This view of the matter is strengthened by the fact that Jehu and Hazael were at the same time anointed to be kings of Israel and Syria, and yet did not become kings for many years. And after this anointing to be king, Jehu had to be anointed king before he could reign over Israel.

2 Kings ix. 1, "And Elisha the prophet called one of the children of the prophets, and said unto him, Gird up thy loins, and take this box of oil in thy hand, and go to Ramoth-gilead:

2. And when thou comest thither, look out there Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an inner chamber;

3. Then take the box of oil, and pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel: then open the door, and flee, and tarry not."

Hazael also continued to serve his master Benhadad, king of Syria; and when he came before Elisha, the prophet said, "the Lord hath shown me that thou shalt be king over Syria." 2 Kings viii. 13.

"In the book of Mormon, there was a regular series of succession from one to another, among the prophets and rulers. 'Now Nephi began to be old and he saw that he must soon die; wherefore, he anointed a man to be a king and ruler over his people.'—Jacob, Chap. i. 'King Benjamin had his son Mosiah brought before him, and he said to him, make a proclamation throughout all this land, that the people may be gathered together; for on the morrow I shall proclaim unto this my people, that thou art a king and a ruler over them.' Mosiah, chap. i. Mormon writing to his son Moroni, who was to be his successor as prophet, and also to hold the sacred records says, 'But I trust that I may see thee soon; for I have sacred records that I would deliver up unto thee. My son be faithful in Christ.' Moroni, chap. ix." p. 45.

The first two of these cases are cases of king making, not prophet making; the last is merely a letter about delivering up books. So not one of all the writer's six instances are in point. Not one justifies his assertion that a successor and predecessor must be brought together, in order to a regular succession in the Seer's office. The whole article is replete with ignorance of the fact that the priesthood of which he is speaking is a sole priesthood; that is, that there can be but one holding it at the same time, and consequently that the successor cannot receive it till the predecessor has ceased to hold it.

Throughout the article the writer exhibits the most malignant and revengful passions. In a work professing to be merely argument he takes special pains to accuse Wm. Law of the murder of Joseph and Hyrum, for the purpose of reflecting on certain other persons who at some time have in some respects been Law's friends. There is no occasion for dragging those matters into the article but to gratify malignant passions. And in doing it McLellin has taken pains not to say that he was at the same time equally associated with Law, and pretended that God had revealed to him that Law was to be one of the leaders of the church in its future triumph.—And that he also went with the same men to Rigdonism, and tried his best to get them with him in his present operations.

PLOUGH MANUFACTORY AND BLACKSMITHING.

The subscribers have entered into copartnership for the purpose of carrying on the business of making ploughs and doing common blacksmithing. We shall keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best steel plate ploughs of various descriptions, which we will sell as cheap as can be had anywhere the world over. And as we intend to make this a permanent and extensive business, pains will be taken that all our work be of such quality as to recommend itself in all markets. We are also prepared to iron carriages in the best style and with expedition. All kinds of work in our line done on short notice. Horses shod all round at $1,00 per head, cash.

Voree, Jan. 7th, 1848. JAMES K. KENT,
MILO WESTON.

vile, and he restrained them not."

Then the LORD came and stood before Samuel and put him in the priesthood.

1 Sam. iii. 10, "And the Lord came, and stood, and called as at other times, Samuel, Samuel. Then Samuel answered, speak; for thy servant heareth.

19. And Samuel grew, and the Lord was with him, and did let none of his words fall to the ground.

20. And all Israel from Dan even to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established to be a prophet of the Lord."

After this Eli, having been told by the Lord that he had rejected him, and would not accept of sacrifice or offering in his behalf, and kuowing that the Lord had spoken to Samuel, but not knowing what he had said or done, inquired of Samuel what the Lord said. 1 Sam. iii. 17, 18.

By these authorities it appears most clearly that Eli had nothing to do with conferring the priesthood on Samuel, and yet that God gave the revelation of the fact of his rejection to Eli and made both Eli and Samuel witnesses that Samuel was placed in the stead of Eli. The successor and predecessor were not brought together.

"Thirdly, Elijah anointed Elisha prophet in his room." No.—He did no such thing. The words "TO BE" are left out in the quotation. Elijah did not anoint him prophet, but to be a prophet at a future time.

1 Kings xix. 16, "And Jehu the son of Nimshi shalt thou anoint to be king over Israel: and Elisha the son of Shaphat, of Abelmeholah, shalt thou anoint to be prophet in thy room."

Elijah remained prophet a long time. And in order to receive the prophetic authority from him, Elisha had to be with him when he was taken up, so that AFTER he had entered the CHARIOT of the LORD he might, AS A MESSENGER of HEAVEN, and not as a prophet on earth, confer the authority on him.

2 Kings ii. 1, "And it came to pass, when the Lord would take up Elijah into heaven by a whirlwind, that Elijah went with Elisha from Gilgal.

9. And it came to pass, when they were gone over, that Elijah said unto Elisha, Ask what I shall do for thee, before I be taken away from thee. And Elisha said, I pray thee, let a double portion of thy spirit be upon me.

10. And he said, Thou hast asked a hard thing; nevertheless, if thou see me when I am taken from thee, it shall be so unto thee; but if not, it shall not be so.

11. And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that, behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven.

12. And Elisha saw it, and he cried, My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof! And he saw him no more: and he took hold of his own clothes, and rent them in two pieces.

13. He took up also the mantle of Elijah that fell from him, and went back, and stood by the bank of Jordan.

15. And when the sons of the prophets which were to view at Jericho saw him, they said, The spirit of Elijah doth rest on Elisha. And they came to meet him, and bowed themselves to the ground before him."

This view of the matter is strengthened by the fact that Jehu and Hazael were at the same time anointed to be kings of Israel and Syria, and yet did not become kings for many years. And after this anointing to be king, Jehu had to be anointed king before he could reign over Israel.

2 Kings ix. 1, "And Elisha the prophet called one of the children of the prophets, and said unto him, Gird up thy loins, and take this box of oil in thy hand, and go to Ramoth-gilead:

2. And when thou comest thither, look out there Jehu the son of Jehoshaphat, the son of Nimshi, and go in, and make him arise up from among his brethren, and carry him to an inner chamber;

3. Then take the box of oil, and pour it on his head, and say, Thus saith the Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel: then open the door, and flee, and tarry not."

Hazael also continued to serve his master Benhadad, king of Syria; and when he came before Elisha, the prophet said, "the Lord hath shown me that thou shalt be king over Syria." 2 Kings viii. 13.

"In the book of Mormon, there was a regular series of succession from one to another, among the prophets and rulers. 'Now Nephi began to be old and he saw that he must soon die; wherefore, he anointed a man to be a king and ruler over his people.'—Jacob, Chap. i. 'King Benjamin had his son Mosiah brought before him, and he said to him, make a proclamation throughout all this land, that the people may be gathered together; for on the morrow I shall proclaim unto this my people, that thon art a king and a ruler over them.' Mosiah, chap. i. Mormon writing to his son Moroni, who was to be his successor as prophet, and also to hold the sacred records says, 'But I trust that I may see thee soon; for I have sacred records that I would deliver up unto thee. My son be faithful in Christ.' Moroni, chap. ix." p. 45.

The first two of these cases are cases of king making, not prophet making; the last is merely a letter about delivering up books. So not one of all the writer's six instances are in point. Not one justifies his assertion that a successor and predecessor must be brought together, in order to a regular succession in the Seer's office. The whole article is replete with ignorance of the fact that the priesthood of which he is speaking is a sole priesthood; that is, that there can be but one holding it at the same time, and consequently that the successor cannot receive it till the predecessor has ceased to hold it.

Throughout the article the writer exhibits the most malignant and revengful passions. In a work professing to be merely argument he takes special pains to accuse Wm. Law of the murder of Joseph and Hyrum, for the purpose of reflecting on certain other persons who at some time have in some respects been Law's friends. There is no occasion for dragging those matters into the article but to gratify malignant passions. And in doing it McLellin has taken pains not to say that he was at the same time equally associated with Law, and pretended that God had revealed to him that Law was to be one of the leaders of the church in its future triumph.—And that he also went with the same men to Rigdonism, and tried his best to get them with him in his present operations.

PLOUGH MANUFACTORY AND BLACKSMITHING.

The subscribers have entered into copartnership for the purpose of carrying on the business of making ploughs and doing common blacksmithing. We shall keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best steel plate ploughs of various descriptions, which we will sell as cheap as can be had anywhere the world over. And as we intend to make this a permanent and extensive business, pains will be taken that all our work be of such quality as to recommend itself in all markets. We are also prepared to iron carriages in the best style and with expedition. All kinds of work in our line done on short notice. Horses shod all round at $1,00 per head, cash.

Voree, Jan. 7th, 1848. JAMES K. KENT,
MILO WESTON.

From the Spiritual Magazine.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

(Continued from last week.)

To complete our criticism of 'E.'s' philosophy of miracles, we must now put his concluding dogma into the Bible crucible. 'The person diseased,' he says, 'must be made every whit whole to prove a real miracle.' This assertion stands on the same foundation of sensual wisdom with those we have already examined—not at all on Bible authority. And it seems to us to be rather high-handed legislation over God. If God has a right to apportion his bestowment of the gift of healing to the faith of the practitioner, so that a degree of faith which can heal ordinary diseases, may fail in an encounter with a devil of the ugliest class, as in the case of the disciples, we see no reason why he may not on the same principle give power sufficient to administer great relief in cases where there is not faith enough to apply the power necessary to a perfect cure. Supposing the disciples to have met with a person possessed of seven devils; if six of them were common devils, and one of them a bully of the kind described in Mark ix. 17, they would have been able to cast out the six, but would have failed before the seventh, and the patient would have been relieved but not cured. In such a case there is no reason why we should not recognize and accept the power of God so far as it goes. A half loaf is better than none. What right has 'E.' to say that God shall give the whole, or he will accept nothing? Peradventure God will teach him not to despise the day of small things.

It is clear that the cure of a disease, according to the spiritual philosophy of the Bible, is a twofold operation, consisting of, 1, the expulsion of the evil spirit or breaking up the malignant power; and 2, the infusion of the spirit of life, or positive health. Now it is conceivable that the first of these operations should be performed without the second—that the devil should be cast out and yet the spirit of health not take possession. Christ puts a case of this very kind, in Matt. xii. 43, 45. He supposes the unclean spirit to have been expelled, but not superseded and excluded by the possession of a good spirit. The man is relieved of the devil, but left empty, i. e., he is half cured. What is the result? The evil spirit takes with him seven other spirits more wicked than himself and returns upon the man, and his last state is worse than the first. In such a case, we have no right to deny the miracle which expelled the evil spirit, because it was not followed by the further miracle of positive and permanent health.

Christ cured men negatively, i. e., he cast the malignant power out of them, and in that sense made them 'every whit whole,' and he infused positive life into them, more or less. But we are not informed that he gave them impregnable health. His patients certainly were not made 'every whit whole' in such a sense that they were immortal, and probably not in such a sense that they were free from ordinary infirmities. He did not insure them against relapse, but on the contrary said to one of them—'Behold thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.'—(John v. 14.) If that man had sinned the next day or the next hour, and had fallen into a worse condition than ever, the miraculous work of Christ upon him would not have been disproved.

The twofold nature of the process of healing by spiritual power, is clearly manifested in the case of exorcism on which we have already commented, in Mark ix. 17, 27. When Christ commanded the foul spirit to come out of the young man, it 'cried and rent him sore, and came out of him; and he was as one dead, insomuch that many said, he is dead.' Thus the first stroke of Christ's power, instead of making the young man 'every whit whole,' left him apparently lifeless. Yet that first stroke was miraculous; and if the second operation, by which life was infused, had not followed, no one would have had a right to deny a real miracle.

Again, in Mark viii. 22, 25, we have a clear instance of cure effected by two successive operations. Christ took the blind man who applied to him 'and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw aught. And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking.' Here certainly was miraculous power producing an imperfect result. Christ exerted his gift of healing, laid on his hands, and actually effected a partial restoration of sight. Yet the man was not made 'every whit whole.' 'After that, he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up, and he was restored and saw every man clearly.' The first operation was no less miraculous than the second; and if the man had gone all his days, only seeing men as trees walking, he would have been obliged to acknowledge a real miracle even in that half cure. The interval between the first miracle and the second in this case, was doubtless short, yet it makes room for the principle, that miraculous cures may be at first imperfect, as well as if it had been an interval of six months or six years.

We have good reason to assume from the language used concerning the miracle of Christ recorded in John iv. 46, 53, that the cures which he effected were, in some cases at least, gradual, like those effected by medicine. A nobleman whose son was at the point of death, applied to Christ, and received the word—'Thy son liveth.' He went home, and finding that word true, he inquired of the servants 'the hour when he began to amend.' And they said unto him, 'Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.' They did not say that he was instantly restored to perfect health, but simply that the disease was broken up at a certain hour. From that time 'he began to amend,' doubtless as other fever patients do after the crisis of the disease is favorably passed. It is not necessary in order to prove a real miracle in this case to show that the patient immediately emerged from all the weakness incident to a convalescent state. Assuming, as we must, that the fever had reduced him to a state of emaciation, there is no evidence, and it is utterly improbable, that he instantly recovered the flesh he had lost. If he did not, then he was not made 'every whit whole' in such a sense that none of the effects of the fever remained upon him. The same may be said of the great mass of Christ's cures. There is no evidence, and it is not necessary to prove or assume, that they made those who were the subjects of them 'every whit whole,' so that they had no traces of the weakness or emaciation or awkwardness brought upon them by their diseases.

Thus it appears that it is not safe to try God's works by the test of their immediate completeness. The power of healing is modified in respect to its results in specific cases, as well as in respect to the number of cases to which it extends, by the discretion of God, by the degree of faith in the practitioner, by the degree of faith in the patient and his friends, by the nature of the disease, and by other circumstances too numerous to mention. God has a right to manifest his power in partial operations as well as in perfect; and no crude, sweeping rules of judgment like those which 'E.' has set up, can discharge men from the peril of neglecting and despising his manifestations.

We will now proceed to the proposed trial of Perfectionism. Our part in that trial for the present is simply to lay before the court such facts as are within our cognizance, and furnish references to other suitable sources of evidence.

The people called Perfectionists are scattered over a great part of this country. Facts have been occurring among them in great numbers, for the last fourteen years, which properly belong to the evi-

From the Spiritual Magazine.

THE TRUE ISSUE.

(Continued from last week.)

To complete our criticism of 'E.'s' philosophy of miracles, we must now put his concluding dogma into the Bible crucible. 'The person diseased,' he says, 'must be made every whit whole to prove a real miracle.' This assertion stands on the same foundation of sensual wisdom with those we have already examined—not at all on Bible authority. And it seems to us to be rather high-handed legislation over God. If God has a right to apportion his bestowment of the gift of healing to the faith of the practitioner, so that a degree of faith which can heal ordinary diseases, may fail in an encounter with a devil of the ugliest class, as in the case of the disciples, we see no reason why he may not on the same principle give power sufficient to administer great relief in cases where there is not faith enough to apply the power necessary to a perfect cure. Supposing the disciples to have met with a person possessed of seven devils; if six of them were common devils, and one of them a bully of the kind described in Mark ix. 17, they would have been able to cast out the six, but would have failed before the seventh, and the patient would have been relieved but not cured. In such a case there is no reason why we should not recognize and accept the power of God so far as it goes. A half loaf is better than none. What right has 'E.' to say that God shall give the whole, or he will accept nothing? Peradventure God will teach him not to despise the day of small things.

It is clear that the cure of a disease, according to the spiritual philosophy of the Bible, is a twofold operation, consisting of, 1, the expulsion of the evil spirit or breaking up the malignant power; and 2, the infusion of the spirit of life, or positive health. Now it is conceivable that the first of these operations should be performed without the second—that the devil should be cast out and yet the spirit of health not take possession. Christ puts a case of this very kind, in Matt. xii. 43, 45. He supposes the unclean spirit to have been expelled, but not superseded and excluded by the possession of a good spirit. The man is relieved of the devil, but left empty, i. e., he is half cured. What is the result? The evil spirit takes with him seven other spirits more wicked than himself and returns upon the man, and his last state is worse than the first. In such a case, we have no right to deny the miracle which expelled the evil spirit, because it was not followed by the further miracle of positive and permanent health.

Christ cured men negatively, i. e., he cast the malignant power out of them, and in that sense made them 'every whit whole,' and he infused positive life into them, more or less. But we are not informed that he gave them impregnable health. His patients certainly were not made 'every whit whole' in such a sense that they were immortal, and probably not in such a sense that they were free from ordinary infirmities. He did not insure them against relapse, but on the contrary said to one of them—'Behold thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.'—(John v. 14.) If that man had sinned the next day or the next hour, and had fallen into a worse condition than ever, the miraculous work of Christ upon him would not have been disproved.

The twofold nature of the process of healing by spiritual power, is clearly manifested in the case of exorcism on which we have already commented, in Mark ix. 17, 27. When Christ commanded the foul spirit to come out of the young man, it 'cried and rent him sore, and came out of him; and he was as one dead, insomuch that many said, he is dead.' Thus the first stroke of Christ's power, instead of making the young man 'every whit whole,' left him apparently lifeless. Yet that first stroke was miraculous; and if the second operation, by which life was infused, had not followed, no one would have had a right to deny a real miracle.

Again, in Mark viii. 22, 25, we have a clear instance of cure effected by two successive operations. Christ took the blind man who applied to him 'and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw aught. And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking.' Here certainly was miraculous power producing an imperfect result. Christ exerted his gift of healing, laid on his hands, and actually effected a partial restoration of sight. Yet the man was not made 'every whit whole.' 'After that, he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up, and he was restored and saw every man clearly.' The first operation was no less miraculous than the second; and if the man had gone all his days, only seeing men as trees walking, he would have been obliged to acknowledge a real miracle even in that half cure. The interval between the first miracle and the second in this case, was doubtless short, yet it makes room for the principle, that miraculous cures may be at first imperfect, as well as if it had been an interval of six months or six years.

We have good reason to assume from the language used concerning the miracle of Christ recorded in John iv. 46, 53, that the cures which he effected were, in some cases at least, gradual, like those effected by medicine. A nobleman whose son was at the point of death, applied to Christ, and received the word—'Thy son liveth.' He went home, and finding that word true, he inquired of the servants 'the hour when he began to amend.' And they said unto him, 'Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.' They did not say that he was instantly restored to perfect health, but simply that the disease was broken up at a certain hour. From that time 'he began to amend,' doubtless as other fever patients do after the crisis of the disease is favorably passed. It is not necessary in order to prove a real miracle in this case to show that the patient immediately emerged from all the weakness incident to a convalescent state. Assuming, as we must, that the fever had reduced him to a state of emaciation, there is no evidence, and it is utterly improbable, that he instantly recovered the flesh he had lost. If he did not, then he was not made 'every whit whole' in such a sense that none of the effects of the fever remained upon him. The same may be said of the great mass of Christ's cures. There is no evidence, and it is not necessary to prove or assume, that they made those who were the subjects of them 'every whit whole,' so that they had no traces of the weakness or emaciation or awkwardness brought upon them by their diseases.

Thus it appears that it is not safe to try God's works by the test of their immediate completeness. The power of healing is modified in respect to its results in specific cases, as well as in respect to the number of cases to which it extends, by the discretion of God, by the degree of faith in the practitioner, by the degree of faith in the patient and his friends, by the nature of the disease, and by other circumstances too numerous to mention. God has a right to manifest his power in partial operations as well as in perfect; and no crude, sweeping rules of judgment like those which 'E.' has set up, can discharge men from the peril of neglecting and despising his manifestations.

We will now proceed to the proposed trial of Perfectionism. Our part in that trial for the present is simply to lay before the court such facts as are within our cognizance, and furnish references to other suitable sources of evidence.

The people called Perfectionists are scattered over a great part of this country. Facts have been occurring among them in great numbers, for the last fourteen years, which properly belong to the evidence on this trial. A few only of those facts have been reported and placed on record in our papers. Of course we cannot immediately complete our testimony. We must wait for future reports; and we trust that the present call will bring out all witnesses who ought to be heard in this matter. In the meantime, so far as this general field of evidence is concerned, we shall content ourselves with referring our readers to the articles in our past papers in which cases of cure by faith are recorded. The following references will conduct any patient inquirer to a very considerable mass of appropriate facts:—Witness, Vol. i. No. 8, p. 61; No. 24, p. 162; Vol. ii. No. 19, p. 150. Perfectionist, Vol. iv. No. 5, p. 20; No. 21, p. 84; No. 23, p. 91; No. 24, p. 94; Vol. v. No. 1, p. 4; No. 4, p. 16. Spiritual Magazine, Vol. i. No. 11, p. 173; Vol. ii. No. 4, p. 62; No. 5, p. 69.

With reference to the field more immediately under our own observation, (to which we propose to attend more particularly,) we will first state a general fact. The association or church of Perfectionists in this town was established in 1838. During the nine years since that period, the average number of members, including those scattered abroad in the town, as well as those associated in the village, has been about forty. This body of persons has been from the beginning withdrawing more and more from confidence in the medical systems of the world, and relying more and more on the power of God. The physicians of the town have had but very little practice among them. Their diseases in most cases have been treated on the principles of the faith practice. The fact to be noted is, that *not a single death has occurred among them. During the same nine years the average population of the town has been about 1400, and the average number of deaths about 24 annually, or 216 in all; i. e., the proportion of deaths to the population has been nearly as one to six. We have paid no part of this tax to the king of terrors, though our due proportion would have been six or seven deaths.

The fact we have stated is not to be attributed to our freedom from sickness. We have had a reasonable share of diseases, both chronic and acute. But they have been controlled, as we believe, by the power of God—certainly not by the power of medicine. Instances of recovery by faith among us have been very numerous.—We will present a few samples of them.

My own case deserves to be recorded. The facts are these. In consequence of long and loud speaking, and the wear and tear of a laborious life, I contracted in 1842 a disease of the throat and lungs, which deprived me of the use of my voice in public, and rendered ordinary conversation painful. I was evidently threatened with the consumption. At first I listened to friends and physicians, so far as to make some slight experiments of medication. But I obtained no help in this way, and finally, in the face of Dr. John Campbell's warning and advice, I gave up my case to the sole treatment of Jesus Christ. I grew worse till September 1845, and at that time had abundant external reason to expect a speedy death. When the symptoms were at the worst, Jesus Christ advised me to neglect my disease, and act as though I was well. I did so, and entered upon a course of new and severe labor with my voice, in meetings and in conversation. From that time I have been substantially well, and have performed more hard labor with my tongue in the last two years than in any other two years of my life.

The case of Mrs. Fanny Leonard is well known in this community. About a year ago, after the birth of a child, she began to decline. The symptoms of her disease were severe pain in her breast and side, and sinking weakness. She became worse, till her friends had little hope of her recovery. In March of the present year, a general persuasion manifested itself in our association that she would be healed by the power of God. As that persuasion arose, she still sunk. At length the crisis of faith and of her disease came together. She received strength at the very time when our faith predicted it, and she received it by the laying on of hands. She has been visibly improving ever since, and is now a healthy woman.

The case of Mrs. M. E. Cragin may be briefly referred to here, though she has given some account of it in a previous paper.—From the period of her sixteenth year till the past summer, she has been subject to frequent attacks of the "sick headache." The disorder increased upon her till its visits were expected regularly as often as once a week. Many attempts were made to subdue it by medicines, but nothing availed. In May last it became constant and terribly distressing. Death seemed inevitable. We resisted the disease as a spiritual power, not by medicine, but by the faith and will of our hearts. The devil was cast out of her stomach, and she has not had an attack of the "sick headache" since.

John R. Miller has long been subject to severe attacks of headache. On one of these occasions in the course of the last summer, I went into his room and found him on the bed suffering dreadfully. I laid my hand on his head, and told him to shake off the devil.—He arose at once, perfectly free from pain, and has not been troubled with this disease since.

These are samples of a great mass of experience which has been accumulating among us, without attracting much notice from the world around. We will advert now to two cases which have stood forth more directly before the public eye.

The cure of Mrs. Harriet Hall is as unimpeachable as any of the miracles of the primitive church. It is notorious that she had been sick eight years, with a complication of diseases; that she was completely bed-rid, and almost blind, lying in nearly total darkness. From this state, she was raised instantly, by the laying on of hands, and by the word of command, into strength which enabled her to walk, to face the sun, to ride miles without inconvenience, and with excessive pleasure. The afterthought of unbelief, that her sickness was a sham, is a gross abuse, not only of her, but of her father and family, and the eight or ten physicians who had attended her. The ascription of her cure to animal magnetism, is a shift by which any of the miracles of Christ might be explained away with equal plausibility. These subterfuges were hardly thought of when the case was fresh in the public mind. How many said—"If Harriet Hall only holds out, we will believe!" She has held out, and is daily walking your streets; and how many of you have kept your promise? Mr. Hall, her husband, the very man who was not liable to be humbugged by the foolish contradictions of her sickness which have been set afloat, is the only man (to his honor be it spoken) who has redeemed his pledge, by acknowledging the power of God and embracing Perfectionism.

A conversation in relation to this case which occurred in Miller's store, between Mr. Baker, (the father of Mrs. Hall,) a confirmed skeptic, and Dr. John Campbell, the principal physician of the village, is worth relating here, to show the strength of the facts which at first pressed on all minds. Mr. Baker said that there was one thing in the matter which he could not account for, viz., that Mrs. Hall, after having been so long in a dark room, (to say nothing of the disease in her eyes,) was able to face the light at once, and ride in open day, without suffering. 'For,' said he, 'after being in her room myself, for a short time, I could not go out into the light dence on this trial. A few only of those facts have been reported and placed on record in our papers. Of course we cannot immediately complete our testimony. We must wait for future reports; and we trust that the present call will bring out all witnesses who ought to be heard in this matter. In the meantime, so far as this general field of evidence is concerned, we shall content ourselves with referring our readers to the articles in our past papers in which cases of cure by faith are recorded. The following references will conduct any patient inquirer to a very considerable mass of appropriate facts:—Witness, Vol. i. No. 8, p. 61; No. 24, p. 162; Vol. ii. No. 19, p. 150. Perfectionist, Vol. iv. No. 5, p. 20; No. 21, p. 84; No. 23, p. 91; No. 24, p. 94; Vol. v. No. 1, p. 4; No. 4, p. 16. Spiritual Magazine, Vol. i. No. 11, p. 173; Vol. ii. No. 4, p. 62; No. 5, p. 69.

---

*Some of the Perfectionists have lost small children—five or six in all, during nine years; but these cases do not properly belong to the account, because we are speaking only of believers. Moreover, most of the children referred to died under the care of physicians.

With reference to the field more immediately under our own observation, (to which we propose to attend more particularly,) we will first state a general fact. The association or church of Perfectionists in this town was established in 1838. During the nine years since that period, the average number of members, including those scattered abroad in the town, as well as those associated in the village, has been about forty. This body of persons has been from the beginning withdrawing more and more from confidence in the medical systems of the world, and relying more and more on the power of God. The physicians of the town have had but very little practice among them. Their diseases in most cases have been treated on the principles of the faith practice. The fact to be noted is, that *not a single death has occurred among them. During the same nine years the average population of the town has been about 1400, and the average number of deaths about 24 annually, or 216 in all; i. e., the proportion of deaths to the population has been nearly as one to six. We have paid no part of this tax to the king of terrors, though our due proportion would have been six or seven deaths.

The fact we have stated is not to be attributed to our freedom from sickness. We have had a reasonable share of diseases, both chronic and acute. But they have been controlled, as we believe, by the power of God—certainly not by the power of medicine. Instances of recovery by faith among us have been very numerous.—We will present a few samples of them.

My own case deserves to be recorded. The facts are these. In consequence of long and loud speaking, and the wear and tear of a laborious life, I contracted in 1842 a disease of the throat and lungs, which deprived me of the use of my voice in public, and rendered ordinary conversation painful. I was evidently threatened with the consumption. At first I listened to friends and physicians, so far as to make some slight experiments of medication. But I obtained no help in this way, and finally, in the face of Dr. John Campbell's warning and advice, I gave up my case to the sole treatment of Jesus Christ. I grew worse till September 1845, and at that time had abundant external reason to expect a speedy death. When the symptoms were at the worst, Jesus Christ advised me to neglect my disease, and act as though I was well. I did so, and entered upon a course of new and severe labor with my voice, in meetings and in conversation. From that time I have been substantially well, and have performed more hard labor with my tongue in the last two years than in any other two years of my life.

The case of Mrs. Fanny Leonard is well known in this community. About a year ago, after the birth of a child, she began to decline. The symptoms of her disease were severe pain in her breast and side, and sinking weakness. She became worse, till her friends had little hope of her recovery. In March of the present year, a general persuasion manifested itself in our association that she would be healed by the power of God. As that persuasion arose, she still sunk. At length the crisis of faith and of her disease came together. She received strength at the very time when our faith predicted it, and she received it by the laying on of hands. She has been visibly improving ever since, and is now a healthy woman.

The case of Mrs. M. E. Cragin may be briefly referred to here, though she has given some account of it in a previous paper.—From the period of her sixteenth year till the past summer, she has been subject to frequent attacks of the "sick headache." The disorder increased upon her till its visits were expected regularly as often as once a week. Many attempts were made to subdue it by medicines, but nothing availed. In May last it became constant and terribly distressing. Death seemed inevitable. We resisted the disease as a spiritual power, not by medicine, but by the faith and will of our hearts. The devil was cast out of her stomach, and she has not had an attack of the "sick headache" since.

John R. Miller has long been subject to severe attacks of headache. On one of these occasions in the course of the last summer, I went into his room and found him on the bed suffering dreadfully. I laid my hand on his head, and told him to shake off the devil.—He arose at once, perfectly free from pain, and has not been troubled with this disease since.

These are samples of a great mass of experience which has been accumulating among us, without attracting much notice from the world around. We will advert now to two cases which have stood forth more directly before the public eye.

The cure of Mrs. Harriet Hall is as unimpeachable as any of the miracles of the primitive church. It is notorious that she had been sick eight years, with a complication of diseases; that she was completely bed-rid, and almost blind, lying in nearly total darkness. From this state, she was raised instantly, by the laying on of hands, and by the word of command, into strength which enabled her to walk, to face the sun, to ride miles without inconvenience, and with excessive pleasure. The afterthought of unbelief, that her sickness was a sham, is a gross abuse, not only of her, but of her father and family, and the eight or ten physicians who had attended her. The ascription of her cure to animal magnetism, is a shift by which any of the miracles of Christ might be explained away with equal plausibility. These subterfuges were hardly thought of when the case was fresh in the public mind. How many said—"If Harriet Hall only holds out, we will believe!" She has held out, and is daily walking your streets; and how many of you have kept your promise? Mr. Hall, her husband, the very man who was not liable to be humbugged by the foolish contradictions of her sickness which have been set afloat, is the only man (to his honor be it spoken) who has redeemed his pledge, by acknowledging the power of God and embracing Perfectionism.

A conversation in relation to this case which occurred in Miller's store, between Mr. Baker, (the father of Mrs. Hall,) a confirmed skeptic, and Dr. John Campbell, the principal physician of the village, is worth relating here, to show the strength of the facts which at first pressed on all minds. Mr. Baker said that there was one thing in the matter which he could not account for, viz., that Mrs. Hall, after having been so long in a dark room, (to say nothing of the disease in her eyes,) was able to face the light at once, and ride in open day, without suffering. 'For,' said he, 'after being in her room myself, for a short time, I could not go out into the light without trouble.' He put the case to Dr. Campbell in this way, and asked his opinion. The Doctor hummed, but said nothing.—Mr. Baker set the problem before him again and again, and pressed him to solve it, acknowledging that he himself could not. At last the Doctor said—'Why don't you surrender then?' This was his only answer. A few moments after, he said in my presence, to Mr. Baker—'It is time for us, old sinners, to surrender.'

* Some of the Perfectionists have lost small children—five or six in all, during nine years; but these cases do not properly belong to the account, because we are speaking only of believers. Moreover, most of the children referred to died under the care of physicians.

"But," say the scorners, "you have failed in another notable case. Mary Knight died on your hands, and her death outweighs all your other facts. Unbelief may lift up its head, 'Richard's himself again.'"

Men and brethren, be not hasty in judgement. Mary Knight's case has not gone to the jury yet. You have heard the pleadings on one side. Let the other side now speak.

In the first place supposing this case to have been as complete a failure as it has been represented by our enemies, it was no worse failure than the disciples met with when they undertook to cast out the arch-devil described in Mark ix. 17. Their failure in that case did not annihilate their commission, or discredit the cures which they had previously performed. The worst that can be said of us in relation to Mary Knight's case, is what Christ said to his disciples, viz. that we failed 'because of our unbelief,' that we needed more 'prayer and fasting' in order to encounter successfully so tremendous a devil as consumption in its last stage.

But a simple statement of facts will place this affair in a still more favorable light. Mary Knight, a young woman not connected with Prefectionists, not professing religion, surrounded with unbelieveing friends, was in the last agonies of consumption, given up by her physicians. Her father in these circumstances requested me once and again to call upon her. I went with him to her bedside, and at the outset stated to her in the presence of the family, that I did not profess to be a physician, and could not take the responsibility of her case, but that I could recommend her to Jesus Christ, as a very successful physician of the body as well as the soul. Soon after, John R. Miller took her to ride a considerable distance, and, contrary to the forebodings of her friends, his faith sustained her, and she returned much invigorated. The next day, seeing that her father was disposed to place her under our care, I called on her, and said to her in the presence of her friends,—"Your room is very small and near the street, exposed to noise and dust and troublesome visitations. We have a room in our "hospital," a retired house, where you will be much more comfortable than you can be here.—The room is at your service. You will certainly have as good chance to live there as here, and if you cannot live, it will be a pleasant place to die in.

JOHN H. NOYES.

☞ The above article, from the Spiritual Magazine, continues the history of this case to the death of this amiable lady, but with such circumstances as tell strongly in favor of the faith and faithfulness of the Perfectionists, and proves also that nothing can satisfy the enemies of truth. We have referred this article for comments to brother J. E. Page, whose remarks immediately follow.—This paper we send to the Perfectionists, with some tracts, papers, &c., inviting them to a fair investigation of truth. [ED.

MR. EDITOR:—I have read with great interest the article you have copied from the "Spiritual Magazine," the "Perfectionists" organ. My heart rejoices that there are others besides the Latter Day Saints that are willing to sacrifice the popular esteem of a proud religious world for the sake of the doctrine and truth of Jesus Christ, as set forth in his gospel. Every true saint of Christ cannot but admire the soundness of the reasonings, arguments and conclusions set forth by Mr. "Noyes," the author of the article alluded to. We cannot but conclude that the remarks of Mr. "Noyes" must meet with the approbation of every individual reader of every religious denomination on earth who are seeking to understand and know the height, depth, length and breadth of the saving principles of the "gospel of Christ," which "is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth," whether Jew or Gentile.

There is, however, one point in his article that addresses itself to our attention, which is manifestly erroneous, which is this,—He has cited Mr. E. to the several cases of a miraculous nature in the healing of several persons, as though the gifts of miracles and healings were evidences for others to believe the gospel of Christ. We are aware of the fact that the popular idea is that the seeing of "signs" ought to beget faith in the gospel of Christ. But as popular as the idea is, there is not a warrant for it in the whole book of God, (the Bible.)

We do not now design to enter at large into the proof of the above assertion, but simply to say "that faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," and not by seeing "signs."—The apostles were sent to "preach" the word, and not to show signs to originate faith in the hearts of the people, and the signs were to follow those that believed the word preached as a consequence of faith, and not faith the consequence of "signs." There are instances where Jesus healed persons, and instead of publishing it abroad to an untoward generation, he charged those that were healed to "tell it to no man." There is a case where Jesus worked a miracle and those that did not believe his word preached, their "foolish hearts were hardened." The unbelieving Jews were continually asking signs of Jesus that they might believe on him, even when they had Jesus hung between the heavens and earth they still demanded of him to show them a sign by "helping himself down from the cross, that they might SEE and believe." Never in one case did Jesus gratify them by showing the sign demanded. Neither is there an instance in the New Testament where Jesus appealed to his miraculous works to elicit faith in the hearts of those who saw them. The whole tenor of the gospel unto salvation is,—believe the word of the gospel and live, or disbelieve the word preached and be damned, and the "signs" were for the "confirmation" of them that believed, and not to originate faith.

For want of room we have asserted much and introduced but little proof; but we are more than willing to meet our assertions in a written or oral investigation. We hope the "Perfectionists" or any others will notice particularly this one declaration of Jesus, that it is "a wicked and an adulterous generation that seeketh a sign" in order to believe.

Mr. "Noyes," we give you our hand to seek after "perfection," that we may be "perfected in one" in Christ, even as the Father and Son are "one." We are not at issue with you on the subject of the "signs following them that believe," as promised in the commission given to the apostles. Mark xvi.

We ask your patience while we propound a few questions for your consideration. 1st, Can the church of Christ exist with any less constitutional parts, and "members in particular," than it did in the days of the apostle Paul? 2d, Can the church of Christ be perfected with any less "authority" or minor order of "priesthood," than was placed in it in the first christian century? 3d, By what peculiar constitutional traits is the true church of Christ distinguished from a spurious church, who make a profession of faith in Christ? 4th, Where is that church? If the above interrogations can be answered by Mr. "Noyes," or any person belonging to the people called "Perfectionists," as sound as he has answered Mr. "E." we are more than willing to say, Hail! brother.

JOHN E. PAGE.

without trouble.' He put the case to Dr. Campbell in this way, and asked his opinion. The Doctor hummed, but said nothing.—Mr. Baker set the problem before him again and again, and pressed him to solve it, acknowledging that he himself could not. At last the Doctor said—'Why don't you surrender then?' This was his only answer. A few moments after, he said in my presence, to Mr. Baker—'It is time for us, old sinners, to surrender.'

"But," say the scorners, "you have failed in another notable case. Mary Knight died on your hands, and her death outweighs all your other facts. Unbelief may lift up its head, 'Richard's himself again.'"

Men and brethren, be not hasty in judgement. Mary Knight's case has not gone to the jury yet. You have heard the pleadings on one side. Let the other side now speak.

In the first place supposing this case to have been as complete a failure as it has been represented by our enemies, it was no worse failure than the disciples met with when they undertook to cast out the arch-devil described in Mark ix. 17. Their failure in that case did not annihilate their commission, or discredit the cures which they had previously performed. The worst that can be said of us in relation to Mary Knight's case, is what Christ said to his disciples, viz. that we failed 'because of our unbelief,' that we needed more 'prayer and fasting' in order to encounter successfully so tremendous a devil as consumption in its last stage.

But a simple statement of facts will place this affair in a still more favorable light. Mary Knight, a young woman not connected with Prefectionists, not professing religion, surrounded with unbelieveing friends, was in the last agonies of consumption, given up by her physicians. Her father in these circumstances requested me once and again to call upon her. I went with him to her bedside, and at the outset stated to her in the presence of the family, that I did not profess to be a physician, and could not take the responsibility of her case, but that I could recommend her to Jesus Christ, as a very successful physician of the body as well as the soul. Soon after, John R. Miller took her to ride a considerable distance, and, contrary to the forebodings of her friends, his faith sustained her, and she returned much invigorated. The next day, seeing that her father was disposed to place her under our care, I called on her, and said to her in the presence of her friends,—"Your room is very small and near the street, exposed to noise and dust and troublesome visitations. We have a room in our "hospital," a retired house, where you will be much more comfortable than you can be here.—The room is at your service. You will certainly have as good chance to live there as here, and if you cannot live, it will be a pleasant place to die in.

JOHN H. NOYES.

☞ The above article, from the Spiritual Magazine, continues the history of this case to the death of this amiable lady, but with such circumstances as tell strongly in favor of the faith and faithfulness of the Perfectionists, and proves also that nothing can satisfy the enemies of truth. We have referred this article for comments to brother J. E. Page, whose remarks immediately follow.—This paper we send to the Perfectionists, with some tracts, papers, &c., inviting them to a fair investigation of truth. [ED.

MR. EDITOR:—I have read with great interest the article you have copied from the "Spiritual Magazine," the "Perfectionists" organ. My heart rejoices that there are others besides the Latter Day Saints that are willing to sacrifice the popular esteem of a proud religious world for the sake of the doctrine and truth of Jesus Christ, as set forth in his gospel. Every true saint of Christ cannot but admire the soundness of the reasonings, arguments and conclusions set forth by Mr. "Noyes," the author of the article alluded to. We cannot but conclude that the remarks of Mr. "Noyes" must meet with the approbation of every individual reader of every religious denomination on earth who are seeking to understand and know the height, depth, length and breadth of the saving principles of the "gospel of Christ," which "is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth," whether Jew or Gentile.

There is, however, one point in his article that addresses itself to our attention, which is manifestly erroneous, which is this,—He has cited Mr. E. to the several cases of a miraculous nature in the healing of several persons, as though the gifts of miracles and healings were evidences for others to believe the gospel of Christ. We are aware of the fact that the popular idea is that the seeing of "signs" ought to beget faith in the gospel of Christ. But as popular as the idea is, there is not a warrant for it in the whole book of God, (the Bible.)

We do not now design to enter at large into the proof of the above assertion, but simply to say "that faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," and not by seeing "signs."—The apostles were sent to "preach" the word, and not to show signs to originate faith in the hearts of the people, and the signs were to follow those that believed the word preached as a consequence of faith, and not faith the consequence of "signs." There are instances where Jesus healed persons, and instead of publishing it abroad to an untoward generation, he charged those that were healed to "tell it to no man." There is a case where Jesus worked a miracle and those that did not believe his word preached, their "foolish hearts were hardened." The unbelieving Jews were continually asking signs of Jesus that they might believe on him, even when they had Jesus hung between the heavens and earth they still demanded of him to show them a sign by "helping himself down from the cross, that they might SEE and believe." Never in one case did Jesus gratify them by showing the sign demanded. Neither is there an instance in the New Testament where Jesus appealed to his miraculous works to elicit faith in the hearts of those who saw them. The whole tenor of the gospel unto salvation is,—believe the word of the gospel and live, or disbelieve the word preached and be damned, and the "signs" were for the "confirmation" of them that believed, and not to originate faith.

For want of room we have asserted much and introduced but little proof; but we are more than willing to meet our assertions in a written or oral investigation. We hope the "Perfectionists" or any others will notice particularly this one declaration of Jesus, that it is "a wicked and an adulterous generation that seeketh a sign" in order to believe.

Mr. "Noyes," we give you our hand to seek after "perfection," that we may be "perfected in one" in Christ, even as the Father and Son are "one." We are not at issue with you on the subject of the "signs following them that believe," as promised in the commission given to the apostles. Mark xvi.

We ask your patience while we propound a few questions for your consideration. 1st, Can the church of Christ exist with any less constitutional parts, and "members in particular," than it did in the days of the apostle Paul? 2d, Can the church of Christ be perfected with any less "authority" or minor order of "priesthood," than was placed in it in the first christian century? 3d, By what peculiar constitutional traits is the true church of Christ distinguished from a spurious church, who make a profession of faith in Christ? 4th, Where is that church? If the above interrogations can be answered by Mr. "Noyes," or any person belonging to the people called "Perfectionists," as sound as he has answered Mr. "E." we are more than willing to say, Hail! brother.

JOHN E. PAGE.

PARENTAL INSTRUCTION.

The Lord has in all ages and dispensations made it the imperative duty of the saints to instruct their children in the principles which pertain to their present and future salvation. Some by their diligence in this respect have been highly favored of Him. Others by their negligence have been severely chastised. The Lord would not withhold from Abraham what he purposed to do with the cities of the plain. "For, (says God,) I know him, that he will command his children and his house after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord to do justice and judgment." Gen. xviii. 19. The priesthood was taken from the house of Eli, "because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not." 1 Sam. iii. 13. Moses, when speaking to the Israelites of the commandments that the Lord had given them by him, said:—

Deut. vi. 7, "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up."

Paul, the great apostle of the gentiles, when writing to the church at Ephesus, said:—

Eph. vi. 4, "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

By these passages, and many more which conld be quoted, it doth clearly appear that the saints anciently were required to instruct their children in the principles of truth and righteousness.—That they appreciated the importance of this duty is evident from the following saying of Solomon:—

Prov. xxii. 6, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Seeing therefore that the saints in former dispensations were required to teach their children in the law of God, how much more ought the saints in these last days to give heed unto this duty, who live in the dispensation of the fullness of times, in which all things will be gathered together in one, both in heaven and earth: when it shall no more be said, "The Lord liveth which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth which brought up, and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them."

These considerations ought to stir up the Latter Day Saints to duty, without any new commandment. But to impress it more fully upon the minds of the saints, the Lord says:—

D. & C. sec. xxii. p. 4, "Inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ, the son of the living God, and of baptism, and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents; for this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of their stakes which are organized, and their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of the hands; and they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord."

Parents, do you consider the importance of parental instruction? Do you realize the responsibility you are placed under? If so, you will instruct your children in the great work of the last days, and thereby prepare a people for the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ when he comes to take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. By so doing you will prepare yourselves for honor and glory in the church and kingdom of God. "For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?" G. W.

Voree, Jan. 7th, 1848.

A CHANCE FOR IMPOSTORS.

We know of no better place for an impostor who wishes to raise a real flare up than among the pseudoes in this region. They are just about in the right state for a new excitement. All the fire of McLellinism is quenched. Their meetings have died down, and a deathlike apathy has fallen upon them. We think if Gladden Bishop, Rigdons little Hushi, or Isaac Sheene, or indeed almost any new impostor would come along he could raise a perfect blaze of excitement, and get up as large a society as Aaron Smith first and McLellin afterwards did. A very few who went into McLellinism just as a stepping stone out of the church intending to go to Brighamism or any other standard of loose morrals, as soon as they could get certain favorites with them, would doubtless keep back, but others who stood aloof from Mc. could be stirred up by a different individual. These people are like a sucking colt in a crowd of strange horses, running with all their might after every one by turns, and never knowing the right one. It would be a matter of compassion to come and stir them up, and relieve them of their present despondency. And any one who will undertake it may be assured of good success, so he will use plenty of energy and assertion and little or no good sense. Who will [illegible] pseudoes of ennui?

PESTILENCE AND FAMINE.

These scourges of mankind are again coming upon all the nations that forget God. The sufferings of Ireland were trumpeted forth to all the world last season, while many other nations, suffering almost equal with her, were scarcely mentioned. But with the great crops of last season many nations will this year suffer still severer famine, and the pestilence and exceeding sore sickness will come with it and follow after. The daughter of Babylon will get her share of this infliction, with all the miseries of her wars.

NOTICE.—The public are cautioned against purchasing a certain note for $50,00 against me, given to and now held by John W. Crane. Said note was given as the price of a lot in Voree, to which I have never yet received any title, and I do not intend to pay it till the Deed is executed to me. WILLIAM SAVAGE.

Voree, Jan. 8th, 1848.

GIVE! GIVE!

The Sun gives ever; so the earth,
What it can give, so much 't is worth.
The Ocean gives in many ways,—
Gives paths, gives fishes, rivers, bays.
So, too, the Air, it gives us breath;
When it stops giving, comes in Death.
Give, give, be always giving;
Who gives not is not living.
The more you give,
The more you live.

God's love hath in us wealth upheaped;
Only by giving is it reaped.
The body withers, and the mind,
If pent in by a selfish rind.
Give strength, give thought, give deeds, give pelf,
Give love, give tears, and give thyself.
Give, give, be always giving;
Who gives not is not living.
The more we give,
The more we live.

CALVERT.

PARENTAL INSTRUCTION.

The Lord has in all ages and dispensations made it the imperative duty of the saints to instruct their children in the principles which pertain to their present and future salvation. Some by their diligence in this respect have been highly favored of Him. Others by their negligence have been severely chastised. The Lord would not withhold from Abraham what he purposed to do with the cities of the plain. "For, (says God,) I know him, that he will command his children and his house after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord to do justice and judgment." Gen. xviii. 19. The priesthood was taken from the house of Eli, "because his sons made themselves vile, and he restrained them not." 1 Sam. iii. 13. Moses, when speaking to the Israelites of the commandments that the Lord had given them by him, said:—

Deut. vi. 7, "And thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up."

Paul, the great apostle of the gentiles, when writing to the church at Ephesus, said:—

Eph. vi. 4, "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord."

By these passages, and many more which conld be quoted, it doth clearly appear that the saints anciently were required to instruct their children in the principles of truth and righteousness.—That they appreciated the importance of this duty is evident from the following saying of Solomon:—

Prov. xxii. 6, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Seeing therefore that the saints in former dispensations were required to teach their children in the law of God, how much more ought the saints in these last days to give heed unto this duty, who live in the dispensation of the fullness of times, in which all things will be gathered together in one, both in heaven and earth: when it shall no more be said, "The Lord liveth which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth which brought up, and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them."

These considerations ought to stir up the Latter Day Saints to duty, without any new commandment. But to impress it more fully upon the minds of the saints, the Lord says:—

D. & C. sec. xxii. p. 4, "Inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ, the son of the living God, and of baptism, and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the head of the parents; for this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of their stakes which are organized, and their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of the hands; and they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord."

Parents, do you consider the importance of parental instruction? Do you realize the responsibility you are placed under? If so, you will instr uct your children in the great work of the last days, and thereby prepare a people for the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ when he comes to take vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel. By so doing you will prepare yourselves for honor and glory in the church and kingdom of God. "For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?" G. W.

Voree, Jan. 7th, 1848.

A CHANCE FOR IMPOSTORS.

We know of no better place for an impostor who wishes to raise a real flare up than among the pseudoes in this region. They are just about in the right state for a new excitement. All the fire of McLellinism is quenched. Their meetings have died down, and a deathlike apathy has fallen upon them. We think if Gladden Bishop, Rigdons little Hushi, or Isaac Sheene, or indeed almost any new impostor would come along he could raise a perfect blaze of excitement, and get up as large a society as Aaron Smith first and McLellin afterwards did. A very few who went into McLellinism just as a stepping stone out of the church intending to go to Brighamism or any other standard of loose morrals, as soon as they could get certain favorites with them, would doubtless keep back, but others who stood aloof from Mc. could be stirred up by a different individual. These people are like a sucking colt in a crowd of strange horses, running with all their might after every one by turns, and never knowing the right one. It would be a matter of compassion to come and stir them up, and relieve them of their present despondency. And any one who will undertake it may be assured of good success, so he will use plenty of energy and assertion and little or no good sense. Who will come and relieve the pseudoes of ennui?

PESTILENCE AND FAMINE.

These scourges of mankind are again coming upon all the nations that forget God. The sufferings of Ireland were trumpeted forth to all the world last season, while many other nations, suffering almost equal with her, were scarcely mentioned. But with the great crops of last season many nations will this year suffer still severer famine, and the pestilence and exceeding sore sickness will come with it and follow after. The daughter of Babylon will get her share of this infliction, with all the miseries of her wars.

NOTICE.—The public are cautioned against purchasing a certain note for $50,00 against me, given to and now held by John W. Crane. Said note was given as the price of a lot in Voree, to which I have never yet received any title, and I do not intend to pay it till the Deed is executed to me. WILLIAM SAVAGE.

Voree, Jan. 8th, 1848.

GIVE! GIVE!

The Sun gives ever; so the earth,
What it can give, so much 't is worth.
The Ocean gives in many ways,—
Gives paths, gives fishes, rivers, bays.
So, too, the Air, it gives us breath;
When it stops giving, comes in Death.
Give, give, be always giving;
Who gives not is not living.
The more you give,
The more you live.

God's love hath in us wealth upheaped;
Only by giving is it reaped.
The body withers, and the mind,
If pent in by a selfish rind.
Give strength, give thought, give deeds, give pelf,
Give love, give tears, and give thyself.
Give, give, be always giving;
Who gives not is not living.
The more we give,
The more we live. CALVERT.

THE MORMONS.—This people, or the portion of them now encamped on the Western Prairies, are represented as being subjected to great suffering. A public meeting has been holden at Philadelphia, the Mayor in the chair, to raise funds to aid the emigrating Mormons, expelled from their homes in Illinois, and now encamped upon the Western Prairies without the means of further progress, or of supporting life. Col. Thomas L. Kane, of Philadelphia, who, from accidential circumstances, had witnessed the final expulsion of the Mormons from Ill., and who had subsequently visited several of their camping-grounds, and taken pains to ascertain their real condition, described the sufferings of these persecuted people as heart-rending, and eminently deserving the consideration of every philanthropic heart.

Charles Gibbons presented the following statement of facts, in connection with which, several resolutions were passed soliciting relief for them, to be forwarded to Frederick Brown, of Philadelphia, the Treasurer of the Committee appointed for the purpose:—

"It has been represented to this meeting, by citizens of Illinois, here present—that they [the Mormons] have been driven forth by force from their homes in that State, with other citizens, to the number of more than twenty thousand—that their houses, farms, and other possessions, have been confiscated to the use of armed men, by whom they were expelled—that the persons thus ejected and despoiled, have set out to seek a resting-place on the western shores of this Continent—that some of them have approached the place of their destination—that others are on this side of the Stony Mountains; and that others have advanced but a short distance beyond the confines of the State; that among these are many aged and decrepid persons, and many woman and children; and that all of them have suffered much from the want of shelter, clothing, and food, and from severe disease brought upon them by their destitution.

"It has been further represented that the government of the United States has, till now, permitted these persons to tarry on a part of the public domain, not yet appropriated, while endeavoring, by agricultural toil, to gather the means which are indispensable to their continued progress, and has otherwise recognized their character as citizens; and that the emigrants, in return, have justified this action of the government by carefully observing the laws, and have testified their gratitude towards it by engaging in large numbers, in the military service of the United States, to prosecute remote and dangerous expeditions, and the wives and children of the men who have so entered upon, and are now employed in the public service, are among the destitute and sick of the parties that remain encamped on the prairies.

"And the representations so made have been further verified by the recorded history of transactions to which they refer, and by disinterested oral testimony rendered before this meeting.

"It is thus made to appear that grievous wrong has been sustained by this large body of American citizens; and that they are exposed to increased and calamitous suffering, if it be not averted by the active sympathies of their brother citizens within the United States."—Advent Herald.

We publish the foregoing more than any thing else as a comment on the letters sent by the Brighamites in the camp to the Brighamites in this region. Several letters have been written from Brighamites at Council Bluffs urging their scattered friends to come on, and telling them that they have abundance of grain and provisions, and some to sell. Among others, Reuben Miller has such a letter from one of the chief men there, giving a glowing account of the place and assurance that there is abundance of all things in the camp, and that their followers are better off than they ever were before. We do not mention these things to dissuade any from assisting them. There is not the remotest doubt that they are in a state of utter starvation, and that the statements before the Philadelphia meeting come short of the truth We have the evidence in many letters coming from the poor and oppressed in that camp, by which we know that many hundreds there have died of mere starvation.—One third of all who went out in that camp have died of exposure and want, and the survivors are every day becoming worse off.—But a little few doubtless have abundance, and that few will undoubtedly get all that the charitable in Philadelphia give, and they are anxious also to get on some of the scattered flock who have a good fleece to shear, and are urging them forward by the pretense of wealth and abundance, at the same time that they beg for a little bread of the charitable. We do think however that common honesty should preclude them from inviting all their followers to come on there with the assurance of abundance, and at the very same time begging for bread on the score of mere starvation. And we are sorry to think that those who go with the hope of abundance will find starvation, and that given for the starving will be monopolized by a few wealthy leaders.

SENSE OF INTEREST.

There is no mistake in the fact that the nature of man is such that he will act, lend his aid, and make his best efforts to secure to himself that in which the sense of his greatest interest lies. If it is in securing wealth, so he will bend his means and lend his best efforts. If it is in securing to himself titles of honor, all is sacrificed to that end. If it is in securing ease and pleasure, all his means and efforts go that way. And according to his sense of interest in his eternal salvation he will act in all things. If he deems his salvation of but little worth, you may always know it by the appropriation he makes of the means he has in possession. And as he values his own salvation, so he values others. And in proportion as he seeks to save himself, so he will do for others. JOHN E. PAGE.

For the Gospel Herald.

POETRY.

Strange that the saints will lend an ear
To bitter calumny, or hear
Those vile outbreakings, when they know
That when God speaks it shall be so.

But Oh! alas! how few will stand
His word and works down to the end;
Their patience and obedience prove,
Devoted to the truth in love.

Tho' storms may gather, tempests beat,
Tho' foes assail, still let my feet
Stand firm upon old Israel's rock,
And safe abide within the flock.

Saved from old error's flattering bait,
From envy, strife, and cruel hate;
Let me in swift obedience prove
The God of truth, the God of love.

Far better is it to obey,
To harken—lest idolatry
Possess the soul with stubbornness,
And lead away from truth and peace.

That when the day of rest is come,
And Israel's hosts are gathered home,
I may be found with them, and bless'd
In a millennium of rest.

Voree, Jan. 8th, 1847. MARIETTE.

THE MORMONS.—This people, or the portion of them now encamped on the Western Prairies, are represented as being subjected to great suffering. A public meeting has been holden at Philadelphia, the Mayor in the chair, to raise funds to aid the emigrating Mormons, expelled from their homes in Illinois, and now encamped upon the Western Prairies without the means of further progress, or of supporting life. Col. Thomas L. Kane, of Philadelphia, who, from accidential circumstances, had witnessed the final expulsion of the Mormons from Ill., and who had subsequently visited several of their camping-grounds, and taken pains to ascertain their real condition, described the sufferings of these persecuted people as heart-rending, and eminently deserving the consideration of every philanthropic heart.

Charles Gibbons presented the following statement of facts, in connection with which, several resolutions were passed soliciting relief for them, to be forwarded to Frederick Brown, of Philadelphia, the Treasurer of the Committee appointed for the purpose:—

"It has been represented to this meeting, by citizens of Illinois, here present—that they [the Mormons] have been driven forth by force from their homes in that State, with other citizens, to the number of more than twenty thousand—that their houses, farms, and other possessions, have been confiscated to the use of armed men, by whom they were expelled—that the persons thus ejected and despoiled, have set out to seek a resting-place on the western shores of this Continent—that some of them have approached the place of their destination—that others are on this side of the Stony Mountains; and that others have advanced but a short distance beyond the confines of the State; that among these are many aged and decrepid persons, and many woman and children; and that all of them have suffered much from the want of shelter, clothing, and food, and from severe disease brought upon them by their destitution.

"It has been further represented that the government of the United States has, till now, permitted these persons to tarry on a part of the public domain, not yet appropriated, while endeavoring, by agricultural toil, to gather the means which are indispensable to their continued progress, and has otherwise recognized their character as citizens; and that the emigrants, in return, have justified this action of the government by carefully observing the laws, and have testified their gratitude towards it by engaging in large numbers, in the military service of the United States, to prosecute remote and dangerous expeditions, and the wives and children of the men who have so entered upon, and are now employed in the public service, are among the destitute and sick of the parties that remain encamped on the prairies.

"And the representations so made have been further verified by the recorded history of transactions to which they refer, and by disinterested oral testimony rendered before this meeting.

"It is thus made to appear that grievous wrong has been sustained by this large body of American citizens; and that they are exposed to increased and calamitous suffering, if it be not averted by the active sympathies of their brother citizens within the United States."—Advent Herald.

We publish the foregoing more than any thing else as a comment on the letters sent by the Brighamites in the camp to the Brighamites in this region. Several letters have been written from Brighamites at Council Bluffs urging their scattered friends to come on, and telling them that they have abundance of grain and provisions, and some to sell. Among others, Reuben Miller has such a letter from one of the chief men there, giving a glowing account of the place and assurance that there is abundance of all things in the camp, and that their followers are better off than they ever were before. We do not mention these things to dissuade any from assisting them. There is not the remotest doubt that they are in a state of utter starvation, and that the statements before the Philadelphia meeting come short of the truth. We have the evidence in many letters coming from the poor and oppressed in that camp, by which we know that many hundreds there have died of mere starvation.—One third of all who went out in that camp have died of exposure and want, and the survivors are every day becoming worse off.—But a little few doubtless have abundance, and that few will undoubtedly get all that the charitable in Philadelphia give, and they are anxious also to get on some of the scattered flock who have a good fleece to shear, and are urging them forward by the pretense of wealth and abundance, at the same time that they beg for a little bread of the charitable. We do think however that common honesty should preclude them from inviting all their followers to come on there with the assurance of abundance, and at the very same time begging for bread on the score of mere starvation. And we are sorry to think that those who go with the hope of abundance will find starvation, and that given for the starving will be monopolized by a few wealthy leaders.

SENSE OF INTEREST.

There is no mistake in the fact that the nature of man is such that he will act, lend his aid, and make his best efforts to secure to himself that in which the sense of his greatest interest lies. If it is in securing wealth, so he will bend his means and lend his best efforts. If it is in securing to himself titles of honor, all is sacrificed to that end. If it is in securing ease and pleasure, all his means and efforts go that way. And according to his sense of interest in his eternal salvation he will act in all things. If he deems his salvation of but little worth, you may always know it by the appropriation he makes of the means he has in possession. And as he values his own salvation, so he values others. And in proportion as he seeks to save himself, so he will do for others.

JOHN E. PAGE.

For the Gospel Herald.

POETRY.

Strange that the saints will lend an ear
To bitter calumny, or hear
Those vile outbreakings, when they know
That when God speaks it shall be so.

But Oh! alas! how few will stand
His word and works down to the end;
Their patience and obedience prove,
Devoted to the truth in love.

Tho' storms may gather, tempests beat,
Thō' foes assail, still let my feet
Stand firm upon old Israel's rock,
And safe abide within the flock.

Saved from old error's flattering bait,
From envy, strife, and cruel hate;
Let me in swift obedience prove
The God of truth, the God of love.

Far better is it to obey,
To harken—lest idolatry
Possess the soul with stubbornness,
And lead away from truth and peace.

That when the day of rest is come,
And Israel's hosts are gathered home,
I may be found with them, and bless'd
In a millennium of rest.

Voree, Jan. 8th, 1847. MARIETTE.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 20, 1848. [No. 44.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

We have just received the following letter from a near friend of David Whitmer, in Upper Missouri, and though it was not intended for publication, yet we hope the writer will not be offended at the use we make of it. Our answer will then be to him and all others who have like ideas as the writer.

Caldwell Co., Dec. 24th, 1847.

MR. STRANG:—

DEAR SIR,—I expect the time of my paper has expired. I enclose two dollars and fifty cents, and want you to still continue sending me the Gospel Herald, until I do know beyond a doubt whom we are to receive as Prophet, Seer and Revelator. There is so many that lay claim to that gift that I need a revelation to know who is entitled to it. 1. I am satisfied myself that it belongs either to yourself or David Whitmer, and I do not know which. 2. Whitmer is considered an honest and honorable man. I am well acquainted with him. As for myself I am a looker on, and have been for years, and calculate to be until I am convinced which is wrong. I am inclined to believe that you and Whitmer are both honest men and mean to do right, but one or the other is deceived some way or other. 3. Yours with respect, —— ——

J. J. STRANG.

NOTE 1. No man needs a revelation to know who stands in the prophetic office, in place of Joseph, because the revelations given and published long since show clearly how his successor shall come in, and but one PRETENDS to have come in by that rule. Pretending to hold the office by some other means is equivalent to pretending not to hold it at all. Whoever is prophet obtained that priesthood in accordance with the law of God. And whoever does not hold it by that law, does not hold it at all. Moreover, one who merely looks on is in a poor condition to receive revelations. God has doubtless, in times past, given you some knowledge in the things of this dispensation. While you are looking on this is as a talent hid in a napkin. And, consequently, as you are not improving on it, God would be much more likely to take it from you than give you more. Besides this, many false spirits have gone out in the world, giving false revelations, and they who do not acknowledge the true priesthood have no standard by which to try these spirits, and no means of testing their revelations.

2. There is just as much reason to say it lays between me and Rigdon or Law as between me and Whitmer, for the pretense in either case is, that they were ordained to some other office, and that Joseph having fallen they succeeded to his office. Rigdon and Law were ordained counsellors in the First Presidency, and each afterwards claimed by virtue of that ordination to be prophet. Whitmer was ordained President of a stake, and by virtue of that ordination it is claimed that he is prophet. I cannot see but their cases are as strong as his. Moreover, when Whitmer was ordained Wm. W. Phelps and John Whitmer were ordained his counsellors. Consequently, if this ordination made him First President of the church, it made them members of the First Presidency. And as Whitmer and his brother have never acted in Mormonism since 1838, I don't know but Phelps might put in a claim that Whitmer has fallen and that he has succeeded him and gone into the wilderness with the prophetic office. You cannot get over the fact that if this ordination made Whitmer First President, it also made his counsellors members of the First Presidency. It is, to say the least, a little singular that the whole First Presidency should have fallen at the same time, and extraordinary beyond conception that God should have appointed an entire new Presidency to lead the church; and that for thirteen years of such perils as the church has passed through in that time, not one of them should have found out that he was the true shepherd, and God should never have spoken one word in that time by his prophet.

3. I know not what grounds there may be for supposing that Whitmer is deceived. With me there is none. There is no middle ground for me or for the opinions of my friends. Had I, after receiving an appointment, waited, saying very little and doing less or nothing in the premises, but still claimed to be a prophet, men might think I was deceived. But when, before receiving the document containing my appointment, I told of having a vision in which I saw a town built up where Voree now is; a few days after, of receiving the administration of angels, and the priesthood after the power of an endless life at their hands; afterwards, that God revealed to me the place of ancient records and gave me the Urim and Thummim by the hands of an angel, whom I saw descend from and ascend to the heavens in open daylight, at midday, and from whose hands I took the Urim and Thummim, and both used it for seeing and for translating and returned it to him; it is vain to talk about my being deceived. These are truths—truths about which there is no room for mistake or uncertainty—truths which will crush with mountain weight the unbelieving of this generation in the great day of God Almighty. And he who doubts them is bound, as a reasonable man, to say that I am a deceiver and not deceived. However it may be with Whitmer, no shoulder but mine can bear my responsibility. If I am not what I profess, of all men on earth I am most wicked. I do not wish any one to say otherwise. Whosoever rejects me as a prophet, rejects the God who sent me. Let him not soften his words. But pertinaciously as I apply these words to myself, I do not apply them to Whitmer. I do not understand that any such facts have occurred in his case. I have never heard that he professed to have received revelations from God for the last thirteen years. I do not learn that, for a single instance in all the perils of that time, he has ever professed that God had revealed to him where deliverance was to be had. Much less does he pretend that the angels of God have ministered to him from time to time; that he has had the Urim and Thummim, or that he has translated ancient records. In fine, it is an unquestioned fact that in all the time since his ordination, either as general-in-chief or to preside in Zion, he has never for one moment acted either as President, Seer, Revelator or Translator. So if he really

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 20, 1848. [No. 44.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

We have just received the following letter from a near friend of David Whitmer, in Upper Missouri, and though it was not intended for publication, yet we hope the writer will not be offended at the use we make of it. Our answer will then be to him and all others who have like ideas as the writer.

Caldwell Co., Dec. 24th, 1847.

MR. STRANG:—

DEAR SIR,—I expect the time of my paper has expired. I enclose two dollars and fifty cents, and want you to still continue sending me the Gospel Herald, until I do know beyond a doubt whom we are to receive as Prophet, Seer and Revelator. There is so many that lay claim to that gift that I need a revelation to know who is entitled to it. 1. I am satisfied myself that it belongs either to yourself or David Whitmer, and I do not know which. 2. Whitmer is considered an honest and honorable man. I am well acquainted with him. As for myself I am a looker on, and have been for years, and calculate to be until I am convinced which is wrong. I am inclined to believe that you and Whitmer are both honest men and mean to do right, but one or the other is deceived some way or other. 3. Yours with respect, —— ——

J. J. STRANG.

NOTE 1. No man needs a revelation to know who stands in the prophetic office, in place of Joseph, because the revelations given and published long since show clearly how his successor shall come in, and but one PRETENDS to have come in by that rule. Pretending to hold the office by some other means is equivalent to pretending not to hold it at all. Whoever is prophet obtained that priesthood in accordance with the law of God. And whoever does not hold it by that law, does not hold it at all. Moreover, one who merely looks on is in a poor condition to receive revelations. God has doubtless, in times past, given you some knowledge in the things of this dispensation. While you are looking on this is as a talent hid in a napkin. And, consequently, as you are not improving on it, God would be much more likely to take it from you than give you more. Besides this, many false spirits have gone out in the world, giving false revelations, and they who do not acknowledge the true priesthood have no standard by which to try these spirits, and no means of testing their revelations.

2. There is just as much reason to say it lays between me and Rigdon or Law as between me and Whitmer, for the pretense in either case is, that they were ordained to some other office, and that Joseph having fallen they succeeded to his office. Rigdon and Law were ordained counsellors in the First Presidency, and each afterwards claimed by virtue of that ordination to be prophet. Whitmer was ordained President of a stake, and by virtue of that ordination it is claimed that he is prophet. I cannot see but their cases are as strong as his. Moreover, when Whitmer was ordained Wm. W. Phelps and John Whitmer were ordained his counsellors. Consequently, if this ordination made him First President of the church, it made them members of the First Presidency. And as Whitmer and his brother have never acted in Mormonism since 1838, I don't know but Phelps might put in a claim that Whitmer has fallen and that he has succeeded him and gone into the wilderness with the prophetic office. You cannot get over the fact that if this ordination made Whitmer First President, it also made his counsellors members of the First Presidency. It is, to say the least, a little singular that the whole First Presidency should have fallen at the same time, and extraordinary beyond conception that God should have appointed an entire new Presidency to lead the church; and that for thirteen years of such perils as the church has passed through in that time, not one of them should have found out that he was the true shepherd, and God should never have spoken one word in that time by his prophet.

3. I know not what grounds there may be for supposing that Whitmer is deceived. With me there is none. There is no middle ground for me or for the opinions of my friends. Had I, after receiving an appointment, waited, saying very little and doing less or nothing in the premises, but still claimed to be a prophet, men might think I was deceived. But when, before receiving the document containing my appointment, I told of having a vision in which I saw a town built up where Voree now is; a few days after, of receiving the administration of angels, and the priesthood after the power of an endless life at their hands; afterwards, that God revealed to me the place of ancient records and gave me the Urim and Thummim by the hands of an angel, whom I saw descend from and ascend to the heavens in open daylight, at midday, and from whose hands I took the Urim and Thummim, and both used it for seeing and for translating and returned it to him; it is vain to talk about my being deceived. These are truths—truths about which there is no room for mistake or uncertainty—truths which will crush with mountain weight the unbelieving of this generation in the great day of God Almighty. And he who doubts them is bound, as a reasonable man, to say that I am a deceiver and not deceived. However it may be with Whitmer, no shoulder but mine can bear my responsibility. If I am not what I profess, of all men on earth I am most wicked. I do not wish any one to say otherwise. Whosoever rejects me as a prophet, rejects the God who sent me. Let him not soften his words. But pertinaciously as I apply these words to myself, I do not apply them to Whitmer. I do not understand that any such facts have occurred in his case. I have never heard that he professed to have received revelations from God for the last thirteen years. I do not learn that, for a single instance in all the perils of that time, he has ever professed that God had revealed to him where deliverance was to be had. Much less does he pretend that the angels of God have ministered to him from time to time; that he has had the Urim and Thummim, or that he has translated ancient records. In fine, it is an unquestioned fact that in all the time since his ordination, either as general-in-chief or to preside in Zion, he has never for one moment acted either as President, Seer, Revelator or Translator. So if he really does think the office belongs to him, it does not follow that he has practiced any deception.

But in this place we have another reason for hoping that David Whitmer has not practiced deception, to wit: assured that he is not the prophet of the dispensation, we have good reason to believe he does not pretend to be. Of this we do not feel absolutely sure, but our reasons for holding to it are very strong, both affirmative and negative. The negative reasons are these:—It is now near 14 years since he received the ordination from which those who are crying him up date his prophetic authority, and I presume not less than ten years since he has stood aloof from the church, and I have yet to learn that during all that time he has ever once attempted to give the word of the Lord for a law unto them, or to offer them deliverance. For some three years or more after that ordination he continued to act under Joseph, receiving, acknowledging and upholding him in the prophetic office; and it is not possible that God should have made David Whitmer prophet and left him so entirely ignorant of it that he not only should not know what office he held, but should actually follow an apostate, a reprobate, and a castaway; and instead of leading the church to salvation should go with them to destruction. And I cannot believe that after all these facts have so transpired, and some man waking him up from the apathy of years and saying to him, "David, you are a prophet," that he would chime in and say, "yes, I know it." I may be mistaken, but like you I believe him an honorable, an honest man. And believing him to be an honest man I assume as a mere matter of course that he has acted like one, and do not believe that he is making false pretenses.

Again: you are doubtless aware that at the time of the emeute at Kirtland in the latter part of 1846, Wm. E. McLellin and various other persons wrote to Whitmer to set himself up as prophet and leader of the church. One of these letters was published in the paper started by that faction, yet it is not pretended that it was ever answered. I do not conceive it possible that such a call to a prophet should be unheeded. When Elijah cried out in utter loneliness, "they have killed thy prophets and hewn down thine altars, and I alone am left and they seek my life;" you will not doubt that a like call from a like number of those that God has reserved to himself would have brought out some kind of response. And the non-answer of that letter can only be accounted for on the ground that Whitmer considered himself no prophet. Add to this the fact that McLellin has gone as a delegate from Kirtland to Missouri to call out Whitmer as a prophet, and that he still has not got a single line of writing from him, and it certainly makes very strong negative evidence of his setting up any such pretensions.

The positive evidence that he does not make any such pretensions, is this: early in 1846 the tract reprint of the first number of the Voree Herald, containing the evidence of my calling and authority, strayed into upper Missouri. Immediately I received a letter from Hiram Page, one of the witnesses of the Book of Mormon, and a neighbor and friend to the Whitmers', informing me that he had received that tract and read it with joy and gladness, and went on to tell at length of reading it to the two Whitmers' who lived near him, and that they rejoiced with exceeding joy that GOD HAD RAISED UP ONE to STAND in PLACE of JOSEPH, and was so much overjoyed that they could not rest till they had gone and communicated the glad news to their brother who lived at some distance. He goes on to say that all the witnesses of the Book of Mormon living in that region RECEIVED the NEWS with GLADNESS, and finally that they held a council in which David and John Whitmer and this Hiram Page were the principal actors; and being at a loss what they ought to do about coming to VOREE, sent up to me AS A PROPHET of GOD to TELL THEM what to do. This letter I answered shortly after receiving it, and last April (1847) I received another letter from the same Hiram Page, acknowledging the receipt of mine and of many papers from me, and giving me the acts of another council of himself and the Whitmers', in which, among other things, they invite me to come to their residence in Missouri and receive from them, David and John Whitmer, church records, and manuscript revelations, which they had kept in their possession from the time that they were active members of the church. These documents they speak of as of great importance to the church, and offer them to me as the true shepherd who has a right to them, and were anxious that I should come and receive them in person because they were of too much importance to be trusted in the mails. It is very true that these letters were not written by David Whitmer, but they were written by Hiram Page as the common epistle of himself and the Whitmers'. I have just as much reason to believe Hiram Page is an honorable and an honest man as that Whitmer is, and do not think he would write those things unless they are true; and if they are true how can I believe that Whitmer professes to be prophet instead of Joseph? No, I think him too honest for that.

A TREATISE ON THE DESIGN OF BAPTISM.

BY JOHN E. PAGE.

In the former numbers of this paper we have treated on the subject of the priesthood. We now proceed to show the original design of baptism, and that it belongs exclusively to the administration of the true priesthood, set apart by the calling of God by direct revelation.

John i. 33, "He that sent me (John the Baptist) to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost."

By this we learn that John the Babtist was sent by special command of God to baptize with water, and to him in particular it was given to witness the vision of the spirit of God descending on the Son of God, by that measure of the priesthood to him (John) committed through the lineage of his fathers by the gift of God. Probably there is none to dispute the fact that John the Baptist, the son of Zacharias, was of the family of Levi, to which family the Aaronic priesthood was given in the days of Moses, which priesthood had the right to administer the ordinances of the law of "carnal commandments" and all outward ordinances that came within the purview of their office or priesthood. We no where find an instance in the scriptures where any of the family of Levi was consecrated a priest by the laying on of the hands, as we have found the Melchisedec priests were; but we do find that Aaron and his sons were consecrated priests by "anointing them with oil."

Ex. xxviii. 40, "And for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty.

41. And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office."

xxx. 30, "And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office."

By taking the above into consideration we come to the conclusion that the ordinance of laying on of hands for consecrating priests belongs to the Melchisedec priesthood, which has power to administer in the things of the spirit, as we will show more fully in another place. At what time John the Baptist received his anointing we are not advised, probably under the administration of his father Zacharias, who was of the order of the Aaronic priesthood; by which authority he administered in the "burning of incense" in the Temple. Read Luke i. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

John declared that he (Christ) "was greater than he," (John.)

does think the office belongs to him, it does not follow that he has practiced any deception.

But in this place we have another reason for hoping that David Whitmer has not practiced deception, to wit: assured that he is not the prophet of the dispensation, we have good reason to believe he does not pretend to be. Of this we do not feel absolutely sure, but our reasons for holding to it are very strong, both affirmative and negative. The negative reasons are these:—It is now near 14 years since he received the ordination from which those who are crying him up date his prophetic authority, and I presume not less than ten years since he has stood aloof from the church, and I have yet to learn that during all that time he has ever once attempted to give the word of the Lord for a law unto them, or to offer them deliverance. For some three years or more after that ordination he continued to act under Joseph, receiving, acknowledging and upholding him in the prophetic office; and it is not possible that God should have made David Whitmer prophet and left him so entirely ignorant of it that he not only should not know what office he held, but should actually follow an apostate, a reprobate, and a castaway; and instead of leading the church to salvation should go with them to destruction. And I cannot believe that after all these facts have so transpired, and some man waking him up from the apathy of years and saying to him, "David, you are a prophet," that he would chime in and say, "yes, I know it." I may be mistaken, but like you I believe him an honorable, an honest man. And believing him to be an honest man I assume as a mere matter of course that he has acted like one, and do not believe that he is making false pretenses.

Again: you are doubtless aware that at the time of the emeute at Kirtland in the latter part of 1846, Wm. E. McLellin and various other persons wrote to Whitmer to set himself up as prophet and leader of the church. One of these letters was published in the paper started by that faction, yet it is not pretended that it was ever answered. I do not conceive it possible that such a call to a prophet should be unheeded. When Elijah cried out in utter loneliness, "they have killed thy prophets and hewn down thine altars, and I alone am left and they seek my life;" you will not doubt that a like call from a like number of those that God has reserved to himself would have brought out some kind of response. And the non-answer of that letter can only be accounted for on the ground that Whitmer considered himself no prophet. Add to this the fact that McLellin has gone as a delegate from Kirtland to Missouri to call out Whitmer as a prophet, and that he still has not got a single line of writing from him, and it certainly makes very strong negative evidence of his setting up any such pretensions.

The positive evidence that he does not make any such pretensions, is this: early in 1846 the tract reprint of the first number of the Voree Herald, containing the evidence of my calling and authority, strayed into upper Missouri. Immediately I received a letter from Hiram Page, one of the witnesses of the Book of Mormon, and a neighbor and friend to the Whitmers', informing me that he had received that tract and read it with joy and gladness, and went on to tell at length of reading it to the two Whitmers' who lived near him, and that they rejoiced with exceeding joy that GOD HAD RAISED UP ONE to STAND in PLACE of JOSEPH, and was so much overjoyed that they could not rest till they had gone and communicated the glad news to their brother who lived at some distance. He goes on to say that all the witnesses of the Book of Mormon living in that region RECEIVED the NEWS with GLADNESS, and finally that they held a council in which David and John Whitmer and this Hiram Page were the principal actors; and being at a loss what they ought to do about coming to VOREE, sent up to me AS A PROPHET of GOD to TELL THEM what to do. This letter I answered shortly after receiving it, and last April (1847) I received another letter from the same Hiram Page, acknowledging the receipt of mine and of many papers from me, and giving me the acts of another council of himself and the Whitmers', in which, among other things, they invite me to come to their residence in Missouri and receive from them, David and John Whitmer, church records, and manuscript revelations, which they had kept in their possession from the time that they were active members of the church. These documents they speak of as of great importance to the church, and offer them to me as the true shepherd who has a right to them, and were anxious that I should come and receive them in person because they were of too much importance to be trusted in the mails. It is very true that these letters were not written by David Whitmer, but they were written by Hiram Page as the common epistle of himself and the Whitmers'. I have just as much reason to believe Hiram Page is an honorable and an honest man as that Whitmer is, and do not think he would write those things unless they are true; and if they are true how can I believe that Whitmer professes to be prophet instead of Joseph? No, I think him too honest for that.

A TREATISE ON THE DESIGN OF BAPTISM.

BY JOHN E. PAGE.

In the former numbers of this paper we have treated on the subject of the priesthood. We now proceed to show the original design of baptism, and that it belongs exclusively to the administration of the true priesthood, set apart by the calling of God by direct revelation.

John i. 33, "He that sent me (John the Baptist) to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost."

By this we learn that John the Babtist was sent by special command of God to baptize with water, and to him in particular it was given to witness the vision of the spirit of God descending on the Son of God, by that measure of the priesthood to him (John) committed through the lineage of his fathers by the gift of God. Probably there is none to dispute the fact that John the Baptist, the son of Zacharias, was of the family of Levi, to which family the Aaronic priesthood was given in the days of Moses, which priesthood had the right to administer the ordinances of the law of "carnal commandments" and all outward ordinances that came within the purview of their office or priesthood. We no where find an instance in the scriptures where any of the family of Levi was consecrated a priest by the laying on of the hands, as we have found the Melchisedec priests were; but we do find that Aaron and his sons were consecrated priests by "anointing them with oil."

Ex. xxviii. 40, "And for Aaron's sons thou shalt make coats, and thou shalt make for them girdles, and bonnets shalt thou make for them, for glory and for beauty.

41. And thou shalt put them upon Aaron thy brother, and his sons with him; and shalt anoint them, and consecrate them, and sanctify them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office."

xxx. 30, "And thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and consecrate them, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office."

By taking the above into consideration we come to the conclusion that the ordinance of laying on of hands for consecrating priests belongs to the Melchisedec priesthood, which has power to administer in the things of the spirit, as we will show more fully in another place. At what time John the Baptist received his anointing we are not advised, probably under the administration of his father Zacharias, who was of the order of the Aaronic priesthood; by which authority he administered in the "burning of incense" in the Temple. Read Luke i. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

John declared that he (Christ) "was greater than he," (John.)

How greater? Ans. In priesthood. Why so? Ans. Because John could only administer in the outward ordinance of baptism by water, while Christ had the power of priesthood to administer in the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Relative to the mode of baptism we have but little to say, in consequence of the much that is said by the contradictory sects of the day. We shall rest the whole matter concerning the mode on the terms "born," "bury" and "planted." John iii. Jesus says to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

We understand the term "born" to signify to emerge from obscurity into visibility. Therefore the term born, as expressive of the mode of baptism by water, would imply that a person in the hands of a legal administrator must be rendered obscure by being overwhelmed in water, and then be emerged into visibility.

Rom. vi. 3, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death?

4. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

5. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

Col. ii. 12, "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

BURIED, interred, concealed, overwhelmed, hidden.

PLANTED, in this case, would signify the same as "buried," otherwise there would be no "likeness" of the death, burial, and "resurrection" of Jesus Christ, represented in the ordinance of baptism.

We understand that when Jesus was buried in the tomb, he was rendered obscure to all human view, and we know not what other mode or ordinance could be introduced more congenial to the circumstances of men, rich, poor, bond, free, old and young than that of immersion, to imitate the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, as embraced in the faith of all those who believe in his death, burial and resurrection, which is so absolutely essential to a gospel salvation. How in the name of common sense it is that any person can see any "likeness" of the burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ in the ordinances of sprinkling or effusion we cannot imagine. It is often asked, for what reason was Jesus baptized by John? Jesus says it was "to fulfill all righteousness." For Jesus to fulfill all righteousness it was essential for him to set a pattern, and become an example to all those that should believe in and follow him. Consequently he must first enter in by the true door into the sheepfold, according to the following texts:—

John x. 1, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3. To him the porter openeth: and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

4. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice."

We see no possible way to escape the conclusion that Jesus was the "shepherd," John was the "porter" and baptism was the "door" alluded to above. Thus Jesus left an example that none need mistake the outward "door" into the "fold," "church" or "kingdom of God," and all that follow after him must enter into the sheepfold as he did, or be counted "thieves and robbers." So essential did Jesus make the ordinance of baptism, that no man can enter the kingdom without it. Read his answer to Nicodemus, John iii.

And in keeping with that answer he commanded his apostles to preach to every creature in all the world, and baptize all nations of those that believed, Jews and Gentiles. Yet, in the face of high heaven, with the New Testament in hand, we have some people in our christian land that say we can be saved with or without baptism. We wish to attach all and no more importance or essentiality to it than Jesus attached to it, which was this: that no man can enter into the kingdom of God without it. But the baptism of the Holy Spirit is equally essential, and as indispensable; the two births, one of the water and the other of the spirit of God, both being inseparably connected in our salvation.

When I was quite a youth I heard an old man of three score years say "that he had been a minister of the gospel for thirty years, and he had not found out yet the design of baptism, or for what it was commanded." We quote the above as an example of the ignorance there is in our religious world concerning the ordinances ordained of Jesus Christ. Another instance we have as an example of folly, which is as popular as it is absurd and ridiculous, which is this: the practice of praying at anxious-seats, or mourners-benches, to gain a remission of sins; whereas there is not one practical example or commandment for it in the holy scriptures. But instead of that, John "baptized unto repentance FOR the remission of sins." Mark i. 4.

Luke xxiv. 47, "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Let the reader take particular notice of the term "name" in the above text, that in this and all other cases when used as signifying an official act, it always signifies authority or priesthood. By the following text we find by what means we are introduced to the blood and name of Jesus for the remission of sins. According to the commandment of Jesus the apostles began at Jerusalem, on the day of the Jewish passover, called pentecost, to preach the gospel to all nations; and as Peter stood up and preached Jesus, and him crucified, to the assembled multitude of the Jews, and some of them out of all nations heard the word, cried out, being pricked in heart, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" This occasion, and the beginning of the ministry of the apostles, here indued with the power of the holy priesthood, demanded in all Godliness an answer to the interrogation that would answer for every creature in all the world, in every age to the end of time; and we leave it to the good sense of every efficient and candid reader if the answer Peter gave was not in view of the above reasons, dictated by the spirit of direct revelation.

Acts ii. 38, "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40. And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."

If, then, three thousand souls received a remission of sins through baptism at one time, why not all the world by the same means?

Again: if it required an endued authority to be given to the then apostles, why not now to execute the same thing? And if baptism was a means of saving grace at that time, why not now? If it is so, why seek for the remission of sins where it is not promised, at anxious-seats and mourners-benches? "Yes! yes!!" says the Campbelite, "I believe in baptism for the remission of sins." Yes, I heard so; but where did you get the priesthood to administer it? inasmuch as the only way of gaining it is by direct revelation, as we have shown before.

At every time, in every place, in all the acts of the apostles they carried one uniform course, in their ministry to the Jews and Gentiles, in this matter to all that believed the gospel; they immediately baptized them unto repentance for the remission of sins. Even Saul of Tarsus, who afterwards was made an apostle, was directed by Ananias to be "baptized and wash away his sins." Acts xxii. 16. When Philip preached in Samaria the Samaritans "believed his preaching and were baptized, both men and women." And so with the jailer, Lydia, and their households, and all other cases where the gospel was preached by the apostles and their associates, where the people believed and repented. And not in one case do we read in the scriptures about anxious-seats or mourners-benches.

(To be continued.)

How greater? Ans. In priesthood. Why so? Ans. Because John could only administer in the outward ordinance of baptism by water, while Christ had the power of priesthood to administer in the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

Relative to the mode of baptism we have but little to say, in consequence of the much that is said by the contradictory sects of the day. We shall rest the whole matter concerning the mode on the terms "born," "bury" and "planted." John iii. Jesus says to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born of water and the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

We understand the term "born" to signify to emerge from obscurity into visibility. Therefore the term born, as expressive of the mode of baptism by water, would imply that a person in the hands of a legal administrator must be rendered obscure by being overwhelmed in water, and then be emerged into visibility.

Rom. vi. 3, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death?

4. Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life.

5. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

Col. ii. 12, "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

BURIED, interred, concealed, overwhelmed, hidden.

PLANTED, in this case, would signify the same as "buried," otherwise there would be no "likeness" of the death, burial, and "resurrection" of Jesus Christ, represented in the ordinance of baptism.

We understand that when Jesus was buried in the tomb, he was rendered obscure to all human view, and we know not what other mode or ordinance could be introduced more congenial to the circumstances of men, rich, poor, bond, free, old and young than that of immersion, to imitate the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ, as embraced in the faith of all those who believe in his death, burial and resurrection, which is so absolutely essential to a gospel salvation. How in the name of common sense it is that any person can see any "likeness" of the burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ in the ordinances of sprinkling or effusion we cannot imagine. It is often asked, for what reason was Jesus baptized by John? Jesus says it was "to fulfill all righteousness." For Jesus to fulfill all righteousness it was essential for him to set a pattern, and become an example to all those that should believe in and follow him. Consequently he must first enter in by the true door into the sheepfold, according to the following texts:—

John x. 1, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber.

2. But he that entereth in by the door is the shepherd of the sheep.

3. To him the porter openeth: and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out.

4. And when he putteth forth his own sheep, he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him: for they know his voice."

We see no possible way to escape the conclusion that Jesus was the "shepherd," John was the "porter" and baptism was the "door" alluded to above. Thus Jesus left an example that none need mistake the outward "door" into the "fold," "church" or "kingdom of God," and all that follow after him must enter into the sheepfold as he did, or be counted "thieves and robbers." So essential did Jesus make the ordinance of baptism, that no man can enter the kingdom without it. Read his answer to Nicodemus, John iii.

And in keeping with that answer he commanded his apostles to preach to every creature in all the world, and baptize all nations of those that believed, Jews and Gentiles. Yet, in the face of high heaven, with the New Testament in hand, we have some people in our christian land that say we can be saved with or without baptism. We wish to attach all and no more importance or essentiality to it than Jesus attached to it, which was this: that no man can enter into the kingdom of God without it. But the baptism of the Holy Spirit is equally essential, and as indispensable; the two births, one of the water and the other of the spirit of God, both being inseparably connected in our salvation.

When I was quite a youth I heard an old man of three score years say "that he had been a minister of the gospel for thirty years, and he had not found out yet the design of baptism, or for what it was commanded." We quote the above as an example of the ignorance there is in our religious world concerning the ordinances ordained of Jesus Christ. Another instance we have as an example of folly, which is as popular as it is absurd and ridiculous, which is this: the practice of praying at anxious-seats, or mourners-benches, to gain a remission of sins; whereas there is not one practical example or commandment for it in the holy scriptures. But instead of that, John "baptized unto repentance FOR the remission of sins." Mark i. 4.

Luke xxiv. 47, "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Let the reader take particular notice of the term "name" in the above text, that in this and all other cases when used as signifying an official act, it always signifies authority or priesthood. By the following text we find by what means we are introduced to the blood and name of Jesus for the remission of sins. According to the commandment of Jesus the apostles began at Jerusalem, on the day of the Jewish passover, called pentecost, to preach the gospel to all nations; and as Peter stood up and preached Jesus, and him crucified, to the assembled multitude of the Jews, and some of them out of all nations heard the word, cried out, being pricked in heart, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" This occasion, and the beginning of the ministry of the apostles, here indued with the power of the holy priesthood, demanded in all Godliness an answer to the interrogation that would answer for every creature in all the world, in every age to the end of time; and we leave it to the good sense of every efficient and candid reader if the answer Peter gave was not in view of the above reasons, dictated by the spirit of direct revelation.

Acts ii. 38, "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

39. For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call.

40. And with many other words did he testify and exhort, saying, Save yourselves from this untoward generation.

41. Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls."

If, then, three thousand souls received a remission of sins through baptism at one time, why not all the world by the same means?

Again: if it required an endued authority to be given to the then apostles, why not now to execute the same thing? And if baptism was a means of saving grace at that time, why not now? If it is so, why seek for the remission of sins where it is not promised, at anxious-seats and mourners-benches? "Yes! yes!!" says the Campbelite, "I believe in baptism for the remission of sins." Yes, I heard so; but where did you get the priesthood to administer it? inasmuch as the only way of gaining it is by direct revelation, as we have shown before.

At every time, in every place, in all the acts of the apostles they carried one uniform course, in their ministry to the Jews and Gentiles, in this matter to all that believed the gospel; they immediately baptized them unto repentance for the remission of sins. Even Saul of Tarsus, who afterwards was made an apostle, was directed by Ananias to be "baptized and wash away his sins." Acts xxii. 16. When Philip preached in Samaria the Samaritans "believed his preaching and were baptized, both men and women." And so with the jailer, Lydia, and their households, and all other cases where the gospel was preached by the apostles and their associates, where the people believed and repented. And not in one case do we read in the scriptures about anxious-seats or mourners-benches.

(To be continued.)

CHAPLAINS OF CONGRESS.

Can any good thing come out of Congress? Come and see.—Here we have a speech of Mr. Pettit, of Indiana, made in the House of Representatives, soon after the opening of the present Congress, on the election of Chaplain, which would do honor to a saint. This discourse of Mr. Pettit's contains more gospel principles doubtless than both the Chaplains will preach in all winter. We are not surprised that the assembled wisdom of the "Daughter of Babylon" rejected his counsels, and doubt not it was a strange sound in the ears of those sages when he told them there was but one true religion, and consequently if they employed two Chaplains of different faith, though one might be true, the other of necessity was false.

"Mr. Pettit rose to detain the House for a few moments only, simply to reiterate what he had heretofore said on the subject which this resolution presented to their consideration, and for the utterance of which he had been exposed to great reproach. He was impressed with the solemn conviction that this House had no power—that the two Houses of Congress together had no power—to appropriate the public money for religious purposes; and hence he was opposed to the passage of this resolution. To him the proposition was plain, that the National Legislature had no power at all to legislate on the subject of religion; and surely they could not appropriate money for purposes respecting which they had no power to legislate. No member on that floor would surely present the absurd proposition that they had power to legislate on the subject of religion in any form; for the framers of the Constitution had wisely prohibited their doing so by the provisions of that instrument, which was given to them for their government. When the States organized their government, in some of them there existed an established religion, in others there were various religions alike tolerated, while in some there was a great preponderance of one. The New England States were almost all Puritanical; Maryland was almost exclusively Catholic—the universal religion, the Catholic faith, having been adopted by them. Other States had many religions. In order, therefore, to avoid a collision of creeds and the interests of these various denominations, and to avoid trampling on the rights and privileges of any, in the Constitution a provision was inserted prohibiting Congress from making any law respecting an establishlished religion. If, then, Congress could not legislate on the subject of religion, it certainly followed—this at least was clear to his mind—that they could not appropriate money where they could not legislate.

"A few days since, in presence of the Speaker and of the House, he held up his hand, and, solemnly appealing to the Supreme Being, promised to support the Constitution of these United States, "so help me God;" and it was his sincere purpose to adhere to that solemn obligation. He was bound to support the Constitution as he understood it, and he could not recognize any power as possessed of the right to construe that instrument for him, or to control his actions under it.

"He did not wholly object to the adoption of the resolution; for he was prepared with an amendment to provide substantially for the accomplishment of the same purpose. He did not object to the election or appointment of Chaplains and the opening of the deliberations every morning by an appeal to the Throne of Grace; and he had no doubt, constituted as they were, that this body would need such appeals. Whether they should be able to derive much good from them he did not know. It would be well for them if they should get a devout man to pray for them: he hoped they should get one, for they were assured that the "fervent prayer of the righeous availeth much." The prayer of any other would not be heard; and hence, by the choice of any other, they should not be profited.

"But he had to the resolution a serious objection, and he now gave notice that he should offer an amendment and an addition to it. First, as an amendment, he should ask the House to strike out the words "different denominations," and for a very good and obvious reason, which must appeal to all men of common sense. Why was it, he asked, that the two Houses of Congress should be compelled to employ chaplains of different denominations under this resolution? If there were a religion at all, there must be a true, a universal, a catholic religion. But, as there were many sects, while there was orthodoxy, there was also heterodoxy. If, then, out of six hundred and forty different denominations into which the Christian world is divided, there be but one right and true religion—and he held that there could be but one right, and pure, and holy—this House might choose the right, and the Senate, under this resolution, must be content with the heterodox; or the House might be in this position if the Senate should first choose its chaplain, and elect from the true church. Under such circumstances the Senate would have pure and undefiled religion preached to them, but the House must submit to have broadcast amongst them that which was not true. He was aware that these chaplains were to exchange weekly, and thus one week they should listen to the proper authority, and their prayers might be acceptable at the Throne of Grace; but on the next week they would have one of a different denomination, whose prayers could not possibly be heard. Now—and he was not disposed to urge this subject further—how childish it was to prescribe such a limitation. If a majority of the Senate should prefer a Catholic, although a majority of this House might be Catholics, they would be prohibited in their selection to elect a chaplain of their own creed. The same observation would apply to all other denominations. And why, he would ask, if they were Methodists, should they not have a Methodist chaplain here? He repeated that the restriction in this resolution was childish and absurd; and he should first move to strike out the words "different denominations," so that all creeds and denominations should be at liberty to come and participate in the scramble for the prize.

"He should next ask the House to add to the resolution this provision: 'Provided, Such chaplains shall be paid by the members of the respective Houses, and the United States shall not be liable for their salaries nor any part thereof.' He should ask for the adoption of this proviso, because he doubted the propriety of appropriating money from the public treasury for such purposes, while the Constitution of the United States retained its existing provision prohibiting legislation on the subject of religion. He had no objection, as he had said already, to commence each day's deliberations with prayer, and for the services of a chaplain he would pay as much as any one. He was not aware that he needed as much again as any other member the benefits of prayer, but he was willing to pay as much again. In this respect he was disposed to be liberal. If they continued the remuneration heretofore given—$500—the proportion of each would be $2,30; but he would pay $5 of that amount. It was not from a dislike of prayer that he thus objected, but from a conviction that they had no power to put their hands into the public treasury and take the money which was drawn from believer and unbeliever, Christian and Jew, Gentile and Mahometan, and pay for a religion in which so many who contributed to that common fund did not believe. He believed that they had no such power. He spoke prompted by a consciousness of doing right.

"He would detain the House but little longer, though he would take occasion to say that he had spoken on this subject to his constituents over and over again, and they knew that he came here prepared to pursue this course so long as they honored him with a seat

CHAPLAINS OF CONGRESS.

Can any good thing come out of Congress? Come and see.—Here we have a speech of Mr. Pettit, of Indiana, made in the House of Representatives, soon after the opening of the present Congress, on the election of Chaplain, which would do honor to a saint. This discourse of Mr. Pettit's contains more gospel principles doubtless than both the Chaplains will preach in all winter. We are not surprised that the assembled wisdom of the "Daughter of Babylon" rejected his counsels, and doubt not it was a strange sound in the ears of those sages when he told them there was but one true religion, and consequently if they employed two Chaplains of different faith, though one might be true, the other of necessity was false.

"Mr. Pettit rose to detain the House for a few moments only, simply to reiterate what he had heretofore said on the subject which this resolution presented to their consideration, and for the utterance of which he had been exposed to great reproach. He was impressed with the solemn conviction that this House had no power—that the two Houses of Congress together had no power—to appropriate the public money for religious purposes; and hence he was opposed to the passage of this resolution. To him the proposition was plain, that the National Legislature had no power at all to legislate on the subject of religion; and surely they could not appropriate money for purposes respecting which they had no power to legislate. No member on that floor would surely present the absurd proposition that they had power to legislate on the subject of religion in any form; for the framers of the Constitution had wisely prohibited their doing so by the provisions of that instrument, which was given to them for their government. When the States organized their government, in some of them there existed an established religion, in others there were various religions alike tolerated, while in some there was a great preponderance of one. The New England States were almost all Puritanical; Maryland was almost exclusively Catholic—the universal religion, the Catholic faith, having been adopted by them. Other States had many religions. In order, therefore, to avoid a collision of creeds and the interests of these various denominations, and to avoid trampling on the rights and privileges of any, in the Constitution a provision was inserted prohibiting Congress from making any law respecting an establishlished religion. If, then, Congress could not legislate on the subject of religion, it certainly followed—this at least was clear to his mind—that they could not appropriate money where they could not legislate.

"A few days since, in presence of the Speaker and of the House, he held up his hand, and, solemnly appealing to the Supreme Being, promised to support the Constitution of these United States, "so help me God;" and it was his sincere purpose to adhere to that solemn obligation. He was bound to support the Constitution as he understood it, and he could not recognize any power as possessed of the right to construe that instrument for him, or to control his actions under it.

"He did not wholly object to the adoption of the resolution; for he was prepared with an amendment to provide substantially for the accomplishment of the same purpose. He did not object to the election or appointment of Chaplains and the opening of the deliberations every morning by an appeal to the Throne of Grace; and he had no doubt, constituted as they were, that this body would need such appeals. Whether they should be able to derive much good from them he did not know. It would be well for them if they should get a devout man to pray for them: he hoped they should get one, for they were assured that the "fervent prayer of the righteous availeth much." The prayer of any other would not be heard; and hence, by the choice of any other, they should not be profited.

"But he had to the resolution a serious objection, and he now gave notice that he should offer an amendment and an addition to it. First, as an amendment, he should ask the House to strike out the words "different denominations," and for a very good and obvious reason, which must appeal to all men of common sense. Why was it, he asked, that the two Houses of Congress should be compelled to employ chaplains of different denominations under this resolution? If there were a religion at all, there must be a true, a universal, a catholic religion. But, as there were many sects, while there was orthodoxy, there was also heterodoxy. If, then, out of six hundred and forty different denominations into which the Christian world is divided, there be but one right and true religion—and he held that there could be but one right, and pure, and holy—this House might choose the right, and the Senate, under this resolution, must be content with the heterodox; or the House might be in this position if the Senate should first choose its chaplain, and elect from the true church. Under such circumstances the Senate would have pure and undefiled religion preached to them, but the House must submit to have broadcast amongst them that which was not true. He was aware that these chaplains were to exchange weekly, and thus one week they should listen to the proper authority, and their prayers might be acceptable at the Throne of Grace; but on the next week they would have one of a different denomination, whose prayers could not possibly be heard. Now—and he was not disposed to urge this subject further—how childish it was to prescribe such a limitation. If a majority of the Senate should prefer a Catholic, although a majority of this House might be Catholics, they would be prohibited in their selection to elect a chaplain of their own creed. The same observation would apply to all other denominations. And why, he would ask, if they were Methodists, should they not have a Methodist chaplain here? He repeated that the restriction in this resolution was childish and absurd; and he should first move to strike out the words "different denominations," so that all creeds and denominations should be at liberty to come and participate in the scramble for the prize.

"He should next ask the House to add to the resolution this provision: 'Provided, Such chaplains shall be paid by the members of the respective Houses, and the United States shall not be liable for their salaries nor any part thereof.' He should ask for the adoption of this proviso, because he doubted the propriety of appropriating money from the public treasury for such purposes, while the Constitution of the United States retained its existing provision prohibiting legislation on the subject of religion. He had no objection, as he had said already, to commence each day's deliberations with prayer, and for the services of a chaplain he would pay as much as any one. He was not aware that he needed as much again as any other member the benefits of prayer, but he was willing to pay as much again. In this respect he was disposed to be liberal. If they continued the remuneration heretofore given—$500—the proportion of each would be $2,30; but he would pay $5 of that amount. It was not from a dislike of prayer that he thus objected, but from a conviction that they had no power to put their hands into the public treasury and take the money which was drawn from believer and unbeliever, Christian and Jew, Gentile and Mahometan, and pay for a religion in which so many who contributed to that common fund did not believe. He believed that they had no such power. He spoke prompted by a consciousness of doing right.

"He would detain the House but little longer, though he would take occasion to say that he had spoken on this subject to his constituents over and over again, and they knew that he came here prepared to pursue this course so long as they honored him with a seat on this floor. He was aware that he had exposed himself to great aspersions, but this did not influence him. He could, if it were necessary, give some beautiful illustrations of the class of men that aspersed him—men, some of them, whose hair would not have grown but for Executive clemency. Yes, he had been denounced by men who had not been two weeks from within the walls of a penitentiary for the violation of the laws both of God and man—the shedder of a brother's blood. The denunciations of such men he heeded not, for he had acted from a consciousness of duty and of right; and he now in the same spirit asked the House to relieve him from the necessity of voting for a chaplain of a denomination different from the one the Senate should select, and relieve him from the unpleasant necessity of voting against this resolution. If a respectable chaplain could be obtained, he repeated his offer to pay double the amount that any other member should pay. He desired the services of a chaplain, but he was convinced if this House had power to appropriate money for such purposes here, it could be done for like purposes elsewhere. The power by which they could do so here, would enable them to provide chaplains for every precinct and township in the country, and to compel the people to pay into the treasury money ostensibly for the support of the army and the navy, from which to pay for such chaplains as Congress might appoint for them. If they had power to do it here, they had power to do it over the whole Union, and thus the Constitution would be subverted. He desired the members of this House to pay their own chaplains as they paid for everything else. These were not services to be rendered to the Union, but to them individually, and hence they should pay for such services themselves. He concluded by moving to strike out the words 'of different denominations,' and add, 'Provided, Such chaplains shall be paid by the members of the respective Houses, and the United States shall not be liable for their salaries or any part thereof.'"

INFANT BAPTISM.—The strong feature of the religion of this age is the disposition to reduce every thing to feeling, nothing to knowledge or certainty. Consequently few doctrinal works are published compared to the whole number of religious works. The great publishing societies generally reject every thing doctrinal, and pertinaciously avoid every thing that savors of reason and logic. There is a society however engaged in publishing doctrinal tracts, who have just issued one on the Baptism of Infants. We have not seen the tract itself, but we find the following extracts in a work of Dr. Beecher's:—

"INFANT BAPTISM.

"We commence the discussion of the subject, by stating this proposition, viz: Infant Baptism was sactioned by Christ, 1 and practiced by his apostles, 2 and universally adopted as a divine ordinance by the apostolic churches. 3. For the truth of this doctrine, we appeal to the history of the church.

"It has been said with great confidence by some, that Infant Baptism is an anti-scriptural practice, which was forced upon the church by the power of popes and councils, long after the apostles had finished their work of planting and setting in order the churches. But we ask for the proof. Where is the account of its commencement? By what rule in the church was it first recommended? By what council was it first decreed? By what church was it first adopted? We must insist upon a satisfactory answer to these questions. And until a definite and satisfactory answer is given, we shall assume the responsibility of affirming, that there is no evidence from the history of the church, that Infant Baptism originated in any age subsequent to that of the apostles. 4.

"During the first thousand years of the existence of the church, no ecclesiastical historian can be found who undertakes to give an account of the rise and progress of this practice. 5. We regard this as a fact of great importance.

"Is it to be imagined that such a practice could be introduced into the church, and no notice of its certain or probable origin, or the grounds upon which it was adopted, be found upon the page of history? 6.

"Of other rites and ceremonies, we can ascertain the beginning. 7. Man's additions, and alterations, and inventions, are carefully noted. But of Infant Baptism,—unless it be from heaven,—it may be said as the Jews said of Messiah,—'No man knoweth whence it is.'

"If the apostles, acting under the commission given them by the Savior, baptized adults only, is it credible that infants should have been admitted to this ordinance by their successors at a later day, without some historical monument to mark the time and place of the change? 6.

"Our inference from this fact,—and we think it a legitimate one,—is, that infant baptism, like the baptism of believing adults, and the Lord's Supper, and Sabbath, has come down to us from an age prior to that of the earliest uninspired historian. 8.

"But we do not rely mainly upon this negative evidence, although it is of great value. There is a positive and undeniable testimony to show, that infant baptism did not commence, and could not have commenced, at any time between the apostolic age and our own. 9. Those who believe that it is an addition to the original rites of the church, do not pretend that it was made later than the fourth century.

"But it is demonstrably certain, that during the whole of that century it was universal, and regarded by all who called themselves Christians, as a divine ordinance.

"But the custom of our mother church in baptizing infants, is by no means to be slighted, nor deemed useless, nor to be treated otherwise than as an ordinance received from the apostles.

"As the thief, though it was impossible for him to receive baptism, was saved, because by piety he received it spiritually, 10 so, where baptism is administered while the candidate is necessarily destitute of what the thief possessed, salvation is secured; which doctrine the whole church holds when little infants are baptized, who certainly cannot yet with the heart believe unto righteousness, nor with the mouth make confession unto salvation, as the thief could, and yet no Christian will say, that their baptism is vain.

"This custom of baptizing infants who were incapable of exercising faith, was not at that time a recent innovation upon a long-established usage, for, in answer to the question, what authority there is for this doctrine, Augustine, who was born 354 and died 430, replies, 'that which the whole church holds, which was not instituted by councils, but which was always maintained, is with the best reason believed to have been transmitted to us by apostolic authority. * * *

"In our judgement, Augustine, and the church in his day, were right in supposing that the custom of which he speaks originated in the apostolic age, and was given to the church by its divine Head. With us a custom which has existed 'time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary,' and of which the commencement cannot be found in our records, is very reasonably believed to have begun with our national existence, or to have been brought with our ancestors to this country. 11. We are writing upon the eve of our annual Thanksgiving, and are thus furnished with a striking illustration of the point under consideration. The custom of setting apart a day annually for the purpose of rendering public thanks to God for the mercies which have crowned the year, on this floor. He was aware that he had exposed himself to great aspersions, but this did not influence him. He could, if it were necessary, give some beautiful illustrations of the class of men that aspersed him—men, some of them, whose hair would not have grown but for Executive clemency. Yes, he had been denounced by men who had not been two weeks from within the walls of a penitentiary for the violation of the laws both of God and man—the shedder of a brother's blood. The denunciations of such men he heeded not, for he had acted from a consciousness of duty and of right; and he now in the same spirit asked the House to relieve him from the necessity of voting for a chaplain of a denomination different from the one the Senate should select, and relieve him from the unpleasant necessity of voting against this resolution. If a respectable chaplain could be obtained, he repeated his offer to pay double the amount that any other member should pay. He desired the services of a chaplain, but he was convinced if this House had power to appropriate money for such purposes here, it could be done for like purposes elsewhere. The power by which they could do so here, would enable them to provide chaplains for every precinct and township in the country, and to compel the people to pay into the treasury money ostensibly for the support of the army and the navy, from which to pay for such chaplains as Congress might appoint for them. If they had power to do it here, they had power to do it over the whole Union, and thus the Constitution would be subverted. He desired the members of this House to pay their own chaplains as they paid for everything else. These were not services to be rendered to the Union, but to them individually, and hence they should pay for such services themselves. He concluded by moving to strike out the words 'of different denominations,' and add, 'Provided, Such chaplains shall be paid by the members of the respective Houses, and the United States shall not be liable for their salaries or any part thereof.'"

INFANT BAPTISM.—The strong feature of the religion of this age is the disposition to reduce every thing to feeling, nothing to knowledge or certainty. Consequently few doctrinal works are published compared to the whole number of religious works. The great publishing societies generally reject every thing doctrinal, and pertinaciously avoid every thing that savors of reason and logic. There is a society however engaged in publishing doctrinal tracts, who have just issued one on the Baptism of Infants. We have not seen the tract itself, but we find the following extracts in a work of Dr. Beecher's:—

"INFANT BAPTISM.

"We commence the discussion of the subject, by stating this proposition, viz: Infant Baptism was sactioned by Christ, 1 and practiced by his apostles, 2 and universally adopted as a divine ordinance by the apostolic churches. 3. For the truth of this doctrine, we appeal to the history of the church.

"It has been said with great confidence by some, that Infant Baptism is an anti-scriptural practice, which was forced upon the church by the power of popes and councils, long after the apostles had finished their work of planting and setting in order the churches. But we ask for the proof. Where is the account of its commencement? By what rule in the church was it first recommended? By what council was it first decreed? By what church was it first adopted? We must insist upon a satisfactory answer to these questions. And until a definite and satisfactory answer is given, we shall assume the responsibility of affirming, that there is no evidence from the history of the church, that Infant Baptism originated in any age subsequent to that of the apostles. 4.

"During the first thousand years of the existence of the church, no ecclesiastical historian can be found who undertakes to give an account of the rise and progress of this practice. 5. We regard this as a fact of great importance.

"Is it to be imagined that such a practice could be introduced into the church, and no notice of its certain or probable origin, or the grounds upon which it was adopted, be found upon the page of history? 6.

"Of other rites and ceremonies, we can ascertain the beginning. 7. Man's additions, and alterations, and inventions, are carefully noted. But of Infant Baptism,—unless it be from heaven,—it may be said as the Jews said of Messiah,—'No man knoweth whence it is.'

"If the apostles, acting under the commission given them by the Savior, baptized adults only, is it credible that infants should have been admitted to this ordinance by their successors at a later day, without some historical monument to mark the time and place of the change? 6.

"Our inference from this fact,—and we think it a legitimate one,—is, that infant baptism, like the baptism of believing adults, and the Lord's Supper, and Sabbath, has come down to us from an age prior to that of the earliest uninspired historian. 8.

"But we do not rely mainly upon this negative evidence, although it is of great value. There is a positive and undeniable testimony to show, that infant baptism did not commence, and could not have commenced, at any time between the apostolic age and our own. 9. Those who believe that it is an addition to the original rites of the church, do not pretend that it was made later than the fourth century.

"But it is demonstrably certain, that during the whole of that century it was universal, and regarded by all who called themselves Christians, as a divine ordinance.

"But the custom of our mother church in baptizing infants, is by no means to be slighted, nor deemed useless, nor to be treated otherwise than as an ordinance received from the apostles.

"As the thief, though it was impossible for him to receive baptism, was saved, because by piety he received it spiritually, 10 so, where baptism is administered while the candidate is necessarily destitute of what the thief possessed, salvation is secured; which doctrine the whole church holds when little infants are baptized, who certainly cannot yet with the heart believe unto righteousness, nor with the mouth make confession unto salvation, as the thief could, and yet no Christian will say, that their baptism is vain.

"This custom of baptizing infants who were incapable of exercising faith, was not at that time a recent innovation upon a long-established usage, for, in answer to the question, what authority there is for this doctrine, Augustine, who was born 354 and died 430, replies, 'that which the whole church holds, which was not instituted by councils, but which was always maintained, is with the best reason believed to have been transmitted to us by apostolic authority. * * *

"In our judgement, Augustine, and the church in his day, were right in supposing that the custom of which he speaks originated in the apostolic age, and was given to the church by its divine Head. With us a custom which has existed 'time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary,' and of which the commencement cannot be found in our records, is very reasonably believed to have begun with our national existence, or to have been brought with our ancestors to this country. 11. We are writing upon the eve of our annual Thanksgiving, and are thus furnished with a striking illustration of the point under consideration. The custom of setting apart a day annually for the purpose of rendering public thanks to God for the mercies which have crowned the year, is universally observed in New England. It was not instituted in our day by governors and councils, but has always been observed, and is believed by everybody to have originated with the first settlers of this country. Our old men affirm that it was observed in their youth, and that they never heard it spoken of except as handed down from the Puritans. Is there any doubt upon this subject among us? We should think a man very unfortunate, or very perverse, who should undertake to prove that this practice has crept in unawares, and that it is inconsistent with the religion and spirit of our fathers. Now, the Christians of the fourth century were almost as near to the apostolic age as we are to that of the Puritans, and could as certainly determine whether infant baptism was transmitted to them from the inspired founders of the church, as we can determine whether we have received the custom alluded to from our ancestors. Will any one maintain that the universal church were mistaken in supposing that they had always practiced infant baptism, or that a custom, falsely claiming its parentage and birth in the first century, could by any means, within three hundred years of its alledged origin come to be regarded by all Christians, of every sect and every shade of belief throughout the world, not merely as expedient,—not merely as a thing that might be innocently done, but as absolutely essential?"

NOTE 1. "Sanctioned by Christ." This is mere assertion, and as an assertion it is not true. Four writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, have written a history of Christ's ministry, and not one of them records one word or act by which he sanctions it. Nor does one of them intimate that such a thing was thought of in his time. If the writers of his own time do not mention it, others need not. It is quite true that Christ administered some sacrament to children, and said, "of such (as children) is the kingdom of heaven." But that sacrament is not baptism. It is laying on the hands and blessing. Matt. xix. 13, 14, 15. Mark x. 13, 14, 15, 16.—Others have supposed that baptism was instituted instead of circumcision, and as children were the subjects of circumcision they infer that they are also the subjects of baptism. But it is an error to suppose that baptism is instead of circumcision, for circumcision is the seal of the covenant by which the seed of Abraham holds the title to the land of Canaan, and as such it is still in force. Gen. xvii. 2 to 14. Moreover, circumcision is an ordinance of male children only, and if baptism came in place of it females would not be subjects of baptism. I know not that it is pretended on any other grounds that Christ sanctioned infant baptism, and these two grounds are clearly fallacious. The pretension itself falls to the ground.

2. "Practiced by his apostles." Mere assertion again without one word of proof, and equally without one word of truth. The entire scriptures contain not one word whereby such an assertion can be justified or excused. And the uncanonized writings of the apostolic age are equally barren on the subject. No one single instance can be found of the baptism of an infant. A few cases are found of the baptism of a household, but in none of those cases are we told that these households contained infants; and aside from the fact that infants are found in less than half the households, the business in which these were employed raises a presumption against it in their cases. The keeper of a Roman prison or a merchantwoman in a strange city is quite unlikely to have any infant children in the house. Withal, the saying that the jailer and his household were baptized would not imply that infants were baptized, even if were found in his household, until it was affirmatively shown such were subjects of baptism. A Baptist preacher, who baptizes none but believers, would as truly speak of baptizing such an one and his family (or household) when he has baptized all that have come to years of discretion, as does the Episcopalian who baptizes infants with the rest.

3. "Adopted as a divine ordinance by the apostolic church." How singular that there should be a divine ordinance in the apostolic church, not once mentioned in the scriptures or the history of the times. If any author, sacred or profane, belonging to that age has mentioned such an event, let them name book and paragraph.

4. Until you can determine the exact age when accountability begins and infancy ceases, all these questions are impertinent. The apostolic church knew that without baptism there was no salvation. As the church rapidly departed from the faith, this principle was long retained amid the gathering darkness. The first christian parents doubtless taught their children the doctrine of the gospel and brought them forward to receive baptism as soon as they came to years of understanding. Those who followed after, in their accumulating ignorance knowing that there was no salvation without baptism, but not knowing that faith and repentance were equally essential, brought forward those of earlier age to be baptized, in order to secure their salvation. Of the gradual introduction of this practice we shall have more to say below. The evidence that it originated in an age subsequent to that of the apostles is perfectly clear, and is this,—The practice of infant baptism is not found in the apostolic church, and is found in the Catholic and sectarian churches of latter ages. Consequently it must have originated in a subsequent age. It is not presumed that it was introduced suddenly at any time by the act or decree of a pope or council. And if in the age of the apostles, persons were baptized at ten years of age, and fifty years after at the age of eight, and so continuing till after some hundred years, infants of a few hours were made subjects of baptism, what particular fact would mark its commencement so as to be noted by the historian? None.

5. It is not to be expected that historians of the Roman church would give a particular and minute account of the growing up of Roman heresies, or that if they wrote any such accounts they would have been suffered to publish them. Against this fact we wish to offset another of equal importance, to wit: that not a writer of the apostolic age mentions the existence of the practice. If the practice of baptizing infants could not grow up in the dark ages without being mentioned by historians, how could it in the days of the apostles?

6. 6. It is both credible and probable that such a practice should grow up in a corrupt age and no writer mark the fact by any historical monument, and equally probable that, having once grown into use, men should be found to defend it. It is supposing too much to say, "if the apostles baptized only adults," for their commission was to baptize believers, and there can be no reasonable doubt that there were many believers who were not adults; and it is perfectly credible that when believers of a tender age were brought forward for baptism other parents of more zeal than knowledge should bring forward still younger children; and as the change from infantile weakness to accountability is a gradual one, without definite and known land marks, it is not at all singular that it should be finally totally disregarded; and that from baptizing very young believing children, those whose power of exercising faith was doubtful, should be gradually and slowly made subjects of the ordinance, until finally the question whether the subject was capable of exercising faith was totally lost sight of, and the administrator satisfied himself with the assurance that the subject should be educated in the faith. We would like to know whether the members of the "DOCTRINAL TRACT SOCIETY" are willing to test all the articles of religious faith by the rule they have adopted in this case. Do they not know that the same evidences will equally prove the spiritual supremacy of the popes, the seven sacraments of the Roman church, and all the principal articles of her creed. History notes with tolerable accuracy the time when the bishops of Rome began to exercise temporal power, but no writer has marked the time when they began to claim and exercise spiritual superiority over all other bishops.—A power which could not insensibly grow up as the practice of baptizing infants. Yet in an early age of the church we find it almost is universally observed in New England. It was not instituted in our day by governors and councils, but has always been observed, and is believed by everybody to have originated with the first settlers of this country. Our old men affirm that it was observed in their youth, and that they never heard it spoken of except as handed down from the Puritans. Is there any doubt upon this subject among us? We should think a man very unfortunate, or very perverse, who should undertake to prove that this practice has crept in unawares, and that it is inconsistent with the religion and spirit of our fathers. Now, the Christians of the fourth century were almost as near to the apostolic age as we are to that of the Puritans, and could as certainly determine whether infant baptism was transmitted to them from the inspired founders of the church, as we can determine whether we have received the custom alluded to from our ancestors. Will any one maintain that the universal church were mistaken in supposing that they had always practiced infant baptism, or that a custom, falsely claiming its parentage and birth in the first century, could by any means, within three hundred years of its alledged origin come to be regarded by all Christians, of every sect and every shade of belief throughout the world, not merely as expedient,—not merely as a thing that might be innocently done, but as absolutely essential?"

NOTE 1. "Sanctioned by Christ." This is mere assertion, and as an assertion it is not true. Four writers, Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, have written a history of Christ's ministry, and not one of them records one word or act by which he sanctions it. Nor does one of them intimate that such a thing was thought of in his time. If the writers of his own time do not mention it, others need not. It is quite true that Christ administered some sacrament to children, and said, "of such (as children) is the kingdom of heaven." But that sacrament is not baptism. It is laying on the hands and blessing. Matt. xix. 13, 14, 15. Mark x. 13, 14, 15, 16.—Others have supposed that baptism was instituted instead of circumcision, and as children were the subjects of circumcision they infer that they are also the subjects of baptism. But it is an error to suppose that baptism is instead of circumcision, for circumcision is the seal of the covenant by which the seed of Abraham holds the title to the land of Canaan, and as such it is still in force. Gen. xvii. 2 to 14. Moreover, circumcision is an ordinance of male children only, and if baptism came in place of it females would not be subjects of baptism. I know not that it is pretended on any other grounds that Christ sanctioned infant baptism, and these two grounds are clearly fallacious. The pretension itself falls to the ground.

2. "Practiced by his apostles." Mere assertion again without one word of proof, and equally without one word of truth. The entire scriptures contain not one word whereby such an assertion can be justified or excused. And the uncanonized writings of the apostolic age are equally barren on the subject. No one single instance can be found of the baptism of an infant. A few cases are found of the baptism of a household, but in none of those cases are we told that these households contained infants; and aside from the fact that infants are found in less than half the households, the business in which these were employed raises a presumption against it in their cases. The keeper of a Roman prison or a merchant woman in a strange city is quite unlikely to have any infant children in the house. Withal, the saying that the jailer and his household were baptized would not imply that infants were baptized, even if such were found in his household, until it was affirmatively shown that they were subjects of baptism. A Baptist preacher, who baptizes none but believers, would as truly speak of baptizing such an one and his family (or household) when he has baptized all that have come to years of discretion, as does the Episcopalian who baptizes infants with the rest.

3. "Adopted as a divine ordinance by the apostolic church." How singular that there should be a divine ordinance in the apostolic church, not once mentioned in the scriptures or the history of the times. If any author, sacred or profane, belonging to that age has mentioned such an event, let them name book and paragraph.

4. Until you can determine the exact age when accountability begins and infancy ceases, all these questions are impertinent. The apostolic church knew that without baptism there was no salvation. As the church rapidly departed from the faith, this principle was long retained amid the gathering darkness. The first christian parents doubtless taught their children the doctrine of the gospel and brought them forward to receive baptism as soon as they came to years of understanding. Those who followed after, in their accumulating ignorance knowing that there was no salvation without baptism, but not knowing that faith and repentance were equally essential, brought forward those of earlier age to be baptized, in order to secure their salvation. Of the gradual introduction of this practice we shall have more to say below. The evidence that it originated in an age subsequent to that of the apostles is perfectly clear, and is this,—The practice of infant baptism is not found in the apostolic church, and is found in the Catholic and sectarian churches of latter ages. Consequently it must have originated in a subsequent age. It is not presumed that it was introduced suddenly at any time by the act or decree of a pope or council. And if in the age of the apostles, persons were baptized at ten years of age, and fifty years after at the age of eight, and so continuing till after some hundred years, infants of a few hours were made subjects of baptism, what particular fact would mark its commencement so as to be noted by the historian? None.

5. It is not to be expected that historians of the Roman church would give a particular and minute account of the growing up of Roman heresies, or that if they wrote any such accounts they would have been suffered to publish them. Against this fact we wish to offset another of equal importance, to wit: that not a writer of the apostolic age mentions the existence of the practice. If the practice of baptizing infants could not grow up in the dark ages without being mentioned by historians, how could it in the days of the apostles?

6. It is both credible and probable that such a practice should grow up in a corrupt age and no writer mark the fact by any historical monument, and equally probable that, having once grown into use, men should be found to defend it. It is supposing too much to say, "if the apostles baptized only adults," for their commission was to baptize believers, and there can be no reasonable doubt that there were many believers who were not adults; and it is perfectly credible that when believers of a tender age were brought forward for baptism other parents of more zeal than knowledge should bring forward still younger children; and as the change from infantile weakness to accountability is a gradual one, without definite and known land marks, it is not at all singular that it should be finally totally disregarded; and that from baptizing very young believing children, those whose power of exercising faith was doubtful, should be gradually and slowly made subjects of the ordinance, until finally the question whether the subject was capable of exercising faith was totally lost sight of, and the administrator satisfied himself with the assurance that the subject should be educated in the faith. We would like to know whether the members of the "DOCTRINAL TRACT SOCIETY" are willing to test all the articles of religious faith by the rule they have adopted in this case. Do they not know that the same evidences will equally prove the spiritual supremacy of the popes, the seven sacraments of the Roman church, and all the principal articles of her creed. History notes with tolerable accuracy the time when the bishops of Rome began to exercise temporal power, but no writer has marked the time when they began to claim and exercise spiritual superiority over all other bishops.—A power which could not insensibly grow up as the practice of baptizing infants. Yet in an early age of the church we find it almost universally acknowledged, and not one historic monument by which to tell when it commenced or how it originated. No record of its origin. And to make the case still stronger, the very few churches that did not thus acknowledge the superiority of the bishop of Rome all treated it as an ancient power long exercised, and not one of them rejected it as a new assumption. History has recorded that several bishops of different cities during the first six centuries attempted to set up their chairs equal to that of Rome, but not of any bishop or church questioning that the See of Rome had in times past been superior. Protestants acknowledge but two sacraments, baptism and the eucharist. Catholics seven. Will any of the members of the "doctrinal tract society" tell upon what grounds these five other sacraments were introduced? when they were introduced? and by the power of what pope or council? Will they tell us, too, when christians first began to pray for the dead? to do certain works to deliver souls from purgatory? to worship images, pictures and relics? &c. No, you cannot tell the origin of one of these; and, consequently, by your own reasoning, you are driven to the conclusion that all these doctrines and practices are of divine origin.

By this rule of evidence there is scarcely one point on which the Protestant can stand before the Catholic. Try the supremacy of the bishops of Rome by this rule, and where is Protestantism. The same St. Augustine, quoted a little below in this tract, speaking of the superiority of the bishops of Rome, says, addressing the schismatic Donatists:—

"Come brethren, if you have a mind to be ingrafted in the vine, it is a pity to see you lopped off in this manner from the stock.—Reckon up the prelates in the very see of Peter; and in that order of fathers see which has succeeded which. This is the rock over which the proud gates of hell prevail not. And in his 162d Epistle he tells the Donatists, that in the see of Rome the principality (or supremacy) of the apostolic Church was ever acknowledged.—Semper Apostolicæ Cathedræ viguit Principatus.

"St. Ignatius, disciple of the Apostles, in the beginning of his epistle to the Romans, where he calls the Church of Rome the presiding Church; St. Irenæus, l. 3, c. 3, who calls the same the greatest and most ancient Church, founded by the two most glorious Apostles, Peter and Paul; and adds, that all sectaries are confounded by the Roman tradition; for to this Church, by reason of its more powerful principality, says he, it is necessary that every Church resort, or have recourse; in which (Church) the apostolical tradition has always been preserved by those that are in every place; and St. Cyprian, in his 55th epistle to pope Cornelius, where he calls the see of Rome, the chair of Peter, and the principal Church from which the priestly unity has its origin. Ecclesiam Principalem, unde Unitas Sacerdotalies exorta est.

"See also St. Optatus, Bishop of Milevis, in his 2d Book against Parmenianus, the Donatist Bishop of Carthage: where he thus addresses himself to his adversary. You cannot pretend to be ignorant that Peter held first the bishop's chair in the city of Rome, in which Peter, head of all the Apostles sat; in which one chair unity might be maintained by all, lest the rest of the apostles should each one claim his own separate chair. So that he is now a schismatic, and an offender, who against this single chair erects any other.—In this one chair, which is the first of the properties of the Church, Peter first sat; to him succeeded Linus, to him Clement, &c.—Give you now an account of the origin of your chair, you who claim to yourselves the holy Church.

"And St. Jerome, writing to pope Damasus, Epist. 57, tells him, I am joined in communion with your holiness, that is, with the chair of Peter: upon that rock I know the Church is built: whosoever eats the lamb out of this house is profane: whosoever is not in (this) Ark shall perish in the deluge, &c.

"And St. Prosper, in his dogmatic Poem against the enemies of grace, calls Rome the see of Peter, which being made to the world the head of pastoral dignity, rules by religion all that which she possesses not by her arms. And to the same effect St. Leo the Great, in his first Sermon upon St. Peter and St. Paul, thus addresses himself to Rome: these are they who have advanced thee to this glory, that being made the head of the world, by being St. Peter's see, thou hast a wider extent of religious empire than of earthly dominion.

"Hence St. Peter's supremacy is acknowledged by the perpetual tradition of the holy fathers. See Origen, on the 6th chapter to the Romans, and in his 5th Homily upon Exodus; St. Basil, of the Judgment of God, t. 2, p. 402; St. Cyril, of Jerusalem, in his 2d Catechesis; St. Epiphanius, Hær. 51, § 17, & Hær. 54, § 7, and in his Anchoratus, § 6, p. 14, 15: St. John Chrysostom in his 2d Homily on the 50th Psalm, in his 54th Homily upon St. Matthew, &c. St. Cyril, of Alexandria, in his 12th Book upon St. John: St. Austerius, Bishop of Amasæa, in his sermon upon St. Peter and St. Paul; and among the Latins, St. Cyprian, Epist. 70, to Januarius: St. Optatus of Milevis, l. 2, and 7: St, Ambrose, l. 10, upon St. Luke: St. Hierome, in his 1st book against Jovinian: St. Augustine. l. 2 de Baptismo, c. 1; St. Leo, Epist. 84, to Anastasius: St. Gregory the Great, l. 4, Epist. 32, &c.

"All these fathers hitherto quoted, flourished within four hundred years after the passion of Christ."

Will the members of the "doctrinal tract society" pretend that "so important a power as the supremacy or superiority of one bishop over all others, could be introduced into the church and no notice of its certain or probable origin, or the grounds upon which it was submitted to, be found on the page of history?"

7. How will you answer the Catholics when they say in your own words, "man's additions and alterations and inventions are carefully noted. But of Papacy, unless it be from heaven, 'No man knoweth whence it is;'" and they may go on and say, "if the superiority of one bishop over all others was not acknowledged by the first christian pastors, it is incredible that it should have been acknowledged by their successors in latter ages."

8. And if you will stand to that inference, you have nothing to do but turn over yourselves to the Catholic church, because all or nearly all the leading tenets of the Catholic church are by the same means proved to have come down to us from an age prior to that of the earliest uninspired historians. Either you must allow the whole force of this argument in favor of others, or you cannot claim it for your own favorite bantling. You derived your infant baptism from the Catholics, and not from scripture; and if their traditions from the days of the early fathers is proof enough to sustain that institution, it is equally good for the dogmas you have protested against.

9. No; you have not given, and cannot give any such proof.—You have only the assertion of Augustine in the fourth century, and this same Augustine still more explicitly asserts the superiority of the bishops of Rome over all other pastors and bishops, as we have quoted above. And he does not merely assert their actual superiority, but that such superiority had ALWAYS BEEN ACKNOWLEDGED and NEVER QUESTIONED. And what is of more consequence, you can find no writer earlier than Augustine asserting that infant baptism was a custom of mother church. But the superiority of the bishops of Rome is asserted by a perpetual succession of christian fathers, going back to the cotemporaries of the apostles and including Clement, whose name Paul says is written in the Book of Life. As honest men, acknowledge papacy or renounce infant baptism.

10. This paragraph seems to be quoted from Augustine. A little below it seems that in his age the authority of this doctrine was questioned, and the only warrant he could give for it was the practice of the church, and these Tractarians say distinctly that that is a sufficient warrant in the face of the fact that the same writer and others of his and of earlier ages gave the same as their warrant for almost every article of Catholic faith and ceremony which Protestants reject. Every appeal to the christian fathers is fatal to Protestantism. They venture upon it only for want of any other possible resort, and know full well that it would utterly kill Protestantism to put these same writings in the hands of the public generally.

But it is not true, as asserted here, that the thief who was crucified with Christ was saved without baptism. This is a false interpretation of scripture. The promise which Christ made him was not salvation. He said, "This day shalt thou be with me in PARADISE." Luke xxiii. 43. But Christ was not in heaven nor in the place of the saved on that day, for Peter tells us expressly that he went to preach the gospel to the disobedient, 1 Pet. iii. 18, 19, 20, and three days after (two days by English reckoning) Christ says, "I have not yet ascended to my Father." John xx. 17. So it appears that this thief was not saved, but only taken to a place where the gospel was preached to him. And Augustine, in the fourth century, had only a bad argument and a disputed custom in favor of infant baptism.

11. This allusion to thanksgiving is not true in point of fact. We do not infer that the practice of an annual thanksgiving originated with the existence of the country, because its origin is not recorded. But we believe it has come down to us from the Puritans, because HISTORY RECORDS it as one of their customs. If this custom was not mentioned in history during the first two hundred years after the planting of the English colonies, no man would believe it originated with their origin.

universally acknowledged, and not one historic monument by which to tell when it commenced or how it originated. No record of its origin. And to make the case still stronger, the very few churches that did not thus acknowledge the superiority of the bishop of Rome all treated it as an ancient power long exercised, and not one of them rejected it as a new assumption. History has recorded that several bishops of different cities during the first six centuries attempted to set up their chairs equal to that of Rome, but not of any bishop or church questioning that the See of Rome had in times past been superior. Protestants acknowledge but two sacraments, baptism and the eucharist. Catholics seven. Will any of the members of the "doctrinal tract society" tell upon what grounds these five other sacraments were introduced? when they were introduced? and by the power of what pope or council? Will they tell us, too, when christians first began to pray for the dead? to do certain works to deliver souls from purgatory? to worship images, pictures and relics? &c. No, you cannot tell the origin of one of these; and, consequently, by your own reasoning, you are driven to the conclusion that all these doctrines and practices are of divine origin.

By this rule of evidence there is scarcely one point on which the Protestant can stand before the Catholic. Try the supremacy of the bishops of Rome by this rule, and where is Protestantism. The same St. Augustine, quoted a little below in this tract, speaking of the superiority of the bishops of Rome, says, addressing the schismatic Donatists:—

"Come brethren, if you have a mind to be ingrafted in the vine, it is a pity to see you lopped off in this manner from the stock.—Reckon up the prelates in the very see of Peter; and in that order of fathers see which has succeeded which. This is the rock over which the proud gates of hell prevail not. And in his 162d Epistle he tells the Donatists, that in the see of Rome the principality (or supremacy) of the apostolic Church was ever acknowledged.—Semper Apostolicæ Cathedræ viguit Principatus.

"St. Ignatius, disciple of the Apostles, in the beginning of his epistle to the Romans, where he calls the Church of Rome the presiding Church; St. Irenæus, l. 3, c. 3, who calls the same the greatest and most ancient Church, founded by the two most glorious Apostles, Peter and Paul; and adds, that all sectaries are confounded by the Roman tradition; for to this Church, by reason of its more powerful principality, says he, it is necessary that every Church resort, or have recourse; in which (Church) the apostolical tradition has always been preserved by those that are in every place; and St. Cyprian, in his 55th epistle to pope Cornelius, where he calls the see of Rome, the chair of Peter, and the principal Church from which the priestly unity has its origin. Ecclesiam Principalem, unde Unitas Sacerdotalis exorta est.

"See also St. Optatus, Bishop of Milevis, in his 2d Book against Parmenianus, the Donatist Bishop of Carthage: where he thus addresses himself to his adversary. You cannot pretend to be ignorant that Peter held first the bishop's chair in the city of Rome, in which Peter, head of all the Apostles sat; in which one chair unity might be maintained by all, lest the rest of the apostles should each one claim his own separate chair. So that he is now a schismatic, and an offender, who against this single chair erects any other.—In this one chair, which is the first of the properties of the Church, Peter first sat; to him succeeded Linus, to him Clement, &c.—Give you now an account of the origin of your chair, you who claim to yourselves the holy Church.

"And St. Jerome, writing to pope Damasus, Epist. 57, tells him, I am joined in communion with your holiness, that is, with the chair of Peter: upon that rock I know the Church is built: whosoever eats the lamb out of this house is profane: whosoever is not in (this) Ark shall perish in the deluge, &c.

"And St. Prosper, in his dogmatic Poem against the enemies of grace, calls Rome the see of Peter, which being made to the world the head of pastoral dignity, rules by religion all that which she possesses not by her arms. And to the same effect St. Leo the Great, in his first Sermon upon St. Peter and St. Paul, thus addresses himself to Rome: these are they who have advanced thee to this glory, that being made the head of the world, by being St. Peter's see, thou hast a wider extent of religious empire than of earthly dominion.

"Hence St. Peter's supremacy is acknowledged by the perpetual tradition of the holy fathers. See Origen, on the 6th chapter to the Romans, and in his 5th Homily upon Exodus; St. Basil, of the Judgment of God, t. 2, p. 402; St. Cyril, of Jerusalem, in his 2d Catechesis: St. Epiphanius, Hær. 51, § 17, & Hær. 54, § 7, and in his Anchoratus, § 6, p. 14, 15: St. John Chrysostom in his 2d Homily on the 50th Psalm, in his 54th Homily upon St. Matthew, &c. St. Cyril, of Alexandria, in his 12th Book upon St. John: St. Austerius, Bishop of Amasæa, in his sermon upon St. Peter and St. Paul; and among the Latins, St. Cyprian, Epist. 70, to Januarius: St. Optatus of Milevis, l. 2, and 7: St. Ambrose, l. 10, upon St. Luke: St. Hierome, in his 1st book against Jovinian: St. Augustine, l. 2 de Baptismo, c. 1; St. Leo, Epist. 84, to Anastasius: St. Gregory the Great, l. 4, Epist. 32, &c.

"All these fathers hitherto quoted, flourished within four hundred years after the passion of Christ."

Will the members of the "doctrinal tract society" pretend that "so important a power as the supremacy or superiority of one bishop over all others, could be introduced into the church and no notice of its certain or probable origin, or the grounds upon which it was submitted to, be found on the page of history?"

7. How will you answer the Catholics when they say in your own words, "man's additions and alterations and inventions are carefully noted. But of Papacy, unless it be from heaven, 'No man knoweth whence it is;'" and they may go on and say, "if the superiority of one bishop over all others was not acknowledged by the first christian pastors, it is incredible that it should have been acknowledged by their successors in latter ages."

8. And if you will stand to that inference, you have nothing to do but turn over yourselves to the Catholic church, because all or nearly all the leading tenets of the Catholic church are by the same means proved to have come down to us from an age prior to that of the earliest uninspired historians. Either you must allow the whole force of this argument in favor of others, or you cannot claim it for your own favorite bantling. You derived your infant baptism from the Catholics, and not from scripture; and if their traditions from the days of the early fathers is proof enough to sustain that institution, it is equally good for the dogmas you have protested against.

9. No; you have not given, and cannot give any such proof.—You have only the assertion of Augustine in the fourth century, and this same Augustine still more explicitly asserts the superiority of the bishops of Rome over all other pastors and bishops, as we have quoted above. And he does not merely assert their actual superiority, but that such superiority had ALWAYS BEEN ACKNOWLEDGED and NEVER QUESTIONED. And what is of more consequence, you can find no writer earlier than Augustine asserting that infant baptism was a custom of mother church. But the superiority of the bishops of Rome is asserted by a perpetual succession of christian fathers, going back to the cotemporaries of the apostles and including Clement, whose name Paul says is written in the Book of Life. As honest men, acknowledge papacy or renounce infant baptism.

10. This paragraph seems to be quoted from Augustine. A little below it seems that in his age the authority of this doctrine was questioned, and the only warrant he could give for it was the practice of the church, and these Tractarians say distinctly that that is a sufficient warrant in the face of the fact that the same writer and others of his and of earlier ages gave the same as their warrant for almost every article of Catholic faith and ceremony which Protestants reject. Every appeal to the christian fathers is fatal to Protestantism. They venture upon it only for want of any other possible resort, and know full well that it would utterly kill Protestantism to put these same writings in the hands of the public generally.

But it is not true, as asserted here, that the thief who was crucified with Christ was saved without baptism. This is a false interpretation of scripture. The promise which Christ made him was not salvation. He said, "This day shalt thou be with me in PARADISE." Luke xxiii. 43. But Christ was not in heaven nor in the place of the saved on that day, for Peter tells us expressly that he went to preach the gospel to the disobedient, 1 Pet. iii. 18, 19, 20, and three days after (two days by English reckoning) Christ says, "I have not yet ascended to my Father." John xx. 17. So it appears that this thief was not saved, but only taken to a place where the gospel was preached to him. And Augustine, in the fourth century, had only a bad argument and a disputed custom in favor of infant baptism.

11. This allusion to thanksgiving is not true in point of fact. We do not infer that the practice of an annual thanksgiving originated with the existence of the country, because its origin is not recorded. But we believe it has come down to us from the Puritans, because HISTORY RECORDS it as one of their customs. If this custom was not mentioned in history during the first two hundred years after the planting of the English colonies, no man would believe it originated with their origin.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Philadelphia, Dec. 28th, 1847.

PRESIDENT STRANG:—

MY EVER DEAR BROTHER,—It is with feelings of pleasure and delight I write to you at this time. The night is passing away and the day is dawning in these regions at last. I am to commence baptizing this week on Saturday. A number have given in their names already—not old "hunkers," but new ones—warm hearted ones. The fields here are all white, and will soon be ready to harvest, and may God help me to thrust in my sickle and reap. A reaction is already beginning to take place in the east. Rigdonism has gone by the board, and Brighamism is crumbling into ruins and falling down piece-meal. Thousands are hungering and thirsting after the word of life. I am preaching here every Sunday to overflowing houses. And saints and sinners said I preached last Sunday with more power, spirit, eloquence and energy than I ever did before, even in my most palmy days, particularly in the evening, when I was bearing testimony to the truth and divinity of your mission, priesthood and calling as the successor of Joseph. I suppose, from what every one that was present says, that for a few minutes toward the close of my testimony no power in language can describe the feelings of the entire audience, it was so intense. To God be all glory. I had over 300 young men between eighteen and twenty-five years of age to hear me, and what is still better they believed me. When I bore testimony of your labor, toil and hardships for the cause of truth, there was hardly a dry eye in the house.

In New York, the next Sunday after I wrote to you, the excitement became so great that hundreds on hundreds went away who could not get in the house. They hung on my very garments when I left the city—I mean the public, the inquiring truth-searching public. God was with me, even in New York, and I left a testimony they will not soon forget. In this city the brethren received me with great kindness and invited me to their houses, and are ready to share with me their comforts and their homes. They hold up my hands in every way by their faith and prayers. I put up with our old and firm friend and brother Peter Hess. He sends his love. He is coming with me to the Conference in the spring.—Brothers Seyfert, Lehman, Wilson, Bates, and many others, send their kindest love to you, and I hope they will soon arrange to send something else. I look forward to the next spring Conference with much interest and expectation, and suggest, if I am worthy to suggest anything good, that you call as many elders from all parts of the country to that Conference as possible, for many reasons that I will write in my next letter. I long to be with you in your councils. I have a thousand things that come rushing on my mind connected with the building up of the church and kingdom of God, that I wish to express to you or our dear brother J. E. Page. Every obstacle against you is now removed, since —— —— —— —— —— —— and some others have been cut off; their names were a perfect blight and mildew to all your efforts. If they could pick, speculate and plunder you and the church, they would stay with the church. Time, as I said before, will prove all men, even your brother George.

In my last two letters I explained many things in regard to my temporal matters. Sickness, and death of friends; having to borrow money for funeral expenses; the manner by which I expected to raise the money. God has blessed my efforts. And the course I took has brought thousands to hear the truth. No doubt some will find fault for the course I have taken—let them—tell them to hand in their charges. I am every way prepared, and I will answer them all at the spring Conference. And if I do not prove myself temperate, virtuous and righteous, the office and calling I hold from the church let them take from me and give to another. Perhaps some of the pious people might prevail on Wm. E. McLellin to come back into the church, if they would promise him the office I hold, or it may be they could prevail on John Hardy, the pious John.

I think the way you used up Wm. E. McLellin was a caution to sinners. May you prevail over all your enemies. My wife's health is better than it was. My sister and little boy are well, and they all join with me in love to you, yours and all the saints. The Russia mission, and England, and Palestine, press heavy upon my mind. I long to be cut loose from every opposing obstacle, and burst forth in all the strength and majesty of the delegated power of Israel's God, and proclaim the fullness of heaven born truth to a suffering world. Pray for me that God may strengthen me, that in the strength of Jesus Christ I may yet make the nations tremble by the power of eternal truth. I have been expecting to get a few lines from you. It may be that there is a letter from you for me in New York. If you have time to write, direct to Philadelphia. I shall, with God's blessing, visit Baltimore and Washington city this winter. May God give you wisdom, strength, and power to prevail.

As ever, I remain your firm friend, brother, and fellow laborer in this last Dispensation,

JAMES J. STRANG. G. J. ADAMS.

SPEAK NOT HARSHLY.

BY MISS JULIA A. FLETCHER.

Speak not harshly—much of care
Every human heart must bear;
Enough of shadows sadly play
Around the very sunniest way—
Enough of sorrows vainly lie,
Veiled within the merriest eye.
By thy childhood's gushing tears—
By thy grief's of after years—
By the anguish thou doest know,
Add not to another's woe.

Speak not harshly—much of sin
Dwelleth every heart within:
In its closely covered cells
Many a wayward passion dwells.
By the many hours misspent—
By the gifts to error lent—
By the wrong thou didst not shun—
By the good thou hast not done,—
With a lenient spirit scan
The weakness of thy brother man.

PLOUGH MANUFACTORY AND BLACKSMITHING.

The subscribers have entered into copartnership for the purpose of carrying on the business of making ploughs and doing common blacksmithing. We shall keep constantly on hand a good supply of the best steel plate ploughs of various descriptions, which we will sell as cheap as can be had anywhere the world over. And as we intend to make this a permanent and extensive business, pains will be taken that all our work be of such quality as to recommend itself in all markets. We are also prepared to iron carriages in the best style and with expedition. All kinds of work in our line done on short notice. Horses shod all round at $1,00 per head, cash.

Voree, Jan. 7th, 1848. JAMES K. KENT,
MILO WESTON.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

Philadelphia, Dec. 28th, 1847.

PRESIDENT STRANG:—

MY EVER DEAR BROTHER,—It is with feelings of pleasure and delight I write to you at this time. The night is passing away and the day is dawning in these regions at last. I am to commence baptizing this week on Saturday. A number have given in their names already—not old "hunkers," but new ones—warm hearted ones. The fields here are all white, and will soon be ready to harvest, and may God help me to thrust in my sickle and reap. A reaction is already beginning to take place in the east. Rigdonism has gone by the board, and Brighamism is crumbling into ruins and falling down piece-meal. Thousands are hungering and thirsting after the word of life. I am preaching here every Sunday to overflowing houses. And saints and sinners said I preached last Sunday with more power, spirit, eloquence and energy than I ever did before, even in my most palmy days, particularly in the evening, when I was bearing testimony to the truth and divinity of your mission, priesthood and calling as the successor of Joseph. I suppose, from what every one that was present says, that for a few minutes toward the close of my testimony no power in language can describe the feelings of the entire audience, it was so intense. To God be all glory. I had over 300 young men between eighteen and twenty-five years of age to hear me, and what is still better they believed me. When I bore testimony of your labor, toil and hardships for the cause of truth, there was hardly a dry eye in the house.

In New York, the next Sunday after I wrote to you, the excitement became so great that hundreds on hundreds went away who could not get in the house. They hung on my very garments when I left the city—I mean the public, the inquiring truth-searching public. God was with me, even in New York, and I left a testimony they will not soon forget. In this city the brethren received me with great kindness and invited me to their houses, and are ready to share with me their comforts and their homes. They hold up my hands in every way by their faith and prayers. I put up with our old and firm friend and brother Peter Hess. He sends his love. He is coming with me to the Conference in the spring.—Brothers Seyfert, Lehman, Wilson, Bates, and many others, send their kindest love to you, and I hope they will soon arrange to send something else. I look forward to the next spring Conference with much interest and expectation, and suggest, if I am worthy to suggest anything good, that you call as many elders from all parts of the country to that Conference as possible, for many reasons that I will write in my next letter. I long to be with you in your councils. I have a thousand things that come rushing on my mind connected with the building up of the church and kingdom of God, that I wish to express to you or our dear brother J. E. Page. Every obstacle against you is now removed, since —— —— —— —— —— —— and some others have been cut off; their names were a perfect blight and mildew to all your efforts. If they could pick, speculate and plunder you and the church, they would stay with the church. Time, as I said before, will prove all men, even your brother George.

In my last two letters I explained many things in regard to my temporal matters. Sickness, and death of friends; having to borrow money for funeral expenses; the manner by which I expected to raise the money. God has blessed my efforts. And the course I took has brought thousands to hear the truth. No doubt some will find fault for the course I have taken—let them—tell them to hand in their charges. I am every way prepared, and I will answer them all at the spring Conference. And if I do not prove myself temperate, virtuous and righteous, the office and calling I hold from the church let them take from me and give to another. Perhaps some of the pious people might prevail on Wm. E. McLellin to come back into the church, if they would promise him the office I hold, or it may be they could prevail on John Hardy, the pious John.

I think the way you used up Wm. E. McLellin was a caution to sinners. May you prevail over all your enemies. My wife's health is better than it was. My sister and little boy are well, and they all join with me in love to you, yours and all the saints. The Russia mission, and England, and Palestine, press heavy upon my mind. I long to be cut loose from every opposing obstacle, and burst forth in all the strength and majesty of the delegated power of Israel's God, and proclaim the fullness of heaven born truth to a suffering world. Pray for me that God may strengthen me, that in the strength of Jesus Christ I may yet make the nations tremble by the power of eternal truth. I have been expecting to get a few lines from you. It may be that there is a letter from you for me in New York. If you have time to write, direct to Philadelphia. I shall, with God's blessing, visit Baltimore and Washington city this winter. May God give you wisdom, strength, and power to prevail.

As ever, I remain your firm friend, brother, and fellow laborer in this last Dispensation,

JAMES J. STRANG. G. J. ADAMS.

SPEAK NOT HARSHLY.

BY MISS JULIA A. FLETCHER.

Speak not harshly—much of care
Every human heart must bear;
Enough of shadows sadly play
Around the very sunniest way—
Enough of sorrows vainly lie,
Veiled within the merriest eye.
By thy childhood's gushing tears—
By thy grief's of after years—
By the anguish thou doest know,
Add not to another's woe.

Speak not harshly—much of sin
Dwelleth every heart within:
In its closely covered cells
Many a wayward passion dwells.
By the many hours misspent—
By the gifts to error lent—
By the wrong thou didst not shun—
By the good thou hast not done,—
With a lenient spirit scan
The weakness of thy brother man.

PLOUGH MANUFACTORY AND BLACKSMITHING.

The subscribers have entered into copartnership for the purpos of carrying on the business of making ploughs and doing commo blacksmithing. We shall keep constantly on hand a good suppl of the best steel plate ploughs of various descriptions, which w will sell as cheap as can be had anywhere the world over. And a we intend to make this a permanent and extensive business, spar will be taken that all our work be of such quality as to recommer itself in all markets. We are also prepared to iron carriages in th best style and with expedition. All kinds of work in our line do on short notice. Horses shod all round at $1,00 per head, cash.

Voree, Jan. 7th, 1848. JAMES K. KENT, MILO WESTON.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 27, 1848. [No. 45.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

A TREATISE ON THE DESIGN OF BAPTISM.

BY JOHN E. PAGE.

(Concluded.)

For an account of the baptism of Lydia and "her household," and the baptism of the "jailer and all his," read Acts xvi. 14, 15, 30 to 34. It will be seen by reading the whole chapter that these baptisms took place in the city of Philippi, one of the chief cities of Macedonia. There was a river called Strymon near to it, in which Lydia and the jailer and their households were probably baptized. Many have taken an unwarranted advantage of the terms used in the history of these baptisms to sustain a speculative dogma, (infant sprinkling.)

Once in my ministry in the year 1840, in Geneva, near Jacksonville, Ill., I was an eye witness to the baptism of one Mr. Clarke and all his household, nine in all, (his lady had been baptized some time before.) In all there was not one infant, neither child under eight years of age. If in case there had no other history of this circumstance, (than that Mr. Clarke of Geneva, Ill., was baptized and all his straightway,) been published to the world, we ask if, in the lapse of time of 600 or 1800 years, the above historical fact could be referred to with any kind of propriety to prove that there were infants baptized in Mr. Clarke's family? All will say NO! Neither can the circumstance of the baptism of the families or households of Lydia or the jailer be referred to with any degree of propriety to prove that there were infants baptized belonging to Lydia or the jailer.

Relative to the identical place where the jailer was baptized, we are not told in the account, but it is clear that he was not baptized in the prison or in his dwelling house. In the 30th verse we are informed in effect that the jailer brought Paul and Silas "out" of the prison. The 33d verse informs us that the jailer was "baptized." The 34th verse tells us that the jailer brought Paul and Silas "into his house." So that it is as clear as the sun beams that the jailer was baptized in the intervening time between the bringing of the apostles out of the prison and the bringing of them into his house to set meat before them. The question then arises, where was he baptized? The only answer is, in the river Strymon, one of the large rivers of Macedonia near which the city of Philippi was situated. Because the jailer was baptized hastily in the night there is no more propriety in supposing that he was sprinkled than it would be if it had transpired at Pittsburgh, Pa., where the city is nearly surrounded with rivers, and where the Latter Day Saint elders have baptized many a one in almost every hour of the night as well as the day.

Again: at a time when prejudice and persecution raged against the former day saints as it has against the latter day saints, and Saul of Tarsus was then in his ignorance acting the part of a persecutor of saints, (like all other ignoramuses who act in perpetrating the same thing in any age against any people;) "then Philip went down to the city Samaria and preached Christ unto them."—Acts viii. 5. The 12th verse tells us that both men and women were baptized. We are informed by historians that Samaria was surrounded by a very broad and deep valley, from which the city derived its supply of water for its inhabitants and their beasts. The waters of the valley was where the people (that believed the gospel) were probably baptized.

Samaria was about forty miles north of Jerusalem. As Philip left Samaria to go towards the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem to Gaza (Gaza was situated on the coast of the Mediterranean, about sixty miles south west of Jerusalem) he came in contact with an Ethiopian eunuch. Philip "preached unto him Jesus," and the eunuch believed and was baptized immediately on his profession of faith in Jesus Christ as being the Son of God.—This case is like most other cases in the apostolic day. Baptism was never delayed night or day in the congregation of thousands as at the pentecost, or in single families, as those of Lydia and the jailer, or of the two meeting in the public highway, as Philip and the eunuch did. There was no such thing known then as propounding candidates for six days, SIX WEEKS or "SIX MONTHS," as the manner of some is in this very (would be called) wise age, to see if they would prove worthy to receive the ordinance.

It is said of Philip and the eunuch, that they both "went down into the water" and "come up out of the water." "Now," says an opponent, "I have you; if the words last quoted prove that the eunuch was immersed in the water, it also proves that Philip was." No, those words you refer to do not prove that either of them were baptized, (immersed;) but the following words prove that the eunuch was immersed, and not Philip at that time: "and he (Philip) baptized him," (the eunuch.) Acts viii. 38.

We next notice the case of Cornelius of the town of Cesarea, (Cesarea was situated on the coast of the Mediterranean, sixty-two miles from Jerusalem.) Read Acts x. In the 43d verse Peter told Cornelius, "to him (Jesus) give all the prophets witness, that through his name (priesthood) whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." 48th: "And he (Peter) commanded them to be baptized in the name (authority) of the Lord." So, in the case of Saul, Ananias told him to "be baptized and wash away his sins, CALLING on the NAME of the Lord."

So essential to salvation did both Peter and Paul consider the priesthood to be, in order to be qualified to administer the ordinance of baptism for the remission of sins, that those who attempted to administer in the ordinance of the gospel without being specially called and set apart of God unto that purpose, that they were considered to be of the "synagouge of Satan," "whose damnation lingereth not," "clouds without water," "carried about with every wind of doctrine," "whose end is to be BURNED." Says one, "could not that holy man Cornelius, whose 'prayers and alms came up before the Lord as a memorial,' be saved without baptism?" We answer, emphatically, NO! Why? Because he had not been born of water, as Jesus said to Nicodemus, he must be in order to enter

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, JAN. 27, 1848. [No. 45.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

A TREATISE ON THE DESIGN OF BAPTISM.

BY JOHN E. PAGE.

(Concluded.)

For an account of the baptism of Lydia and "her household," and the baptism of the "jailer and all his," read Acts xvi. 14, 15, 30 to 34. It will be seen by reading the whole chapter that these baptisms took place in the city of Philippi, one of the chief cities of Macedonia. There was a river called Strymon near to it, in which Lydia and the jailer and their households were probably baptized. Many have taken an unwarranted advantage of the terms used in the history of these baptisms to sustain a speculative dogma, (infant sprinkling.)

Once in my ministry in the year 1840, in Geneva, near Jacksonville, Ill., I was an eye witness to the baptism of one Mr. Clarke and all his household, nine in all, (his lady had been baptized some time before.) In all there was not one infant, neither child under eight years of age. If in case there had no other history of this circumstance, (than that Mr. Clarke of Geneva, Ill., was baptized and all his straightway,) been published to the world, we ask if, in the lapse of time of 600 or 1800 years, the above historical fact could be referred to with any kind of propriety to prove that there were infants baptized in Mr. Clarke's family? All will say NO! Neither can the circumstance of the baptism of the families or households of Lydia or the jailer be referred to with any degree of propriety to prove that there were infants baptized belonging to Lydia or the jailer.

Relative to the identical place where the jailer was baptized, we are not told in the account, but it is clear that he was not baptized in the prison or in his dwelling house. In the 30th verse we are informed in effect that the jailer brought Paul and Silas "out" of the prison. The 33d verse informs us that the jailer was "baptized." The 34th verse tells us that the jailer brought Paul and Silas "into his house." So that it is as clear as the sun beams that the jailer was baptized in the intervening time between the bringing of the apostles out of the prison and the bringing of them into his house to set meat before them. The question then arises, where was he baptized? The only answer is, in the river Strymon, one of the large rivers of Macedonia near which the city of Philippi was situated. Because the jailer was baptized hastily in the night there is no more propriety in supposing that he was sprinkled than it would be if it had transpired at Pittsburgh, Pa., where the city is nearly surrounded with rivers, and where the Latter Day Saint elders have baptized many a one in almost every hour of the night as well as the day.

Again; at a time when prejudice and persecution raged against the former day saints as it has against the latter day saints, and Saul of Tarsus was then in his ignorance acting the part of a persecutor of saints, (like all other ignoramuses who act in perpetrating the same thing in any age against any people;) "then Philip went down to the city Samaria and preached Christ unto them."—Acts viii. 5. The 12th verse tells us that both men and women were baptized. We are informed by historians that Samaria was surrounded by a very broad and deep valley, from which the city derived its supply of water for its inhabitants and their beasts. The waters of the valley was where the people (that believed the gospel) were probably baptized.

Samaria was about forty miles north of Jerusalem. As Philip left Samaria to go towards the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem to Gaza (Gaza was situated on the coast of the Mediterranean, about sixty miles south west of Jerusalem) he came in contact with an Ethiopian eunuch. Philip "preached unto him Jesus," and the eunuch believed and was baptized immediately on his profession of faith in Jesus Christ as being the Son of God.—This case is like most other cases in the apostolic day. Baptism was never delayed night or day in the congregation of thousands as at the pentecost, or in single families, as those of Lydia and the jailer, or of the two meeting in the public highway, as Philip and the eunuch did. There was no such thing known then as propounding candidates for six days, SIX WEEKS or "SIX MONTHS," as the manner of some is in this very (would be called) wise age, to see if they would prove worthy to receive the ordinance.

It is said of Philip and the eunuch, that they both "went down into the water" and "come up out of the water." "Now," says an opponent, "I have you; if the words last quoted prove that the eunuch was immersed in the water, it also proves that Philip was." No, those words you refer to do not prove that either of them were baptized, (immersed;) but the following words prove that the eunuch was immersed, and not Philip at that time: "and he (Philip) baptized him," (the eunuch.) Acts viii. 38.

We next notice the case of Cornelius of the town of Cesarea, (Cesarea was situated on the coast of the Mediterranean, sixty-two miles from Jerusalem.) Read Acts x. In the 43d verse Peter told Cornelius, "to him (Jesus) give all the prophets witness, that through his name (priesthood) whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." 48th. "And he (Peter) commanded them to be baptized in the name (authority) of the Lord." So, in the case of Saul, Ananias told him to "be baptized and wash away his sins, CALLING on the NAME of the Lord."

So essential to salvation did both Peter and Paul consider the priesthood to be, in order to be qualified to administer the ordinance of baptism for the remission of sins, that those who attempted to administer in the ordinance of the gospel without being specially called and set apart of God unto that purpose, that they were considered to be of the "synagouge of Satan," "whose damnation lingereth not," "clouds without water," "carried about with every wind of doctrine," "whose end is to be BURNED." Says one, "could not that holy man Cornelius, whose 'prayers and alms came up before the Lord as a memorial,' be saved without baptism?" We answer, emphatically, NO! Why? Because he had not been born of water, as Jesus said to Nicodemus, he must be in order to enter into the kingdom of God. Neither had Cornelius entered into the door into the sheepfold where Jesus the chief shepherd had entered, as found above.

When Jesus commanded the apostles to preach the gospel to every creature, he also commanded them to baptize all that believed without exception; he did not except even good (as a man) old Cornelius. The following texts show that Cornelius was not in a saved state previous to Peter's visit to him:—

Acts xi. 13. "And he showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon whose surname is Peter;

14. Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

In conclusion, there is nothing more clear or apparent than the fact that baptism in its original design was instituted of God as a saving ordinance in the light that Peter expressed it, in the following texts:—

1 Peter iii. 20, "Which sometime were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water.

21. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."

That as the ark was a salvation for Noah and his family from the destructive deluge of water, so is baptism (to him that believes and repents) a salvation from the destructive deluge of sin, and the only door into the true fold or church of God; it being the door in which Jesus the shepherd entered, as an example to all that should afterwards enter into the fold of God. As in the days of the flood all were destroyed who were not saved in the ark, so all that are not saved in baptism must be destroyed by fire when Jesus shall make his second advent.

It is equally as clear that no baptism is valid before God except that which is administered by a valid priesthood, called and set apart of God as the Levitical and apostolic priests were. We are astonished, yea, astounded, that this matter concerning priesthood is so little considered by the religionists of the age. For instance, there is the case of the Millerites or second adventists, who are vainly supposing that Christ is about to make his second advent, and that they are legally prepared to receive him or be received into his arms. When, in fact, they stand in no higher legal relation to Jesus Christ than the veritable heathen do, who never heard of Jesus Christ. Why? Because they know nothing of the nature or necessity of the priesthood to induct them into Jesus Christ, to constitute them Abraham's spiritual seed and legal heirs according to the promises.

Lest some should take umbrage at what we have said, we award great credit to the Millerites for talent, zeal and common moral rectitude, and believe them to be in many respects ahead of many of the sects of the day. Let this be as it may, still if they individually are as righteous as old Cornelius was before his baptism, yet without an indued priesthood they are not subjects of the legal church of Christ, and, consequently, are not prepared to be wedded to Christ as his bride. One may ask, when was the priesthood lost? When the "little horn" (spoken of by Daniel) gained dominion over all the earth, and made war with the saints or christian church and overcome it and wore them out. Millerites ought to understand that. Yes, and the Campbellites too. Those that care nothing about a reform, must wait till they do.

☞ A bigot, professing faith in the christian religion, when placed in power is more to be dreaded than a pagan monarch.

"INFANT BAPTISM.

(Continued from last week.)

"From a letter written by Cyprian to Fidus, who appears to have been an intimate friend, we learn that in a council, composed of sixty-six bishops, held at Carthage in the year 253, the question was proposed and discussed, 12 whether, under any circumstances, it would be proper to baptize an infant before he was eight days old. * * * The council unanimously decided that baptism might be administered any time after birth, and Cyprian, in the name and by the authority of the council, comunicated the decision to Fidus.

"Since the baptism of the church is given for the remission of sins infants also, agreeably to the usage of the church are baptized. Again, commenting upon Luke xiv, he says, 'I will here touch upon a point which is frequently discussed among the brethren,—infants are baptized for the remission of sins. Of what sins?—When have they sinned? And why are they baptized, except for the reason which I have already stated, viz: that no one is free from pollution, though his life be but the length of a day.' 13.—Again, in his commentary upon Romans, referring to the law which required a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons, to be offered upon the birth of a child—one for a sin-offering, 14 the other for a burnt-offering—he asks: 'For what sin was this one pigeon offered? Has a new-born child sinned?' And he replies, that 'it is the sin which every human being has by nature.' 'For this reason it was,' he adds, 'that the church received from the apostles a command (traditio) to administer baptism to infants. For they to whom the divine mysteries were committed, knew that in all persons there is the natural pollution of sin, which must be washed away by water and the Spirit.'"

12. We have not been able to obtain the work here referred to, but the brief reference here made by the "Doctrinal Tract Society" shows just what we have in a former note presumed, that infant baptism gradually grew up in the church, and, consequently, there was no question raised at each particular advance, because the advance was so trifling as not to be perceptible, until finally the first question raised was whether children could be baptized younger than they could be circumcised. On these facts, as stated by the Tractarians, we put the question, could the practice be so far unsettled and uncertain as to require the decision of a council whether children of eight days might be baptized, when infant baptism had been in practice more than 200 years? No, these questions arise only in new customs.

13. This argument purports to be borrowed from Origen, and as an argument is of no greater value than if made at this day. It is clearly unsound, and the members of the "Doctrinal Tract Society" have not themselves any faith in it; for the entire argument rests on the assumption of two facts, 1st, that sins are remitted in and by the ordinance of baptism, and, 2d, that infants are sinners. Until the Tractarians acknowledge BAPTISM for the REMISSION of SINS as an article of their faith, such appeals are dishonest in them. We doubt not that with Origen it is an article in their faith that infants of a moment are sinners, and therefore propose to pursue that question. By the sin of ONE MAN (Adam) death came upon all; and by ONE MAN'S obedience (Christ's) life from the dead came unto ALL. Rom. v. 12 to the end. 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. Death has come upon all mankind by means of Adam's transgression, and the resurrection from death to all mankind by means of Christ's obedience. Is Adam's transgression sin in us? If so, then Christ's obedience is meritorious in us, and instead of being saved by grace and receiving life as a free gift, we are raised by our personal merit and have earned life from the dead. If it be objected that Paul says all men have into the kingdom of God. Neither had Cornelius entered into the door into the sheepfold where Jesus the chief shepherd had entered, as found above.

When Jesus commanded the apostles to preach the gospel to every creature, he also commanded them to baptize all that believed without exception; he did not except even good (as a man) old Cornelius. The following texts show that Cornelius was not in a saved state previous to Peter's visit to him:—

Acts xi. 13. "And he showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon whose surname is Peter;

14. Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

In conclusion, there is nothing more clear or apparent than the fact that baptism in its original design was instituted of God as a saving ordinance in the light that Peter expressed it, in the following texts:—

1 Peter iii. 20, "Which sometime were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water.

21. The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."

That as the ark was a salvation for Noah and his family from the destructive deluge of water, so is baptism (to him that believes and repents) a salvation from the destructive deluge of sin, and the only door into the true fold or church of God; it being the door in which Jesus the shepherd entered, as an example to all that should afterwards enter into the fold of God. As in the days of the flood all were destroyed who were not saved in the ark, so all that are not saved in baptism must be destroyed by fire when Jesus shall make his second advent.

It is equally as clear that no baptism is valid before God except that which is administered by a valid priesthood, called and set apart of God as the Levitical and apostolic priests were. We are astonished, yea, astounded, that this matter concerning priesthood is so little considered by the religionists of the age. For instance, there is the case of the Millerites or second adventists, who are vainly supposing that Christ is about to make his second advent, and that they are legally prepared to receive him or be received into his arms. When, in fact, they stand in no higher legal relation to Jesus Christ than the veritable heathen do, who never heard of Jesus Christ. Why? Because they know nothing of the nature or necessity of the priesthood to induct them into Jesus Christ, to constitute them Abraham's spiritual seed and legal heirs according to the promises.

Lest some should take umbrage at what we have said, we award great credit to the Millerites for talent, zeal and common moral rectitude, and believe them to be in many respects ahead of many of the sects of the day. Let this be as it may, still if they individually are as righteous as old Cornelius was before his baptism, yet without an indued priesthood they are not subjects of the legal church of Christ, and, consequently, are not prepared to be wedded to Christ as his bride. One may ask, when was the priesthood lost? When the "little horn" (spoken of by Daniel) gained dominion over all the earth, and made war with the saints or christian church and overcame it and wore them out. Millerites ought to understand that. Yes, and the Campbellites too. Those that care nothing about a reform, must wait till they do.

A bigot, professing faith in the christian religion, when placed in power is more to be dreaded than a pagan monarch.

"INFANT BAPTISM.

(Continued from last week.)

"From a letter written by Cyprian to Fidus, who appears to have been an intimate friend, we learn that in a council, composed of sixty-six bishops, held at Carthage in the year 253, the question was proposed and discussed, 12 whether, under any circumstances, it would be proper to baptize an infant before he was eight days old. * * * The council unanimously decided that baptism might be administered any time after birth, and Cyprian, in the name and by the authority of the council, communicated the decision to Fidus.

"Since the baptism of the church is given for the remission of sins infants also, agreeably to the usage of the church are baptized. Again, commenting upon Luke xiv, he says, 'I will here touch upon a point which is frequently discussed among the brethren,—infants are baptized for the remission of sins. Of what sins?—When have they sinned? And why are they baptized, except for the reason which I have already stated, viz: that no one is free from pollution, though his life be but the length of a day.' 13.—Again, in his commentary upon Romans, referring to the law which required a pair of turtle doves, or two young pigeons, to be offered upon the birth of a child—one for a sin-offering, 14 the other for a burnt-offering—he asks: 'For what sin was this one pigeon offered? Has a new-born child sinned?' And he replies, that 'it is the sin which every human being has by nature.' 'For this reason it was,' he adds, 'that the church received from the apostles a command (traditio) to administer baptism to infants. For they to whom the divine mysteries were committed, knew that in all persons there is the natural pollution of sin, which must be washed away by water and the Spirit.'"

12. We have not been able to obtain the work here referred to, but the brief reference here made by the "Doctrinal Tract Society" shows just what we have in a former note presumed, that infant baptism gradually grew up in the church, and, consequently, there was no question raised at each particular advance, because the advance was so trifling as not to be perceptible, until finally the first question raised was whether children could be baptized younger than they could be circumcised. On these facts, as stated by the Tractarians, we put the question, could the practice be so far unsettled and uncertain as to require the decision of a council whether children of eight days might be baptized, when infant baptism had been in practice more than 200 years? No, these questions arise only in new customs.

13. This argument purports to be borrowed from Origen, and as an argument is of no greater value than if made at this day. It is clearly unsound, and the members of the "Doctrinal Tract Society" have not themselves any faith in it; for the entire argument rests on the assumption of two facts, 1st, that sins are remitted in and by the ordinance of baptism, and, 2d, that infants are sinners. Until the Tractarians acknowledge BAPTISM for the REMISSION of SINS as an article of their faith, such appeals are dishonest in them. We doubt not that with Origen it is an article in their faith that infants of a moment are sinners, and therefore propose to pursue that question. By the sin of ONE MAN (Adam) death came upon all; and by ONE MAN'S obedience (Christ's) life from the dead came unto ALL. Rom. v. 12 to the end. 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. Death has come upon all mankind by means of Adam's transgression, and the resurrection from death to all mankind by means of Christ's obedience. Is Adam's transgression sin in us? If so, then Christ's obedience is meritorious in us, and instead of being saved by grace and receiving life as a free gift, we are raised by our personal merit and have earned life from the dead. If it be objected that Paul says all men have sinned, Rom. v. 12, we reply true, but he does say that they are all sinners without having sinned; much less does he say that they all sinned the first moment of their existence. Adam sinned in fact, not by imputation; yet there was a time in his life when he was not a sinner, and Paul does not teach us otherwise in regard to other men; and Paul goes on to speak expressly that death reigned among men who had not, as Adam, sinned against a known law, and who were not counted guilty of the sins that they really committed because of their ignorance of the law. Rom. v. 13, 14. If God counted them not as guilty because of their ignorance of the law, how can he count them guilty of ANOTHER MAN'S breach of the law BEFORE they knew ANYTHING? Indeed it would seem to be an act of supererogation to prove that new born infants are not sinners, for it is a total disregard of language and sense to pretend that one is a sinner who has done no sin, or that the new born infant, scarcely conscious of its existence, has "of malice a forethought," or in any sense violated the law of God. This is clear, and speculate as men may with their metaphysics, no man can get over it—write their creeds as they will, these Tractarians perfectly understand that new born infants are not in fact and reality sinners. And because little children are not sinners, and have not rebelled against God, Christ says, "of such is the kingdom of God." Mark x. 14. Matt. xix. 14. In accordance with this doctrine Jesus taught the disciples, saying, "except ye be converted and become AS little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. xviii. 3. By which it clearly appears that little children, as they are, without conversion, shall enter into the kingdom of God, merely by the resurrection of the dead which Christ has brought to all mankind.

David substantially expresses the same faith when on the death of an infant he said, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." 2 Samuel xii. 2, 3. And the testimony of John the Revelator to the same point is perfectly overwhelming.

Rev. xiv. 1, "And I looked and lo a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him a hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3. And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4. These are they which were not defiled with woman; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and the Lamb.

5. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God."

It will be observed that these had the name of God in their foreheads; that they stood on mount Zion with the Lamb of God; that they sung a song which nobody else could sing. They are called first fruits because first fruits were taken from that which was entirely pure and perfect and made an offering to God. They are children of both sexes, for it is said of them that they are not defiled with woman, and that they are virgins, and especially because NO GUILE was found in their MOUTH, and they were without FAULT before God. Let these Tractarians observe particularly that it is not said, "they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," as was said of another class, Rev. vii. 14, but expressly that no guile was found in them. Rev. xiv. 5. And if we do not find the faultless and guileless who have no sins to remit by baptism among new born infants, where shall we look for them? The question immediately returns upon us, why do they die if they have not sinned? We answer,—The sin of one man brought death, not guilt, upon all men. We have inherited mortality from Adam, not criminality. And in the judgment of God Almighty every man will he judged acording to his works, Rev. xx. 12, not according to the works of his ancestors. The sin of Adam passes upon us all by death, its consequence, not guilt its turpitude; just as many sins that men commit now a days pass upon their posterity in weakness, and diseases of various kinds, of which they never can be cured, though no one thinks of holding them guilty of the parents' sins.

14. This the Tractarians profess to quote from Origen, who lived in the fourth century. Now, as we have not the entire works of Origen before us, we cannot say what folly he may have been guilty of, but it is a disgrace and an outright scandal that a respectable society of educated men in this age should have the hardihood or folly to publish such falsehood. "For what sin was this pigeon offered?" "It is the sin which every human being has by nature."—Now we say this is a willful perversion of the word of God. On the part of this tract society it is equivalent to a forgery of scripture, for the scripture tells us expressly that this offering was for the SIN of the WOMAN, not the CHILD.

Lev. xii. 1, "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

2. Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a woman have conceived seed, and borne a man-child: then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

3. And in the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

4. And she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days: she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

5. But if she bear a maid-child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.

6. And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son or a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtle-dove, for a sin offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest:

7. Who shall offer it before the Lord, and make an atonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath borne a male or a female.

8. And if she be not able to bring a lamb, then she shall bring two turtles, or two yong pigeons; the one for the burnt offering, and the other for a sin offering: and the priest shall make an ATONEMENT FOR HER, and SHE shall be CLEAN."

The work makes Origen to say, that, "for THIS REASON the church received from the APOSTLES a tradition to administer baptism to infants." For what reason? A falsehood; a lie; a falsification of the law of God; a forgery in the name of the Most High. To such means do men resort to uphold a much loved falsehood. I wish I knew the names of the publishing committee of this Doctrinal Tract Society, that I might set them down here to bear the shame of their falsehood. An apostolic tradition, founded upon a lie, to uphold a heresy; and a grave board of religious teachers dragging it up from the rottenness of 1500 years to feed the lambs of their flock with it. (To be continued.)

"Dr. HIGGINS.—Learning that Dr. Higgins,—who is the Methodist preacher stationed at the Bromfield-street church, in this city,—was to preach on the Deluge a week previous to last Sunday evening, we went to hear his discourse. We were much gratified with the view he took of it. His text was 2 Peter iii. 3, 7. He sinned, Rom. v. 12, we reply true, but he does say that they are all sinners without having sinned; much less does he say that they all sinned the first moment of their existence. Adam sinned in fact, not by imputation; yet there was a time in his life when he was not a sinner, and Paul does not teach us otherwise in regard to other men; and Paul goes on to speak expressly that death reigned among men who had not, as Adam, sinned against a known law, and who were not counted guilty of the sins that they really committed because of their ignorance of the law. Rom. v. 13, 14. If God counted them not as guilty because of their ignorance of the law, how can he count them guilty of ANOTHER MAN'S breach of the law BEFORE they knew ANYTHING? Indeed it would seem to be an act of supererogation to prove that new born infants are not sinners, for it is a total disregard of language and sense to pretend that one is a sinner who has done no sin, or that the new born infant, scarcely conscious of its existence, has "of malice a forethought," or in any sense violated the law of God. This is clear, and speculate as men may with their metaphysics, no man can get over it—write their creeds as they will, these Tractarians perfectly understand that new born infants are not in fact and reality sinners. And because little children are not sinners, and have not rebelled against God, Christ says, "of such is the kingdom of God." Mark x. 14. Matt. xix. 14. In accordance with this doctrine Jesus taught the disciples, saying, "except ye be converted and become AS little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. xviii. 3. By which it clearly appears that little children, as they are, without conversion, shall enter into the kingdom of God, merely by the resurrection of the dead which Christ has brought to all mankind.

David substantially expresses the same faith when on the death of an infant he said, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." 2 Samuel xii. 2, 3. And the testimony of John the Revelator to the same point is perfectly overwhelming.

Rev. xiv. 1, "And I looked and lo a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him a hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads.

2. And I heard a voice from heaven, as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of a great thunder; and I heard the voice of harpers harping with their harps:

3. And they sung as it were a new song before the throne, and before the four beasts and the elders: and no man could learn that song but the hundred and forty and four thousand, which were redeemed from the earth.

4. These are they which were not defiled with woman; for they are virgins. These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were redeemed from among men, being the first fruits unto God and the Lamb.

5. And in their mouth was found no guile: for they are without fault before the throne of God."

It will be observed that these had the name of God in their foreheads; that they stood on mount Zion with the Lamb of God; that they sung a song which nobody else could sing. They are called first fruits because first fruits were taken from that which was entirely pure and perfect and made an offering to God. They are children of both sexes, for it is said of them that they are not defiled with woman, and that they are virgins, and especially because NO GUILE was found in their MOUTH, and they were without FAULT before God. Let these Tractarians observe particularly that it is not said, "they have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," as was said of another class, Rev. vii. 14, but expressly that no guile was found in them. Rev. xiv. 5. And if we do not find the faultless and guileless who have no sins to remit by baptism among new born infants, where shall we look for them? The question immediately returns upon us, why do they die if they have not sinned? We answer,—The sin of one man brought death, not guilt, upon all men. We have inherited mortality from Adam, not criminality. And in the judgment of God Almighty every man will he judged acording to his works, Rev. xx. 12, not according to the works of his ancestors. The sin of Adam passes upon us all by death, its consequence, not guilt its turpitude; just as many sins that men commit now a days pass upon their posterity in weakness, and diseases of various kinds, of which they never can be cured, though no one thinks of holding them guilty of the parents' sins.

14. This the Tractarians profess to quote from Origen, who lived in the fourth century. Now, as we have not the entire works of Origen before us, we cannot say what folly he may have been guilty of, but it is a disgrace and an outright scandal that a respectable society of educated men in this age should have the hardihood or folly to publish such falsehood. "For what sin was this pigeon offered?" "It is the sin which every human being has by nature."—Now we say this is a willful perversion of the word of God. On the part of this tract society it is equivalent to a forgery of scripture, for the scripture tells us expressly that this offering was for the SIN of the WOMAN, not the CHILD.

Lev. xii. 1, "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,

2. Speak unto the children of Israel, saying, If a woman have conceived seed, and borne a man-child: then she shall be unclean seven days; according to the days of the separation for her infirmity shall she be unclean.

3. And in the eighth day the flesh of his foreskin shall be circumcised.

4. And she shall then continue in the blood of her purifying three and thirty days: she shall touch no hallowed thing, nor come into the sanctuary, until the days of her purifying be fulfilled.

5. But if she bear a maid-child, then she shall be unclean two weeks, as in her separation: and she shall continue in the blood of her purifying threescore and six days.

6. And when the days of her purifying are fulfilled, for a son or a daughter, she shall bring a lamb of the first year for a burnt offering, and a young pigeon, or a turtle-dove, for a sin offering, unto the door of the tabernacle of the congregation, unto the priest:

7. Who shall offer it before the Lord, and make an atonement for her; and she shall be cleansed from the issue of her blood. This is the law for her that hath borne a male or a female.

8. And if she be not able to bring a lamb, then she shall bring two turtles, or two yong pigeons; the one for the burnt offering, and the other for a sin offering: and the priest shall make an ATONEMENT FOR HER, and SHE shall be CLEAN."

The work makes Origen to say, that, "for THIS REASON the church received from the APOSTLES a tradition to administer baptism to infants." For what reason? A falsehood; a lie; a falsification of the law of God; a forgery in the name of the Most High. To such means do men resort to uphold a much loved falsehood. I wish I knew the names of the publishing committee of this Doctrinal Tract Society, that I might set them down here to bear the shame of their falsehood. An apostolic tradition, founded upon a lie, to uphold a heresy; and a grave board of religious teachers dragging it up from the rottenness of 1500 years to feed the lambs of their flock with it. (To be continued.)

"Dr. Higgins.—Learning that Dr. Higgins,—who is the Methodist preacher stationed at the Bromfield-street church, in this city,—was to preach on the Deluge a week previous to last Sunday evening, we went to hear his discourse. We were much gratified with the view he took of it. His text was 2 Peter iii. 3, 7. He took the ground that the flood, which destroyed the earth in the days of Noah, was a sure token that it would be again destroyed by fire. He gave notice that the next Sunday evening he should preach on the end of the world. This discourse we also listened to with pleasure. His views accorded with our own—that it would be a literal melting of the earth with fervent heat, by which it should be regenerated, and fitted for the abode of righteousness. He said, that were it not reserved, or kept, unto God's own appointed time, he should expect that before midnight, the element of flame every where prevailing, within and around the earth, might wrap the globe in a sheet of fire. But it would be kept till God saw fit to let loose this element of destruction, for which he faithfully exhorted his hearers to prepare, assuring them that they would each one personally see it; for even if they should die first, they would awake from their dusty beds and behold

'A God in grandeur, and a world in flame.' "—Advent Herald.

We do not doubt that there were many present at the meeting spoken of above who were well meaning and pious minded, and verily believed that they were fully prepared to receive a part in the "first resurrection;" but we doubt whether there were many or even any (Dr. Higgins not excepted) that even understood the first principle by which a person is prepared for such an event.—Let Dr. Higgins and J. V. Himes (editor of the Advent Herald) and all others know assuredly that there is not a promise in the scriptures of truth of any person receiving a "part in the first resurrection," but those who are ingrafted into the "body of Christ," but by baptism administered by a called and qualified priesthood of JESUS CHRIST by DIRECT REVELATION. "Ah," says one, "that's a Mormon idea." Yes, and we challenge a successful refutation of it.

1 Thes. iv. 16, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

The next quotation tells us (in point of time) how much "first" the "dead in Christ shall rise."

Rev. xx. 5, "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

v. 10, "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

The next quotation tells us how we are ingrafted into Christ.

Gal. iii. 27, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

Every Bible reader knows that baptism must be administered in the "name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;" and every little boy or girl (let alone gentlemen of erudition) knows or ought to know that "name," in the administration of baptism, signifies "authority" or "priesthood;" and that no man has any business to baptize in the "name" of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost without being by them specially authorized to do it, any more than I have to remit and release debts in the "name" of Miller, Himes and Higgins, which are owing to them, without being by them specially authorized to do so. The next quotation tells us how the priesthood is derived.

Heb. v. 4, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."

Aaron was placed in the priesthood by revelation. Now the great question is, who are those that are placed in the priesthood to administer in the "name" of God the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost in this the 19th century? as Peter, Paul, Timothy, Titus and all the rest of Christ's ministers were in the first christian century, by the voice of God from the heavens, saying, "set apart" such and such ones "to the work of the ministry whereunto I have called them." If Mr. Higgins or any other man cannot recognize their calling as Paul and Barnabas did, then let them hide their faces in shame for their ignorance for telling their hearers "that they would each one personally see" the advent of Christ—"A God in grandeur, and a world in flame."

When, in fact, except such men repent and obey the "everlasting gospel," now revealed from heaven to men that "dwell on the earth," they and their adherents must sleep on till the "thousand years are finished," instead of having a "part in the first resurrection" at the second advent of Christ. JOHN E. PAGE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Centreville, Crawford Co., Pa., Dec. 31st, 1847.

BRO. J. J. STRANG:—To-day closes the year with all its cares, toils, anxieties, perplexities, &c. I wish you a happier year from the morrow's dawn than the past. Though at a distance from you, I have heard, and in some measure understood, the factions and disorder in the church you have to contend against. I trust, however, that the time of deliverance has fully come, as it will relieve you of a great weight of trouble and care. We look forward to the bright future with joyful anticipation that the time will soon come when Zion shall no longer be despised, but shall arise, put on her beautiful garments, and become the joy of all the earth. And O! may all saints also remember that "this is Zion, the pure in heart," and that the object of our assembling or gathering unto Christ into places or garners appointed of him is, that we may purify ourselves before him. O that the time past of our lives might truly suffice us in our walk after the present course of the world, and we be saints in very deed, without rebuke, in the midst of this wicked, crooked and gainsaying generation. I have in my labor the past year endeavored to sustain James J. Strang as First President, Prophet, Seer and Translator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. On the 19th inst. I baptized two persons, which makes eleven that I have baptized during the season. Inclosed I send you one dollar, pass it to my credit and continue the two copies of the "Gospel Herald" to me for the year.

Your brother in Christ and the patience of the saints,

J. J. STRANG. STEPHEN POST.

A METHODIST SONG.

"Beyond the bounds of time and space,
Look forward to that heavenly place,
The saints' secure abode.
On faith's strong eagle pinions rise,
And force your passage through the skies,
And scale the mount of God."

THE SAINTS' SONG.

Rev. v. 8, "And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odors, which are the prayers of saints.

9. And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10. And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall REIGN ON THE EARTH."

The contrast of the above songs is a fair example of the contrast that exists in almost every idea the sectarian world has of every thing spoken of in the scriptures concerning heaven, earth, or hell.

JOHN E. PAGE.

took the ground that the flood, which destroyed the earth in the days of Noah, was a sure token that it would be again destroyed by fire. He gave notice that the next Sunday evening he should preach on the end of the world. This discourse we also listened to with pleasure. His views accorded with our own—that it would be a literal melting of the earth with fervent heat, by which it should be regenerated, and fitted for the abode of righteousness. He said, that were it not reserved, or kept, unto God's own appointed time, he should expect that before midnight, the element of flame every where prevailing, within and around the earth, might wrap the globe in a sheet of fire. But it would be kept till God saw fit to let loose this element of destruction, for which he faithfully exhorted his hearers to prepare, assuring them that they would each one personally see it; for even if they should die first, they would awake from their dusty beds and behold

'A God in grandeur, and a world in flame.'"—Advent Herald.

We do not doubt that there were many present at the meeting spoken of above who were well meaning and pious minded, and verily believed that they were fully prepared to receive a part in the "first resurrection;" but we doubt whether there were many or even any (Dr. Higgins not excepted) that even understood the first principle by which a person is prepared for such an event.—Let Dr. Higgins and J. V. Himes (editor of the Advent Herald) and all others know assuredly that there is not a promise in the scriptures of truth of any person receiving a "part in the first resurrection," but those who are ingrafted into the "body of Christ," but by baptism administered by a called and qualified priesthood of JESUS CHRIST by DIRECT REVELATION. "Ah," says one, "that's a Mormon idea." Yes, and we challenge a successful refutation of it.

1 Thes. iv. 16, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

The next quotation tells us (in point of time) how much "first" the "dead in Christ shall rise."

Rev. xx. 5, "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years were finished. This is the first resurrection.

6. Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: on such the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years."

v. 10, "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth."

The next quotation tells us how we are ingrafted into Christ.

Gal. iii. 27, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ."

Every Bible reader knows that baptism must be administered in the "name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;" and every little boy or girl (let alone gentlemen of erudition) knows or ought to know that "name," in the administration of baptism, signifies "authority" or "priesthood;" and that no man has any business to baptize in the "name" of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost without being by them specially authorized to do it, any more than I have to remit and release debts in the "name" of Miller, Himes and Higgins, which are owing to them, without being by them specially authorised to do so. The next quotation tells us how the priesthood is derived.

Heb. v. 4, "And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."

Aaron was placed in the priesthood by revelation. Now the great question is, who are those that are placed in the priesthood to administer in the "name" of God the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost in this the 19th century? as Peter, Paul, Timothy, Titus and all the rest of Christ's ministers were in the first christian century, by the voice of God from the heavens, saying, "set apart" such and such ones "to the work of the ministry whereunto I have called them." If Mr. Higgins or any other man cannot recognize their calling as Paul and Barnabas did, then let them hide their faces in shame for their ignorance for telling their hearers "that they would each one personally see" the advent of Christ—"A God in grandeur, and a world in flame."

When, in fact, except such men repent and obey the "everlasting gospel," now revealed from heaven to men that "dwell on the earth," they and their adherents must sleep on till the "thousand years are finished," instead of having a "part in the first resurrection" at the second advent of Christ.

JOHN E. PAGE.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Centreville, Crawford Co., Pa., Dec. 31st, 1847.

BRO. J. J. STRANG:—To-day closes the year with all its cares, toils, anxieties, perplexities, &c. I wish you a happier year from the morrow's dawn than the past. Though at a distance from you, I have heard, and in some measure understood, the factions and disorder in the church you have to contend against. I trust, however, that the time of deliverance has fully come, as it will relieve you of a great weight of trouble and care. We look forward to the bright future with joyful anticipation that the time will soon come when Zion shall no longer be despised, but shall arise, put on her beautiful garments, and become the joy of all the earth. And O! may all saints also remember that "this is Zion, the pure in heart," and that the object of our assembling or gathering unto Christ into places or garners appointed of him is, that we may purify ourselves before him. O that the time past of our lives might truly suffice us in our walk after the present course of the world, and we be saints in very deed, without rebuke, in the midst of this wicked, crooked and gainsaying generation. I have in my labor the past year endeavored to sustain James J. Strang as First President, Prophet, Seer and Translator unto the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. On the 19th inst. I baptized two persons, which makes eleven that I have baptized during the season. Inclosed I send you one dollar, pass it to my credit and continue the two copies of the "Gospel Herald" to me for the year.

Your brother in Christ and the patience of the saints,

J. J. STRANG. STEPHEN POST.

A METHODIST SONG.

"Beyond the bounds of time and space,
Look forward to that heavenly place,
The saints' secure abode.
On faith's strong eagle pinions rise,
And force your passage through the skies,
And scale the mount of God."

THE SAINTS' SONG.

Rev. v. 8, "And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odors, which are the prayers of saints.

9. And they sung a new song, saying, Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation;

10. And hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall REIGN ON THE EARTH."

The contrast of the above songs is a fair example of the contrast that exists in almost every idea the sectarian world has of every thing spoken of in the scriptures concerning heaven, earth, or hell.

JOHN E. PAGE.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, FEB. 3, 1848. [No. 46.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

From the (Boston) Advent Herald.

INSPIRATION OF THE JEWISH PROPHETS.

BY ALEXANDER KEITH, D. D.

(Continued from No. 39.)

PROPHECY.

"EDOM (or Idumea) shall be a desolation. I will make thee most desolate." Isa. xlix. 17. Ezek. xxxv. 3.

FULFILLMENT.

"The traces of many towns and villages are met with. At present all this country is a desert."—Travels, p. 36.

PROPHECY.

"I will stretch out my hand upon Edom; and will make it desolate from Teman." Ezek. xxv. 13.

FULFILLMENT.

"And Maan (Teman, as marked in the map prefixed to Burckhardt's Travels) is the only inhabited place in it."—Travels, p. 36.

PROPHECY.

"If grape gatherers come to thee, would they not leave some gleaning grapes? if thieves by night, they will destroy till they have enough. But I have made Esau bare, Edom shall be a desert wilderness." Jer. xlix. 9, 10.

FULFILLMENT.

"The whole plain presented to the view an expanse of shifting sands; the depth of sand precludes all vegetation of herbage."—Burckhardt's Trav. in Syria, p. 442.

PROPHECY.

"I will stretch out upon Idumea (Edom) the line of confusion, and the stones of emptiness."

FULFILLMENT.

"On ascending the western plain, we had before us an immense expanse of dreary country, entirely covered with black flints, with here and there some hilly chain rising from the plain."—Burckhardt's Trav., p. 444.

PROPHECY.

"Moreover, the word of the Lord came unto me, saying, Son of man set thy face against Edom, and prophecy against it, and say unto it, Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O Mount Seir, I am against thee, and I will stretch out mine hand against thee, and I will make thee most desolate," &c. Ezek. xxxv. 1, 3.

FULFILLMENT.

"It is from the summit of (the mountain) El Nakb that one can judge of the general aspect of the country, of the melancholy and dismal state of which it is difficult to convey an idea with the pencil alone. Many prophets have announced the misery of Idumea, but the strong language of Ezekiel can alone adequately describe this great desolation."—Laborde.

PROPHECY.

"I will lay thy cities waste; and thou shalt be desolate, O Mount Seir." Ezek. xxxv. 3, 4.

FULFILLMENT.

"The following ruined places are situated in Djebal Shera (Mount Seir) Kalaab, Djirba, Ely, Ferdakh, Anyk, Birel-Beytar, Shamkh, and Syk."—Laborde, p. 443, 444.

PROPHECY.

"I will make thee perpetual desolations, and thy cities shall not return." Ezek. xxxv. 9.

FULFILLMENT.

"Of the towns laid down in D'Anville's map, Thoana excepted, no traces remain."—Laborde, p. 443, 444.

PROPHECY.

"I will make thee small among the heathen: thy terribleness hath deceived thee, and the pride of thine heart, O thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, that holdest the height of the hill; though thou shouldst make thy nest as high as the eagle, I will bring the down from thence, saith the Lord. Also Edom shall be a desolation." Jer. xlix. 15, 17.

FULFILLMENT.

"The ruins of the city (of Petra, or the Rock, the capital of Edom) burst on the view in their full grandeur, shut in on the opposite side by barren craggy precipices, from which numerous ravines and valleys branch out in all directions; the sides of the mountains covered with an endless variety of excavated tombs and private dwellings, presented altogether the most singular scene we ever beheld."—Irby and Mangles' Trav. p. 422.

"The rocks are hollowed out into innumerable chambers of different dimensions," &c.—Mackmichael's Journey, p. 228.

"Some of them are so high, and the side of the mountain is so perpendicular, that it seems impossible to approach the uppermost," &c.—Burckhardt's Trav. p. 422.

PROPHECY.

"I will make thee perpetual desolation, and thy cities shall not return, and ye shall know that I am the Lord." Ezek. xxxv. 9.

"Every one that goeth by it shall be astonished." Jer. xlix. 16.

FULFILLMENT.

"I would that the skeptic could stand as I did among ruins of this city among the rocks, and there open the sacred book and read the words of the inspired penman, written when this desolate place was one of the greatest cities in the world. I see the scoff arrested, his cheek pale, his lip quivering, and his heart quaking with fear, as the ruined city cries out to him in a voice loud and powerful as that of one risen from the dead; though he would not believe Moses and the prophets, he believes the handwriting of God himself, in the desolation and eternal ruin around him."—Stephens' Incidents of Trav. in Arabia Petræa, &c. v. ii., p. 58.

PROPHECY.

"They shall be called the border of wickedness." Mal. i. 4.

FULFILLMENT.

The Arabs in Edom are called "a most savage and treacherous race."—Irby and Mangles. "They have the reputation," says Burckhardt, "of being very daring thieves." And Pococke describes them as "a very bad people, and notorious robbers."—Vol. i. p. 136.

PROPHECY.

"They shall call the nobles thereof to the kingdom, but none shall be there; and all her princes shall be nothing." Isa. xxxiv. 12.

FULFILLMENT.

"There is not a single human being living near it."—Irby and Mangles, p. 439.

"The sepulchers are numerous and magnificent: and 'great,' says Burckhardt, 'must have been the opulence of a city which could dedicate such a monument to the memory of its rulers.'"—p. 425.

PROPHECY.

"Thorns shall come up in her palaces, nettles and brambles in the fortresses thereof." Isa. xxxiv. 13.

FULFILLMENT.

"Most of the plants at Petra are thorny."—Irba and Mangles, p. 435,

"The thorns," as described by Laborde, "rise to the same height with the columns; creeping and prickly plants hide the remains of the works of man: the thorn or bramble reaches the top of the monuments, grows on the cornices, and conceals the base of the columns."

PROPHECY.

"Shall I not destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the Mount of Esau?" Obad. i. 8.

FULFILLMENT.

"Even the clearing away of rubbish, merely 'to allow the water to flow' into an ancient cistern, in order to render it useful to themselves, is spoken of by Burckhardt 'as an undertaking far beyond the views of the wandering Arabs.'"—Trav. p. 366.

PROPHECY.

"The cormorant (Hebrew KATH) shall possess it." Isa. xxxiv. 11.

FULFILLMENT.

"The bird Katta is met with in immense numbers; they fly in such large flocks, that the Arab boys often kill two or three at a time, merely by throwing a stick among them."—Trav. p. 406.

PROPHECY.

"The owl shall dwell in it." Isa. xxxiv. 11.

FULFILLMENT.

"Eagles, hawks, and owls were soaring in considerable numbers above our heads, seemingly annoyed at any one approaching their lonely habitation."—Irby and Mangles' Trav. p. 415.

PROPHECY.

"And the raven (or crow) shall dwell in it." Isa. xxxiv. 11.

FULFILLMENT.

"The fields of Tafyle, in the immediate vicinity of Edom are frequented by an immense number of crows."—Burckhardt's Trav. p. 405.

PROPHECY.

"It shall be a habitation of dragons," Isa. xxxiv. 13.

FULFILLMENT.

"The Arabs in general avoid them (the ruins in Edom) on account of the enormous scorpions with which they swarm."—Volney's Trav. v. ii. p. 344.

PROPHECY.

"The satyr (or goat) shall cry to his fellow." Isa. xxxiv. 14.

FULFILLMENT.

"Large herds of mountain goats are met with."—Burckhardt, p. 405.

PROPHECY.

NINEVEH. "He will make an utter end of the place thereof.—I will make thy grave; for thou art vile." Nahum i. 8, 14.

FULFILLMENT.

"The mounds show neither brick, stones, nor other materials of building; but are in many places overgrown with grass."—Buckingham's Trav. in Mesopotamia, v. ii. p. 49, &c.

PROPHECY.

"She is empty, void, and waste." Isa. ii. 10.

FULFILLMENT.

"Eastward of the Tigris, at the end of the bridge of Mosul, the great Nineveh had formerly been erected: the city, and even the ruins, had long since disappeared; the VACANT SPACE afforded a spacious field for the operation of the two armies."—Gibbon's Hist. v. viii. p. 250, 251.

PROPHECY.

"Thy crowned are as locusts, and thy captains as the great grasshoppers which flee away, and the place is not known where they were." Nahum iii. 17.

FULFILLMENT.

"Where are those ramparts of Nineveh?"—Ruins, c. ii.

PROPHECY.

"The Lord hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown." Nahum i. 14.

FULFILLMENT.

"The name of Nineveh seems to be threatened with the same oblivion that has overtaken its greatness."—Ruins, c. iv.

PROPHECY.

"Tyre shall be a place for the spreading of nets in the midst of the sea. Ezek. xxvi. 5.

FULFILLMENT.

"Instead of that ancient commerce, so active and so extensive, Sour (Tyre) is reduced to a miserable village. They live obscurely on the produce of their little ground and a trifling fishery."—Volney's Trav. v. ii. p. 212, 225.

We are quite amused with the peculiar faculty the writers for the "Advent Herald" have in half telling a thing that pertains to the fulfillment of prophecy, in order to blind their readers to the true sense and full intent of the inspired prophets. It is self-evident that the "Millerites" have set up a principal standard in their religious faith, to which they are bound at all hazards to make all other points successfully subservient or they fall in one general crash, and that standard point is this: that as they understand the prophecies and their fulfillment, as confirmed in the history of past time, that the time has come in which they are to look daily, hourly, yea, momentarily for the advent of Christ in the clouds of heaven, with power and glory to commence his millenial reign on the earth.

Consequently every event foretold by the prophets must be understood as having been fulfilled in its fulness, so that all there is now to be looked for as the next event on the face of prophecy is the advent of Christ. Were it not that we are as fully aware that they (the adventists) are laboring under a delusive error in this thing, as we are aware of our existence, we would not strive to throw a straw in their way. And was it not that some might mistake our object in copying the above and some other extracts from the "Advent Herald," on the subject of the inspiration of the Jewish prophets, supposing that we accept them all as true in the sense and form they are presented, we would let them pass for what they are worth, be it little or much.

We call the attention of our readers to the references made in the above article to Isaiah xxxiv. concerning "Idumea." Copious references are made to history to prove their fulfillment. It all may be so as far as it goes, but it is only telling quite a minor part of what the prophet embraced in his sayings concerning what he said of Idumea. We solicit the reader to turn to the Bible and read it carefully and critically. In order to appreciate the whole chapter in its true and full sense, the reader will do well to read the nine preceding chapters.

Isa. xxvii. 6, "He shall cause them that come of Jacob to take root; Israel shall blossom and bud, and fill the face of the world with fruit."

There is not a clearer point in the scriptures than that the natural or literal seed of Jacob (the whole twelve tribes) will return to Palestine and occupy (as tribes) their inheritances there before Christ makes his second advent, and it is equally plain and clear that when the Lord doeth this he will utterly destroy all nations among whom Israel and Judah are now scattered, and that too by the samemeans he scattered Israel. Here read Deut. xxviii. xxx. 1 to 10 inclusive.

Jer. xlvi. 27, "But fear not thou, O my servant Jacob, and be not dismayed, O Israel: for, behold, I will save thee from afar off, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and be in rest and at ease, and none shall make him afraid.

28. Fear thou not, O Jacob my servant, saith the Lord; for I am with thee: for I will make a full end of all the nations whither I have driven thee; but I will not make a full end of thee, but correct thee in measure; yet will I not leave thee wholly unpunished."

Please read the whole of Jer. xxv. We have only room for a few verses. The reader will clearly discover that this chapter in its sayings is not confined to the cities of Palestine or the countries immediately adjoined to it, but the prophecy extends to all nations, all cities, all countries, all people on all the face of the earth. One may ask, when will this great overwhelming calamity happen in the fulfillment of this prophecy? When God "sets his hand the second time to gather Israel." Says one, where and when will it end?—Just where the prophets have said, in the valley of Jehosaphat and in the land of Idumea. Read Joel iii. Ezek.xxxviii. xxxix.Isa. xxxiv. Idumea and Edom are synonymous terms. The following extract we copy from the Union Bible Dictionary:—

"EDOM, (Judg. xi. 17,) called Idumea (Isa. xxxiv· 5) by the Greeks and Romans, was the name of a district of country inhabited by the Horites, (Gen. xxxvi. 21,) or Horims, (Deut. ii. 12,) lying south of the Dead Sea, and bordering on Moab. Edom, or mount Seir, was originally a small strip of elevated land between the desert of Zin on the west, and Arabia Petrea on the east. The climate was delightful, and it was remarkable for the richness of its soil and the almost impregnable fortress it contained. (Gen. xxvii. 39. Jer. xlix, 16.) It derives its name from Esau, called also Edom, (Gen. xxxvi. 43,) whose descendants are supposed to have settled there. The same province is now called Sherath, and extends across the whole southern border of Canaan, from the Dead Sea to the eastern gulf of the Red Sea, including mount Seir. Of the eastern division of their territory, Bozrah, or Bezer, was the capital, and Petra, or Sela, of the southern. Teman, a grandson of Esau, (Gen. xxxvi. 11,) resided here, and gave his own name to part of the province. (Job ii. 11. Jer. xlix. 7. 20.) The Edomites were governed by kings (Gen. xxxvi. 31) until they were conquered by David, (2 Sam. viii. 14,) thus fulfilling the prophecy. (Gen. xxvii. 29.) Hadad, a lineal decendant of one of the Idumean kings regained the control of the eastern province. The inhabitants of south Edom afterwards revolted from Jehoram, (2 Chron. xxi. 10,) and sustained some severe reverses, (2 Kings xiv. 7. 2 Chron. xxv. 11,) and were finally conquered by Nebuchadnezzar."

Relative to the chapter under consideration, viz., Isaiah xxxiv., as far as its fulfillment is concerned, the things that have transpired are but simple omens to the things which are yet future to transpire in the land of Idumea or Edom. The most that can be said is, that what little has taken place in fulfillment of prophecy establishes the truth of what we may look for in the future. This sentiment is equally true relative to almost every topic spoken of by the Jewish prophets. And the reason that the Millerites and the most of all other religious denominations are so perfectly blind to the things in future as set forth by the prophets is, that if the prophets are to be understood in a literal sense in respect to the things future, the same as they are understood relative to the things that are past, the whole popular religious world are at once disrobed of all their claims to true christianity, and at once exposed to the naked gaze of all lovers of truth, as were the Jews to the gaze of Christ and the apostles.

The fact is, there never was yet a people on whom the fierce indignation and judgments of God fell with fury on their heads, but what at the time of the visitation of God's wrath they supposed themselves to be the favored ones of God's pleasure. So it will be with all the nations of all the earth to whom the prophet addresses himself in the eight first verses of the chapter under consideration. When these things are fulfilled in their fulness then look for the temporal salvation of Israel, according to the following:—(Esau was the original father of the Edomites.)

Obadiah 15, "For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen: as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head.

16. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been.

17. But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions.

18. And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it.

19. And they of the south shall possess the mount of Esau; and they of the plain the Philistines: and they shall possess the fields of Ephraim and the fields of Samaria: and Benjamin shall possess Gilead.

20. And the captivity of this host of the children of Israel shall possess that of the Canaanites, even unto Zarephath; and the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad, shall possess the cities of the south.

21. And saviors shall come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's."

Certainly no person can recognize any historical event in which this has been fulfilled. But when it is, then look for the millenium of the birds spoken of in the 9th and 17th verses inclusive of the 34th chapter of Isaiah, and not before.

Let our readers keep constantly in view this one important fact, that when the scriptures are understood as an exact inductive science, and read in their proper connection, they are their own expounder. and are not clothed with that incomprehensible mystery as some vainly imagine. Consequently the events of the future are as clearly staked out on the face of prophecy as the events of the past have been. But when men set up some favorite dogma which in itself is erroneous, they will split, cut, carve and twist the scriptures into as many meanings as there are contradictory sects, with their dogmas to sustain at all hazards; so much so, it seems that there are many that would rather be damned than yield to the force of common sense truth, on which the scriptures seem to be founded.

Therefore, to talk about the second advent of Christ before Judah and Israel are gathered, is only talking as did the Jews relative to the first advent according to the prophets, they fixed their eyes on the prophets respecting the second. The result was, they were mistaken; and so will every one be who looks for Christ's second advent before Israel and Judah are gathered, or before the Gentile nations are involved in one universal clamor of war.

JOHN E. PAGE.

(To be continued.)

☞ After this number we shall not send papers to any in arrears. Subscribers to Vol. 3 will receive the remainder of Vol. 2 without charge.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE OF THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, HELD IN ILION, HERKIMER CO., N. Y., ON THE 8TH AND 9TH OF JANUARY, 1848.

Organized on the evening of the 8th. Official members present, 1 High Priest and 4 Elders. Samuel P. Bacon, High Priest, presiding. George England chosen Clerk. This meeting was for prayer. After singing, and prayer by the President, the saints testified to the truth of the work of God in these last days, and acknowledged brother J. J. Strang as Prophet, Seer, Revelator and Translator of this church; after which there was some business attended to.—Adjourned till Sunday morning, the 9th, at half past 10, A. M., to the school house.

Jan. 9th, met agreeable to adjournment. After singing and prayer, brother Hewit addressed the congregation from the 14th Psalm 1st verse, followed by brother Bacon. Adjourned for one hour.

Met agreeable to adjournment. After singing and prayer, brother Bacon addressed the congregation from the 24th chapter of Matthew, on the dispersion and restoration of the children of Israel.—Adjourned to brother Nicholas G. Steele's for prayer meeting, at early candle light.

Met agreeable to adjournment. After uniting our petitions to the throne of grace, and giving our evidences in favor of the work of God as taught by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the sacrament of the eucharist was administered.

Resolved, That the next Conference be held at Middlefield, one mile east of Cooperstown, Otsego Co., N. Y., the time to be specified by brother Strang, in the Gospel Herald.

Resolved, That the minutes of this Conference be published in the Gospel Herald. After making some arrangements concerning the next Conference we adjourned. SAMUEL P. BACON, Pres.

GEORGE ENGLAND, Clerk.

DEAR BROTHER STRANG,—I feel to rejoice in the work that pertains to the dispensation of the fullness of times. A good spirit prevails in the hearts of the saints generally. We have held two Conferences since your visit in Otsego county. We propose to hold our next Conference at or near my house, one mile east of Coopersstown, to which I have moved since you was in that county. We should be glad of the services of either yourself or brother John E. Page. If either of you can come, (this Conference has voted to raise means to send to you to bear your expenses,) we think a good congregation could be obtained. We propose to have it in June, on the second Saturday and following Sunday. If either of you cannot come, please publish as above; but if either of you can come, set your own time, still we propose to have it in June, and publish it in the Gospel Herald. SAMUEL P. BACON.

NOTE.—Brother Page may be looked for with confidence, and possibly myself. We cannot now propose a better time than that named by brother Bacon, (second Saturday and following Sabbath.) If any change should be necessary, we will give due notice at an early day.

REFERENCES.—We call the attention of the saints to the reading of the following references:—

"For the office of a bishop is in administering ALL temporal things." D. & C. sec. iii. par. 32.

"Ye shall observe the laws which ye have received, and be faithful." D. & C. sec. xiii. p. 18. Read p. 8, 9, 10, 11, 19. Also sec. xxiii. all of it. Also sec. lxx. p. 5, 6. sec. xcix. p. 1, 2. sec. cvii. all of it.

"Trifle not with sacred things." Sec. viii. p. 5.

"Be one, and if ye are not one ye are not mine." Sec. xii. p. 6.

"Ye shall instruct and edify each other, that ye may know how to act and direct my church; how to act upon the points of my law which I have given." Sec. xiv. p. 3. sec. xxi. p. 8, first four lines. sec. xxvi. p. 3, last sentence. sec. xxx. p. 1, 2.

"Remember the church articles and covenants to keep them."—Sec. lv. p. 3.

"They shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them." Sec. xiii. p. 5. sec. lxi. p. 2.

We have not the least doubt that if the laws contained in the above references are strictly adhered to as they ought to be, that it would result in a complete temporal salvation of the rich and poor of God's people. J. E. P.

"INFANT BAPTISM.

(Continued from last week.)

"Finally, infant baptism did not originate in the second century; for writers who belong to that century, refer to it as the common practice of the church. We shall quote only Irenæus, Justin Martyr and Clement of Alexandria.

"Irenæus says, 'being a master, he (Christ) had the age also of a master. * * * For he came to save all persons by himself; all, I mean, who by his authority are baptized unto God; infants, and youth, and older persons.'—(Exam. Gnostic Errors.) 15.

"Justin Martyr says, 'we who through him (Christ) have obtained access to God, have not received this carnal, but the spiritual circumcision, which Enoch, and those who resembled him, observed. And we have received it by baptism, because we were sinners—through the mercy of God—and it is lawful for all to receive it in the same way.'

"Many among us, men and women sixty and seventy years of age, who were discipled to Christ, in early childhood, 16 still remain uncorrupt.'

"Clement of Alexandria, speaking of rings, on which the heathen often wore indecent engravings, says, 'let your seal be a dove, or a fish, or a ship under sail, or a harp, or an anchor. And if any one be a fisherman, let him think of an apostle, and the children taken from the water.'" 17.

15. The references to these names is professedly to prove that infant baptism was the universal practice of the church in the second century. From the wicked and corrupt manner in which this tract treats the scriptures, a book in every body's hands, we have no confidence in their quotations to books so little in use as the writings of the christian fathers; books proscribed and detested wherever Protestantism has sway, and scarcely to be found except in Catholic libraries. We have found above a most gross falsification of scripture, and a mistranslation of Origen, by which they render the latin "traditio" (tradition) "command." And we are not free from suspicion that by some means Irenæus is here made to say more than he ever wrote. It is, to say the least, a little singular that so distinguished a writer should use but the single expression, "older persons," to include all adults, and four various expressions, "infants," "little ones," "children," and "youth," to include non-adults. This is making too much of the matter, and raises a reasonable suspicion that some of these words have been added in latter times. Now we wish all readers to understand that 'little ones, children and youth' are all proper subjects of baptism, even with those who practice only believers baptism; for 'little ones, children and youth' may all be believers, and frequently are, and the little one of ten years often doubtless exercises stronger faith than the hoary headed hypocrites of the Doctrinal Tract Society know any thing of.

The word infant is the only one from which infant baptism could be inferred. But the English word "infant" and the latin "infans" frequently includes all under legal age. So if it can be shown that Irenæus really used that word to distinguish who were baptized, it still leaves a doubt whether he taught the baptism of others than believers. It is true that when we now speak of baptism of infants we have reference only to very young children, according to the modern theological sense, just as we use the word baptism only in speaking of a christian sacrament; though in ancient times every thing was said to be baptized which was dipped in the water, and it was as common to speak of baptizing cups, pans, tables, &c., as it is now to speak of washing them. Indeed every thing was said to be baptized which was actually dipped in water, no matter what the purpose. We should make no difficulty in believing that cases of infant baptism did really occur as early as the time of Irenæus, if a good unsuspected authority could be found for it. Our doubt is founded on the fact that he is the very first to mention it, if indeed he mentioned it at all.

16. "In early childhood." This was written by Justin Martyr, probably about 150 or 160 years after Christ. He is evidently endeavoring to show the greatest possible time of church membership, and merely asserts that some old men were members from early childhood. Now I was a member of the Baptist church from early childhood, but I was baptized on profession of my faith, and almost every Baptist church has such in its embraces. The fact that men were baptized in early childhood does not raise so much as an inference that they were not baptized on profession of faith.

17. So the nearer we approach the time of the apostles the less do we find in favor of infant baptism. till with Justin Martyr and Clement there is not one word, for we do not believe any man of sense will pretend for one moment that the simple expression "children taken from the water" is any proof of infant baptism.

(To be continued.)

PASTORAL LETTER.

JAMES J. STRANG, an Apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ, and a Prophet of Almighty God, to the Churches in all the world, and to all the Saints scattered abroad, greeting:—

For as much as it hath pleased God to reserve unto himself a people to serve him in these times, when the whole world is sunk in wickedness, and the fullness of the Gentiles is very nearly come in, and the time is near that God will pour out his wrath on them without measure, it behooves us that we commune oft with one another, and communicate spiritual treasures, such as God bestows upon us; and especially that we gather together and strengthen one another's hands, lest we be overcome of Satan and perish in the destruction of the ungodly. I am more impressed to address you now, because when iniquity is pouring forth among the Gentiles without measure the church has not altogether escaped from the inevitable consequence of too great a conformity to the world: except so far as influenced and changed by gospel principles, mankind are much the same in all countries and all ages. And if we do not PRACTICALLY conform to gospel principles, their influence is lost on us. Though men may snbscribe to and teach gospel principles all their lives, yet unless they conform thereto in the transaction of our common intercourse with men their influence will be directly lost upon us. And the same consequence which has fallen upon the Gentile world in consequence of their corrupt systems, will also befall the saints if they continue therein. Of this truth the history of the last few years has furnished us many sad examples.

There has been much speculation among men as to the cause of the great falling away in the church during the last four years. It has been attributed to a great variety of different causes, none of which are sufficient to produce so general corruption and such wide spread ruin. But there is one unnamed cause, abundantly equal to the production of such results, which remains to this day, still active and doing its work. So long as the saints conform in all things to Gentile usages and customs, so long they must expect to share the fate of those they thus imitate. And the poverty, suffering and sin which are wide spread throughout the earth, as the consequence of speculation, swindling and the most unblushing oppression of the poor and needy, cannot be escaped among the saints while they do these things. Let us now try to make our religion a reality. The time has come that the saints must practice their religion and profess their faith, and he that will not do it will be cut off from them. The same causes under like circumstances cannot fail to produce like effects. And as the Gentile social system has produced poverty, want and crime in all the world, in the face of the greatest improvements in the science of agriculture and the mechanic arts, so that in countries where machinery, steam and water do the work of millions of men there is a real want of both food and clothing, we cannot flatter ourselves that while we pursue the same course we can escape a still greater amount of suffering, beginning in poverty, as most of us do.

I have been constrained by the most obvious signs of the times to look over the world and see if there was anything in the state of the nations to justify the oft repeated assertion that the Lord delayeth his coming. Again, I have turned my thoughts inwardly, to contemplate the things which God has revealed relative to these days; and as the servant of God set upon the walls of Zion to watch, I admonish you to come out of Babylon and separate yourselves from her uncleanness. For the day of God's wrath upon her is near, and the time is at hand when his vengeance will be poured out.

The earth presents to us a most unhappy picture. The United States are engaged in a most bloody war against the most powerful sister republic which she has on the earth. This war she has waged without the authority of God, and for causes very far from commensurate to the blood she has shed or the misery she has inflicted. And passing by the nature of the cause (for I will not pretend that this war is causeless) there is good reason, from what God has said, to believe that the greatest portion of its evils will fall on those who have waged it. In the period of less than two years that has elapsed since its commencement, with the very small force engaged, the loss of life has been not less than ten thousand Americans, and probably three times that number of Mexicans. And the hatred, blood-thirstiness, and passion for violence it is engendering, will remain through generations to come, the consequences of men's corruptions and the instruments of God's wrath upon the nations.—Whatever may be the future fate of Mexico, she is practically denationalized. Yet every object professedly sought by the war is further off than at the beginning. Unceasing hostility and the desolation and waste of cities, towns and provinces will follow thick in the future history of the daughter of Babylon, and pestilence and famine will soon commence their work, as they have already in the old world.

So, too, though Europe is not convulsed with any general war, the elements of disorder and destruction are every where active.—The British Empire, which has by her policy and arms for a long time held sway throughout the earth, is just beginning to crumble to dust. A little territory of the extent of a small State, she has extended her dominion throughout the sea and to the four quarters of the earth. The sun never sets on her empire. The reveille on her legions beats time to the hours as the earth rolls round. The terror of her arms has carried desolation into every country on the face of the earth, and the bones of her sons who have fallen in her wars lie bleaching in the sun forever. So omnipresent has been her power that neither wilderness, mountain or island sufficed to hide the refugee from the emissaries of her oppression. The very name of Britain has become a terror to the most secluded and savage tribes. And with a mechanical power in actual use equal to the labor of one half the human race, the fifteen or sixteen millions of inhabitants of England are now in a state of destitution bordering on starvation. A majority of the people are real paupers, dependent on public and private charities for the bread that preserves life.—And with the immense wealth and power of the nation, it has not the ability to furnish bread to fill the mouths of starvation.

France, Germany, Poland, Hungary and provinces of other countries of Europe have suffered for want of food. And this not because there is any lack of men to work the lands, not because there is a lack of skill or any indisposition to work, but because the established order of things makes some men drones and others swindlers; and the habit of individual spunging and swindling induces those habits in nations. And the loss of that fellow-feeling among men which is necessary to heartily loving our neighbors as ourselves and doing as we would be done by is so general and pervasive in its influence, that few men ever think of consulting the interest and general good of mankind in any of their undertakings or avocations. And the man whose entire income is derived from the labors of others, without making any real return, and, consequently, who in a moral and religious view lives by mere swindling and robbery, is no less respected in society than those who are engaged in producing that which is necessary for the use of man.

Such are the consequences of the Gentile social system, under the most favorable circumstances. The examples I have named can be found in kind wherever man is, differing only in degree as the system has been more or less expanded. So entirely have they carried out the system of setting man against man, that the very commandment "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" has been struck out of the decalogue, and men have forgotten that God has engraved it on stone as a perpetual memorial against this ungodly generation. The selfishness engendered in all the intercourse of men is the fruitful cause of national wars and individual sufferings. The affairs of men have been so regulated, and the institutions established among them are of such kind and nature as to set man against his fellow man, and make it the interest of every one to injure others. While the interest of man is sought in the injury of his neighbor, it is vain to hope that men will do to others as they would that others should do to them. And though we may go forth proclaiming gospel brotherhood and gospel equality from year to year, yet so long as we practice on the same system which has produced all these evils among the Gentiles, so long we must suffer them among ourselves. It is vain to talk about or to hope for the fullness of the spirit of God, or the establishment of his kingdom, if we will not make our religion a practical reality, by doing the things we teach.

The doctrine of the equality of the saints in their temporal things was taught in the beginning of the church. Such an equality has been the hope of the poor and the virtuous from the commencement of the gathering. As early as January, 1831, the word of the Lord came by his prophet showing by parable the justice of equality among the children of the kingdom; (D. & C. sec. xii. p. 5;) and adds, "BE ONE; if ye are not one, ye are NONE OF MINE." A most thrilling admonition is also given, that the cry of the poor has ascended up to God, (id. 4,) and that the enemy in secret chambers sought their lives, and in consequence thereof the Lord said, "ye hear of wars in far countries, and ye say there will soon be wars in far countries, but ye know not the hearts of them in your OWN LAND; wherefore treasure up wisdom in your bosoms, lest the wickedness of men REVEAL these things to you WITH A VOICE LOUDER than that which SHALL SHAKE THE EARTH." D. & C. sec. xii. p. 4, 6.

This revelation by the wickedness of wicked men has been made so often, that the saints ought now to seek to obey God rather than to follow their own devices. As the saints learned not wisdom by what they heard, will they also refuse to learn by what they suffer? When God requires us to make any sacrifice to his cause, he requires a willing sacrifice. But if we give not willingly, he will not suffer us to possess what he requires. When the church went up to Missouri they went under a special command to consecrate their property, that all might be made equal. This command was never kept; yet they did not keep that which they refused to consecrate. Because the rich refused to make the poor rich with them, their enemies made them poor with the poor. Together were they driven out in destitution. From that time to this they have been driven from city to city, and from country to country; constantly going out robbed and plundered of that which they have greedily kept back from the Lord. Saints, will you that these things shall always be?

In February, 1831, less than one year after the organization of the church, a command was given that the saints consecrate their property for the poor, by a deed which could not be broken; receiving their inheritances according to their several wants, and requiring them to put all their surplus production from time to time into a common storehouse, and receive supplies of what they lack from it. D. & C. sec. xiii. p. 8, 9, 10, 12. In May, 1831, those who had so consecrated their substances, are commanded to organize themselves that they may be alike and RECEIVE ALIKE, and have a common storehouse. D. & C. sec. xxiii. In August, the same year, Martin Harris and all who were going up to Zion were commanded to make this consecration, to purchase lands in Zion for the saints. D. & C. sec. xviii. p. 6, 7, 10, 11, 12. In November, of the same year, the Lord said, "in your TEMPORAL THINGS you SHALL BE EQUAL, and this NOT GRUDGINGLY, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the SPIRIT shall be withheld. Now this commandment I give unto my servants for their benefit while they remain, for a manifestation of my blessings on their heads, and for a reward of their diligence; and for their SECURITY for FOOD and for RAIMENT, for an INHERITANCE; for HOUSES and for LANDS, in whatsoever circumstances I the Lord shall place them, and whithersoever I the Lord shall send them." D. & C. sec. xxvi. p. 3, 4.

In the succeeding years the ancient order established by revelation of God in the antediluvian world was again revealed as the order of the church for an EVERLASTING ORDER, and with many other precepts and commandments the following were received:—

D. & C. sec. lxxv. p. 1, 2. 3. "Verily I say unto you, the time has come, and is now at hand, and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion, or in other words, the city of Enoch, for a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause which ye have espoused, to the salvation of man, and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven, that you may be equal in the bands of heavenly things, yea and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things: for if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.

"And now, verily thus saith the Lord, it is expedient that all things be done unto my glory; wherefore a commandment I give unto you, to prepare and organize yourselves by a bond or everlasting covenant that cannot be broken.

"And he who breaketh it shall lose his office and standing in the church, and shall be delivered over to the buffetings of satan until the day of redemption. Behold this is the preparation wherewith I prepare you, and the foundation, and the ensample, which I give unto you whereby you may accomplish the commandments which are given you, that through my providence, notwithstanding the tribulation which shall descend upon you, that the church may stand independent above all other creatures beneath the celestial world, that you may come up unto the crown prepared for you, and be made rulers over many kingdoms, saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Zion."

Sec. lxxxvi. p. 4, 5. "It is expedient for my servant Alam and Ahashdah, Mahalaleel and Pelagoram, and my servant Gazelam, and Horah, and Olihah, and Shalemanasseh, and Mehemson, to be bound together by a bond and covenant that cannot be broken by transgression except judgment shall immediately follow, in your several stewardships, to manage the affairs of the poor, and all things pretaining to the bishopric both in the land of Zion, and in the land of Shinehah; therefore I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant, and it shall be done according to the laws of the Lord. Behold here is wisdom, also, in me, for your good. And you are to be EQUAL or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just: and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundred fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the COMMON PROPERTY of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

"This order I have appointed to be an everlasting order unto you and unto your successors, inasmuch as you sin not."

Sec. xcviii. p. 1, 2. 3. 10. 11. 12. "Verily I say unto you my friends, I give unto you counsel and a commandment, concerning all the properties which belong to the order, which I commanded to be organized and established, to be an united order, and an everlasting order for the benefit of my church, and for the salvation of men until I come, with promise immutable and unchangeable, that inasmuch as those whom I commanded were faithful, they should be blessed with a multiplicity of blessings; but inasmuch as they were not faithful, they were nigh unto cursing. Therefore inasmuch as some of my servants have not kept the commandment, but have broken the covenant, by covetousness and with feigned words, I have cursed them with a very sore and grievous curse: for I the Lord have decreed in my heart, that inasmuch as any man, belonging to the order, shall be found a transgressor; or, in other words, shall break the covenant with which ye are bound, he shall be cursed in his life, and shall be trodden down by whom I will.

"A commandment I give unto you, that ye shall organize yourselves, and appoint every man his stewardship, that every man may give an account unto me of the stewardship which is appointed unto him: for it is expedient that I the Lord should make every man accountable, as stewards over earthly blessings, which I have made and prepared for my creatures. I the Lord stretched out the heavens, and builded the earth as a very handy work; and ALL things therein are MINE; and it is my purpose to PROVIDE for my SAINTS for ALL THINGS ARE MINE; but it must needs be done in mine own way: and behold this is the way, that I the Lord have decreed to provide for my saints: that the POOR shall be exalted, in that the rich are made LOW; for the earth is full, and there is enough and to spare, yea, I prepared all things, and have given unto the children of men to be agents unto themselves. Therefore if any man shall take of the abundance which I have made, and impart not his portion, according to the law of my gospel, unto the poor, and the needy, he shall, with the wicked, lift up his eyes in hell, being in torment.

"Let all things be done according to counsel of the order, and united consent, or VOICE of the ORDER.

"And again, a commandment I give unto you concerning your stewardship which I have appointed unto you: behold ALL THESE PROPERTIES ARE MINE, or else your faith is vain, and ye are found hypocrites, and the covenants which ye have made unto me are broken: and if the PROPERTIES are MINE then ye are STEWARDS, otherwise ye are no STEWARDS. But verily I say unto you, I have appointed unto you to be stewards over mine house, even stewards indeed: and for this purpose I have commanded you to organize yourselves, even to shinelah, (write or publish,) my words, the fulness of my scriptures, the revelations which I have given unto you, and which I shall hereafter, from time to time, give unto you, for the purpose of building up my church and kingdom on the earth, and to prepare my people for the time when I shall dwell with them, which is nigh at hand.

"And ye shall prepare for yourselves a place for a treasury, and consecrate it unto my name; and ye shall appoint one among you to keep the treasury, and he shall be ordained unto this blessing; and there shall be a seal upon the treasury, and all the sacred things shall be delivered into the treasury, and no man among you shall call it HIS OWN, or any PART of it, for it shall belong TO YOU ALL with ONE ACCORD; and I give it unto you from this very hour: and now see to it, that ye go to and make use of the stewardship which I have appointed unto you, exclusive of the sacred things, for the purpose of shinelane, (writing or publishing,) these sacred things, as I have said: and the avails of the sacred things shall be had in the treasury, and a seal shall be upon it, and it shall not be used or taken out of the treasury by any one, neither shall the seal be loosed which shall be placed upon it, only by the voice of the order, or by command.

"And again, there shall be another treasury prepared and a treasurer appointed to keep the treasury, and a seal shall be placed upon it; and all moneys that you receive in your stewardships, by improving upon the properties which I have appointed unto you, in houses or in lands, or in cattle, or in all things save it be the holy and sacred writings, which I have reserved unto myself for holy and sacred purposes, shall be cast into the treasury as fast as you receive moneys by hundreds or by fifties, or by twenties, or by tens, or by fives; and let not ANY MAN among you say that it is HIS OWN, for it shall not be CALLED HIS, nor any part of it; and there shall not any part of it be used, or taken out of the treasury, only by the VOICE and COMMON CONSENT of the ORDER."

These commandments, though they are more perfect in system than any other wheres recorded, contain no other doctrine than what has always been taught by the gospel and the Melchisedec priesthood. Before Israel went into Egypt each patriarch was the head of a house, consisting in some instances of many thousands of persons, all holding one common estate and inheritance, in the use of which they enjoyed equal benefits. The family of Job could not have been less than 10,000 souls; that of Melchisedec was doubtless larger, and Abraham's probably numbered 4,000, ALL HEIRS WITH HIM of the promise of the land of Canaan for a perpetual inheritance. Gen. xvii. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13. Israel, when they entered into the land of Canaan, received their inheritances by famlies, not by individuals, and usually each family received a city and the country around extending half way to the next city for its possession. During the ministry of Christ he and the chief of his disciples had no separate property, but Judas, one of the twelve, was treasurer and purveyor for the whole. And though doubtless some individual disciples retained their estates, yet when a certain rich young man came inquiring what he should do to inherit eternal life, Christ told him to "sell what he had and give to the poor," and follow him. Matt. xix. 21. And about a year after the crucifixion of Christ, when the church was receiving great accessions, "the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own; but they had ALL THINGS COMMON: neither was there any among them that lacked; for as many as were possessors of houses or lands, sold them and brought the prices of the things that were sold and laid them at the Apostles' feet; and distribution was made to every man according as he had need." Acts iv. 32, 34, 35.

Finally, it pleased the Lord, when he chose me to be the shepherd of the flock, as he chose David to be king of Israel, not from among princes and rulers, but from the field, to show me still more clearly by many visions and revelations the true order for establishing judgment and justice, exalting the poor and delivering the needy. The work was once begun both in Kirtland and Zion, but failed by means of a multitude of transgressions. And from that time till this the church has not ceased to be scourged by her enemies, nor will she until she obeys this commandment. So general was the feeling in favor of the common stock and equality at the time the church was finally driven from Missouri, that Joseph wrote from prison to prevent it, telling them that though the principle was correct they had no authority to do the act, and must wait until God gave commandment. In his wisdom he has withheld the commandment till the great falling away is past.

The time has now come. The command went forth in July, 1846. (See Voree Herald, No. 7.) The work is begun, and every thing is ready for those who will come up to the help of the Lord, against those who have trodden down his children and had no compassion on the needy and the oppressed. The organization (including children) now consists of sixty persons, and applications for admission are being constantly received. The entire system is founded on UNION, EQUALITY, and a strict regard to the LAW OF GOD and the DISCIPLINE of the CHURCH. The association owns a farm of five hundred and sixty acres of land, four hundred acres of which might be cropped the coming season, and considering soil, water, salubrity and location, probably the very best in Wisconsin; several good stone buildings, a valuable water power and a property in all worth not less than $11,000, on which they owe debts a very little over three thousand. This property lies in, and in the immediate vicinity of Voree, is beautifully located, very productive and entirely healthy.

This we offer to the saints as the home of the poor and the asylum of the oppressed. Here we propose to share each others joys, and each others sorrows; each others toils, and each others possessions; and to teach mankind that LOVE and TRUTH WINS with peace and sweetness, what FORCE and FRAUD labors in vain to COMPEL. Here we intend to gather a COMMUNITY WHO SHALL BE EQUAL IN THEIR TEMPORAL THINGS; WHO SHALL DO TO OTHERS AS THEY WOULD BE DONE BY; AND WHO SHALL LOVE THEIR NEIGHBORS AS THEMSELVES. HERE SALVATION SHALL BE PRESENT, and the GOSPEL a PRACTICED REALITY. HERE PEACE SHALL REIGN.

The Lord and his saints say come. Let him that heareth say come. He that is poor and needy, let him come. Yea, come buy food, raiment and habitation, a perpetual inheritance in Zion, without money and without price. And whosoever will, let him come and possess the land with us freely. JAMES J. STRANG.

Palestine, Lee Co., Ill., Dec. 29th, 1847.

Mr. Strang:—

Sir,—I take this opportunity to drop you a line in answer to the line I received from you by Mr. Wasson, on his return, in which letter you seem to state that I am owing you as agent to the Voree Herald. If so, I should like to know the amount. I am willing to acknowledge to you, sir, that I am owing you, and you are owing me. And as well as I can recollect the accounts stand about thus: Sometime in the winter of 1845 I received a prospectus of the Herald from you, and to which I obtained, I think, two subscribers, and then I handed the prospectus to some one of your church, and he obtained several subscribers to the same and kept the money; and then some other member of your church took the paper and sent it across the Mississippi river into Iowa Territory to get subscribers, and that was the last that I ever saw of the paper, and if you know where it is, it is more than I know. And further, you will recollect that was the time of the troubles in Hancock. But no matter, I am ready and willing at all times to pay all I owe any one, and if you have an account against me and is just that I should pay the same, I will pay you all, deducting what you owe me on postage and per cent; and please let me hear again from you if you see fit. If you got the subscription paper that I had, you may possibly come at the thing, but if you have not you nor I nor any one else can make it out. But, sir, if you will make out my account, and I find it is just, I will pay every farthing, &c. Yours, &c.,

James J. Strang. Wm. BACKENSTOS.

This is certainly the richest excuse for cheating we ever saw.—1st, He collected money and passed the account into another man's hands, and therefore did not pay over the money or any part of it. 2d, He received the money in the time of the Hancock troubles.—3d, We owe him postage. (No, not unless you charge us the postage on a dun we sent you.) 4th, We owe him per centage for receiving this money, which he has never paid over or accounted for. Will Mr. Backenstos be so kind as to make out his account for per centage. If all the money will not pay him for receiving it, we should like to know how much odds he asks, and we will try for once to square the account, if we can find anything of such value that we can put it in his hands without paying him odds for taking it.

Post Office Abuses.—We had hoped, after the rather rigorous measures taken by us a few months since against certain faithless postmasters, to have no more trouble in that quarter. But complaints continue to come in from a few places. It is unaccountable to us that the Herald cannot be got at Montrose, Iowa, as well as at Burlington or Fort Madison, or that it should fail of being delivered to subscribers at Waynesville, Ohio, while they receive it without difficulty at all the other offices in that State. We do feel seriously wronged when the papers are kept back from the subscribers on any account; but if the postmasters or their families want the reading of the papers, and will write to us to that effect, we will furnish them gratis.

FRIENDSHIP WHICH NEVER WILL FADE.

In the tempest of life when the wave and the gale
Are around and above thee, if thy footing shall fail,
If thine eye shall grow dim and thy caution depart,
Look aloft! and be firm, and be fearless of heart.

If the friend who embraced in prosperity's glow,
With a smile for each joy, and a tear for each wo,
Should betray thee, when sorrows like clouds are array'd
Look aloft to that friendship that never shall fade.

Should they who are dearest—the son of thy heart,
The wife of thy bosom, in sorrow depart,
Look aloft from the shadows and dust of the tomb,
To the soil where affection is ever in bloom.

And O! when Death comes in terrors to cast
His tears o'er the future, his pall o'er the past,
In that moment of darkness, with hope in thy heart,
And a smile in thine eye, look aloft and depart.

FAITH.

We read that faith the assurance is
Of things the Lord is pleased to give,
If saints will ask in Jesus' name,
The blessing ask'd they may obtain.

By faith Jehovah fram'd the world,
And many wonders yet untold,
In ancient days, by faith were wrought,
By men who sought the law of God.

By faith an Enoch sought the Lord;
By faith obtain'd a just reward;
By faith beheld his maker's face,
And triumph'd o'er the powers of death.

By faith Elijah raised the dead:
And for three years the prophet said,
It should not rain in all the land;
'Twas done by Jesus' great command.

By faith a Joshua could say,
Stand still thou glorious king of day,
Thou splendid orb of night be still Till I Jehovah's word fulfill.

By faith the walls of Jericho
Met with a dreadful overthrow;
For Israel trusted in the Lord,
Believed he would fulfill his word.

But time would fail, the scripture saith,
To mention all who liv'd by faith.
Some quench'd the violence of fire,
And others waxed strong in war.

While some were mock'd and scourg'd, and ston'd,
Some for the gospel lost their homes;
Others were in the prison shut;
They kept the faith, denied it not.

And many wandered to and fro
As pilgrims on the earth below,
Knowing that they their Lord would see
On Zion's mount, from bondage free.

By faith proud Jordan's wave was stay'd;
In years to come the Lord hath said,
He will roll back the mighty flood,
Israel pass through the sea dry shod.

Remember, saints, the scripture saith,
The Lord doth work only by faith,
Among the sons of men below,
By faith he doth his wonders show.

O then, ye saints of latter days,
Come, let us study wisdom's ways;
Shake off the power of carnal sloth,
Obtain this glorious living faith.

Help us, O Lord, to fear thy name,
Help us this mighty faith to gain;
That we with ancient saints may stand,
When Christ shall reign on Zion's land.

Then let our faith and works agree,
Until from all our sins we're free;
O, may we practice peace and truth,
That we may dwell with Christ on earth.

Mary Page.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, FEB. 10, 1848. [No. 47.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF WISCONSIN,

AS PASSED IN CONVENTION, MADISON, FEB. 1ST, 1848.

PREAMBLE.

We, the people of Wisconsin, grateful to Almighty God for our freedom, in order to secure its blessings, from a more perfect government, insure domestic tranquility, and promote the general welfare, do establish this Constitution.

ARTICLE No. I.

DECLARATION OF RIGHTS.

Section 1. All men are born equally free and independent, and have certain inherent rights; among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. To secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just power from the consent of the governed.

Sec. 2. There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in this State, otherwise than for the punishment of crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.

Sec. 3. Every person may freely speak, write, and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that right, and no laws shall be passed to restrain or abridge the liberty of speech or of the press. In all criminal prosecutions or indictments for libel, the truth may be given in evidence, and if it shall appear to the jury that the matter charged as libellous be true, and was published with good motives and for justifiable ends, the party shall be acquitted; and the jury shall have the right to determine the law and the fact.

Sec. 4. The right of the people peaceably to assemble to consult for the common good, and to petition the goverment or any department thereof, shall never be abridged.

Sec. 5. The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate: and shall extend to all cases at law, without regard to the amount in controversy; but a jury trial may be waived by the parties in all cases, in the manner prescribed by law.

Sec. 6. Excessive bail shall not be required nor shall excessive fines be imposed, nor cruel and unjust punishment inflicted.

Sec. 7. In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to be heard by himself and counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him; to meet the witnesses face to face; to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his behalf; and in prosecutions by indictment or information, a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district wherein the offence shall have been committed, which county or district shall have been previously ascertained by law.

Sec. 8. No person shall be held to answer for a criminal offense, unless on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases of impeachment, or in cases cognizable by justices of the peace, or arising in the army or navy, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger, and no person for the same offense shall be put twice in jeopardy of punishment, nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself. All persons shall before conviction be bailable by sufficient sureties, except for capital offences when the proof is evident or the presumption great; and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended unless, when, in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

Sec. 9. Every person is entitled to a certain remedy in the laws, for all injuries or wrongs which he may receive in his person, property, or character; he ought to obtain right and justice freely, and without being obliged to purchase it; completely and without denial, promptly and without delay, conformably to the laws.

Sec. 10. Treason against the State shall consist only in levying war against the same, or in adhering to its enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open court.

Sec. 11. The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrant shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Sec. 12. No bill of attainder, ex post facto law, nor any law impairing the obligation of contracts shall ever be passed, and no conviction shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture of estate.

Sec. 13. The property of no person shall be taken for public use without just compensation therefor.

Sec. 14. All lands within the State are declared to be allodial, and feudal tenures are prohibited. Leases and grants of agricultural lands, for a longer term than fifteen years, in which rent, or service of any kind shall be reserved, and all fines and like restraints upon alienation, reserved in any grant of land, hereafter made, are declared to be void.

Sec. 15. No distinction shall ever be made by law, between resident aliens and citizens, in reference to the possession, enjoyment, or descent of property.

Sec. 16. No person shall be imprisoned for debt arising out of, or founded on a contract, express or implied.

Sec. 17. The privilege of the debtor to enjoy the necessary comforts of life shall be recognized by wholesome laws, exempting a reasonable amount of property from seizure or sale for the payment of any debt or liability hereafter contracted.

Sec. 18. The right of every man to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of his own conscience shall never be infringed, nor shall any man be compelled to attend, erect, or support any place of worship, or to maintain any ministry, against his consent. Nor shall any control of, or interference with the rights of conscience be permitted, or any preference be given by law to any religious establishments or modes of worship. Nor shall any money be drawn from the treasury for the benefit of religious societies, or theological or religious seminaries.

Sec. 19. No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification for any office of public trust under the State, and no person shall be rendered incompetent to give evidence in any court of law or equity, in consequence of his opinions on the subject of religion.

Sec. 20. The military shall be in strict subordination to the civil power.

Sec. 21. Writs of error shall never be prohibited by law.

Sec. 22. The blessings of a free government can only be maintained by a firm adherence to justice, moderation, temperance, frugality, and virtue, and by frequent recurrence to fundamental principles.

ARTICLE II.—BOUNDARY.

Sec. 1. It is hereby ordained and declared that the State of Wisconsin doth consent and accept of the boundaries prescribed in the act of Congress entitled "an act to enable the people of Wisconsin Territory to form a Constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union," approved August sixth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-six, to wit: Beginning at the north east corner of the State of Illinois, that is to say, at a point in the centre of Lake Michigan, where the line of forty-two degrees, and thirty minutes of north latitude crosses the same; thence, runningwith the boundary line of the State of Michigan, through Lake Michigan, Green Bay, to the mouth of the Monomonee river; thence up the channel of said river to the Brule river, thence up said last mentioned river to Lake Brule; thence along the southern shore of Lake Brule, in a direct line to the centre of the channel, between Middle and South islands, in the Lake of the Desert; thence in a direct line to the head waters of the Montreal river, as marked upon the survey made by captain Cram; thence down the main channel of the Montreal river to the middle of Lake Superior; thence through the centre of Lake Superior to the mouth of the St. Louis river; thence up the main channel of said river to the first rapids in the same, above the Indian village according to Nicolet's map; thence due south to the main branch of the river St. Croix; thence down the main channel of said river to the Mississippi; thence down the centre of the main channel of that river, to the north west corner of the State of Illinois; thence due east with the northern boundary of the State of Illinois, to the place of beginning, as established by "an act to enable the people of the Illinois territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union on an equal footing with the original States," approved April 18th, 1818. Provided, however, That the following alteration of the aforesaid boundary be, and hereby is, proposed to the Congress of the United States as the preference of the State of Wisconsin, and if the same shall be assented and agreed to by the Congress of the United States, then the same shall be and forever remain obligatory on the State of Wisconsin, viz: Leaving the aforesaid boundary line at the foot of the Rapids of the St. Louis river; thence in a direct line, bearing southwesterly to the mouth of Iskodewaba or Rum river, where the same empties into the Mississippi river; thence down the main channel of the said Mississippi river, as prescribed in the aforesaid boundary.

Sec. 2. The propositions contained in the act of Congress aforesaid, are hereby accepted, ratified and confirmed, and shall remain irrevocable without the consent of the United States, and it is hereby ordained that this State shall never interfere with the primary disposal of the soil within the same, by the United States, nor with any regulation Congress may find necessary for securing the title in such soil to bonafide purchasers thereof; and no tax shall be imposed on land, the property of the United States; and in no case shall non-resident proprietors be taxed higher than residents. Provided, That nothing in this constitution, or in the act of Congress aforesaid, shall in any manner prejudice or affect the rights of the State of Wisconsin to five hundred thousand acres of land granted to said State, and to be hereafter selected and located, by, and under the act of Congress, entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and grant pre-emption rights," approved September fourth, one thousand eight hundred and forty-one.

ARTICLE III.—SUFFRAGE.

Sec. 1. Every male person of the age of twenty-one years or upwards, belonging to either of the following classes, who shall have resided in the State for one year next preceding any election, shall be deemed a qualified elector at such election:

1st. White citizens of the United States.

2d. White persons of foreign birth who shall have declared their intention to become citizens in compliance with the laws of the United States on the subject of naturalization.

3d. Persons of Indian blood who have once been declared by law of Congress to be citizens of the United States, any subsequent act of Congress notwithstanding.

4th. Civilized persons of Indian descent, not members of any tribe.

Provided, That the legislature may at any time extend by law the right of suffrage to persons not herein enumerated; but no such law shall be in force until the same shall have been submitted to a vote of the people at a general election to be held subsequent to the passage thereof, and approved by a majority of all the votes cast at such election.

Sec. 2. No person under guardianship, or non compos mentis, insane, or convicted of treason or felony, shall be permitted to vote at any election, unless restored to civil rights by law, or by removal of natural or other inability.

Sec. 3. All votes shall be given by ballot, except for such township officers as may by law be directed or allowed to be otherwise chosen; and in all elections to be made by the legislature, the members thereof shall vote viva voce, and their votes shall be entered on the journal.

Sec. 4. No person shall be deemed to have lost his residence in this State by reason of his absence on business of the United States or of this State.

Sec. 5. No soldier, seaman, or marine in the army or navy of the United States, shall be deemed a resident of this State in consequence of being stationed within the same.

Sec. 6. Laws may be passed excluding from the right of suffrage all persons who have been or may be convicted of bribery or larceny, or of any infamous crime, and for depriving every person who shall make, or become directly or indirectly interested in any bet or wager depending upon the result of any election, from the right to vote at such election.

ARTICLE IV.—LEGISLATIVE.

Sec. 1. The legislative power shall be vested in a senate and assembly.

Sec. 2. The number of the members of the assembly shall never be less than fifty-four, nor more than one hundred. The senate shall consist of a number of members not more than one-third, nor less than one-fourth of the number of the members of the assembly.

Sec. 3. The legislature shall provide by law for an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State, in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and at the end of every ten years thereafter; and at their first session after such enumeration, and also after each enumeration made by the authority of the United States, the legislature shall apportion and district anew, the members of the senate and assembly, according to the number of inhabitants, excluding Indians not taxed, and soldiers and officers of the United States army and navy.

Sec. 4. The members of the assembly shall be chosen annually by single districts on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday of November, by the qualified electors of the several districts, such districts to be bounded by county precincts, town or ward lines, to consist of contiguous territory, and be in as compact form as practicable.

Sec. 5. The senators shall be chosen by single districts of convenient contiguous territory, at the same time and in the same manner as members of the assembly are required to be chosen, and no assembly district shall be divided in the formation of a senate district. The senate district shall be numbered in regular series, and the senators chosen by the odd numbered districts, shall go out of office at the expiration of the first year, and the senators chosen by the even numbered districts, shall go out of office at the expiration of the second year, and thereafter the senators shall be chosen for the terms of two years.

Sec. 6. No person shall be eligible to the legislature, who shall not have resided one year within the State, and be a qualified elector in the district which he may be chosen to represent.

Sec. 7. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its own members; and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Sec. 8. Each house may determine the rules of its own proceedings, punish for contempts and disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds of all the members elected, expel a member; but no member shall be expelled a second time for the same cause.

Sec. 9. Each house shall choose its own officers, and the senate shall choose a temporary president, when the lieutenant governor shall not attend as president, or shall act as governor.

Sec. 10. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and publish the same except such parts as require secrecy. The doors of each house shall be kept open except when the public welfare shall require secrecy. Neither house shall, without consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days.

Sec. 11. The legislature shall meet at the seat of government, at such time as shall be provided by law once in each year, and not oftener, unless convened by the governor.

Sec. 12. No member of the legislature shall, during the term for which he was elected, be appointed or elected to any civil office, in the State, which shall have been created, or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during the term for which he was elected.

Sec. 13. No person being a member of Congress, or holding any civil or military office under the United States, shall be eligible to a seat in the legislature; and if any person shall, after his election as a member of the legislature, be elected to Congress, or be appointed to any office, civil or military, under the government of the United States, his acceptance thereof shall vacate his seat.

Sec. 14. The governor shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies as may occur in either house of the legislature.

Sec. 15. Members of the legislature shall in all cases except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest, nor shall they be subject to any civil process, during the session of the legislature, nor for fifteen days, next before the commencement and after the termination of each session.

Sec. 16. No member of the legislature shall be liable in any civil action or criminal prosecution whatever, for words spoken in debate.

Sec. 17. The style of the laws of the State shall be, "The People of the State of Wiscousin represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:" and no law shall be enacted except by bill.

Sec. 18. No private or local bill, which may be passed by the legislature, shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title.

Sec. 19. Any bill may originate in either house of the legislature, and a bill passed by one house may be amended by the other.

Sec. 20. The yeas and nays of the members of either house, on any question, shall, at the request of one-sixth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Sec. 21. Each member of the legislature shall receive for his services two dollars and fifty cents for each day's attendance during the session, and ten cents for every mile he shall travel in going to and returning from the place of the meeting of the legislature, on the most usual route.

Sec. 22. The legislature may confer upon the boards of supervisors of the several counties of the State such powers of a local, legislative and administrative character as they shall from time to time prescribe.

Sec. 23. The legislature shall establish but one system of town and county government, which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable.

Sec. 24. The legislature shall never authorize any lottery or grant any divorce.

Sec. 25. The legislature shall provide by law that all stationary required for the use of the State, and all printing authorized and required by them to be done for their use, or for the State, shall be let by contract to the lowest bidder; but the legislature may establish a maximum price. No member of the legislature, or other State officer, shall be interested either directly or indirectly, in any such contract.

Sec. 26. The legislature shall never grant any extra compensation to any public officer, agent, servant, or contractor, after the services shall have been rendered or the contract entered into. Nor shall the compensation of any public officer be increased or diminished during his term of office.

Sec. 27. The legislature shall direct by law in what manner and in what courts suits may be brought against the State.

Sec. 28. Members of the legislature, and all officers, executive and judicial, except such inferior officers as may be by law excepted, shall before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe an oath or affirmation to support the constitution of the United States and the constitution of the State of Wisconsin, and faithfully to discharge the duties of their respective offices to the best of their ability.

Sec. 29. The legislature shall determine what persons shall constitute the militia of the State, and may provide for organizing and disciplining the same in such manner as shall be precribed by law.

Sec. 30. In all elections to be made by the legislature, the members thereof shall vote viva voce, and their votes shall be entered on the journal.

ARTICLE V.—EXECUTIVE.

Section 1. The executive power shall be vested in a governer, who shall hold his office for two years. A lieutenant governor shall be elected at the same time and for the same term.

Sec. 2. No person except a citizen of the United States, and a qualified elector of the State, shall be eligible to the office of governor or lieutenant governor.

Sec. 3. The governor and lieutenant governor shall be elected by the qualified electors of the State, at the times and places of choosing members of the legislature. The persons respectively having the highest number of votes for governor and lieutenant governor shall be elected; but in case two or more shall have an equal and the highest number of votes for governor or lieutenant governor, the two houses of the legislature, at its next annual session, shall forthwith, by joint ballot, choose one of the persons so having an equal and the highest number of votes for governor or lieutenant governor. The returns of election for governor and lieutenant governor shall be made in such manner as shall be provided by law.

(To be continued.)

Philadelphia, January 18th, 1848.

President James J. Strang:—

My ever Dear Brother,—It is with pleasure I address you at this time. I now see the reason why God has permitted my way to be hedged up so as to keep me here this winter. There has been great confusion in the camp of late, and Orson Hyde was sent on here to Philadelphia; but it was no go. Orson has been frightened out of town. He was much disappointed to find me here. Last Sunday tried the strength of the parties of truth and error. Their congregation numbered nearly one hundred—old hunkers, spiritual women, Gentiles, our friends that went out of curiosity, and all—that is, it numbered one hundred in the morning, but in the afternoon they did not number seventy-five, and in the evening less yet. Our congregation numbered four hundred in the morning, over six hundred in the afternoon, and in the evening over nine hundred and fifty, besides many that stood up, and many that went away that could not get in the hall. It was a great day—"one of the days you read about"—it was a death blow to Hyde's hopes and expectations. Many that went to hear him said they never would go again. They said he was all darkness. And when he saw the small congregation in the afternoon he said, "Brethren, it is a dark day." Some of the Brighamites told him to preach on authority.—He said he could, but had not time. They don't like his answer. They think he is afraid, and they think just right. I wrote Orson a letter yesterday that I think will stir him up some. I have just heard that he left the city this morning very sudden, and that he has not left a line to tell where roams the disappointed fallen hero. He has not gone to New York, for there he will find no rest for the sole of his foot. And in Boston I know they will drum him out. Report is, that he has gone back to the camp. Thus you see "the wicked flee when no man pursues, but the righteous are as bold as a lion." I would advise him to go to the camp, and never show his polluted, corrupted carcase in civilized society again. And I expect that Orson has come to the conclusion that they must decrease, but we must increase.

God is raising us up friends on every side. I am more than ever convinced of true policy, of drawing the lines hard on old hunkers. Some of them, both Brighamites and Ex-Rigdonites, have offered themselves for baptism, but I have refused them, and told them to bring forth fruits meet for repentance. And when I am convinced they do, I will receive them. My object in keeping them back is, that the new members may get strength to overpower them, and keep the devils in them down. My only fear now is, that we will get in too much old leaven—it was the old leaven that destroyed the work at Boston for the time being; and look at the injury it has done you at Voree through ——— ——— and others, but, thank God, they are gone. I have lately had a vision that has given me great comfort. Our prospect here is glorious. I expect to baptize again this week. To God be all the glory. Amen.

I am putting up with our old friend Peter Hess, who is still firm in the faith and has never flinched or wavered. Brother Syphert and many other brethren join with brother Hess in love to you all. I have preached here six weeks, and I intend to stay until the first of March, when I start for Voree. Give my love to brother John E. Page. I don't think there is a Rigdonite left on the earth; and if you knew the wickedness they engaged in you would be glad they were broken up. I have written three or four letters to you since I have heard from you. God bless and prosper you forever, is my sincere prayer.

G. J. ADAMS.

☞ In this No. we commence the publication of the new Constitution of Wisconsin. Many of our readers will doubtless feel much interest in it, and we feel a little in the pay for printing it.

Bowling Green, January 23d, 1848.

Brother James J. Strang:—

Dear Sir,—I now add a few lines to inform you of the state of things here in this part of the country. Brother R. Anderson and myself have this day and last evening been promulgating Mormonism to quite a respectable audience. People here seem inclined to hear, but slow to believe. But prejudice seems to be decreasing, and I hope to see the day arrive when truth will crush falsehood and error to rise no more. There is a branch organized at Pleasant Garden in Putnam Co., Ia., of which brother Anderson has the oversight. They are united I believe in the faith, and uphold or sustain you as the legal successor of Joseph Smith. Which branch numbers ten or twelve, and some few Brighamites around them, and there is another branch in Clay and Green counties which numbers about twelve, but they are not all united as yet.

The great abomination which took place at Nauvoo seems to cause a wavering of the minds of some, yet I feel as though they most probably will be reclaimed yet. My circumstances and health since I left your vicinity have been such as to prevent me from devoting much of my time in preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and have been in a great degree destitute of some necessary instruction. And at any time when you have an opportunity of giving me any important news please do so, and be assured it will be received with cheerfulness. Please inform brother Wagener that myself and family are well at this time, and all the brethren in those parts with whom he was acquainted desire to hear from him and his family, and the prosperity of all the saints in the city of Voree.

With esteem and regard, I remain yours in the bond of gospel love,

GEORGE W. DUNCAN.

We publish the following to show how much real progress the world is making towards a sectarian millenium:—

"RAW COTTON AND RAW MORALITY.

"An eminent merchant of Boston lately testified in Court that the morals of people engaged in the cotton trade had so far deteriorated in that city that it is no longer safe to buy raw cotton there by the sample, which it was perfectly safe to do about thirty years ago. This deterioration of morals is not confined to Boston nor to the cotton trade. The progress of the age in many things is remarkable,—but in nothing is it more remarkable than in roguery. A multitude of frauds have been introduced into almost every kind of business, and half of the great inventions of the day are cheating contrivances. It is not safe to buy anything by the sample, or to trust to the outside appearance of any merchandise. The gentlemen who cart oysters, fruit and vegetables about the streets, keep some of these articles of a superior quality for samples; the best are placed on the top to gratify the eye of the customer, but when a sale is to be made, a very inferior kind of merchandise is raked out from below. Once it was safe to rely upon the brand in purchasing flour, but now second hand flour barrels of approved brands are often purchased, refilled with something quite different from the original contents, and sold to the unsuspicious for prime Genesee, &c.

"In short, we might fill a whole paper with a mere catalogue of the impositions practiced by different tradesmen—impositions which were unthought of thirty years ago. Talk of the cotton trade! We have as much roguery in the linen trade, the woolen trade and the hemp trade—for even oakum is not picked now as faithfully as it was thirty years ago.

"'Come bright improvement on the car of time,' says Mr. Tom Campbell. The improvements in roguery may be said to travel on cars with steam propulsion. They advance rapidly—no other kind of improvement can keep pace with them. It is distressing to think that as the human species improve in knowledge, they fall off in honesty and virtue. Our school boys know more than their grandfathers did in their old age—but the best use that most people now make of their extended knowledge is to outwit and defraud their neighbors.

"The testimony of the old Boston cotton merchant has led us into a mournful train of reflections. The mention of 'thirty years ago' induces many unpleasant comparisons. What have we gained by the progress of art and science, if moral depravity is one of the results? Give us rude and uncivilized honesty in preference to cultivated and refined rascality."—Scott's Weekly.

For the Gospel Herald.

"WE WANT TO SEE THE CHURCH RISE AND PROSPER."

The foregoing is a common saying among some who profess to be members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, yet these same individuals do little if anything to bring about so desirable a result. They seem to forget that they are members of the church, required by the law of the Lord to give their time, their talents, their money, in short, their all to the cause of God. Brethren, this ought not so to be. Remember that the Lord requires of you, as saints, to serve him with all your might, mind, and strength.—Those who are neither cold nor hot, but are lukewarm, the Lord has said he would spew out of his mouth. There is no such thing as standing still in the work of God. If you want to see the church rise and prosper you must do your part. "He that gathereth not with us scattereth." Do not think you have done enough by subscribing fifty cents or two dollars for the "Herald," but tithe yourselves of all you possess to build a Temple according to the command of God, that he may come and reveal unto us those things which he revealed unto his church anciently; those principles by which the poor will be exalted and delivered from deceit and violence, and those things which have been kept in the secrets of heaven before the foundation of the world. Let the interest of the church be your interest, and the church will rise and prosper, and you be saved in her when the judgments of Almighty God passeth like a whirlwind on the ungodly of this generation. G. W.

LAW.—Strange are the delusions under which we have lived!—The age is one of active intellect, of sound thought, and of vigorous common sense. Old heresies in government and ethics have exploded and no one doubts the capability of the people to govern themselves—to select their own religion—to choose their own schools—to manage their own families, and, respecting their neighbor's rights, to protect their own. The searching hand of reformation has winnowed away the rottenness which mildewed the public intelligence. The freshness of youth is around every thing except the rotten and misshapen trunk of LAW. Rotten to the heart by chicanery, its original beauty has perished, and by vicious usage, its blessings have been turned into curses. Controlling it is the full spirit of law-craft, which borrows its spurious wisdom from the age in which witches were burnt in which judical combats decided right. It has no affinity with common sense—candor is its aversion, and simple truth its enemy. Its principles are a confused mass of conflicting counts, pleading, precedents, dicta, forms, mystery and jargon; its spoils, the money of the people wrung from them by a system, the pillage which, is utterly unparalleled in the history of taxation.—Dem. Review.

☞ We hope soon to complete several unfinished publications, among them the two discussions, the social relations, &c.

"INFANT BAPTISM.

(Concluded.)

ERRATUM.—In the last No. there was an error in the printing of the following paragraph, which entirely destroyed the force of our animadversion. The words in capitals, the very subject of criticism, were left out of the print.

"Irenæus says, 'being a master, he (Christ) had the age also of a master. * * * For he came to save all persons by himself; all, I mean, who by his authority are baptized unto God; infants, AND LITTLE ONES, AND CHILDREN, and youth, and older persons.'" (Exam. Gnostic Errors.)

"Let it be borne in mind that John lived until near the close of the first century. (He died A. D. 100.) Polycarp must have been familiar with the doctrines and practice of John and the apostolic church. And Irenæus, his scholar, could not have been mistaken, when he said, infants were baptized by the authority of Christ.—We say with confidence, then, that infant baptism was not brought in as an innovation after the death of John.

"We have traced this doctrine back to its fountain. Let us now inquire whether it has ever met with any opposition in its progress to our own times. 18.

"Tertullian was, so far as we know, the first writer who attempted to change the custom of the church in relation to this doctrine.—He was born in Carthage, in the year 160. He was a great man, but he had great faults, &c., &c. His reason for delaying baptism till old age was, 'His belief that baptism washed away all sin committed before baptism, and that it was impossible to obtain the remission of sins committed after its administration.

"From the time of Tertullian to the twelfth century, infants were universally regarded and treated as proper subjects of baptism; and so far as we know, there was no one who taught a different doctrine, or endeavored to unsettle the long established practice of the church.

"From this rapid historical view it appears that infant baptism was practiced by the whole church from the first century 19 to the sixteenth, with the exception of those who held that infants were incapable of salvation, and those who denied all baptism.

"That each age received this practice from its predecessor as a divine ordinance, that he who first advised parents to delay it, and those who rejected it, did not so upon scriptural or historical grounds, but for reasons derived from theis manifestly erroneous systems,—and that the doctrine now quite prevalent, that adult believers are only proper subjects of baptism, is an error of very recent date, and has been, and is now, rejected by the great body of christians throughout the world. 20.

"Let us pause and reflect seriously before we deny the validity of the historical argument for infant baptism. 21. For in doing this, we not only deprive ourselves of a most precious ordinance, but we assume a principle which sweeps away all the other ordinances of religion. Let it be borne carefully in mind, that every witness almost whom we examine touching the genuineness of the Bible, or the divine origin of the christian Sabbath, testifies also to the fact that infant baptism begun with the christian Sabbath, and was sanctioned by the same authority. How can any one receive their testimony on one point and reject it on another, equally important, and equally within their knowledge? 22.

"If we give up infant baptism on the ground that the uniform testimony of the fathers of the church, for many hundred years after the apostles, is not sufficient to produce conviction,—how shall we answer the infidel, who denies the genuineness of the Bible, or the seventh-day Baptist, who rejects the christian, and keeps the Jewish Sabbath? 23.

"It is a rule in law, that no man shall impeach his witnesses upon one point, and use them on another.

"This rule is founded in common sense, and doubtless will be rigidly enforced in the case before us.

"We shall not be permitted to reject the united testimony of the fathers, in relation to a material fact, merely because that fact may have an unfavorable bearing upon our novel systems, and yet sustain it in support of other facts we may wish to prove." 24.

Note 18. Yes, you have traced it to its fountain, and then you have traced much further, where there is neither rivulet or fountain. You trace infant baptism to Irenæus, (if what you attribute to him be not a forgery,) and no further. Not a writer who preceded him so much as alludes to it. And you cannot torture their words into an allusion to it. The fact that Irenæus was a scholar of Polycarp, and that Polycarp received his ministry and faith from John, proves just precisely nothing. That, like the present, was a day of innovation. And this pretension that John must have taught the doctrine because Irenæus believed it, is just as rational as to say that my grandfather was most certainly a teacher of Mormonism because I am a believer of that faith.

19. No, it does not appear what was the practice of any part of the church in the first century. It merely appears that in one bishopric in the 2d century very young children were SOMETIMES BAPTIZED, and that one bishop was found to defend it; and that it was so far from universal that Tertullian in the third century publicly opposed it. Though the grounds of his opposition were not sound, the fact that he opposed it shows that its authority was then doubted, and it was not received as an established apostolic practice.

20. As well might you say that refusing to worship the mass, pray for the dead, and pray to saints and angels, denying the seven sacraments, &c., were all errors of a recent date, rejected by the great body of christians throughout the world. The various churches of the east which have been separate from the Catholic church from the times of the early fathers, and, consequently, could not have derived their customs, ceremonies, sacraments and doctrine from the decrees of popes and councils, almost without exception practice the same sacraments allowed in the Catholic church.—They believe in purgatory and relief to the dead. They pray to saints, and they adore images, pictures, &c., and respect and preserve relics as do the Catholics, and most of them baptize infants, while others reject it. Here several practices are all equally sustained by the general practice through successive ages by the great body of christians. They are all in like manner traceable back to the early fathers. Such as are true run back to their fountain with Christ and the apostles, while the false run out just where infant baptism does with some of the fathers in the beginning of the great falling away spoken of by Paul. Either the testimony of these christian fathers is valid, or it is not. If it is, it is just as valid to prove what Protestants don't believe, as what they do. If these Tractarians believe the testimony which they quote, then they not only believe in infant baptism, but in popish supremacy, seven sacraments, transubstantiation, adoration of images, prayers to saints, &c. And if they do not believe these things, then they have been offering false witness to prove a favorite dogma, which they cannot find in the scriptures.

21. Ah, gentlemen, stick to that text or let it alone. Be one thing or the other. Allow the testimony of your historic facts all round, or as consistent men deny it altogether. Either go the load as Catholics, that tradition and the writings of the fathers is pertinent evidence in theology, or as Protestants confine yourselves to the Bible as your sufficient rule of faith and practice.

22. So say we; and in note 24 we will give you a little of their testimony on several other points besides infant baptism, which, as you have quoted their testimony, you will receive.

23. "How shall we answer the INFIDEL or the SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST?" You cannot answer them at all. But the fact that your system involves you in difficulties and absurdities does not prove it true. You are equally unable to answer them if it is conceded to you that tradition is sufficient to prove the change of the Sabbath and the divine authority of the scriptures. For if tradition is allowed to be sufficient to establish facts, doctrines and religious ceremonies for a period of many hundred years, the infidel will quote the traditions of half the human race equally well authenticated against the scriptures. He will bring in the traditions and written history of Hindoos, Chinese, Persians, Mohammedans and many other nations just as well proved as your traditions of the apostles, and writings of the fathers, to prove that their sacred books are really divine, and, of consequence, that the scriptures are false. And the seventh-day Baptist will produce a dozen doctrines better supported by tradition and the fathers than your bantling, and say to you, "we will not impeach a witness on one point and use him on another." The grand error of your system lies in this,—You begin like all Protestants, with the declaration that the Bible is a whole entire and sufficient rule in all matters of faith and practice. Directly some opposing Protestant attacks you on one of the errors you have received on the Roman Catholic tradition, and after a vain search for scriptural authority you abandon your Protestant standard of faith and chase off through the Catholic fathers for an institution not known in the scriptures. When will men learn that there is but one real and true standard of religious truth—that same first fountain of living water, continually flowing, the revelation of God?

24. In conclusion of this matter we beg to say that we cannot look upon such a work, emanating as it does from an association of learned Protestant divines, in any other light than as one mass of hypocrisy and deceit. It is impossible that they should have looked over the writings of the early fathers enough to bring the extracts they have made from them, without knowing that on every point of disagreement between Catholics and Protestants these same fathers one and all have given just as strong testimony on the Catholic side as they have in this case for infant baptism. Consequently, when they ask us to believe infant baptism a true ordinance of christianity, quoting the fathers for it, and tell us "it is a rule of law that no man shall impeach his witnesses on one point, and use them on another," they confess that they are bound to believe what even these fathers have written in favor of the Roman Catholic faith.—They have used them on the one point, infant baptism, and tell us they cannot reject them on others. These same fathers, and many of their cotemporaries, have left their testimony on many points of christian faith. Allowing it to stand as these Tractarians say, what comes of Protestantism? It is not so much as chaff before the wind. Upon the subject of confession to the priest, and absolution, Tertullian, who lived in the age next to that of the apostles, and is the earliest Latin writer whose works we possess, writes thus: "If you withdraw from confession, think of hell-fire, which confession extinguishes." (Lib. de Pœnit.) Origen, who wrote soon after him, and whom you now quote for infant baptism, inculcates the necessity of confessing our most secret sins, even those of thought, (Hom. 3 in Levit.,) and advises the sinner "to look carefully about him in choosing the person to whom he is to confess his sins."—(Hom. 2 in Ps. xxxvii.) St. Basil, in the fourth century, wrote thus: "It is necessary to disclose our sins to those (the priests) to whom the dispensation of the divine mysteries is committed."—(Rule 229.) St. Paulinus, the disciple of St. Ambrose, relates, that this holy doctor used to "weep over the penitents whose confessions he heard, but never disclosed their sins to any but to God alone." (In Vit. Ambros.) St. Augustin writes, "Our merciful God wills us to confess in this world, that we may not be confounded in the other;" (Hom. 20;) and elsewhere he says, "Let no one say to himself, I do penance to God in private. Is it then in vain that Christ has said, 'Whatsoever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven?' Is it in vain that the keys have been given to the church?" (Hom. 49.)

On the real presence and sacrifice of Christ, in the eucharist, St. Justin, who appears to have been, in his youth, contemporary with St. John the Evangelist, says, "Christ instituted a sacrifice in bread and wine, which christians offer up in every place," quoting Malachi i. 19. Dialog. cum Tryphon.. St. Irenæus, whose master, Polycarp, was a disciple of that evangelist, says, that "Christ, in consecrating bread and wine, has instituted the sacrifice of the new law, which the church received from the apostles, according to the prophecy of Malachi." L. iv. 32. St. Cyprian calls the eucharist "a true and full sacrifice;" and says, that "as Melchisedec offered bread and wine, so Christ offered the same, namely, his body and blood." Epist. 63. St. Chrysostom, St. Augustin, St. Ambrose, &c., are equally clear and expressive on this point. The last mentioned calls this sacrifice by the name of missa, (mass,) so do St. Leo, St. Gregory, Bede, &c. I should write a huge folio volume, were I to transcribe all the authorities in proof of the real presence and transubstantiation which may be collected from the ancient fathers, councils, and historians. St. Ignatius, an apostolical bishop of the first century, describing certain contemporary heretics, says: "They do not admit of eucharists and oblations, because they do not believe the eucharist to be the flesh of our Savior Jesus Christ, who suffered for our sins." (Ep. ad Smyrn.) I pass over the testimonies, to the same effect, of St. Justin Martyr, (Apolog. to Emp. Antonin,) St. Irenæus, (L. v. c. 11,) St. Cyprian, (Ep. 54 ad Cornel,) and other fathers of the second and third centuries, but will quote the following words from Origen, already quoted for infant baptism: "Manna was formerly given as a figure; but now, the flesh and blood of the Son of God is specifically given, and is real food." (Hom. 7 in Levit.) I must omit the clear testimonies which St. Hilary, St. Basil, St. John Chrysostom, St. Jerom, St. Augustin, and a number of other illustrious doctors of the fourth and fifth ages furnish; but I cannot pass over those of St. Cyril of Jerusalem, and St. Ambrose of Milan, because these, occurring in catechetical discourses or expositions of the christian doctrine to their young neophytes, must evidently be understood in the most plain and literal sense they can bear. The former says: "Since Christ himself affirms thus of the bread, This is my body, who is so daring as to doubt it? And since he affirms, This is my blood, who will deny that it is his blood? At Cana of Galilee, he, by an act of his will, turned water into wine, which resembles blood; and is he not then to be credited when he changes wine into blood? Therefore, full of certainty, let us receive the body and blood of Christ; for, under the form of bread, is given to thee his body, and, under the form of wine, his blood." (Catech. Mystagog. 4.) St. Ambrose thus argues with his spiritual children: "Perhaps you will say, Why do you tell me that I receive the body of Christ, when I see quite another thing? We have this point, therefore, to prove. How many examples do we produce to show you, that this is not what nature made it, but what the benediction has consecrated it; and that the benediction is of greater force than nature, because, by the benediction, nature itself is changed! Moses cast his rod on the ground, and it became a serpent; he caught hold of the serpent's tail, and it recovered the nature of a rod." (De his qui Myst. Init. c. 9.

If testimony of an earlier age is deemed better, possibly that of Christ is sufficiently in point: "I am the bread of life. If any man shall eat of this bread he shall live forever, and the bread that I will give is my flesh, which I give for the life of the world. Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whoso eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day." John vi. 48 to 54. "And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it: For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins." Matt. xxvi. 26 to 28.

On the subject of purgatory St. Chrysostom, in the third century, wrote, "It was not without good reason ordained by the apostles, that mention should be made of the dead in the tremendous mysteries, because they knew well that these would receive great benefit from it." (In cap. i. Philip. Hom. 3.) Tertullian, who lived in the age next to that of the apostles, speaking of a pious widow, says: "She prays for the soul of her husband, and begs refreshment (L. De Monogam. c. 10) for him." Similar testimonies of St. Cyprian, in the following age, are numerous. I shall satisfy myself with quoting one of them, where describing the difference between some souls, which are immediately admitted into heaven, and others, which are detained in purgatory, he says, "It is one thing to be waiting for pardon; another to attain to glory; one thing to be sent to prison, not to go from thence till the last farthing is paid; another to receive immediately the reward of faith and virtue: one thing to suffer lengthened torments for sin, and to be chastised and purified for a long time in that fire; another to have cleansed away all sin by suffering." (S. Cypr. l. 4, ep. 2.)

St. Cyril, Eusebius, St. Epiphanius, St Ambrose, St. Jerome, St. Augustin, and many other ancient writers, demonstrate this to have been the universal doctrine of the church in the fourth century. All the eastern churches of any note including those that have never held communion with the Roman See, hold this doctrine. Augustin, the earliest writer who pretends that infant baptism is of universal authority, testifies also,—"Through the prayers and sacrifices of the church, and alms deeds, God deals more merciful with the departed than their sins deserve." Serm. 172. Enchirid cap. 109, 110. And in writing of the death of his mother, St. Monica says, "she entreated him to remember her soul at the altar," and declared that he performed this duty after her decease "to obtain pardon of her sins." Confess. l. ix. c. 13.

Such are the testimonies of these same fathers on various other christians and ordinances. If their testimonies are taken on infant baptism, they cannot be impeached on any other point. Will the managers of the Doctrinal Tract Society allow their testimony?

CAUTION.—One Theopholis W. Nixon is reported at Watertown, N. Y., representing himself as a Mormon elder. He is a gross impostor and a worthless scamp, long since cut off from the church.

☞ Brother Brownson at Clayton, N. Y., brother Wait at Jackson, Mich., brother Adams at Philadelphia, brother Brown at Koskonong, Wis., and Page and Blakeslee near Elgin, Ill., have been engaged in the pleasing work of baptizing new disciples.—The whole number of baptisms reported to us this week is over fifty, all new converts.

☞ We received the minutes of a Conference held at Clayton, N. Y., some weeks since and put them on file for publication, but by some means they are mislaid and cannot be found. This is the sole reason why they have not appeared.

THE FAULTS OF CHILDREN.

It may be well to drop a hint against the folly and impropriety of making the faults of your children the subject of conversation with other people. If you wish your children to reform, or improve, you must throw a shield around their character. However foolishly they may have acted, let them see that you are anxious to keep open the way for their return to propriety and respectability. Many a youth has been hardened and driven to reckless despair by being tauntingly upbraided before strangers with misconduct which never needed, and, therefore, never ought to have been known beyond his own family. On the other hand, many a wanderer has been encouraged to return by observing in those most injured by his follies a generous readiness cordially to reinstate him in their esteem, and to shield his reputation from the reproaches of others. It is not wise for a mother either to boast of the excellence, or to publish the faults, of her children—but rather to ponder them in her heart; to mention them only at the throne of mercy, there to implore grace to confirm what is right and correct what is wrong, and, in all things, to make plain before her face the way of her own present duty in reference to them.—Wright's Casket.

Mr. Brownson has come out recently with the doctrine that there is no salvation out of the Roman Church. In consequence a writer in the Pilot of Nov. 17th addressing the bishop of Boston, calls on him "not to allow the Catholic community to be so disgraced and their principle brought into suspicion—that under his approval no modern scholiast whose empiricisms have grown stale, may fillip the pulled ear of the public with new paradoxes tortured from Catholic theology," &c.—Republican Journal.

☞ And O. A. Brownson has shown his good sense, and the Pilot's correspondent his folly. Why join a church if he can be saved just as well out as in? Why seek for true religion if the false is sufficient for salvation? What do men mean by pretending that error is as good as the truth? When we hear a man talking about being saved out of any church we conclude he believes that church false. If Brownson is, sincerely a Catholic, of course he believes there is no salvation out of that church. And so of every member of every other church.

We live in an age scarcely less remarkable for progress in the physical sciences, than for the decay of faith and hope. The conventional forms of religion continue, it is true, to be held in outward respect, but the spirit of them is gone; they even spread from day to day, but in the same manner as a taste spreads for the architecure of the middle ages and for old pieces of furniture in fashionable drawing rooms. There is an evidence of a growing disposition among all classes to regard what are called the proprieties of life, or the habits of decent society; but none of growing belief. The stern protestant spirit of the reformation, and the non-conformists' earnestness, which succeeded, have given place to the hollow maxims of expediency. Men do not now fight for their religious scruples, nor struggle for the rights of conscience; they remain silent and conform. This is perhaps a melancholy characteristic of the present age, but it is an age of transition. Indifference, or skepticism, on the highest subject of human contemplation it is not natural to man; the mind will not rest there. There are, after all realities in human destiny, realities which will one day be felt, and the moral courage of the human destiny, realities which will return with faith. The time will come when religion will be included in the circle of the sciences, or placed at their head. Already we are hastening to the discovery that the will of the Creator is recorded in his works, and if it be so, who shall say to what extent that will may yet be revealed to him by whom the works of the Creator may be rightly studied.—Westminster and Foreign Quarterly Review.

Another Prophetic Successor in the Field.—We are informed by letter from Franklinville, Ill., that John W. Crane has ordained one Joseph Robinson prophet, &c., instead of Joseph Smith.—We do not question that somebody will be gulled by this movement; certainly it is as good as any other false pretense. Truth is one, but error many.

☞ We have just received the Missouri Republican containing a long epistle from the apostate Twelve, giving an account of their wanderings, and a description of their new location. We shall probaby publish it entire in the next Herald.

BE ACTIVE.

Be active—be active—
Find something to do,
In digging a clam bank,
Or tapping a shoe.
Don't stop at the corners
To drag out the day;
Be active, be active,
And work while you may.

'Tis foolish to falter,
Or lag in the streets,
Or walk as if chain shot,
Were bound to your feet;
Be active, be active,
And do what you can;
'Tis industry only
That maketh the man.

'Tis industry maketh you;
Remember—be wise—
From sloth and from stupor
Awake and arise!
You'll live and be happy,
And never complain
Of the blues or the damps,
Or a dull heavy brain.

DIED,

In Rockford, Ill., Sept. 26th, 1847, Mihila, wife of Samuel Linnell, aged 35 years. She died in the triumph of faith, and by her expiring testimony made a strong impression on all around.

ATTACHMENT.

Wisconsin Territory, }
Walworth County, ss. }

Daniel Avery, }
vs. } In Justice Court before Daniel Salisbury, Esq.
John W. Crane. }

The defendant in the above entitled cause will please to take notice that an attachment has issued against him, and his property attached to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff, and that unless he appear before the said Daniel Salisbury, Justice of the Peace in and for said county, at his office in Spring Prairie on the 9th day of March next at one o'clock in the afternoon, judgment will be rendered against him and his property sold to pay the debt.

DANIEL AVERY, Plaintiff.

Dated at Spring Prairie, this 3d day of February, 1848. 47m.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, FEB. 17, 1848. [No 48.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Elgin, Ill., February 10th, 1848.

PRES. JAMES J. STRANG:—

DEAR BROTHER,—This will inform you that your's of the 4th of the present month was duly received by the hand of my son George, and I was much gratified to learn by your paper and letter that the time has come for the saints to practice that order of things which the gospel proposes, and which they have been preaching for at least the last 15 or 16 years, and without which the kingdom can never be established; for if men were never called upon to practice their religion, I mean in temporal as well as spiritual things, it would not be easily ascertained how much of their religion was really heart work or how much head work. Now I contend that it is possible for an individual to enjoy (if it might be called an enjoyment) nearly or quite all their religion in their heads, and if so, they are pretty sure to want to enjoy nearly or all of their temporal things themselves alone. But, dear brother, the order which the Lord has established in the equality association, of which you speak, will be very apt to prove every man's religion of what sort it is. And now, to make a long story short on that subject, suffice it to say that I am with you head, heart, hand and influence to establish that order of things which alone can save the church from those evils with which it has strayed from its rise to the present time. But I now begin to feel as though redemption was at the door, and may the Lord speed his work in his time. But now to answer your queries.

In the first place I will begin with saying that we spent one week at Fort Hill, preaching and visiting from house to house among the people and made a good impression, and we were treated kindly by the people, and should have tarried longer had it not been for certain reasons, of which I will speak when I see you face to face; however the time will come perhaps when good can be done even at Fort Hill. Well, since we left that place we have spent the time in this region of country. I have preached once in Elgin and twice in St. Charles, but in consequence of there being a protracted meeting in both those places I concluded to let them alone to enjoy their delusion awhile, and I would spend the time in the country. Bro. Page and myself have been together part of the time, and separate part. He has been down to Blackberry, but was not received, and returned again. He is in the vicinity of King's Mills at present, and I am taking care of my wife here, who has been sick ever since she arrived, but I think she is now a little better.

We have baptized seven, six males and one female, in the vicinity of King's Mills, and there are several more in that neighborhood which I think will go forward soon. Many are believing in that region, and in this region there are many also believing. The Baptists and Methodists got up a debate at Fayville in the form of a lyceum, and the first question proposed was, "is Mormonism a gospel doctrine?" and sent for me, over at brother Hale's, to come and take the affirmative, which I did, and, of course, Mormonism (so called) was triumphant. We only met two evenings, and the last evening they yielded the point after the first fire on the part of the affirmative; and the house then clamored for me to preach an hour to them, it being crowded. And I did so, and all things went off well, and with the best of feeling. They have had no lyceum since. But the most of the people in Fayville and neighborhood are believing in Mormonism, and I believe we shall baptize a goodly number of them soon.

Brother Page has this moment arrived from the Hale neighborhood; he baptized four more yesterday in that vicinity, and we are to baptize several more to-morrow in that neighborhood. When we arrived here we found the most of the saints rather cold, but they are now beginning to wake up to a sense of their duty, and also rejoice to hear that the equality system is now going into practice, and are ready to practice (with us) their religion and show to the church and the world and to the Lord that their religion is at heart. I have the vanity to believe that the saints in this region will receive our teachings, and practice their religion. O how I see the necessity of some able elders being sent among the eastern branches, and also among all the branches, to beget them again to a lively hope in Christ Jesus, by proclaiming to them the pure principles of the gospel, and stirring them up to the necessity of practicing their religion. I have reason to believe that, if some able ministers could visit the branches the coming season, much good would be done, but we must wait patiently the Lord's time.

P. S. Friday morning, 11th. Last evening we had a good meeting, after which brother Page and I administered to my wife, and this morning she is well but weak. Write again soon.

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

☞ We have seen the Ensign of Liberty, No. 4. It does not yet contain one word from David Whitmer, or any of McLellin's First Presidency. We speak advisedly when we say that Oliver Cowdery has nothing to do with the matter, and we believe the like with regard to the Whitmers'. The whole, except a few old letters, is made up of McLellin's writing, but without his usual fire.—Among the letters is one written last spring by Hiram Page, the publication of which is any thing but fortunate to his cause; for instead of giving assurance that his neighbor, Whitmer, is engaged in the work, it seems to complain that he is not. And this written before McLellin went to Missouri. Did he really go there at all! We have nothing but his word for it.

☞ We are under the necessity of postponing the publication of Brigham's epistle, which we promised this week, on account of making room for the Constitution of Wisconsin. We shall insert it very soon, with such remarks as it seems to call for. We wish our subscribers to take a little pains to get it before the Brighamites. We are satisfied that the weakness of their cause is most obvious in its defence.

GOSPEL HERALD.

46 & 47 gone

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, FEB. 17, 1848. [No 48.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

ll letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Elgin, Ill., February 10th, 1848.

RES. JAMES J. STRANG :—

DEAR BROTHER,—This will inform you that your's of the 4th of e present month was duly received by the hand of my son George, d I was much gratified to learn by your paper and letter that the ne has come for the saints to practice that order of things which the spel proposes, and which they have been preaching for at least the st 15 or 16 years, and without which the kingdom can never be es blished; for if men were never called upon to practice their re gion, I mean in temporal as well as spiritual things, it would not easily ascertained how much of their religion was really heart rk or how much head work. Now I contend that it is possible an individual to enjoy (if it might be called an enjoyment) near or quite all their religion in their heads, and if so, they are pretty re to want to enjoy nearly or all of their temporal things them ves alone. But, dear brother, the order which the Lord has es blished in the equality association, of which you speak, will be ry apt to prove every man's religion of what sort it is. And now, make a long story short on that subject, suffice it to say that I h with you head, heart, hand and influence to establish that order of ings which alone can save the church from those evils with which has strayed from its rise to the present time. But I now begin to l as though redemption was at the door, and may the Lord speed s work in his time. But now to answer your queries.

In the first place I will begin with saying that we spent one week Fort Hill, preaching and visiting from house to house among the ople and made a good impression, and we were treated kindly by e people, and should have tarried longer had it not been for cer n reasons, of which I will speak when I see you face to face; wever the time will come perhaps when good can be done even at rt Hill. Well, since we left that place we have spent the time this region of country. I have preached once in Elgin and twice St. Charles, but in consequence of there being a protracted meet g in both those places I concluded to let them alone to enjoy. their lusion awhile, and I would spend the time in the country. Bro. ge and myself have been together part of the time, and separate rt. He has been down to Blackberry, but was not received, and urned again. He is in the vicinity of King's Mills at present, d I am taking care of my wife here, who has been sick ever since e arrived, but I think she is now a little better.

We have baptized seven, six males and one female, in the vicini of King's Mills, and there are several more in that neighborhood ich I think will go forward soon. Many are believing in that ion, and in this region there are many also believing. The Bap tists and Methodists got up a debate at Fayville in the form of a lyceum, and the first question proposed was, "is Mormonism a gos pel doctrine?" and sent for me, over at brother Hale's, to come and take the affirmative, which I did, and, of course, Mormonism (so called) was triumphant. We only met two evenings, and the last evening they yielded the point after the first fire on the part of the affirmative; and the house then clamored for me to preach an hour to them, it being crowded. And I did so, and all things went off well, and with the best of feeling. They have had no lyceum since. But the most of the people in Fayville and neighborhood are believ ing in Mormonism, and I believe we shall baptize a goodly number of them soon.

Brother Page has this moment arrived from the Hale neighbor hood; he baptized four more yesterday in that vicinity, and we are to baptize several more to-morrow in that neighborhood. When we arrived here we found the most of the saints rather cold, but they are now beginning to wake up to a sense of their duty, and also re joice to hear that the equality system is now going into practice, and are ready to practice (with us) their religion and show to the church and the world and to the Lord that their religion is at heart. I have the vanity to believe that the saints in this region will re ceive our teachings, and practice their religion. O how I see the necessity of some able elders being sent among the eastern branch es, and also among all the branches, to beget them again to a lively hope in Christ Jesus, by proclaiming to them the pure principles of the gospel, and stirring them up to the necessity of practicing their religion. I have reason to believe that, if some able ministers could visit the branches the coming season, much good would be done, but we must wait patiently the Lord's time.

P. S. Friday morning, 11th. Last evening we had a good meeting, after which brother Page and I administered to my wife, and this morning she is well but weak. Write again soon.

JAMES BLAKESLEE.

☞ We have seen the Ensign of Liberty, No. 4. It does not yet contain one word from David Whitmer, or any of McLellin's First Presidency. We speak advisedly when we say that Oliver Cowdery has nothing to do with the matter, and we believe the like with regard to the Whitmers'. The whole, except a few old letters, is made up of McLellin's writing, but without his usual fire.—Among the letters is one written last spring by Hiram Page, the publication of which is any thing but fortunate to his cause; for instead of giving assurance that his neighbor, Whitmer, is engaged in the work, it seems to complain that he is NOT. And this written before McLellin went to Missouri. Did he really go there at all? We have nothing but his word for it.

☞ We are under the necessity of postponing the publication of Brigham's epistle, which we promised this week, on account of making room for the Constitution of Wisconsin. We shall insert it very soon, with such remarks as it seems to call for. We wish our subscribers to take a little pains to get it before the Brighamites. We are satisfied that the weakness of their cause is most obvious in its defence.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

Since the suspension of the Catholic discussion we have received the following letter from brothers Anderson and Duncan. One of the brethren in this place also has received a letter from a sister in Illinois, containing the extract below. Various inquiries have been made at different times on this subject, but these two cover the whole ground. We therefore publish them with our answer.

January 23d, 1848.

DEAR BROTHER J. J. STRANG:—We have this day been perusing the Gospel Herald No. 34, and in your answer to Mr. Rafferty we see that you suggest the idea that JOSEPH was really the FATHER of JESUS according to the flesh, which idea was new to us, and in our judgments irreconcilable with some texts of scripture in relation to that matter. For instance, Matthew i. 18 to the end. It is said that "Joseph knew not his wife until she had brought forth her first born." ver. 25. Please tell us how this could possibly be if Joseph is really the father of Jesus. And also we understand you to say that there are no evidences to be found in the female line of Mary being of the lineage of Judah or David. Now, dear brother, we find in the 1st chapter of Luke commencing at the 46th verse and reading to the 57th inclusive, in which we learn that she (in connection with her cousin Elizabeth) claimed to have Abraham to her father. And again, in the 2d chapter it is said that Joseph went up in company with his wife in order to be taxed unto the city of David, showing that they were both of the same lineage. And also at the 49th verse Jesus most evidently there claims God to be his father, not Joseph. Now, brother Strang, we are only wishing information of you in relation to this matter. Please write us a letter and give us all the information you can in relation to those matters, and such other instructions as you may feel inclined to give.

We remain yours in the bonds of the gospel of Christ,

R. ANDERSON,
G. W. DUNCAN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

"One thing I wish to inquire. The arguments and discussions have interested me much. But in the Catholic discussion towards the close respecting the birth of our Lord and Savior I own I was much shocked at the evident departure from the testimony of scripture—testimony abundantly scattered in the Old and New Testament; and from which I should not dare depart, let common sense say what it might. I think if common sense had been sufficient, what need of revelation? I can see no way to reconcile or explain satisfactorily or do away all this mass of evidence unless it is done by the new translations. And that I can hardly suppose, or I think I should have heard of it before." * *

ANSWER.—You will readily perceive that Luke i. 55 proves only that Mary was of the seed of ABRAHAM. Not that she was of the seed of Judah, much less of the house of David. All Israel were of the seed of Abraham; only one tribe of Judah, and a small part of that tribe of David. As for her going up to the city of David to be taxed, it proves merely that her husband was of the house of David. Certainly you will not assume that the husband would be taxed in one place and the wife in another, because they happened to be of different lineages. We are told expressly that they went to the city of David because Joseph was of his lineage. Luke ii. 4. As for Jesus claiming God as his father, Luke ii. 49, it is no more than we all do as often as we say, "Our Father, who art in heaven." In the verse immediately preceding Mary calls HER husband HIS father, and at the 41st verse Luke tells us that his (Christ's) parents went to Jerusalem to the feast of the passover.

If there is testimony abundantly found in the Old Testament to show that Christ had not a father after the flesh, as well as a mother, we should like to be informed where it can be found. We know of none such. Nor shall we plead guilty to the charge of "departing from scripture testimony" on the subject of the lineage of Christ in any sense. So far from it, we have entrenched ourselves behind an overwhelming array of scripture testimony. In the Herald No. 35 we gave eleven distinct prophecies showing that the Messiah should come of the house of David. 2 Sam. vii. Ps. lxxxix. cxxxii. Isa. xi. ix. 6, 7. lv. Ezek. xxxiv. Jer. xxxiii. Zech. xii. xiii. Luke i. 31 to 33. And in No. 36 thirteen different testimonies that he did thus come. Testimonies of himself, Rev. xxii. 16; his apostles, Acts xiii. 22, 23. Rom. i. 1, 3. 2 Tim. ii. 8. Matt. i. 1. Heb. vii. 14; those to whom he ministered, Matt. ix. 27. xx. 30. xii. 23; the multitude, Matt. xxi. 9; his enemies, John vii, 42; and a witness in heaven, Rev. v. 5.

How any one can read these scriptures, especially in the order in which we arrayed them in responding to Mr. Rafferty, and then charge us with departing from the testimony of the scriptures, we are utterly at a loss to understand. In our answer to Mr. Rafferty we had a perfect right to rest our cause here. To him we were under no obligations to answer for any apparent discrepancy in the scriptures on this subject. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has not been the keeper of the scriptures from the times when they were written down till its origin. We are not responsible for MISTAKES in COPYING, ERRORS in TRANSLATING, WILLFUL or ACCIDENTAL INTERPOLATIONS or OMISSIONS. No priesthood set in the church by authority of God has ever determined the canon of either Jewish or christian scriptures since. Much less has any such authority corrected the errors which many centuries have heaped up in them. Three thousand variations are now noted in the ancient copies from which translations are made, and standard editions printed. And neither Catholics or Protestants acknowledge any power on earth to correct these errors and discrepancies. The doctrine of the prophets and apostles from beginning to end is, that Christ came of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah, and of the house of David. This doctrine is interwoven into the Bible from beginning to end. Blot it out from the book and there would not be a skeleton of either Judaism or christianity remaining. But the doctrine that Joseph was not the father of Jesus is found in but a single passage of the entire scripture. The first chapter of Matthew, from the 18th verse to the end, is the sole testimony on that side of the question. Solitary and alone it stands out against not only the 24 testimonies above quoted, but many hundred more which might be mentioned. If space would admit it is an easy task to show at what age of the world the interpolation was made, and for what purpose; but as this matter was called up in a discussion with the Catholics, who established the canon of scripture, it belongs to them, not us, to settle those questions. If they have not preserved the scriptures in purity let them answer for the contradictions they have produced. More we would say, but we shall necessarily recur to the subject hereafter, and prefer to discuss the question first with the Catholics, and to answer the further questions of the saints afterwards.

MISSIONARIES.—Two Brighamite elders, Dalton and Glines, have just paid us a visit. They do not offer to preach, and pretend to no known business, and we presume have none except to purify the earth by fire and by blood, and to consecrate the riches of the Gentiles. We understand a few others are sent out in other directions, and doubt not some men will suffer, or their horses, out on the borders. Here we are, always prepared for destroying angels, and not much troubled about them, or any thing else that pertains to Brighamism.

☞ Since the above was written Phineas Young has arrived.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

Since the suspension of the Catholic discussion we have received the following letter from brothers Anderson and Duncan. One of the brethren in this place also has received a letter from a sister in Illinois, containing the extract below. Various inquiries have been made at different times on this subject, but these two cover the whole ground. We therefore publish them with our answer.

January 23d, 1848.

DEAR BROTHER J. J. STRANG:—We have this day been perusing the Gospel Herald No. 34, and in your answer to Mr. Rafferty we see that you suggest the idea that JOSEPH was really the FATHER of JESUS according to the flesh, which idea was new to us, and in our judgments irreconcilable with some texts of scripture in relation to that matter. For instance, Matthew i. 18 to the end. It is said that "Joseph knew not his wife until she had brought forth her first born." ver. 25. Please tell us how this could possibly be if Joseph is really the father of Jesus. And also we understand you to say that there are no evidences to be found in the female line of Mary being of the lineage of Judah or David. Now, dear brother, we find in the 1st chapter of Luke commencing at the 46th verse and reading to the 57th inclusive, in which we learn that she (in connection with her cousin Elizabeth) claimed to have Abraham to her father. And again, in the 2d chapter it is said that Joseph went up in company with his wife in order to be taxed unto the city of David, showing that they were both of the same lineage. And also at the 49th verse Jesus most evidently there claims God to be his father, not Joseph. Now, brother Strang, we are only wishing information of you in relation to this matter. Please write us a letter and give us all the information you can in relation to those matters, and such other instructions as you may feel inclined to give.

We remain yours in the bonds of the gospel of Christ,

R. ANDERSON,
G. W. DUNCAN.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER.

"One thing I wish to inquire. The arguments and discussions have interested me much. But in the Catholic discussion towards the close respecting the birth of our Lord and Savior I own I was much shocked at the evident departure from the testimony of scripture—testimony abundantly scattered in the Old and New Testament, and from which I should not dare depart, let common sense say what it might. I think if common sense had been sufficient, what need of revelation? I can see no way to reconcile or explain satisfactorily or do away all this mass of evidence unless it is done by the new translations. And that I can hardly suppose, or I think I should have heard of it before." * *

ANSWER.—You will readily perceive that Luke i. 55 proves only that Mary was of the seed of ABRAHAM. Not that she was of the seed of Judah, much less of the house of David. All Israel were of the seed of Abraham; only one tribe of Judah, and a small part of that tribe of David. As for her going up to the city of David to be taxed, it proves merely that her husband was of the house of David. Certainly you will not assume that the husband would be taxed in one place and the wife in another, because they happened to be of different lineages. We are told expressly that they went to the city of David because Joseph was of his lineage. Luke ii. 4. As for Jesus claiming God as his father, Luke ii. 49, it is no more than we all do as often as we say, "Our Father, who art in heaven." In the verse immediately preceding Mary calls HER husband HIS father, and at the 41st verse Luke tells us that his (Christ's) parents went to Jerusalem to the feast of the passover.

If there is testimony abundantly found in the Old Testament to show that Christ had not a father after the flesh, as well as a mother, we should like to be informed where it can be found. We know of none such. Nor shall we plead guilty to the charge of "departing from scripture testimony" on the subject of the lineage of Christ in any sense. So far from it, we have entrenched ourselves behind an overwhelming array of scripture testimony. In the Herald No. 35 we gave eleven distinct prophecies showing that the Messiah should come of the house of David. 2 Sam. vii. Ps. lxxxix. cxxxii. Isa. xi. ix. 6, 7. lv. Ezek. xxxiv. Jer. xxxiii. Zech. xii. xiii. Luke i. 31 to 33. And in No. 36 thirteen different testimonies that he did thus come. Testimonies of himself, Rev. xxii. 16; his apostles, Acts xiii. 22, 23. Rom. i. 1, 3. 2 Tim. ii. 8. Matt. i. 1. Heb. vii. 14; those to whom he ministered, Matt. ix. 27. xx. 30. xii. 23; the multitude, Matt. xxi. 9; his enemies, John vii, 42; and a witness in heaven, Rev. v. 5.

How any one can read these scriptures, especially in the order in which we arrayed them in responding to Mr. Rafferty, and then charge us with departing from the testimony of the scriptures, we are utterly at a loss to understand. In our answer to Mr. Rafferty we had a perfect right to rest our cause here. To him we were under no obligations to answer for any apparent discrepancy in the scriptures on this subject. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has not been the keeper of the scriptures from the times when they were written down till its origin. We are not responsible for MISTAKES in COPYING, ERRORS in TRANSLATING, WILLFUL or ACCIDENTAL INTERPOLATIONS or OMISSIONS. No priesthood set in the church by authority of God has ever determined the canon of either Jewish or christian scriptures since. Much less has any such authority corrected the errors which many centuries have heaped up in them. Three thousand variations are now noted in the ancient copies from which translations are made, and standard editions printed. And neither Catholics or Protestants acknowledge any power on earth to correct these errors and discrepancies. The doctrine of the prophets and apostles from beginning to end is, that Christ came of the seed of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah, and of the house of David. This doctrine is interwoven into the Bible from beginning to end. Blot it out from the book and there would not be a skeleton of either Judaism or christianity remaining. But the doctrine that Joseph was not the father of Jesus is found in but a single passage of the entire scripture. The first chapter of Matthew, from the 18th verse to the end, is the sole testimony on that side of the question. Solitary and alone it stands out against not only the 24 testimonies above quoted, but many hundred more which might be mentioned. If space would admit it is an easy task to show at what age of the world the interpolation was made, and for what purpose; but as this matter was called up in a discussion with the Catholics, who established the canon of scripture, it belongs to them, not us, to settle those questions. If they have not preserved the scriptures in purity let them answer for the contradictions they have produced. More we would say, but we shall necessarily recur to the subject hereafter, and prefer to discuss the question first with the Catholics, and to answer the further questions of the saints afterwards.

MISSIONARIES.—Two Brighamite elders, Dalton and Glines, have just paid us a visit. They do not offer to preach, and pretend to no known business, and we presume have none except to purify the earth by fire and by blood, and to consecrate the riches of the Gentiles. We understand a few others are sent out in other directions and doubt not some men will suffer, or their horses, out on the borders. Here we are, always prepared for destroying angels, and not much troubled about them, or any thing else that pertains to Brighamism.

☞ Since the above was written Phineas Young has arrived.

Kirtland, February 3d, 1848.

PRES. STRANG:—I take my pen in hand to inform you that I am alive and still feel an anxiety for the gospel which has been brought to light in these last days. I inclose you two dollars for the Herald, and wish it continued. When here Mr. Gaylord bore his testimony in favor of your administration, both in public meeting and at my house; but I am told that he now tells quite a different story. I have very little confidence in a man that cannot tell the same story forty rods apart.

We are curious to know why you do not publish any more of the discussion with the Doctor. He says you dare not, and that what you have published is false, and not his argument.

The Dr.'s church seems to be rather on the decline. There have been no additions of late, and there seems to be some controversy among the 42 that he speaks of in his paper, which is a mistake or I cannot count straight, for I cannot count over thirty. There is a good deal of complaining about Aaron Smith, (in Mc's church.)—He don't walk up to the mark, or perhaps he wanted to keep part of his money for his own use. At any rate they seem to think he is not the man they took him to be, and I am told they train him pretty often. My own mind is that Aaron is the best man in the mess.

McLellin is about to dissect the book of D. and C., and throw away the false revelations, and then, of course, his members will have a perfect law, and perhaps they will live more as he wishes and save much whipping. At present he has his hands full to keep down grumbling and quarreling. I understand that some of them complain that he will not let them write to David and get an answer for themselves.

Some things in the revelation appointing you to be the successor of Joseph try me. One thing is, that "Aaron understandeth the doctrine and erreth not therein." I think him the greatest ninny out.

JAMES J. STRANG. ***

REMARKS.—The case of Gaylord is not at all peculiar. There are many in this region who have borne the same testimony with him and much more, who have turned back and both deny their testimony and deny that they ever gave it. We do not think Gaylord means to do wrong in the matter. As Abraham said to Ishmael, he has a very bad nail in his tent. A continual dropping of water will wear a stone. So much can be said for very few of the apostates.

The discussion with McLellin will be published in a short time. It has been delayed partly to make room for some important matters, but principally for want of time to write it out for the press. You are doubtless aware that no man can write out remarks from the lips of a speaker so that they will be ready for the press without re-writing. Besides this, I speak uncommonly rapid, so that none but a regular stenographer can make more than a mere skeleton of my remarks. This fact imposes on me the necessity of writing out my arguments entirely myself.

As to the correctness of the publication, any complaints on the part of McLellin are perfectly foolish. His remarks were carefully noted down as they fell from his lips. He was informed at the time of my intention of publishing the debate. I tendered him the privilege of reviewing them or writing them out himself. Since the publication was commenced I have addressed him a line offering him my remarks written out if he should wish to publish the discussion, and requesting him to furnish his to me, and telling him that if he discovered any thing erroneous in what was published and would inform me by letter, I should be happy to correct it. To this I now add that if he or any of his party can improve the argument on his side in any way, our columns are open to them. We are anxious that our readers should hear the very best that can be said on both sides of every question coming up. If the Dr. wishes to make converts and has any confidence in his own arguments, or in any he can make, he will of course take this opportunity to get them before our readers. No Mormon ever refused such an opportunity.

You very much misapply the sayings in the revelation, saying that "Aaron has wisdom in the gospel and understands the doctrine," &c. It does not say he shall always have wisdom, but that at that time he had. The Aaron Smith of this day is no more the Aaron Smith of that day than the grasshopper is a horse. Never was there a more perfect illustration of the truth of that saying, "if the light that is in you becomes dark, how great is that darkness." His first apostacy originated in jealousy and that he was too much overlooked. As that ripened he entertained the ambition of becoming a leader, but without the least idea of departing from his former testimony or denying the things that God had revealed to him. Still the measures necessary to accomplish this involved him in so deep rebellions against God that he lost all communion of the true spirit. Even in this state he struggled long against the measures of those who were using him, and feeding his jealousy and ambition to make him the instrument of their purposes. He was long in bringing himself to a direct act of rebellion. Having once done that, he has never yet found space for repentance. It is mortification at the entire failure of his plans, and not any injury real or supposed, that makes him my enemy. His crooked ways, made necessary in these matters, has made shipwreck of his honesty, his standing in society, his earthly possessions and of his salvation in the kingdom of God. His present degradation is but the fulfillment of the prophecy by which he was removed from being counsellor [ED.

Potosi, W. T., Feb. 7th, 1848.

BRO. J. J. STRANG,—I embrace this opportunity of sending to you for some hymn books. We have a branch of some sixteen members, and no hymn books. Bro. Dean preaches once and sometimes twice a week, to crowded congregations. Doors are opening on all sides, and some appear to be searching after truth. I send you inclosed in this two dollars for the amount in hymn books. I would also send for some gospel tracts, but have not the means at this time. Remember our little branch in your petitions to the throne of grace.

Yours in the bonds of peace,

SAMUEL BLAIR.

CLERGY OF IRELAND.—The Roman Catholic priesthood are about 2,500 in number. They are supported by their flocks. The dissenting Presbyterian ministers number nearly 600, and are partly upheld by their congregations and partly by the British government. The wealth consumed by these drones of a very unpopular State church is as enormous as the poverty is unparalleled. Lord Lansdowne, in the House of Lords last month, expressed the sentiment that the security of life and property in three-fourths of Ireland was mainly owing to the teaching and example of the Catholic clergy.—Ex. Paper.

☞ He that is free in Christ seeks the freedom of others.—He that is bound in the chains of anti-Christ holds bond servants. (slaves.)

☞ The sheep of Christ seek the fold: the wolves of anti-Christ seek for prey.

MARRIED,

In Voree, on the 13th inst., by Pres. Strang, Mr. GEORGE BLAKESLEE, of the above place, to Miss LYDIA ALCOTT, of Fort Hill, Ill.

Kirtland, February 3d, 1848.

Pres. Strang:—I take my pen in hand to inform you that I am alive and still feel an anxiety for the gospel which has been brought to light in these last days. I inclose you two dollars for the Herald, and wish it continued. When here Mr. Gaylord bore his testimony in favor of your administration, both in public meeting and at my house; but I am told that he now tells quite a different story. I have very little confidence in a man that cannot tell the same story forty rods apart.

We are curious to know why you do not publish any more of the discussion with the Doctor. He says you dare not, and that what you have published is false, and not his argument.

The Dr.'s church seems to be rather on the decline. There have been no additions of late, and there seems to be some controversy among the 42 that he speaks of in his paper, which is a mistake or I cannot count straight, for I cannot count over thirty. There is a good deal of complaining about Aaron Smith, (in Mc's church.)—He don't walk up to the mark, or perhaps he wanted to keep part of his money for his own use. At any rate they seem to think he is not the man they took him to be, and I am told they train him pretty often. My own mind is that Aaron is the best man in the mess.

McLellin is about to dissect the book of D. and C., and throw away the false revelations, and then, of course, his members will have a perfect law, and perhaps they will live more as he wishes and save much whipping. At present he has his hands full to keep down grumbling and quarreling. I understand that some of them complain that he will not let them write to David and get an answer for themselves.

Some things in the revelation appointing you to be the successor of Joseph try me. One thing is, that "Aaron understandeth the doctrine and erreth not therein." I think him the greatest ninny out.

James J. Strang. ***

Remarks.—The case of Gaylord is not at all peculiar. There are many in this region who have borne the same testimony with him and much more, who have turned back and both deny their testimony and deny that they ever gave it. We do not think Gaylord means to do wrong in the matter. As Abraham said to Ishmael, he has a very bad nail in his tent. A continual dropping of water will wear a stone. So much can be said for very few of the apostates.

The discussion with McLellin will be published in a short time. It has been delayed partly to make room for some important matters, but principally for want of time to write it out for the press. You are doubtless aware that no man can write out remarks from the lips of a speaker so that they will be ready for the press without re-writing. Besides this, I speak uncommonly rapid, so that none but a regular stenographer can make more than a mere skeleton of my remarks. This fact imposes on me the necessity of writing out my arguments entirely myself.

As to the correctness of the publication, any complaints on the part of McLellin are perfectly foolish. His remarks were carefully noted down as they fell from his lips. He was informed at the time of my intention of publishing the debate. I tendered him the privilege of reviewing them or writing them out himself. Since the publication was commenced I have addressed him a line offering him my remarks written out if he should wish to publish the discussion, and requesting him to furnish his to me, and telling him that if he discovered any thing erroneous in what was published and would inform me by letter, I should be happy to correct it. To this I now add that if he or any of his party can improve the argument on his side in any way, our columns are open to them. We are anxious that our readers should hear the very best that can be said on both sides of every question coming up. If the Dr. wishes to make converts and has any confidence in his own arguments, or in any he can make, he will of course take this opportunity to get them before our readers. No Mormon ever refused such an opportunity.

You very much misapply the sayings in the revelation, saying that "Aaron has wisdom in the gospel and understands the doctrine," &c. It does not say he shall always have wisdom, but that at that time he had. The Aaron Smith of this day is no more the Aaron Smith of that day than the grasshopper is a horse. Never was there a more perfect illustration of the truth of that saying, "if the light that is in you becomes dark, how great is that darkness." His first apostacy originated in jealousy and that he was too much overlooked. As that ripened he entertained the ambition of becoming a leader, but without the least idea of departing from his former testimony or denying the things that God had revealed to him. Still the measures necessary to accomplish this involved him in so deep rebellions against God that he lost all communion of the true spirit. Even in this state he struggled long against the measures of those who were using him, and feeding his jealousy and ambition to make him the instrument of their purposes. He was long in bringing himself to a direct act of rebellion. Having once done that, he has never yet found space for repentance. It is mortification at the entire failure of his plans, and not any injury real or supposed, that makes him my enemy. His crooked ways, made necessary in these matters, has made shipwreck of his honesty, his standing in society, his earthly possessions and of his salvation in the kingdom of God. His present degradation is but the fulfillment of the prophecy by which he was removed from being counsellor [Ed.

Potosi, W. T., Feb. 7th, 1848.

Bro. J. J. Strang,—I embrace this opportunity of sending to you for some hymn books. We have a branch of some sixteen members, and no hymn books. Bro. Dean preaches once and sometimes twice a week, to crowded congregations. Doors are opening on all sides, and some appear to be searching after truth. I send you inclosed in this two dollars for the amount in hymn books. I would also send for some gospel tracts, but have not the means at this time. Remember our little branch in your petitions to the throne of grace. Yours in the bonds of peace,

SAMUEL BLAIR.

Clergy of Ireland.—The Roman Catholic priesthood are about 2,500 in number. They are supported by their flocks. The dissenting Presbyterian ministers number nearly 600, and are partly upheld by their congregations and partly by the British government. The wealth consumed by these drones of a very unpopular State church is as enormous as the poverty is unparalleled. Lord Lansdowne, in the House of Lords last month, expressed the sentiment that the security of life and property in three-fourths of Ireland was mainly owing to the teaching and example of the Catholic clergy.—Ex. Paper.

☞ He that is free in Christ seeks the freedom of others.—He that is bound in the chains of anti-Christ holds bond servants, (slaves.)

☞ The sheep of Christ seek the fold: the wolves of anti-Christ seek for prey.

MARRIED,

In Voree, on the 13th inst., by Pres. Strang, Mr. George Blakeslee, of the above place, to Miss Lydia Alcott, of Fort Hill, Ill.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF WISCONSIN,

AS PASSED IN CONVENTION, MADISON, FEB. 1ST, 1848.

(Continued from last week.)

Sec. 4. The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the State. He shall have power to convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions; and in case of invasion or danger from the prevalence of contagious disease at the seat of government, he may convene them at any other suitable place within the State. He shall communicate to the legislature at every session the condition of the State, and recommend such matters to them for their consideration as he may deem expedient. He shall transact all necessary buisness with the officers of the government, civil and military. He shall expedite all such measures as may be resolved upon by the legislature, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

Sec. 5. The governor shall receive during his continuanee in office an anual compensation of one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

Sec. 6. The governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons, after conviction, for all offences except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason, he shall have the power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the legislature at its next meeting, when the legislature shall either pardon, or commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall annually communicate to the legislature each case of reprieve, commutation, or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of the commutation, pardon or reprieve with his reasons for granting the same.

Sec. 7. In case of the impeachment of the governor, or his removal from office, death, inability from mental or physical disease, resignation, or absence from the State, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor, for the residue of the term, or until the governor, absent or impeached, shall have returned, or the disability shall cease. But when the governor shall, with the consent of the legislature, be out of the State in time of war, at the head of the military force thereof, he shall continue commander-in-chief of the military force of the State.

Sec. 8. The lieutenant governor shall be president of the senate, but shall have only a casting vote therein. If during a vacancy in the office of governor, the lieutenant governor shall be impeached, displaced, resign, die, or from mental or physical disease become incapable of performing the duties of his office, or be absent from the State, the secretary of State shall act as governor until the vacancy shall be filled, or the disability shall cease.

Sec. 9. The lieutenant governor shall receive double the per diem allowance of members of the senate for every day's attendance as president of the senate, and the same mileage as shall be allowed to members of the legislature.

Sec. 10. Every bill which shall have passed the legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor. If he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large upon the journal, and proceed to re-consider it. If after such re-consideration, two-thirds of the members present shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of the members present, it shall become a law. But in all such cases, the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the members voting for or against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, unless the legislature shall, by their adjournment, prevent its return; in which case it shall not be a law.

ARTICLE VI.—ADMINISTRATIVE.

Sec. 1. There shall be chosen by the qualified electors of the State, at the times and places of choosing the members of the legislature, a secretary of State, treasurer, and an attorney general, who shall severally hold their offices for the term of two years.

Sec. 2. The secretary of State shall keep a fair record of the official acts of the legisla ture and executive department of the State, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all matters relative thereto before either branch of the legislature. He shall be ex-officio auditor, and shall perform such other duties as shall be assigned him by law. He shall receive as a compensation for his services, yearly, such sum as shall be provided by law, and shall keep his office at the seat of government.

Sec. 3. The powers, duties, and compensation of the treasurer and attorney general, shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 4. Sheriffs, coroners, registers of deeds, and district attorneys, shall be chosen by the electors of the respective counties, once in every two years, and as often as vacancies shall happen. Sheriffs shall hold no other office, and be ineligible for two years, next succeeding the termination of their offices. They may be required by law, to renew their security from time to time; and in default of giving such new security, their offices shall be deemed vacant.—But the county shall never be made responsible for the acts of the sheriff. The governor may remove any officer, in this section mentioned, giving to such officer a copy of the charges against him, and an opportunity of being heard in his defence.

ARTICLE VII.—JUDICIARY.

Sec. 1. The court for the trial of impeachments shall be composed of the senate. The house of representatives shall have the power of impeaching all civil officers of this State, for corrupt conduct in office, or for crimes and misdemeanors: but a majority of all the members elected shall concur in an impeachment. On the trial of an impeachment against the governor, the lieutenant governor shall not act as a member of the court. No judicial officer shall exercise his office after he shall have been impeached, until his acquittal.—Before the trial of an impeachment, the members of the court shall take an oath or affirmation, truly and impartially to try the impeachment, according to evidence; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than removal from office, or removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, profit or trust under this State; but the party impeached shall be liable to indictment, trial and punishment according to law.

Sec. 2. The judicial power of the State, both as to matters of law and equity, shall be vested in a supreme court, circuit courts, courts of probate, and in justices of the peace. The legislature may also vest such jurisdiction as shall be deemed neccessary, in municipal courts, and shall have power to establish inferior courts, in the several counties, with limited civil and criminal jurisdiction. Provided, That the jurisdiction which may be vested in municipal courts, shall not exceed, in their respective municipalities, that of circuit courts, in their respective circuits, as prescribed in this constitution. And that the legislature shall provide as well for the election of judges of the municipal courts, as of the judges of inferior courts, by

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF WISCONSIN,

AS PASSED IN CONVENTION, MADISON, FEB. 1ST, 1848.

(Continued from last week.)

Sec. 4. The governor shall be commander-in-chief of the military and naval forces of the State. He shall have power to convene the legislature on extraordinary occasions; and in case of invasion or danger from the prevalence of contagious disease at the seat of government, he may convene them at any other suitable place within the State. He shall communicate to the legislature at every session the condition of the State, and recommend such matters to them for their consideration as he may deem expedient. He shall transact all necessary buisness with the officers of the government, civil and military. He shall expedite all such measures as may be resolved upon by the legislature, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

Sec. 5. The governor shall receive during his continuance in office an anual compensation of one thousand two hundred and fifty dollars.

Sec. 6. The governor shall have the power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons, after conviction, for all offences except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions and with such restrictions and limitations as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason, he shall have the power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the legislature at its next meeting, when the legislature shall either pardon, or commute the sentence, direct the execution of the sentence, or grant a further reprieve. He shall annually communicate to the legislature each case of reprieve, commutation, or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime of which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of the commutation, pardon or reprieve with his reasons for granting the same.

Sec. 7. In case of the impeachment of the governor, or his removal from office, death, inability from mental or physical disease, resignation, or absence from the State, the powers and duties of the office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor, for the residue of the term, or until the governor, absent or impeached, shall have returned, or the disability shall cease. But when the governor shall, with the consent of the legislature, be out of the State in time of war, at the head of the military force thereof, he shall continue commander-in-chief of the military force of the State.

Sec. 8. The lieutenant governor shall be president of the senate, but shall have only a casting vote therein. If during a vacancy in the office of governor, the lieutenant governor shall be impeached, displaced, resign, die, or from mental or physical disease become incapable of performing the duties of his office, or be absent from the State, the secretary of State shall act as governor until the vacancy shall be filled, or the disability shall cease.

Sec. 9. The lieutenant governor shall receive double the per diem allowance of members of the senate for every day's attendance as president of the senate, and the same mileage as shall be allowed to members of the legislature.

Sec. 10. Every bill which shall have passed the legislature shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor. If he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to that house in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large upon the journal, and proceed to re-consider it. If after such re-consideration, two-thirds of the members present shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of the members present, it shall become a law. But in all such cases, the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the members voting for or against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the governor within three days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, unless the legislature shall, by their adjournment, prevent its return; in which case it shall not be a law.

ARTICLE VI.—ADMINISTRATIVE.

Sec. 1. There shall be chosen by the qualified electors of the State, at the times and places of choosing the members of the legislature, a secretary of State, treasurer, and an attorney general, who shall severally hold their offices for the term of two years.

Sec. 2. The secretary of State shall keep a fair record of the official acts of the legisla ture and executive department of the State, and shall, when required, lay the same, and all matters relative thereto before either branch of the legislature. He shall be ex-officio auditor, and shall perform such other duties as shall be assigned him by law. He shall receive as a compensation for his services, yearly, such sum as shall be provided by law, and shall keep his office at the seat of government.

Sec. 3. The powers, duties, and compensation of the treasurer and attorney general, shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 4. Sheriffs, coroners, registers of deeds, and district attorneys, shall be chosen by the electors of the respective counties, once in every two years, and as often as vacancies shall happen. Sheriffs shall hold no other office, and be ineligible for two years, next succeeding the termination of their offices. They may be required by law, to renew their security from time to time; and in default of giving such new security, their offices shall be deemed vacant.—But the county shall never be made responsible for the acts of the sheriff. The governor may remove any officer, in this section mentioned, giving to such officer a copy of the charges against him, and an opportunity of being heard in his defence.

ARTICLE VII.—JUDICIARY.

Sec. 1. The court for the trial of impeachments shall be composed of the senate. The house of representatives shall have the power of impeaching all civil officers of this State, for corrupt conduct in office, or for crimes and misdemeanors: but a majority of all the members elected shall concur in an impeachment. On the trial of an impeachment against the governor, the lieutenant governor shall not act as a member of the court. No judicial officer shall exercise his office after he shall have been impeached, until his acquittal.—Before the trial of an impeachment, the members of the court shall take an oath or affirmation, truly and impartially to try the impeachment, according to evidence; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present. Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than removeal from office, or removal from office and disqualification to hold any office of honor, profit or trust under this State; but the party impeached shall be liable to indictment, trial and punishment according to law.

Sec. 2. The judicial power of the State, both as to matters of law and equity, shall be vested in a supreme court, circuit courts, courts of probate, and in justices of the peace. The legislature may also vest such jurisdiction as shall be deemed neccessary, in municipal courts, and shall have power to establish inferior courts, in the several counties, with limited civil and criminal jurisdiction. Provided, That the jurisdiction which may be vested in municipal courts, shall not exceed, in their respective municipalities, that of circuit courts, in their respective circuits, as prescribed in this constitution. And that the legislature shall provide as well for the election of judges of the municipal courts, as of the judges of inferior courts, by the qualified electors of the respective jurisdictions. The term of office of the judges of the said municipal and inferior courts, shall not be longer than that of the judges of the circuit court.

Sec. 3. The supreme court, except in cases otherwise provided in this constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be co-extensive with the State; but in no case removed to the supreme court, shall a trial by jury be allowed. The supreme court shall have a general superintending control over all inferior courts; it shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorari, and other original and remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same.

Sec. 4. For the term of five years, and thereafter, until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the judges of the several circuit courts, shall be judges of the supreme court, four of whom shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of a majority of the judges present shall be necessary to a decision. The legislature shall have power, if they should think it expedient and necessary, to provide, by law, for the organization of a separate supreme court, with the jurisdiction and powers prescribed in this constitution, to consist of one chief justice, and two associate justices, to be elected by the qualified electors of the State, at such time, and in such manner as the legislature may provide. The separate supreme court, when so organized shall not be changed or discontinued by the legislature; the judges thereof shall be so classified that but one of them shall go out of office at the same time, and their term of office shall be the same as is provided for the judges of the circuit court. And whenever the legislature may consider it necessary to establish a separate supreme court, they shall have power to reduce the number of circuit court judges to four, and subdivide the judicial circuits, but no such subdivision or reduction shall take effect until after the expiration of the term of some one of the said judges or until a vacancy occur by some other means.

Sec. 5. The State shall be divided into five judicial circuits, to be composed as follows: The first circuit shall comprise the counties of Racine, Walworth, Rock, and Green. The second circuit, the counties of Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson, and Dane. The third circuit, the counties of Washington, Dodge, Columbia, Marquette, Sauk, and Portage. The fourth circuit, the counties of Brown, Manitouwoc, Sheboygan, Fond du Lac, Winnebago, and Calmet; and the fifth circuit shall comprise the counties of Iowa, Lafayette, Grant, Crawford, and St. Croix; and the county of Richland shall be attached to Iowa; the county of Chippewa to Crawford; and the county of La Pointe to the county of St. Croix, for judicial purposes, until otherwise provided by the legislature.

Sec. 6. The legislature may alter the limits, or increase the number of circuits, making them as compact and convenient as practicable, and bounding them by county lines; but no such alteration or increase shall have the effect to remove a judge from office. In case of an increase of circuits, the judge or judges shall be elected as provided in this constitution and receive a salary not less than that herein provided for judges of the circuit court.

Sec. 7. For each circuit there shall be a judge chosen by the qualified electors therein, who shall hold his office as is provided in this constitution, and until his successor shall be chosen and qualified, and after he shall have been elected he shall reside in the circuit for which he was elected. One of said judges shall be designated as chief justice, in such manner as the legislature shall provide. And the legislature shall at its first session provide by law as well for the election of as for classifying the judges of the circuit court to be elected under this constitution, in such manner that one of said judges shall go out of office in two years, one in three years, one in four years, one in five years, and one in six years, and thereafter the judge elected to fill the office shall hold the same for six years.

Sec. 8. The circuit courts shall have original jurisdiction in all matters civil and criminal within this State, not excepted in this constitution, and not hereafter prohibited by law, and appellate jurisdiction from all inferior courts and tribunals, and a supervisory control over the same. They shall also have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorary, and all other writs necessary to carry into effect their orders, judgments, and decrees, and give them a general control over inferior courts and jurisdictions.

Sec. 9. When any vacancy shall happen in the office of a judge of the supreme or circuit court, such vacancy shall be filled by an appointment of the governor, which shall continue until a successor is elected and qualified; and when elected, such successor shall hold his office the residue of the unexpired term. There shall be no election for a judge or judges at any general election for State or county officers, nor within thirty days either before or after such election.

Sec. 10. Each of the judges of the supreme and circuit courts shall receive a salary, payable quarterly, of not less than one thousand five hundred dollars annually; they shall receive no fees of office or other compensation than their salaries; they shall hold no office of public trust, except a judicial office, during the term for which they are respectively elected, and all votes for either of them for any office except a judicial office, given by the legislature or the people, shall be void. No person shall be eligible to the office of judge who shall not at the time of his election be a citizen of the United States, and have attained the age of twenty-five years, and be a qualified elector within the jurisdiction for which he may be chosen.

Sec. 11. The supreme court shall hold at least one term annually at the seat of government of the State, at such times as shall be provided by law, and the legislature may provide for holding other terms, and at other places when they may deem it necessary. A circuit court shall be held at least twice in each year, in each county of this State, organized for judicial purposes. The judges of the circuit court may hold courts for each other, and shall do so when required by law.

Sec. 12. There shall be a clerk of the circuit court chosen in each county organized for judicial purposes, by the qualified electors thereof, who shall hold his office for two years, subject to removal, as shall be provided by law. In case of a vacancy, the judge of the circuit court shall have the power to appoint a clerk, until the vacancy shall be filled by an election. The clerk thus elected or appointed shall give such security as the legislature may require, and when elected shall hold his office for a full term. The supreme court shall appoint its own clerk, and the clerk of a circuit court may be appointed clerk of the supreme court.

Sec. 13. Any judge of the supreme or circuit court may be removed from office, by address of both houses of the legislature, if two-thirds of all the members elected to each house concur therein, but no removal shall be made by virtue of this section, unless the judge complained of shall have been served with a copy of the charges against him, as the ground of address, and shall have had an opportunity of being heard in his defence. On the question of removal, the ayes and noes shall be entered on the journal.

Sec. 14. There shall be chosen in each county, by the qualified electors thereof, a judge of probate, who shall hold his office for two years and until his successor shall be elected and qualified, and whose jurisdiction, powers and duties shall be prescribed by law.—Provided, however, That the legislature shall have power to abolish the office of judge of probate in any county, and to confer probate powers upon such inferior courts as may be established in said county.

Sec. 15. The electors of the several towns at their annual town meetings, and the electors of cities and villages at their charter elections, shall, in such manner as the legislature may direct, elect justices of the peace, whose term of office shall be for two years, and until their successors in office shall be elected and qualified. In case of an election to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of a full term, the justice elected shall hold for the residue of the unexpired term, their number and classification shall be regulated by law. And the tenure of two years shall in no wise interfere with the classification in the first instance. The justices thus elected, shall have such civil and criminal jurisdiction as shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 16. The legislature shall pass laws for the regulation of tribunals of conciliation, defining their powers and duties. Such tribunals may be established in and for any township, and shall have power to render judgments to be obligatory on the parties, when they shall voluntarily submit their matter in difference to arbitration, and agree to abide the judgment, or assent thereto in writing.

Sec. 17. The style of all writs and process shall be, "The State of Wisconsin." All criminal prosecutions shall be carried on in the name and by the authority of the same; and all indictments shall conclude against the peace and dignity of the State.

Sec. 18. The legislature shall impose a tax on all civil suits commenced or prosecuted in the municipal, inferior, or circuit courts, which shall constitute a fund to be applied toward the payment of the salary of judges.

Sec. 19. The testimony in causes in equity shall be taken in like manner as in cases at law; and the office of master in chancery is hereby prohibited.

Sec. 20. Any suitor in any court of this State shall have the right the qualified electors of the respective jurisdictions. The term of office of the judges of the said municipal and inferior courts, shall not be longer than that of the judges of the circuit court.

Sec. 3. The supreme court, except in cases otherwise provided in this constitution, shall have appellate jurisdiction only, which shall be co-extensive with the State; but in no case removed to the supreme court, shall a trial by jury be allowed. The supreme court shall have a general superintending control over all inferior courts; it shall have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorari, and other original and remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same.

Sec. 4. For the term of five years, and thereafter, until the legislature shall otherwise provide, the judges of the several circuit courts, shall be judges of the supreme court, four of whom shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of a majority of the judges present shall be necessary to a decision. The legislature shall have power, if they should think it expedient and necessary, to provide, by law, for the organization of a separate supreme court, with the jurisdiction and powers prescribed in this constitution, to consist of one chief justice, and two associate justices, to be elected by the qualified electors of the State, at such time, and in such manner as the legislature may provide. The separate supreme court, when so organized shall not be changed or discontinued by the legislature; the judges thereof shall be so classified that but one of them shall go out of office at the same time, and their term of office shall be the same as is provided for the judges of the circuit court. And whenever the legislature may consider it necessary to establish a separate supreme court, they shall have power to reduce the number of circuit court judges to four, and subdivide the judicial circuits, but no such subdivision or reduction shall take effect until after the expiration of the term of some one of the said judges or until a vacancy occur by some other means.

Sec. 5. The State shall be divided into five judicial circuits, to be composed as follows: The first circuit shall comprise the counties of Racine, Walworth, Rock, and Green. The second circuit, the counties of Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson, and Dane. The third circuit, the counties of Washington, Dodge, Columbia, Marquette, Sauk, and Portage. The fourth circuit, the counties of Brown, Manitouwoc, Sheboygan, Fond du Lac, Winnebago, and Calmet; and the fifth circuit shall comprise the counties of Iowa, Lafayette, Grant, Crawford, and St. Croix; and the county of Richland shall be attached to Iowa; the county of Chippewa to Crawford; and the county of La Pointe to the county of St. Croix, for judicial purposes, until otherwise provided by the legislature.

Sec. 6. The legislature may alter the limits, or increase the number of circuits, making them as compact and convenient as practicable, and bounding them by county lines; but no such alteration or increase shall have the effect to remove a judge from office. In case of an increase of circuits, the judge or judges shall be elected as provided in this constitution and receive a salary not less than that herein provided for judges of the circuit court.

Sec. 7. For each circuit there shall be a judge chosen by the qualified electors therein, who shall hold his office as is provided in this constitution, and until his successor shall be chosen and qualified, and after he shall have been elected he shall reside in the circuit for which he was elected. One of said judges shall be designated as chief justice, in such manner as the legislature shall provide. And the legislature shall at its first session provide by law as well for the election of as for classifying the judges of the circuit court to be elected under this constitution, in such manner that one of said judges shall go out of office in two years, one in three years, one in four years, one in five years, and one in six years, and thereafter the judge elected to fill the office shall hold the same for six years.

Sec. 8. The circuit courts shall have original jurisdiction in all matters civil and criminal within this State, not excepted in this constitution, and not hereafter prohibited by law, and appellate jurisdiction from all inferior courts and tribunals, and a supervisory control over the same. They shall also have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorary, and all other writs necessary to carry into effect their orders, judgments, and decrees, and give them a general control over inferior courts and jurisdictions.

Sec. 9. When any vacancy shall happen in the office of a judge of the supreme or circuit court, such vacancy shall be filled by an appointment of the governor, which shall continue until a successor is elected and qualified; and when elected, such successor shall hold his office the residue of the unexpired term. There shall be no election for a judge or judges at any general election for State or county officers, nor within thirty days either before or after such election.

Sec. 10. Each of the judges of the supreme and circuit courts shall receive a salary, payable quarterly, of not less than one thousand five hundred dollars annually; they shall receive no fees of office or other compensation than their salaries; they shall hold no office of public trust, except a judicial office, during the term for which they are respectively elected, and all votes for either of them for any office except a judicial office, given by the legislature or the people, shall be void. No person shall be eligible to the office of judge who shall not at the time of his election be a citizen of the United States, and have attained the age of twenty-five years, and be a qualified elector within the jurisdiction for which he may be chosen.

Sec. 11. The supreme court shall hold at least one term annually at the seat of government of the State, at such times as shall be provided by law, and the legislature may provide for holding other terms, and at other places when they may deem it necessary. A circuit court shall be held at least twice in each year, in each county of this State, organized for judicial purposes. The judges of the circuit court may hold courts for each other, and shall do so when required by law.

Sec. 12. There shall be a clerk of the circuit court chosen in each county organized for judicial purposes, by the qualified electors thereof, who shall hold his office for two years, subject to removal, as shall be provided by law. In case of a vacancy, the judge of the circuit court shall have the power to appoint a clerk, until the vacancy shall be filled by an election. The clerk thus elected or appointed shall give such security as the legislature may require, and when elected shall hold his office for a full term. The supreme court shall appoint its own clerk, and the clerk of a circuit court may be appointed clerk of the supreme court.

Sec. 13. Any judge of the supreme or circuit court may be removed from office, by address of both houses of the legislature, if two-thirds of all the members elected to each house concur therein, but no removal shall be made by virtue of this section, unless the judge complained of shall have been served with a copy of the charges against him, as the ground of address, and shall have had an opportunity of being heard in his defence. On the question of removal, the ayes and noes shall be entered on the journal.

Sec. 14. There shall be chosen in each county, by the qualified electors thereof, a judge of probate, who shall hold his office for two years and until his successor shall be elected and qualified, and whose jurisdiction, powers and duties shall be prescribed by law.—Provided, however, That the legislature shall have power to abolish the office of judge of probate in any county, and to confer probate powers upon such inferior courts as may be established in said county.

Sec. 15. The electors of the several towns at their annual town meetings, and the electors of cities and villages at their charter elections, shall, in such manner as the legislature may direct, elect justices of the peace, whose term of office shall be for two years, and until their successors in office shall be elected and qualified. In case of an election to fill a vacancy occurring before the expiration of a full term, the justice elected shall hold for the residue of the unexpired term, their number and classification shall be regulated by law. And the tenure of two years shall in no wise interfere with the classification in the first instance. The justices thus elected, shall have such civil and criminal jurisdiction as shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 16. The legislature shall pass laws for the regulation of tribunals of conciliation, defining their powers and duties. Such tribunals may be established in and for any township, and shall have power to render judgments to be obligatory on the parties, when they shall voluntarily submit their matter in difference to arbitration, and agree to abide the judgment, or assent thereto in writing.

Sec. 17. The style of all writs and process shall be, "The State of Wisconsin." All criminal prosecutions shall be carried on in the name and by the authority of the same; and all indictments shall conclude against the peace and dignity of the State.

Sec. 18. The legislature shall impose a tax on all civil suits commenced or prosecuted in the municipal, inferior, or circuit courts, which shall constitute a fund to be applied toward the payment of the salary of judges.

Sec. 19. The testimony in causes in equity shall be taken in like manner as in cases at law; and the office of master in chancery is hereby prohibited.

Sec. 20. Any suitor in any court of this State shall have the right to prosecute or defend his suit either in his own proper person or by an attorney or agent of his choice.

Sec. 21. The legislature shall provide by law for the speedy publication of all statute laws, and of such judical decisions made within the State as may be deemed expedient. And no general law shall be in force until published.

Sec. 22. The legislature at its first session after the adoption of this constitution, shall provide for the appointment of three commissioners, whose duty it shall be to inquire into, revise, and simplify the rules of practice, pleadings, forms, and proceedings, and arrange a system adapted to the courts of record of this State, and report the same to the legislature, subject to their modification and adoption: and such commission shall terminate upon the rendering of the report, unless otherwise provided by law.

Sec. 23. The legislature may provide for the appointment of one or more persons in each organized county, and may vest in such persons such judicial power as shall be prescribed by law. Provided, That said power shall not exceed that of a judge of a circuit court at chambers.

ARTICLE VIII.—FINANCE.

Sec. 1. The rule of taxation shall be uniform, and taxes shall be levied upon such property as the legislature shall prescribe.

Sec. 2. No money shall pe paid out of the treasury, except in pursuance of an appropriation by law.

Sec. 3. The credit of the State shall never be given or loaned in aid of any individual, association, or corporation.

Sec. 4. The State shall never contract any public debt, except in the cases and manner herein provided.

Sec. 5. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated expenses of the State for each year; and whenever the expenses for any year shall exceed the income, the legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year, sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency, as well as the estimated expenses of such ensuing year.

Sec. 6. For the purpose of defraying extraordinary expenditures, the State may contract public debts; but such debts shall never in the aggregate exceed one hundred thousand dollars. Every such debt shall be authorized by law, for some purpose or purposes to be distinctly specified therein; and the vote of a majority of all the members elected to each house, to be taken by yeas and nays, shall be necessary to the passage of such law; and every such law shall provide for levying an annual tax sufficient to pay the annual interest of such debt, and the principal within five years from the passage of such law, and shall specially appropriate the proceeds of such taxes to the payment of such principal and interest; and such appropriation shall not be repealed, nor the taxes be postponed or diminished until the principal and interest of such debt shall have been wholly paid.

Sec. 7. The legislature may also borrow money to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, or defend the State in time of war; but the money thus raised shall be applied execlusively to the object for which the loan was authorized, or to the re-payment of the debt thereby created.

Sec. 8. On the passage in either house of the legislature of any law which imposes, continues, or renews a tax, or creates a debt or charge, or makes, continues, or renews an appropriation of public or trust money, or releases, discharges, or commutes a claim or demand of the State, the question shall be taken by yeas and nays, which shall be duly entered on the journal; and three-fifths of all the members elected to such house shall in all such cases be required to constitute a quorum therein.

Sec. 9. No scrip, certificate, or other evidence of State debt whatsoever, shall be issued, except for such debts as are authorized by the sixth and seventh sections of this article.

Sec. 10. The State shall never contract any debt for works of internal improvement, or be a party in carrying on such works; but whenever grants of land or other property shall have been made to the State, especially dedicated by the grant to particular works of internal improvement, the State may carry on such particular works, and shall devote thereto the avails of such grants, and may pledge or appropriate the revenues derived from such works in aid of their completion.

ARTICLE IX.—EMINENT DOMAIN AND PROPERTY OF THE STATE.

Sec. 1. The State shall have concurrent jurisdiction on all rivers and lakes bordering on this State, so far as such rivers or lakes shall form a common boundary to the State, and any other State or Territory now or hereafter to be formed and bounded by the same.—And the river Mississippi and the navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying place between the same shall be common highways, and forever free as well to the inhabitants of the State as to the citizens of the United States without any tax, impost, or duty therefor.

Sec. 2. The title to all lands and other property which have accrued to the Territory of Wisconsin by grant, gift, purchase, forfeiture, escheat, or otherwise shall vest in the State of Wisconsin.

Sec. 3. The people of the State in their right of sovereignty are declared to possess the ultimate property in and to all lands within the jurisdiction of the State; and all lands the title to which shall fail from a defect of heirs, shall revert, or escheat to the people.

ARTICLE X.—EDUCATION.

Sec. 1. The supervision of public instruction shall be vested in a State superintendent, and such other officers as the legislature shall direct. The State superintendent shall be chosen by the qualified electors of the State in such manner as the legislature shall provide; his powers, duties, and compensation shall be prescribed by law: Provided, That his compensation shall not exceed the sum of twelve hundred dollars annually.

Sec. 2. The proceeds of all lands that have been or hereafter may be granted by the United States to this State for educational purposes, (except the lands hereafter granted for the purposes of a university,) and all moneys, and the clear proceeds of all property that may accrue to the State by forfeiture or escheat, and all moneys which shall be paid as an equivalent for exemption from military duty, and the clear proceeds of all fines collected in the several counties for any breach of the penal laws, and all moneys arising from any grant to the State, when the purposes of such grant are not specified, and the five hundred thousand acres of land to which the State is entitled by the provisions of an act of congress entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights," approved the 4th day of September, one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and also the five per centum of the net proceeds of the public lands, to which the State shall become entitled on her admission into the Union, (if congress shall consent to such appropriation of the two grants last mentioned,) shall be set apart as a separate fund, to be called the school fund, the interest of which, and all other revenues derived from the school lands, shall be exclusively applied to the following objects, to wit:

1st. To the support and maintenance of common schools, in each school district, and the purchase of suitable libraries and apparatus therefor.

2d. The residue shall be appropriated to the support and maintenance of academies and normal schools, and suitable libraries and apparatus therefor.

Sec. 3. The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of district schools, which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable, and such schools shall be free and without charge for tuition, to all children between the ages of four and twenty years, and no sectarian instruction shall be allowed therein.

Sec. 4. Each town and city shall be required to raise by tax annually, for the support of common schools therein, a sum not less than one-half the amount received by such town or city respectively for school purposes, from the income of the school fund.

Sec. 5. Provision shall be made by law for the distribution of the income of the school fund among the several towns and cities of this State, for the support of common schools therein in some just proportion to the number of children and youth resident therein, between the ages of four and twenty years, and no appropriation shall be made from the school fund to any city or town, for the year in which such city or town shall fail to raise such tax, nor to any school district for the year in which a school shall not be maintained at least three months.

Sec. 6. Provision shall be made by law for the establishment of a State university, at or near the seat of State government, and for connecting with the same, from time to time, such colleges in different parts of the State, as the interests of education may require.—The proceeds of all lands, that have been, or hereafter may be granted by the United States, to the State, for the support of a university, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, to be called the university fund, the interest of which shall be appropriated to the support of the State university, and no sectarian instruction shall be allowed in such university.

Sec. 7. The secretary of State, treasurer, and attorney general, to prosecute or defend his suit either in his own proper person or by an attorney or agent of his choice.

Sec. 21. The legislature shall provide by law for the speedy publication of all statute laws, and of such judical decisions made within the State as may be deemed expedient. And no general law shall be in force until published.

Sec. 22. The legislature at its first session after the adoption of this constitution, shall provide for the appointment of three commissioners, whose duty it shall be to inquire into, revise, and simplify the rules of practice, pleadings, forms, and proceedings, and arrange a system adapted to the courts of record of this State, and report the same to the legislature, subject to their modification and adoption: and such commission shall terminate upon the rendering of the report, unless otherwise provided by law.

Sec. 23. The legislature may provide for the appointment of one or more persons in each organized county, and may vest in such persons such judicial power as shall be prescribed by law. Provided, That said power shall not exceed that of a judge of a circuit court at chambers.

ARTICLE VIII.—FINANCE.

Sec. 1. The rule of taxation shall be uniform, and taxes shall be levied upon such property as the legislature shall prescribe.

Sec. 2. No money shall pe paid out of the treasury, except in pursuance of an appropriation by law.

Sec. 3. The credit of the State shall never be given or loaned in aid of any individual, association, or corporation.

Sec. 4. The State shall never contract any public debt, except in the cases and manner herein provided.

Sec. 5. The legislature shall provide for an annual tax sufficient to defray the estimated expenses of the State for each year; and whenever the expenses for any year shall exceed the income, the legislature shall provide for levying a tax for the ensuing year, sufficient, with other sources of income, to pay the deficiency, as well as the estimated expenses of such ensuing year.

Sec. 6. For the purpose of defraying extraordinary expenditures, the State may contract public debts; but such debts shall never in the aggregate exceed one hundred thousand dollars. Every such debt shall be authorized by law, for some purpose or purposes to be distinctly specified therein; and the vote of a majority of all the members elected to each house, to be taken by yeas and nays, shall be necessary to the passage of such law; and every such law shall provide for levying an annual tax sufficient to pay the annual interest of such debt, and the principal within five years from the passage of such law, and shall specially appropriate the proceeds of such taxes to the payment of such principal and interest; and such appropriation shall not be repealed, nor the taxes be postponed or diminished until the principal and interest of such debt shall have been wholly paid.

Sec. 7. The legislature may also borrow money to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, or defend the State in time of war; but the money thus raised shall be applied exclusively to the object for which the loan was authorized, or to the re-payment of the debt thereby created.

Sec. 8. On the passage in either house of the legislature of any law which imposes, continues, or renews a tax, or creates a debt or charge, or makes, continues, or renews an appropriation of public or trust money, or releases, discharges, or commutes a claim or demand of the State, the question shall be taken by yeas and nays, which shall be duly entered on the journal; and three-fifths of all the members elected to such house shall in all such cases be required to constitute a quorum therein.

Sec. 9. No scrip, certificate, or other evidence of State debt whatsoever, shall be issued, except for such debts as are authorized by the sixth and seventh sections of this article.

Sec. 10. The State shall never contract any debt for works of internal improvement, or be a party in carrying on such works; but whenever grants of land or other property shall have been made to the State, especially dedicated by the grant to particular works of internal improvement, the State may carry on such particular works, and shall devote thereto the avails of such grants, and may pledge or appropriate the revenues derived from such works in aid of their completion.

ARTICLE IX.—EMINENT DOMAIN AND PROPERTY OF THE STATE.

Sec. 1. The State shall have concurrent jurisdiction on all rivers and lakes bordering on this State, so far as such rivers or lakes shall form a common boundary to the State, and any other State or Territory now or hereafter to be formed and bounded by the same.—And the river Mississippi and the navigable waters leading into the Mississippi and St. Lawrence, and the carrying place between the same shall be common highways, and forever free as well to the inhabitants of the State as to the citizens of the United States without any tax, impost, or duty therefor.

Sec. 2. The title to all lands and other property which have accrued to the Territory of Wisconsin by grant, gift, purchase, forfeiture, escheat, or otherwise shall vest in the State of Wisconsin.

Sec. 3. The people of the State in their right of sovereignty are declared to possess the ultimate property in and to all lands within the jurisdiction of the State; and all lands the title to which shall fail from a defect of heirs, shall revert, or escheat to the people.

ARTICLE X.—EDUCATION.

Sec. 1. The supervision of public instruction shall be vested in a State superintendent, and such other officers as the legislature shall direct. The State superintendent shall be chosen by the qualified electors of the State in such manner as the legislature shall provide; his powers, duties, and compensation shall be prescribed by law: Provided, That his compensation shall not exceed the sum of twelve hundred dollars annually.

Sec. 2. The proceeds of all lands that have been or hereafter may be granted by the United States to this State for educational purposes, (except the lands hereafter granted for the purposes of a university,) and all moneys, and the clear proceeds of all property that may accrue to the State by forfeiture or escheat, and all moneys which shall be paid as an equivalent for exemption from military duty, and the clear proceeds of all fines collected in the several counties for any breach of the penal laws, and all moneys arising from any grant to the State, when the purposes of such grant are not specified, and the five hundred thousand acres of land to which the State is entitled by the provisions of an act of congress entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights," approved the 4th day of September, one thousand eight hundred and forty-one, and also the five per centum of the net proceeds of the public lands, to which the State shall become entitled on her admission into the Union, (if congress shall consent to such appropriation of the two grants last mentioned,) shall be set apart as a separate fund, to be called the school fund, the interest of which, and all other revenues derived from the school lands, shall be exclusively applied to the following objects, to wit:

1st. To the support and maintenance of common schools, in each school district, and the purchase of suitable libraries and apparatus therefor.

2d. The residue shall be appropriated to the support and maintenance of academies and normal schools, and suitable libraries and apparatus therefor.

Sec. 3. The legislature shall provide by law for the establishment of district schools, which shall be as nearly uniform as practicable, and such schools shall be free and without charge for tuition, to all children between the ages of four and twenty years, and no sectarian instruction shall be allowed therein.

Sec. 4. Each town and city shall be required to raise by tax annually, for the support of common schools therein, a sum not less than one-half the amount received by such town or city respectively for school purposes, from the income of the school fund.

Sec. 5. Provision shall be made by law for the distribution of the income of the school fund among the several towns and cities of this State, for the support of common schools therein in some just proportion to the number of children and youth resident therein, between the ages of four and twenty years, and no appropriation shall be made from the school fund to any city or town, for the year in which such city or town shall fail to raise such tax, nor to any school district for the year in which a school shall not be maintained at least three months.

Sec. 6. Provision shall be made by law for the establishment of a State university, at or near the seat of State government, and for connecting with the same, from time to time, such colleges in different parts of the State, as the interests of education may require.—The proceeds of all lands, that have been, or hereafter may be granted by the United States, to the State, for the support of a university, shall be and remain a perpetual fund, to be called the university fund, the interest of which shall be appropriated to the support of the State university, and no sectarian instruction shall be allowed in such university.

Sec. 7. The secretary of State, treasurer, and attorney general, shall constitute a board of commissioners for the sale of the school and university lands, and for the investment of the funds arising therefrom. Any two of said commissioners shall be a quorum for the transaction of all business pertaining to the duties of their office.

Sec. 8. Provision shall be made by law for the sale of all school and university lands, after they shall have been appraised, and when any portion of such lands shall be sold, and the purchase money shall not be paid at the time of the sale, the commissioners shall take security by mortgage upon the lands sold, for the sum remaining unpaid, with seven per cent. interest thereon, payable annually at the office of the treasurer. The commissioners shall be authorized to execute a good and sufficient conveyance to all purchasers of said lands, and to discharge any mortgages taken as security, when the sum due thereon shall have been paid. The commissioners shall have power to withhold from sale any portion of such land, when they shall deem it expedient, and shall invest all moneys arising from the sale of such lands, as well as all other university and school funds, in such manner as the legislature shall provide, and shall give such security for the faithful performance of their duties as may be required by law.

ARTICLE XI.—CORPORATIONS.

Sec. 1. Corporations without banking powers or privileges may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special act, except for municipal purposes, and in cases where, in the judgment of the legislature, the objects of the corporation cannot be attained under general laws. All general laws or special acts enacted under the provisions of this section, may be altered or repealed by the legislature at any time after their passage.

Sec. 2. No municipal corporation shall take private property for public use against the consent of the owner, without the necessity thereof being first established by the verdict of a jury.

Sec. 3. It shall be the duty of the legislature, and they are hereby empowered to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses in assessments and taxation, and in contracting debts by such municipal corporations.

Sec. 4. The legislature shall not have power to create, authorize or incorporate, by any general or special law, any bank or banking power or privilege, or any institution or corporation, having any banking power or privilege whatever, except as provided in this article.

Sec. 5. The legislature may submit to the voters at any general election, the question of 'bank' or 'no bank;' and if at any such election a number of votes equal to a majority of all the votes cast at such election on that subject shall be in favor of banks, then the legislature shall have power to grant bank charters, or to pass a general banking law, with such restrictions and under such regulations as they may deem expedient and proper for the security of all the bill holders: Provided, That no such grant or law shall have any force or effect until the same shall have been submitted to a vote of the electors of the State at some general election, and been approved by a majority of all the votes cast on that subject at such election.

ARTICLE XII.—AMENDMENTS.

Sec. 1. Any amendment or amendments to this constitution may be proposed in either house of the legislature, and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their journals with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election; and shall be published for three months previous to the time of holding such election. And if in the legislature so next chosen, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then it shall be the duty of the legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner, and at such time as the legislature shall prescribe, and if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of the constitution: Provided, That if more than one amendment be submitted they shall be submitted in such manner that the people may vote for or against such amendments separately.

Sec. 2. If at any time a majority of the senate and assembly shall deem it necessary to call a convention to revise or change this constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote for or against a convention at the next election for members of the legislature; and if it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting thereon have voted for a convention, the legislature shall at its next session, provide for calling such convention.

ARTICLE XIII.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Sec. 1. The political year for the State of Wisconsin shall commence on the first Monday in January in each year; and the general election shall be holden on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November in each year.

Sec. 2. Any inhabitant of this State who may hereafter be engaged, either directly or indirectly, in a duel either as principal or accessory, shall forever be disqualified as an elector and from holding any office under the constitution and laws of this State, and may be punished in such other manner as shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 3. No member of congress, nor any person holding any office of profit or trust under the United States, (postmasters excepted,) or under any foreign power; no person convicted of any infamous crime in any court within the United States, and no person being a defaulter to the United States, or to this State, or to any county or town therein, or to any State or territory within the United States, shall be eligible to any office of trust, profit, or honor in this State.

Sec. 4. It shall be the duty of the legislature to provide a great seal for the State, which shall be kept by the secretary of State; and all official acts of the governor, his approbation of the laws excepted, shall be thereby authenticated.

Sec. 5. All persons residing upon Indian lands within any county of this State, and qualified to exercise the right of suffrage under this constitution, shall be entitled to vote at the polls which may be held nearest their residence, for State, United States, and county officers. Provided, That no person shall vote for county officers out of the county in which he resides.

Sec. 6. The elective officers of the legislature, other than the presiding officers, shall be a chief clerk and a sergeant-at-arms, to be elected by each house.

Sec. 7. No county with an area of nine hundred square miles or less, shall be divided, or have any part stricken therefrom, without submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county, nor unless a majority of all the legal voters of the county voting on the question shall vote for the same.

Sec. 8. No county seat shall be removed until the point to which it is proposed to be removed shall be fixed by law, and a majority of the voters of the county, voting on the question, shall have voted in favor of its removal to such point.

Sec. 9. All county officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution, shall be elected by the electors of the respective counties, or appointed by the boards of supervisors or other county authorities, as the legislature shall direct. All city, town, and village officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution, shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some divisions thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof, as the legislature shall designate for that purpose. All other officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution, and all officers whose offices may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people or appointed as the legislature may direct.

Sec. 10. The legislature may declare the cases in which any office shall be deemed vacant, and also the manner of filling the vacancy where no provision is made for that purpose in this constitution.

ARTICLE XIV.—SCHEDULE.

Sec. 1. That no inconvenience may arise by reason of a change from territorial to permanent State government, it is declared that all rights, actions, prosecutions, judgments, claims and contracts, as well of individuals as bodies corporate, shall continue as if no such change had taken place, and all process which may be issued under the authority of the territory of Wisconsin previous to its admission into the Union of the United States, shall be as valid as if issued in the name of the State.

Sec. 2. All laws now in force in the territory of Wisconsin, which are not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitation, or be altered or repealed by the legislature.

Sec. 3. All fines, penalties, or forfeitures, accruing to the territory of Wisconsin, shall enure to the use of the State.

(To be continued.)

shall constitute a board of commissioners for the sale of the school and university lands, and for the investment of the funds arising therefrom. Any two of said commissioners shall be a quorum for the transaction of all business pertaining to the duties of their office.

Sec. 8. Provision shall be made by law for the sale of all school and university lands, after they shall have been appraised, and when any portion of such lands shall be sold, and the purchase money shall not be paid at the time of the sale, the commissioners shall take security by mortgage upon the lands sold, for the sum remaining unpaid, with seven per cent. interest thereon, payable annually at the office of the treasurer. The commissioners shall be authorized to execute a good and sufficient conveyance to all purchasers of said lands, and to discharge any mortgages taken as security, when the sum due thereon shall have been paid. The commissioners shall have power to withhold from sale any portion of such land, when they shall deem it expedient, and shall invest all moneys arising from the sale of such lands, as well as all other university and school funds, in such manner as the legislature shall provide, and shall give such security for the faithful performance of their duties as may be required by law.

ARTICLE XI.—CORPORATIONS.

Sec. 1. Corporations without banking powers or privileges may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special act, except for municipal purposes, and in cases where, in the judgment of the legislature, the objects of the corporation cannot be attained under general laws. All general laws or special acts enacted under the provisions of this section, may be altered or repealed by the legislature at any time after their passage.

Sec. 2. No municipal corporation shall take private property for public use against the consent of the owner, without the necessity thereof being first established by the verdict of a jury.

Sec. 3. It shall be the duty of the legislature, and they are hereby empowered to provide for the organization of cities and incorporated villages, and to restrict their power of taxation, assessment, borrowing money, contracting debts, and loaning their credit, so as to prevent abuses in assessments and taxation, and in contracting debts by such municipal corporations.

Sec. 4. The legislature shall not have power to create, authorize or incorporate, by any general or special law, any bank or banking power or privilege, or any institution or corporation, having any banking power or privilege whatever, except as provided in this article.

Sec. 5. The legislature may submit to the voters at any general election, the question of 'bank' or 'no bank;' and if at any such election a number of votes equal to a majority of all the votes cast at such election on that subject shall be in favor of banks, then the legislature shall have power to grant bank charters, or to pass a general banking law, with such restrictions and under such regulations as they may deem expedient and proper for the security of all the bill holders: Provided, That no such grant or law shall have any force or effect until the same shall have been submitted to a vote of the electors of the State at some general election, and been approved by a majority of all the votes cast on that subject at such election.

ARTICLE XII.—AMENDMENTS.

Sec. 1. Any amendment or amendments to this constitution may be proposed in either house of the legislature, and if the same shall be agreed to by a majority of the members elected to each of the two houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on their journals with the ayes and nays taken thereon, and referred to the legislature to be chosen at the next general election; and shall be published for three months, previous to the time of holding such election. And if in the legislature so next chosen, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be agreed to by a majority of all the members elected to each house, then it shall be the duty of the legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner, and at such time as the legislature shall prescribe, and if the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments by a majority of the electors voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of the constitution: Provided, That if more than one amendment be submitted they shall be submitted in such manner that the people may vote for or against such amendments separately.

Sec. 2. If at any time a majority of the senate and assembly shall deem it necessary to call a convention to revise or change this constitution, they shall recommend to the electors to vote for or against a convention at the next election for members of the legislature; and if it shall appear that a majority of the electors voting thereon have voted for a convention, the legislature shall at its next session provide for calling such convention.

ARTICLE XIII.—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Sec. 1. The political year for the State of Wisconsin shall commence on the first Monday in January in each year; and the general election shall be holden on the Tuesday succeeding the first Monday in November in each year.

Sec. 2. Any inhabitant of this State who may hereafter be engaged, either directly or indirectly, in a duel either as principal or accessory, shall forever be disqualified as an elector and from holding any office under the constitution and laws of this State, and may be punished in such other manner as shall be prescribed by law.

Sec. 3. No member of congress, nor any person holding any office of profit or trust under the United States, (postmasters excepted,) or under any foreign power; no person convicted of any infamous crime in any court within the United States, and no person being a defaulter to the United States, or to this State, or to any county or town therein, or to any State or territory within the United States, shall be eligible to any office of trust, profit, or honor in this State.

Sec. 4. It shall be the duty of the legislature to provide a great seal for the State, which shall be kept by the secretary of State; and all official acts of the governor, his approbation of the laws excepted, shall be thereby authenticated.

Sec. 5. All persons residing upon Indian lands within any county of this State, and qualified to exercise the right of suffrage under this constitution, shall be entitled to vote at the polls which may be held nearest their residence, for State, United States, and county officers. Provided, That no person shall vote for county officers out of the county in which he resides.

Sec. 6. The elective officers of the legislature, other than the presiding officers, shall be a chief clerk and a sergeant-at-arms, to be elected by each house.

Sec. 7. No county with an area of nine hundred square miles or less, shall be divided, or have any part stricken therefrom, without submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county, nor unless a majority of all the legal voters of the county voting on the question shall vote for the same.

Sec. 8. No county seat shall be removed until the point to which it is proposed to be removed shall be fixed by law, and a majority of the voters of the county, voting on the question, shall have voted in favor of its removal to such point.

Sec. 9. All county officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution, shall be elected by the electors of the respective counties, or appointed by the boards of supervisors or other county authorities, as the legislature shall direct. All city, town, and village officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution, shall be elected by the electors of such cities, towns and villages, or of some divisions thereof, or appointed by such authorities thereof, as the legislature shall designate for that purpose. All other officers whose election or appointment is not provided for by this constitution, and all officers whose offices may hereafter be created by law, shall be elected by the people or appointed as the legislature may direct.

Sec. 10. The legislature may declare the cases in which any office shall be deemed vacant, and also the manner of filling the vacancy where no provision is made for that purpose in this constitution.

ARTICLE XIV.—SCHEDULE.

Sec. 1. That no inconvenience may arise by reason of a change from territorial to permanent State government, it is declared that all rights, actions, prosecutions, judgments, claims and contracts, as well of individuals as bodies corporate, shall continue as if no such change had taken place, and all process which may be issued under the authority of the territory of Wisconsin previous to its admission into the Union of the United States, shall be as valid as if issued in the name of the State.

Sec. 2. All laws now in force in the territory of Wisconsin, which are not repugnant to this constitution, shall remain in force until they expire by their own limitation, or be altered or repealed by the legislature.

Sec. 3. All fines, penalties, or forfeitures, accruing to the territory of Wisconsin, shall enure to the use of the State.

(To be continued.)

THE ENDOWMENT.

We have received a 24 page tract containing a pretended revelation of the proceedings of what was called the endowment of the apostate Twelve and their followers at Nauvoo, with a request for our opinion of the propriety of the publication. But as the author has already printed three editions, we doubt not he was more anxious for approbation than advice. This tract, besides many other things, some of which are well enough, and some extremely erroneous, gives seven dgrees of a kind of bastard Free Masonry, said to have been administered to several thousand persons in the Temple at Nauvoo under the direction of Brigham Young, &c., all committed to the authors of the work under the sanction of a solemn oath of perpetual secrecy. And that the readers of the tract may be certain that what they read is true, the authors have added their oath that these disclosures are strictly true. So, by their own showing, we have both their oath that they will not disclose and reveal, and that they have disclosed and revealed. Thus we know, by the testimony of perjured witnesses, that they either have or have not revealed the apostate endowment. The book contains some sterling truths in regard to the origin of the church of God, and, on the whole, we think is as likely to do good as hurt; but we cannot attempt to accomplish a good work by wicked means, and will have nothing to do with this trifling with oaths. If all the falsehood, all the perjury was left out, we would recommend the work; but as it is we cannot consent to advertise the book or the author, or place of publication, lest we should thereby become instrumental in rewarding perjury. Certainly some excuse is made in this case for violating an oath, and so every man who wishes to violate one has his excuse. Oh the inconsistency of man! How has half christendom cried out against the Catholic priesthood for granting dispensations? Yet all these men take to themselves a dispensation just when they please, and for what they please, and without terms or conditions. A few years ago nearly all the Protestant churches in the middle States granted general dispensations to break masonic oaths. Some time before most of the northern States of Europe granted like dispensations for various crimes. A strange pass the world is coming to. God deliver us from all men who regard not oaths or covenants, or prophets.

Extraordinary Phenomenon.—A letter to the editor of the Philadelphia Saturday Courier, dated Forest Hill, Ark., Dec. 12, 1847, says:—"One of the most extraordinary circumstances transpired immediately in this neighborhood on the 8th inst. perhaps that has ever been witnessed on this side of the moon, which I hasten to communicate to you. About a quarter past 3 o'clock, P. M., the sky, which a few minutes before and during the whole of the day had been perfectly clear, became suddenly overcast with a most awful darkness; the clouds (if they were clouds) whirled in the strangest contortions, and presented the appearance of a solid black fleece, lighted from above with the red glare of many torches—though this lurid appearance did not seem to reflect through nor penetrate the cloud, so as to impart any light to the under stratum of the dark mass rolling above, but seemed to be absorbed, and was only visible through the semi-transparency of the portions rolling below.—Whilst hundreds of spectators in our little village were spell-bound in dreadful suspense, the most tremendous explosion that ever deafened the ear of mortal emanated from above, shook the earth upon which we stood, and caused such a rocking of the houses that the new bell on our village church tolled three several times, which, as may readily be imagined, contributed to the general consternation. Immediately following, or rather accompanying the explosion, a fiery mass which appeared, whilst in the air, to be about the size of a hogshead, descended with the rapidity of lightning, and fell about twenty feet on the east side of a cotton gin, which stands just at the outskirts of the village—and in less than twenty minutes the clouds had disappeared, and the sky was as serene, and the sun shone as brightly, as it had done all the fore part of the day!

"When we repaired to the spot where the body had fallen, an excavation, or rather a hole was discovered, which was exactly round and measured 3 feet 2½ inches in diameter, and 8 feet deep, at the bottom of which was a black mass, which was yet so hot that when water was thrown on it, it hissed like hot iron. After considerable labor, in which all our citizens participated, we exhumed from the place a solid mass of something which was about as heavy as so much rock, completely incrusted with a black coat, which smelled like sulphur. The most astonishing of all is, that the mass presents the exact resemblance of the bust of a human being!—or rather it would be supposed to be a stone idol, executed by some barbarian sculptor in the early Pagan ages. Such a circumstance is truly astonishing to every one who has witnessed it, and had it descended a few centuries ago, or fallen among any portion of the heathen world, it no doubt would have been regarded as the descent of a god—but many of our citizens regard it as a meteoric substance, and the only thing which seems to puzzle the most learned among them is its shape.

"As the mail is waiting, you will excuse my not revising this statement, but so far as facts are concerned you may rest assured it is, in every particular, true—as hundreds of our citizens are crowding around Dr. Calling's office (where the œrolite is) to see it."

In haste, your ob't serv't,

HENRY HICKS, P. M.

Singular Marriage.—At Kingston, says an English paper, Col. Webster, aged 67, to Miss Martha Winslow, aged 19. By the above union the bridegroom has married his sister's grand daughter, which makes the bride a wife to her great uncle, sister to her grandfather and grandmother, aunt to her father and mother, and great aunt to her brothers and sisters. She is stepmother to five children, fourteen grandchildren and one great grand child. Interesting young lady.—Ex. Paper.

The editor of the Pittsburgh Chronicle is a person of the most moderate aspirations; he thus sums up different items which he regards as sufficient for a man's happiness:—

"Talk about the enjoyment of wealth—it never was—never can be enjoyed. An abundance of money is a heap of misery. A man who owns a small farm, a small wife, a big dog, a good cow, two or three small pigs, two children, ought to be satisfied. If he isn't, he never can be."—Ex. Paper.

ATTACHMENT.

Wisconsin Territory, }
Walworth County, ss. }

Daniel Avery, }
vs. } In Justice Court before Daniel Salisbury, Esq.
John W. Crane. }

The defendant in the above entitled cause will please to take notice that an attachment has issued against him, and his property attached to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff, and that unless he appear before the said Daniel Salisbury, Justice of the Peace in and for said county, at his office in Spring Prairie on the 9th day of March next at one o'clock in the afternoon, judgment will be rendered against him and his property sold to pay the debt.

DANIEL AVERY, Plaintiff.

Dated at Spring Prairie, this 3d day of February, 1848. 47m.

THE ENDOWMENT.

We have received a 24 page tract containing a pretended revelation of the proceedings of what was called the endowment of the apostate Twelve and their followers at Nauvoo, with a request for our opinion of the propriety of the publication. But as the author has already printed three editions, we doubt not he was more anxious for approbation than advice. This tract, besides many other things, some of which are well enough, and some extremely erroneous, gives seven dgrees of a kind of bastard Free Masonry, said to have been administered to several thousand persons in the Temple at Nauvoo under the direction of Brigham Young, &c., all committed to the authors of the work under the sanction of a solemn oath of perpetual secrecy. And that the readers of the tract may be certain that what they read is true, the authors have added their oath that these disclosures are strictly true. So, by their own showing, we have both their oath that they will not disclose and reveal, and that they have disclosed and revealed. Thus we know, by the testimony of perjured witnesses, that they either have or have not revealed the apostate endowment. The book contains some sterling truths in regard to the origin of the church of God, and, on the whole, we think is as likely to do good as hurt; but we cannot attempt to accomplish a good work by wicked means, and will have nothing to do with this trifling with oaths. If all the falsehood, all the perjury was left out, we would recommend the work; but as it is we cannot consent to advertise the book or the author, or place of publication, lest we should thereby become instrumental in rewarding perjury. Certainly some excuse is made in this case for violating an oath, and so every man who wishes to violate one has his excuse. Oh the inconsistency of man! How has half christendom cried out against the Catholic priesthood for granting dispensations? Yet all these men take to themselves a dispensation just when they please, and for what they please, and without terms or conditions. A few years ago nearly all the Protestant churches in the middle States granted general dispensations to break masonic oaths. Some time before most of the northern States of Europe granted like dispensations for various crimes. A strange pass the world is coming to. God deliver us from all men who regard not oaths or covenants, or prophets.

Extraordinary Phenomenon.—A letter to the editor of the Philadelphia Saturday Courier, dated Forest Hill, Ark., Dec. 12, 1847, says:—"One of the most extraordinary circumstances transpired immediately in this neighborhood on the 8th inst. perhaps that has ever been witnessed on this side of the moon, which I hasten to communicate to you. About a quarter past 3 o'clock, P. M., the sky, which a few minutes before and during the whole of the day had been perfectly clear, became suddenly overcast with a most awful darkness; the clouds (if they were clouds) whirled in the strangest contortions, and presented the appearance of a solid black fleece, lighted from above with the red glare of many torches—though this lurid appearance did not seem to reflect through nor penetrate the cloud, so as to impart any light to the under stratum of the dark mass rolling above, but seemed to be absorbed, and was only visible through the semi-transparency of the portions rolling below.—Whilst hundreds of spectators in our little village were spell-bound in dreadful suspense, the most tremendous explosion that ever deafened the ear of mortal emanated from above, shook the earth upon which we stood, and caused such a rocking of the houses that the new bell on our village church tolled three several times, which, as may readily be imagined, contributed to the general consternation. Immediately following, or rather accompanying the explosion, a fiery mass which appeared, whilst in the air, to be about the size of a hogshead, descended with the rapidity of lightning, and fell about twenty feet on the east side of a cotton gin, which stands just at the outskirts of the village—and in less than twenty minutes the clouds had disappeared, and the sky was as serene, and the sun shone as brightly, as it had done all the fore part of the day!

"When we repaired to the spot where the body had fallen, an excavation, or rather a hole was discovered, which was exactly round and measured 3 feet 2½ inches in diameter, and 8 feet deep, at the bottom of which was a black mass, which was yet so hot that when water was thrown on it, it hissed like hot iron. After considerable labor, in which all our citizens participated, we exhumed from the place a solid mass of something which was about as heavy as so much rock, completely incrusted with a black coat, which smelled like sulphur. The most astonishing of all is, that the mass presents the exact resemblance of the bust of a human being!—or rather it would be supposed to be a stone idol, executed by some barbarian sculptor in the early Pagan ages. Such a circumstance is truly astonishing to every one who has witnessed it, and had it descended a few centuries ago, or fallen among any portion of the heathen world, it no doubt would have been regarded as the descent of a god—but many of our citizens regard it as a meteoric substance, and the only thing which seems to puzzle the most learned among them is its shape.

"As the mail is waiting, you will excuse my not revising this statement, but so far as facts are concerned you may rest assured it is, in every particular, true—as hundreds of our citizens are crowding around Dr. Calling's office (where the œrolite is) to see it."

In haste, your ob't serv't,

HENRY HICKS, P. M.

Singular Marriage.—At Kingston, says an English paper, Col. Webster, aged 67, to Miss Martha Winslow, aged 19. By the above union the bridegroom has married his sister's grand daughter, which makes the bride a wife to her great uncle, sister to her grandfather and grandmother, aunt to her father and mother, and great aunt to her brothers and sisters. She is stepmother to five children, fourteen grandchildren and one great grand child. Interesting young lady.—Ex. Paper.

The editor of the Pittsburgh Chronicle is a person of the most moderate aspirations; he thus sums up different items which he regards as sufficient for a man's happiness:—

"Talk about the enjoyment of wealth—it never was—never can be enjoyed. An abundance of money is a heap of misery. A man who owns a small farm, a small wife, a big dog, a good cow, two or three small pigs, two children, ought to be satisfied. If he isn't, he never can be."—Ex. Paper.

ATTACHMENT.

Wisconsin Territory, }
Walworth County, ss. }

Daniel Avery, }
vs. } In Justice Court before Daniel Salisbury, Esq.
John W. Crane. }

The defendant in the above entitled cause will please to take notice that an attachment has issued against him, and his property attached to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff, and that unless he appear before the said Daniel Salisbury, Justice of the Peace in and for said county, at his office in Spring Prairie on the 9th day of March next at one o'clock in the afternoon, judgment will be rendered against him and his property sold to pay the debt.

DANIEL AVERY, Plaintiff.

Dated at Spring Prairie, this 3d day of February, 1848. 47m.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, FEB. 24, 1848. [No 49.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Below we commence the publication of the epistle of the apostate authorities in the wilderness, to their scattered followers. It will be perceived that it is issued in behalf of their Twelve, and signed "Brigham Young, Pres.," and Willard Richards, Clerk, and dated Dec. 23d, 1847. We have just had a conversation with Phineas Young, the brother of Brigham, in which he stated that, at their fall Conference, Brigham Young was appointed Prophet and First President, H. C. Kimball and Willard Richards his Counsellors; and that the Quorum of the Twelve consisted of seven old members, as follows: P. P. Pratt, John Taylor, Orson Hyde, Lyman Wight, Orson Pratt, George A. Smith and Wilford Woodroof, and two new members, Ezra T. Benson and Amasa Lyman, leaving three vacancies to fill at the next April Conference. Whether this is a lie invented specially for this latitude, where the organization of the church is, a matter much investigated, or they have actually voted in Prophets, &c., and dare not avow it to their followers in general, we leave for the Brighamites to decide.

"GENERAL EPISTLE FROM THE TWELVE APOSTLES, TO THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS ABROAD, DISPERSED THROUGHOUT THE EARTH—GREETING:—

"BELOVED BRETHREN:—At no period since the organization of the Church on the 6th of April, 1830, have the Saints been so extensively scattered, and their means of receiving information from the proper source so limited, as since their expulsion from Illinois; and the time has now arrived when it will be profitable for you to receive, by our epistle, such information and instruction as the Father hath in store, and which he has made manifest by his spirit.

"Knowing the designs of our enemies, we left Nauvoo in February, 1846, with a large pioneer company, for the purpose of finding a place where the saints might gather and dwell in peace. The season was very unfavorable, and scarcity of provision, retarded our progress, and compelled us to leave a portion of the camp in the wilderness, at a place we called Garden Grove, composed of an enclosure for an extensive farm and sixteen houses, the fruits of our labor; and soon after, from similar causes, we located another place, called Mount Pisgah, leaving another portion of the camp, and after searching the route, making the road, and bridges, over a multitude of streams, for more than three hundred miles, mostly on lands then occupied by the Pottawatamie Indians, and since vacated in favor of the United States, lying on the south and west, and included within the boundary of Iowa, we arrived near Council Bluffs, on the Missouri river, during the latter part of June; where we were met by Capt. J. Allen, from Fort Leavenworth, soliciting us to enlist five hundred men in the service of the United States,—To this call of our country, we promptly responded; and before the middle of July, more than five hundred of the brethren were embodied in the "Mormon Battalion," and on their march for California, by way of Fort Leavenworth, under command of Lieut. Col. J. Allen—leaving hundreds of wagons, teams, and families, destitute of protectors and guardians, on the open prairie, in a savage country, far from the abode of civilized life, and farther still from any place where they might hope to locate.

"Our camp, although aware of a cold northern winter approaching, with all the attendant evils, famine, risk of life in an unhealthy climate, Indian depredations, and every thing of a like nature that would tend to make life gloomy, responded to the call of the President with all the alacrity that is due from children to a parent; and when the strength of our camp had taken its departure in the battalion, the aged, the infirm, the widow and the fatherless that remained, full of hope and buoyant with faith, determined to prosecute their journey, a small portion of which went as far west as the Pawnee Mission, where, finding it too late to pass the mountains, they turned aside to winter on the banks of the Missouri, at the mouth of the Running Water, about two hundred and fifty miles northward of the Missouri settlements; while the far more extensive and feeble numbers located at this place, called by us Winter Quarters, where upwards of seven hundred houses were built in the short space of about three months; while the great majority located on Pottawatamie lands. In July there were more than two thousand emigrating wagons between this and Nauvoo.

"In September, 1846, an infuriated mob, clad in all the horrors of war, fell on the saints who had still remained in Nauvoo for want of means to remove, mudered some, and drove the remainder across the Mississippi into Iowa; where, destitute of horses, tents, food, clothing, or money, they received temporary assistance from some benevolent souls in Quincy, St. Louis, and other places, whose names will ever be remembered with gratitude. But at that period the saints were obliged to scatter to the north, south, east, and west, wherever they could find shelter and procure employment. And, hard as it is to write it—it must ever remain a truth on the page of history—that while the flower of Israel's camp were sustaining the wings of the American eagle, by their influence and arms in a foreign country, their brothers, sisters, fathers, mothers, and children, were driven by mob violence from a free and independent State of the same national Republic, and were compelled to flee from the fire, the sword, the musket, and the cannon's mouth, as from the demon of death. From that time to this the Latter Day Saints have been roaming without home from Canada to New Orleans, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and many have taken up their abode in foreign lands. Their property in Hancock county, Illinois, was little or no better than confiscated; many of their houses were burned by the mob, and they were obliged to leave most of those that remained without sale; and those who bargained, sold almost for a song; for the influence of their enemies was to cause such a diminution in the value of property, that from a handsome estate was seldom realized enough to remove the family comfortably away; and thousands have since been wandering to and fro, destitute, afflicted, and distressed for the common necessaries of life, or, unable

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, FEB. 24, 1848. [No 49.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

Below we commence the publication of the epistle of the apostate authorities in the wilderness, to their scattered followers. It will be perceived that it is issued in behalf of their Twelve, and signed "Brigham Young, Pres.," and Willard Richards, Clerk, and dated Dec. 23d, 1847. We have just had a conversation with Phineas Young, the brother of Brigham, in which he stated that, at their fall Conference, Brigham Young was appointed Prophet and First President, H. C. Kimball and Willard Richards his Counsellors; and that the Quorum of the Twelve consisted of seven old members, as follows: P. P. Pratt, John Taylor, Orson Hyde, Lyman Wight, Orson Pratt, George A. Smith and Wilford Woodroof, and two new members, Ezra T. Benson and Amasa Lyman, leaving three vacancies to fill at the next April Conference. Whether this is a lie invented specially for this latitude, where the organization of the church is, a matter much investigated, or they have actually voted in Prophets, &c., and dare not avow it to their followers in general, we leave for the Brighamites to decide.

"GENERAL EPISTLE FROM THE TWELVE APOSTLES, TO THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS ABROAD, DISPERSED THROUGHOUT THE EARTH—GREETING:—

"BELOVED BRETHREN:—At no period since the organization of the Church on the 6th of April, 1830, have the Saints been so extensively scattered, and their means of receiving information from the proper source so limited, as since their expulsion from Illinois; and the time has now arrived when it will be profitable for you to receive, by our epistle, such information and instruction as the Father hath in store, and which he has made manifest by his spirit.

"Knowing the designs of our enemies, we left Nauvoo in February, 1846, with a large pioneer company, for the purpose of finding a place where the saints might gather and dwell in peace. The season was very unfavorable, and scarcity of provision, retarded our progress, and compelled us to leave a portion of the camp in the wilderness, at a place we called Garden Grove, composed of an enclosure for an extensive farm and sixteen houses, the fruits of our labor; and soon after, from similar causes, we located another place, called Mount Pisgah, leaving another portion of the camp, and after searching the route, making the road, and bridges, over a multitude of streams, for more than three hundred miles, mostly on lands then occupied by the Pottawatamie Indians, and since vacated in favor of the United States, lying on the south and west, and included within the boundary of Iowa, we arrived near Council Bluffs, on the Missouri river, during the latter part of June; where we were met by Capt. J. Allen, from Fort Leavenworth, soliciting us to enlist five hundred men in the service of the United States.—To this call of our country, we promptly responded; and before the middle of July, more than five hundred of the brethren were embodied in the "Mormon Battalion," and on their march for California, by way of Fort Leavenworth, under command of Lieut. Col. J. Allen—leaving hundreds of wagons, teams, and families, destitute of protectors and guardians, on the open prairie, in a savage country, far from the abode of civilized life, and farther still from any place where they might hope to locate.

"Our camp, although aware of a cold northern winter approaching, with all the attendant evils, famine, risk of life in an unhealthy climate, Indian depredations, and every thing of a like nature that would tend to make life gloomy, responded to the call of the President with all the alacrity that is due from children to a parent; and when the strength of our camp had taken its departure in the battalion, the aged, the infirm, the widow and the fatherless that remained, full of hope and buoyant with faith, determined to prosecute their journey, a small portion of which went as far west as the Pawnee Mission, where, finding it too late to pass the mountains, they turned aside to winter on the banks of the Missouri, at the mouth of the Running Water, about two hundred and fifty miles northward of the Missouri settlements; while the far more extensive and feeble numbers located at this place, called by us Winter Quarters, where upwards of seven hundred houses were built in the short space of about three months; while the great majority located on Pottawatamie lands. In July there were more than two thousand emigrating wagons between this and Nauvoo.

"In September, 1846, an infuriated mob, clad in all the horrors of war, fell on the saints who had still remained in Nauvoo for want of means to remove, mudered some, and drove the remainder across the Mississippi into Iowa; where, destitute of horses, tents, food, clothing, or money, they received temporary assistance from some benevolent souls in Quincy, St. Louis, and other places, whose names will ever be remembered with gratitude. But at that period the saints were obliged to scatter to the north, south, east, and west, wherever they could find shelter and procure employment. And, hard as it is to write it—it must ever remain a truth on the page of history—that while the flower of Israel's camp were sustaining the wings of the American eagle, by their influence and arms in a foreign country, their brothers, sisters, fathers, mothers, and children, were driven by mob violence from a free and independent State of the same national Republic, and were compelled to flee from the fire, the sword, the musket, and the cannon's mouth, as from the demon of death. From that time to this the Latter Day Saints have been roaming without home from Canada to New Orleans, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and many have taken up their abode in foreign lands. Their property in Hancock county, Illinois, was little or no better than confiscated; many of their houses were burned by the mob, and they were obliged to leave most of those that remained without sale; and those who bargained, sold almost for a song; for the influence of their enemies was to cause such a diminution in the value of property, that from a handsome estate was seldom realized enough to remove the family comfortably away; and thousands have since been wandering to and fro, destitute, afflicted, and distressed for the common necessaries of life, or, unable to endure, have sickened and died by hundreds, while the Temple of the Lord is left solitary in the midst of our enemies, an enduring monument of the diligence and integrity of the saints.

"Lieut. Col. Allen died at Fort Leavenworth, much lamented by the "Mormon Battalion," who proceeded en route by way of Santa Fe, from whence a small portion, who were sick, returned to Pueblo to winter; while the remainder continued their march, mostly on half rations, or meat without salt, making new roads, digging deep wells in the desert, leveling mountains, performing severe labors and undergoing the utmost fatigue and hardship ever endured by infantry, as reported by Col. Cooke, their commanding officer, and arrived in California, in the neighborhood of San Diego, with the loss of very few men.

"Soon after the battalion left the Bluffs, three of our council took their departure for England, where they spent the winter, preaching and setting in order all things pertaining to the church, and returned to this place in the spring of 1847, as did also the camp from Running Water for provisions.

"On the 14th, the remainder of the council, in company of one hundred and forty-three pioneers, left this place in search of a location, and making a new road, a majority of more than one thousand miles westward, arrived at the Great Basin in the latter part of July, where we found a beautiful valley of some twenty by thirty miles in extent, with a lofty range of mountains on the east, capped with perpetual snow, and a beautiful line of mountains on the west, watered with daily showers; the Utah Lake on the south, hid by a range of hills, with a delightful prospect of the beautiful waters of the Great Salt Lake on the north west, extending as far as the eye can reach, interspersed with lofty islands, and a continuation of the valley, or opening on the north, extending along the eastern shore about sixty miles to the mouth of Bear river. The soil of the valley appeared good, but will require irrigation to promote vegetation, though there are many small streams emptying in from the mountains, and the Western Jordon, (Utah Outlet,) passes through from south to north. The climate is warm, dry, and healthy; good salt abounds at the lake; warm, hot, and cold springs are common; mill sites excellent; but the valley is destitute of timber. The box, the fir, the pine, the sugar maple, &c., may be found on the mountains sufficient for immediate consumption, or until more can grow.

"In this valley we located a site for a city, to be called the Great Salt Lake City, of the Great Basin, North America; and, for the convenience of the saints, instituted and located the Great Basin Post Office at this point. The city is surveyed in blocks of ten acres, eight lots to a block; with streets eight rods wide, crossing at right angles. One block is reserved for a Temple, and several more, in different parts of the city, for public grounds.

"Soon after our arrival in the valley, we were joined by that portion of the battalion who had been stationed at Pueblo, and a small camp of the saints from Mississippi, who had wintered at the same place, who united with the pioneers in ploughing, planting, and sowing near one hundred acres, with a great variety of seeds; and in laying the foundation of a row of houses around a ten acre block, and nearly completing the same on one side. Materials for brick and stone buildings are abundant.

"After tarrying four or five weeks, most of the pioneers commenced their return, nearly destitute of provision, accompanied by a part of the battalion, who were quite destitute, except a very small quantity of beef, which was soon exhausted. The company had to depend for their subsistence on wild beasts, such as buffalo, deer, antelope, &c., which, most of the way, were very scarce; and many obtained were exceedingly poor and unwholesome. Between the Green and Sweetwater rivers we met five hundred and sixty-six wagons of the emigrating saints, on their way to the valley; at our last encampment with whom we had fifty horses and mules stolen by the Indians; and a few days after we were attacked by a large party of Sioux, who drove off many of our horses, but most of these we recovered. Our route was by Fort Bridger, the South Pass, Fort John, (Laramie,) and from thence on the north bank of the Platte, to Winter Quarters, where we arrived on the 31st of October, all well; having performed this long and tedious journey, with ox as well as horse teams, and with little food except wild flesh, without losing a single man, although many were sick when they left in the spring, insomuch that they were unable to walk until we had traveled more than one half of the outward distance.

"On the 11th inst. fifteen of the battalion arrived from California, with a pilot from the valley, having suffered much on their return from cold and hunger, with no provisions part of the way but a little horse flesh of the worst kind. From these brethren we received the intelligence that the battalion was discharged in California in July, agreeably to the time of their enlistment; that a portion of the battalion, constituting a company, under Capt. Davis, had re-enlisted to sustain a military post in California; that many had commenced labor to procure means to return; that a small portion had come on to the Great Salt Lake City, where they found the emigrants which we passed in the mountains alive, and in good health and spirits, except three deaths; and that some of the battalion, who had left the valley with them, had stopped on the Sweetwater, searching for buffalo, who with others, in all about thirty, arrived here on the 18th inst., pennyless and destitute, having suffered much from cold and hunger, subsisting on their worn out mules and horses.

"All who possibly could, went to the valley this season; and the saints now in this vicinity have had to depend on their own resources, in labor, for their sustenance, which, on account of the absence of those engaged in the government service, the sickness that has prevailed in camp, and the destruction of the cattle by the Indians, consists mostly of corn, with a few garden vegetables.

"The saints in this vicinity are bearing their privations in meekness and patience, and making all their exertions tend to their removal westward. Their hearts and all their labors are towards the setting sun, for they desire to be so far removed from those who have been their opposers, that there shall be an everlasting barrier between them and future persecution; and although as a people we have been driven from State to State, and although Joseph and Hyrum, our Prophet and Patriarch, were murdered in cold blood, while in government duress, and under the immediate control, inspection, and supervision of the governor and government officers, we know, and feel assured, that there are many honest, noble and patriotic souls now living under that government, and under other similar governments in the sister States of the great confederacy, who would loathe the shedding of innocent blood, and were it in their power would wipe the stain from the nation. If such would clear their garments in the public eye, and before God, they must speak out; they must proclaim to the world their innocence, and their hatred and detestation of such atrocious and unheard of acts; but with this we have nothing to do; only we love honesty and right wherever we find them; the cause is between them, their country, and their God; and we again reiterate what we have often said, and what we have ever shown by our conduct, that, notwithstanding all our privations and sufferings, we are more ready than any other portion of the community to sustain the constitutional institutions of our mother country, and will do the utmost, for them, if permitted; and we say to our saints throughout the earth, be submissive to the law that protects you in your person, rights and property, in whatever nation or kingdom you are; and suffering wrong, rather than do wrong.—

to endure, have sickened and died by hundreds, while the Temple of the Lord is left solitary in the midst of our enemies, an enduring monument of the diligence and integrity of the saints.

"Lieut. Col. Allen died at Fort Leavenworth, much lamented by the "Mormon Battalion," who proceeded en route by way of Santa Fe, from whence a small portion, who were sick, returned to Pueblo to winter; while the remainder continued their march, mostly on half rations, or meat without salt, making new roads, digging deep wells in the desert, leveling mountains, performing severe labors and undergoing the utmost fatigue and hardship ever endured by infantry, as reported by Col. Cooke, their commanding officer, and arrived in California, in the neighborhood of San Diego, with the loss of very few men.

"Soon after the battalion left the Bluffs, three of our council took their departure for England, where they spent the winter, preaching and setting in order all things pertaining to the church, and returned to this place in the spring of 1847, as did also the camp from Running Water for provisions.

"On the 14th, the remainder of the council, in company of one hundred and forty-three pioneers, left this place in search of a location, and making a new road, a majority of more than one thousand miles westward, arrived at the Great Basin in the latter part of July, where we found a beautiful valley of some twenty by thirty miles in extent, with a lofty range of mountains on the east, capped with perpetual snow, and a beautiful line of mountains on the west, watered with daily showers; the Utah Lake on the south, hid by a range of hills, with a delightful prospect of the beautiful waters of the Great Salt Lake on the north west, extending as far as the eye can reach, interspersed with lofty islands, and a continuation of the valley, or opening on the north, extending along the eastern shore about sixty miles to the mouth of Bear river. The soil of the valley appeared good, but will require irrigation to promote vegetation, though there are many small streams emptying in from the mountains, and the Western Jordon, (Utah Outlet,) passes through from south to north. The climate is warm, dry, and healthy; good salt abounds at the lake; warm, hot, and cold springs are common; mill sites excellent; but the valley is destitute of timber. The box, the fir, the pine, the sugar maple, &c., may be found on the mountains sufficient for immediate consumption, or until more can grow.

"In this valley we located a site for a city, to be called the Great Salt Lake City, of the Great Basin, North America; and, for the convenience of the saints, instituted and located the Great Basin Post Office at this point. The city is surveyed in blocks of ten acres, eight lots to a block; with streets eight rods wide, crossing at right angles. One block is reserved for a Temple, and several more, in different parts of the city, for public grounds.

"Soon after our arrival in the valley, we were joined by that portion of the battalion who had been stationed at Pueblo, and a small camp of the saints from Mississippi, who had wintered at the same place, who united with the pioneers in ploughing, planting, and sowing near one hundred acres, with a great variety of seeds; and in laying the foundation of a row of houses around a ten acre block, and nearly completing the same on one side. Materials for brick and stone buildings are abundant.

"After tarrying four or five weeks, most of the pioneers commenced their return, nearly destitute of provision, accompanied by a part of the battalion, who were quite destitute, except a very small quantity of beef, which was soon exhausted. The company had to depend for their subsistence on wild beasts, such as buffalo, deer, antelope, &c., which, most of the way, were very scarce; and many obtained were exceedingly poor and unwholesome. Between the Green and Sweetwater rivers we met five hundred and sixty-six wagons of the emigrating saints, on their way to the valley; at our last encampment with whom we had fifty horses and mules stolen by the Indians; and a few days after we were attacked by a large party of Sioux, who drove off many of our horses, but most of these we recovered. Our route was by Fort Bridger, the South Pass, Fort John, (Laramie,) and from thence on the north bank of the Platte, to Winter Quarters, where we arrived on the 31st of October, all well; having performed this long and tedious journey, with ox as well as horse teams, and with little food except wild flesh, without losing a single man, although many were sick when they left in the spring, insomuch that they were unable to walk until we had traveled more than one half of the outward distance.

"On the 11th inst. fifteen of the battalion arrived from California, with a pilot from the valley, having suffered much on their return from cold and hunger, with no provisions part of the way but a little horse flesh of the worst kind. From these brethren we received the intelligence that the battalion was discharged in California in July, agreeably to the time of their enlistment; that a portion of the battalion, constituting a company, under Capt. Davis, had re-enlisted to sustain a military post in California; that many had commenced labor to procure means to return; that a small portion had come on to the Great Salt Lake City, where they found the emigrants which we passed in the mountains alive, and in good health and spirits, except three deaths; and that some of the battalion, who had left the valley with them, had stopped on the Sweetwater, searching for buffalo, who with others, in all about thirty, arrived here on the 18th inst., pennyless and destitute, having suffered much from cold and hunger, subsisting on their worn out mules and horses.

"All who possibly could, went to the valley this season; and the saints now in this vicinity have had to depend on their own resources, in labor, for their sustenance, which, on account of the absence of those engaged in the government service, the sickness that has prevailed in camp, and the destruction of the cattle by the Indians, consists mostly of corn, with a few garden vegetables.

"The saints in this vicinity are bearing their privations in meekness and patience, and making all their exertions tend to their removal westward. Their hearts and all their labors are towards the setting sun, for they desire to be so far removed from those who have been their opposers, that there shall be an everlasting barrier between them and future persecution; and although as a people we have been driven from State to State, and although Joseph and Hyrum, our Prophet and Patriarch, were murdered in cold blood, while in government duress, and under the immediate control, inspection, and supervision of the governor and government officers, we know, and feel assured, that there are many honest, noble and patriotic souls now living under that government, and under other similar governments in the sister States of the great confederacy, who would loathe the shedding of innocent blood, and were it in their power would wipe the stain from the nation. If such would clear their garments in the public eye, and before God, they must speak out; they must proclaim to the world their innocence, and their hatred and detestation of such atrocious and unheard of acts; but with this we have nothing to do; only we love honesty and right wherever we find them; the cause is between them, their country, and their God; and we again reiterate what we have often said, and what we have ever shown by our conduct, that, notwithstanding all our privations and sufferings, we are more ready than any other portion of the community to sustain the constitutional institutions of our mother country, and will do the utmost, for them, if permitted; and we say to our saints throughout the earth, be submissive to the law that protects you in your person, rights and property, in whatever nation or kingdom you are; and suffering wrong, rather than do wrong.—

This we have ever done, and mean still to continue to do. We anticipate, as soon as circumstances will permit, to petition for a territorial government in the Great Basin.

"In compliance with the wishes of the sub-agents, we expect to vacate the Omaha lands in the spring. Thus, brethren, we have given you a brief idea of what has transpired among us since we left Nauvoo; the present situation of the saints in this vicinity, and of our feelings and views in general, as preparatory to the reply which we are about to give to the cry of the saints from all quarters, What shall we do?

"Gather yourselves together speedily, near to this place, on the east side of the Missouri river, and, if possible, be ready to start from hence by the first of May next, or as soon as grass is sufficiently grown, and go to the Great Salt Lake City, with breadstuff sufficient to sustain you until you can raise grain the following season. Let the saints who have been driven and scattered from Nauvoo, and all others in the western States, gather immediately to the east bank of the river, bringing with them all the young stock, of various kinds, they possibly can; and let all the saints in the United States and Canada gather to the same place, by the first spring navigation, or as soon as they can, bringing their money, goods and effects with them; and, so far as they can consistently, gather young stock by the way, which is much needed here, and will be ready sale; and when here, let all who can go directly over the mountains; and those who cannot, let them go immediately to work at making improvements, raising grain and stock, on the lands recently vacated by the Pottawatamie Indians, and owned by the United States, and by industry they can soon gather sufficient means to prosecute their journey. In a year or two their young cattle will grow into teams; by interchange of labor they can raise their own grain and provisions, and build their own wagons; and by sale of their improvements to citizens who will gladly come and occupy, they can replenish their clothing, and thus speedily and comfortably procure an outfit. All saints who are coming on this route will do well to furnish themselves with woolen or winter, instead of summer clothing, generally, as they will be exposed to many chilling blasts before they pass the mountain heights.

"We have named the Pottawatamie lands as the best place for the brethren to assemble on the route, because the journey is so very long that they must have a stopping place, and this is the nearest point to their final destination, which makes it not only desirable, but necessary; and, as it is a wilderness country, it will not infringe on the rights and privileges of any one; and yet it is so near Western Missouri that a few days travel will give them an opportunity of trade, if necessity requires, and this is the best general rendezvous that now presents, without intruding on the rights of others.

"To the saints in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and adjacent islands and countries, we say, emigrate as speedily as possible to this vicinity, looking to, and following the counsel of the Presidency at Liverpool; shipping to New Orleans, and from thence direct to Council Bluffs, which will save much expense. Those who have but little means, and little or no labor, will soon exhaust that means if they remain where they are; therefore, it is wisdom that they remove without delay, for here is land, on which, by their labor, they can speedily better their condition for their further journey. And to all saints in any country bordering upon the Atlantic, we would say, pursue the same course; come immediately and prepare to go west—bringing with you all kinds of choice seeds, of grain, vegetables, fruits, shrubbery, trees and vines, every thing that will please the eye, gladden the heart, or cheer the soul of man, that grows upon the face of the whole earth; also, the best stock of beast, bird and fowl of every kind; also, the best tools of every description, and machinery for spinning, or weaving, and dressing cotton, wool, flax and silk, &c., &c., or models and descriptions of the same, by which they can construct them; and the same in relation to all kinds of farming utensils and husbandry, such as corn shellers, grain thrashers and cleaners, smut machines, mills, and every implement and article within their knowledge that shall tend to promote the comfort, health, happiness or prosperity of any people. So far as it can be consistently done, bring models and drafts, and let the machinery be built where it is used, which will save great expense in transportation, particularly in heavy machinery, and tools and implements generally.

"The brethren must recollect that, from this point, they pass through a savage country, and their safety depends on good fire arms and plenty of ammunition; and then they may have their teams run off in open daylight, as we have had, unless they shall watch closely and continually.

"The Presidents of the various branches will cause this epistle to be read to those under their council, and give such instruction in accordance therewith as the spirit shall dictate; teaching them to live by every principle of righteousness, walk humbly before God, doing his will in all things, that they may have his spirit to lead them and assist them speedily to the gathering place of his saints.

"Let the Seventies, High Priests, Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons report themselves, immediately on their arrival at the Bluffs, to the Presieency of their respective Quorums, if present, and if not, to the Presidency or Council of the place, that their names may be registered with their Quorum, and that they may be known among their brethren.

"It is the duty of all parents to train up their children in the way they should go, instructing them in every correct principle, as fast as they are capable of receiving, and setting an example worthy of imitation; for the Lord holds parents responsible for the conduct of their children, until they arrive at the years of accountability before him; and the parents will have to answer for all misdemeanors arising through their neglect. Mothers should teach their little ones to pray as soon as they are able to talk. Presiding Elders should be particular to instruct parents concerning their duty, and Teachers and Deacons should see that they do it.

"It is very desirable that all saints should improve every opportunity of securing, at least, a copy of every valuable treatise on education—every book, map, chart, or diagram, that may contain interesting, useful and attractive matter, to gain the attention of children, and cause them to love to learn to read; and also, every historical, mathematical, philosophical, geographical, geological, astronomical, scientific, practical, and all other variety of useful and interesting writings, maps, &c., to present to the general church recorder, when they shall arrive at their destination; from which important and interesting matter may be gleaned, to compile the most valuable works, on every science and subject, for the benefit of the rising generation.

"We have a printing press, and any one who can take good printing or writing paper to the valley, will be blessing themselves and the church. We also want all kinds of mathematical and philosophical instruments, together with all rare specimens of natural curiosities and works of art, that can be gathered and brought to the valley—where, and from which, the rising generation can receive instruction; and if the saints will be diligent in these matters, we will soon have the best, the most useful and attractive museum on the earth."

(To be continued.)

This we have ever done, and mean still to continue to do. We anticipate, as soon as circumstances will permit, to petition for a territorial government in the Great Basin.

"In compliance with the wishes of the sub-agents, we expect to vacate the Omaha lands in the spring. Thus, brethren, we have given you a brief idea of what has transpired among us since we left Nauvoo; the present situation of the saints in this vicinity, and of our feelings and views in general, as preparatory to the reply which we are about to give to the cry of the saints from all quarters, What shall we do?

"Gather yourselves together speedily, near to this place, on the east side of the Missouri river, and, if possible, be ready to start from hence by the first of May next, or as soon as grass is sufficiently grown, and go to the Great Salt Lake City, with breadstuff sufficient to sustain you until you can raise grain the following season. Let the saints who have been driven and scattered from Nauvoo, and all others in the western States, gather immediately to the east bank of the river, bringing with them all the young stock, of various kinds, they possibly can; and let all the saints in the United States and Canada gather to the same place, by the first spring navigation, or as soon as they can, bringing their money, goods and effects with them; and, so far as they can consistently, gather young stock by the way, which is much needed here, and will be ready sale; and when here, let all who can go directly over the mountains; and those who cannot, let them go immediately to work at making improvements, raising grain and stock, on the lands recently vacated by the Pottawatamie Indians, and owned by the United States, and by industry they can soon gather sufficient means to prosecute their journey. In a year or two their young cattle will grow into teams; by interchange of labor they can raise their own grain and provisions, and build their own wagons; and by sale of their improvements to citizens who will gladly come and occupy, they can replenish their clothing, and thus speedily and comfortably procure an outfit. All saints who are coming on this route will do well to furnish themselves with woolen or winter, instead of summer clothing, generally, as they will be exposed to many chilling blasts before they pass the mountain heights.

"We have named the Pottawatamie lands as the best place for the brethren to assemble on the route, because the journey is so very long that they must have a stopping place, and this is the nearest point to their final destination, which makes it not only desirable, but necessary; and, as it is a wilderness country, it will not infringe on the rights and privileges of any one; and yet it is so near Western Missouri that a few days travel will give them an opportunity of trade, if necessity requires, and this is the best general rendezvous that now presents, without intruding on the rights of others.

"To the saints in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and adjacent islands and countries, we say, emigrate as speedily as possible to this vicinity, looking to, and following the counsel of the Presidency at Liverpool; shipping to New Orleans, and from thence direct to Council Bluffs, which will save much expense. Those who have but little means, and little or no labor, will soon exhaust that means if they remain where they are; therefore, it is wisdom that they remove without delay, for here is land, on which, by their labor, they can speedily better their condition for their further journey. And to all saints in any country bordering upon the Atlantic, we would say, pursue the same course; come immediately and prepare to go west—bringing with you all kinds of choice seeds, of grain, vegetables, fruits, shrubbery, trees and vines, every thing that will please the eye, gladden the heart, or cheer the soul of man, that grows upon the face of the whole earth; also, the best stock of beast, bird and fowl of every kind; also, the best tools of every description, and machinery for spinning, or weaving, and dressing cotton, wool, flax and silk, &c., &c., or models and descriptions of the same, by which they can construct them; and the same in relation to all kinds of farming utensils and husbandry, such as corn shellers, grain thrashers and cleaners, smut machines, mills, and every implement and article within their knowledge that shall tend to promote the comfort, health, happiness or prosperity of any people. So far as it can be consistently done, bring models and drafts, and let the machinery be built where it is used, which will save great expense in transportation, particularly in heavy machinery, and tools and implements generally.

"The brethren must recollect that, from this point, they pass through a savage country, and their safety depends on good fire arms and plenty of ammunition; and then they may have their teams run off in open daylight, as we have had, unless they shall watch closely and continually.

"The Presidents of the various branches will cause this epistle to be read to those under their council, and give such instruction in accordance therewith as the spirit shall dictate; teaching them to live by every principle of righteousness, walk humbly before God, doing his will in all things, that they may have his spirit to lead them and assist them speedily to the gathering place of his saints.

"Let the Seventies, High Priests, Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons report themselves, immediately on their arrival at the Bluffs, to the Presieency of their respective Quorums, if present, and if not, to the Presidency or Council of the place, that their names may be registered with their Quorum, and that they may be known among their brethren.

"It is the duty of all parents to train up their children in the way they should go, instructing them in every correct principle, as fast as they are capable of receiving, and setting an example worthy of imitation; for the Lord holds parents responsible for the conduct of their children, until they arrive at the years of accountability before him; and the parents will have to answer for all misdemeanors arising through their neglect. Mothers should teach their little ones to pray as soon as they are able to talk. Presiding Elders should be particular to instruct parents concerning their duty, and Teachers and Deacons should see that they do it.

"It is very desirable that all saints should improve every opportunity of securing, at least, a copy of every valuable treatise on education—every book, map, chart, or diagram, that may contain interesting, useful and attractive matter, to gain the attention of children, and cause them to love to learn to read; and also, every historical, mathematical, philosophical, geographical, geological, astronomical, scientific, practical, and all other variety of useful and interesting writings, maps, &c., to present to the general church recorder, when they shall arrive at their destination; from which important and interesting matter may be gleaned, to compile the most valuable works, on every science and subject, for the benefit of the rising generation.

"We have a printing press, and any one who can take good printing or writing paper to the valley, will be blessing themselves and the church. We also want all kinds of mathematical and philosophical instruments, together with all rare specimens of natural curiosities and works of art, that can be gathered and brought to the valley—where, and from which, the rising generation can receive instruction; and if the saints will be diligent in these matters, we will soon have the best, the most useful and attractive museum on the earth."

(To be continued.)

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF WISCONSIN,

AS PASSED IN CONVENTION, MADISON, FEB. 1ST, 1848.

(Concluded.)

Sec. 4. All recognizances heretofore taken or which may be taken before the change from territorial to a permanent State goverment, shall remain valid, and shall pass to, and may be prosecuted in the name of the State, and all bonds executed to the governor of the territory, or to any other officer or court, in his or their official capacity, shall pass to the governor or State authority, and their successors in office, for the uses therein respectively expressed, and may be sued for and recovered accordingly; and all the estate or property, real, personal, mixed, and all judgments, bonds, specialities, chosen in action, and claims or debts of whatsoever description, of the territory of Wisconsin, shall enure to and vest in the State of Wisconsin, and may be sued for and recovered in the same manner, and to the same extent by the State of Wisconsin, as the same could have been by the territory of Wisconsin. All criminal prosecutions and penal actions, which may have arisen, or which may arise before the change from a territorial to a State government, and which shall then be pending, shall be prosecuted to judgment, and execution in the name of the State. All offences committed against the laws of the territory of Wisconsin, before the change from a territorial to a State government, and which shall not be prosecuted before such change, may be prosecuted in the name, and by the authority of the State of Wisconsin, with the like effect as though such change had not taken place; and all penalties incurred shall remain the same as if this constitution had not been adopted. All actions at law, and suits in equity, which may be pending in any of the courts of the territory of Wisconsin, at the time of the change from a territorial to a State government may be continued and transferred to any court in this State, which shall have jurisdiction of the subject matter thereof.

Sec. 5. All officers, civil and military, now holding their offices under the authority of the United States or of the territory of Wisconsin, shall continue to hold and exercise their respective offices, until they shall be superceded by the authority of the State.

Sec. 6. The first session of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin shall commence on the first Monday of June next and shall be held at the village of Madison, which shall be and remain the seat of government until otherwise provided by law.

Sec. 7. All county, precinct, and township officers, shall continue to hold their respective offices, unless removed by the competent authority, until the legislature shall in conformity with the provisions of this constitution, provide for the holding of elections to fill such offices respectively.

Sec. 8. The president of this convention shall, immediately after its adjournment, cause a fair copy of this constitution, together with a copy of the act of the legislature of this territory, entitled "an act in relation to the formation of a State government in Wisconsin, and to change the time of holding the annual session of the legislature," approved October 27, 1847, providing for the calling of this convention, and also a copy of so much of the last census of this territory, as exhibits the number of its inhabitants, to be forwarded to the president of the United States, to be laid before the congress of the United States at its present session.

Sec. 9. This constitution shall be submitted at an election to be held on the second Monday in March next, for ratification or rejection, to all white male persons of the age of twenty-one years, or upwards, who shall then be residents of this territory and citizens of the United States, or shall have declared their intention to become such in conformity with the laws of congress on the subject of naturalization; and all persons having such qualifications shall be entitled to vote for or against the adoption of this constitution, and for all officers first elected under it. And if the constitution be ratified by the said electors, it shall become the constitution of the State of Wisconsin. On such of the ballots as are for the constitution, shall be written or printed the word "Yes," and on such as are against the constitution the word "No." The election shall be conducted in the manner now prescribed by law, and the returns made by the clerks of the boards of supervisors or county commissioners (as the case may be) to the governor of the territory, at any time before the tenth day of April next. And in the event of the ratification of this constitution by a majority of all the votes given, it shall be the duty of the governor of this territory to make proclamation of the same, and to transmit a digest of the returns to the senate and assembly of the State, on the first day of their session.—An election shall be held for governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer, attorney general, members of the State legislature, and members of congress, on the second Monday of May next, and no other or further notice of such election shall be required.

Sec. 10. Two members of congress shall also be elected on the second Monday of May next; and until otherwise provided by law, the counties of Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson, Racine, Walworth, Rock and Green, shall constitute the first congressional district, and elect one member; and the counties of Washington, Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Calumet, Brown, Winnebago, Fond du Lac, Marquette, Sauk, Portage, Columbia, Dodge, Dane, Iowa, Lafayette, Grant, Richland, Crawford, Chippewa, St. Croix, and La Pointe, shall constitute the second congressional district, and shall elect one member.

Sec. 11. The several elections provided for in this article shall be conducted according to the existing laws of the territory: Provided, That no elector shall be entitled to vote except in the town, ward or precinct where he resides. The returns of elections for senators and members of assembly shall be transmitted to the clerk of the board of supervisors or county commissioners, as the case may be, and the votes shall be canvassed and certificates of election issued as now provided by law. In the first senatorial district, the returns of the election for senator shall be made to the proper officer in the county of Brown; in the second senate district to the propor officer in the county of Columbia; in the third senate district, to the proper officer in the county of Crawford; in the fourth senate district to the proper officer in the county of Fond du Lac: and in the fifth senate district to the proper officer in the county of Iowa. The returns of the election for State officers and members of congress shall be certified and transmitted to the speaker of the assembly at the seat of government, in the same manner as the votes for delegate to congress are required to be certified and returned by the laws of the territory of Wisconsin to the secretary of said territory, and in such time that they may be received on the first Monday in June next; and as soon as the legislature shall be organized, the speaker of the assembly and the president of the senate shall, in the presence of both houses examine the returns, and declare who are duly elected to fill the several offices hereinbefore mentioned, and give to each of the persons elected a certificate of his election.

Sec. 12. Until there shall be a new appointment, the senators and members of the assembly shall be apportioned among the several districts, as hereinafter mentioned, and shall be entitled to elect one senator or member of the assembly, as the case may be.

The counties of Brown, Calumet, Manitowoc, and Sheboygan, shall constitute the first senate district.

The counties of Columbia, Marquette, Portage, and Sauk, shall constitute the second senate district.

The counties of Crawford, Chippewa, St. Croix, and La Pointe, shall constitute the third senate district.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF WISCONSIN,

AS PASSED IN CONVENTION, MADISON, FEB. 1st, 1848.

(Concluded.)

Sec. 4. All recognizances heretofore taken or which may be taken before the change from territorial to a permanent State goverment, shall remain valid, and shall pass to, and may be prosecuted in the name of the State, and all bonds executed to the governor of the territory, or to any other officer or court, in his or their official capacity, shall pass to the governor or State authority, and their successors in office, for the uses therein respectively expressed, and may be sued for and recovered accordingly; and all the estate or property, real, personal, mixed, and all judgments, bonds, specialities, chosen in action, and claims or debts of whatsoever description, of the territory of Wisconsin, shall enure to and vest in the State of Wisconsin, and may be sued for and recovered in the same manner, and to the same extent by the State of Wisconsin, as the same could have been by the territory of Wisconsin. All criminal prosecutions and penal actions, which may have arisen, or which may arise before the change from a territorial to a State government, and which shall then be pending, shall be prosecuted to judgment, and execution in the name of the State. All offences committed against the laws of the territory of Wisconsin, before the change from a territorial to a State government, and which shall not be prosecuted before such change, may be prosecuted in the name, and by the authority of the State of Wisconsin, with the like effect as though such change had not taken place; and all penalties incurred shall remain the same as if this constitution had not been adopted. All actions at law, and suits in equity which may be pending in any of the courts of the territory of Wisconsin, at the time of the change from a territorial to a State government may be continued and transferred to any court in this State, which shall have jurisdiction of the subject matter thereof.

Sec. 5. All officers, civil and military, now holding their offices under the authority of the United States or of the territory of Wisconsin, shall continue to hold and exercise their respective offices, until they shall be superceded by the authority of the State.

Sec. 6. The first session of the legislature of the State of Wisconsin, shall commence on the first Monday of June next and shall be held at the village of Madison, which shall be and remain the seat of government until otherwise provided by law.

Sec. 7. All county, precinct, and township officers, shall continue to hold their respective offices, unless removed by the competent authority, until the legislature shall in conformity with the provisions of this constitution, provide for the holding of elections to fill such offices respectively.

Sec. 8. The president of this convention shall, immediately after its adjournment, cause a fair copy of this constitution, together with a copy of the act of the legislature of this territory, entitled "an act in relation to the formation of a State government in Wisconsin, and to change the time of holding the annual session of the legislature," approved October 27, 1847, providing for the calling of this convention, and also a copy of so much of the last census of this territory, as exhibits the number of its inhabitants, to be forwarded to the president of the United States, to be laid before the congress of the United States at its present session.

Sec. 9. This constitution shall be submitted at an election to be held on the second Monday in March next, for ratification or rejection, to all white male persons of the age of twenty-one years, or upwards, who shall then be residents of this territory and citizens of the United States, or shall have declared their intention to become such in conformity with the laws of congress on the subject of naturalization; and all persons having such qualifications shall be entitled to vote for or against the adoption of this constitution, and for all officers first elected under it. And if the constitution be ratified by the said electors, it shall become the constitution of the State of Wisconsin. On such of the ballots as are for the constitution, shall be written or printed the word "Yes," and on such as are against the constitution the word "No." The election shall be conducted in the manner now prescribed by law, and the returns made by the clerks of the boards of supervisors or county commissioners (as the case may be) to the governor of the territory, at any time before the tenth day of April next. And in the event of the ratification of this constitution by a majority of all the votes given, it shall be the duty of the governor of this territory to make proclamation of the same, and to transmit a digest of the returns to the senate and assembly of the State, on the first day of their session.—An election shall be held for governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer, attorney general, members of the State legislature, and members of congress, on the second Monday of May next, and no other or further notice of such election shall be required.

Sec. 10. Two members of congress shall also be elected on the second Monday of May next; and until otherwise provided by law, the counties of Milwaukee, Waukesha, Jefferson, Racine, Walworth, Rock and Green, shall constitute the first congressional district, and elect one member; and the counties of Washington, Sheboygan, Manitowoc, Calumet, Brown, Winnebago, Fond du Lac, Marquette, Sauk, Portage, Columbia, Dodge, Dane, Iowa, Lafayette, Grant, Richland, Crawford, Chippewa, St. Croix, and La Pointe, shall constitute the second congressional district, and shall elect one member.

Sec. 11. The several elections provided for in this article shall be conducted according to the existing laws of the territory: Provided, That no elector shall be entitled to vote except in the town, ward or precinct where he resides. The returns of elections for senators and members of assembly shall be transmitted to the clerk of the board of supervisors or county commissioners, as the case may be, and the votes shall be canvassed and certificates of election issued as now provided by law. In the first senatorial district, the returns of the election for senator shall be made to the proper officer in the county of Brown; in the second senate district to the propor officer in the county of Columbia; in the third senate district, to the proper officer in the county of Crawford; in the fourth senate district to the proper officer in the county of Fond du Lac: and in the fifth senate district to the proper officer in the county of Iowa. The returns of the election for State officers and members of congress shall be certified and transmitted to the speaker of the assembly at the seat of government, in the same manner as the votes for delegate to congress are required to be certified and returned by the laws of the territory of Wisconsin to the secretary of said territory, and in such time that they may be received on the first Monday in June next; and as soon as the legislature shall be organized, the speaker of the assembly and the president of the senate shall, in the presence of both houses examine the returns, and declare who are duly elected to fill the several offices hereinbefore mentioned, and give to each of the persons elected a certificate of his election.

Sec. 12. Until there shall be a new appointment, the senators and members of the assembly shall be apportioned among the several districts, as hereinafter mentioned, and shall be entitled to elect one senator or member of the assembly, as the case may be.

The counties of Brown, Calumet, Manitowoc, and Sheboygan, shall constitute the first senate district.

The counties of Columbia, Marquette, Portage, and Sauk, shall constitute the second senate district.

The counties of Crawford, Chippewa, St. Croix, and La Pointe, shall constitute the third senate district.

The counties of Fond du Lac and Winnebago, shall constitue the fourth senate district.

The counties of Iowa and Richland, shall constitute the fifth senate district.

The county of Grant, shall constitute the sixth senate district.

The county of Lafayette, shall constitute the seventh senate district.

The county of Greene, shall constitute the eighth senate district.

The county of Dane, shall constitute the ninth senate district.

The county of Dodge, shall constitute the tenth senate district.

The county of Washington, shall constitute the 11th senate district.

The county of Jefferson, shall constitute the 12th senate district.

The county of Waukesha, shall constitute the 13th senate district.

The county of Walworth, shall constitute the 14th senate district.

The county of Rock, shall constitute the fifteenth senate district.

The towns of Southport, Pike, Pleasant Prairie, Paris, Bristol, Brighton, Salem and Wheatland, in the county of Racine, shall constitute the sixteenth senate district.

The towns of Racine, Caledonia, Mount Pleasant, Raymond, Norway, Rochester, Yorkville and Burlington, shall constitute the seventeenth senate district.

The third, fourth and fifth wards of the city of Milwaukee, and the towns of Lake, Oak Creek, Franklin and Greenfield, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute the eighteenth senate district.

The first and second wards of the city of Milwaukee, and the towns of Milwaukee, Wauwautosa and Granville, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute the nineteenth senate district.

The county of Brown, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Calumet, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Manitowoc, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Columbia, shall constitute an assembly district.

The counties of Crawford and Chippewa, shall constitute an assembly district.

The counties of St. Croix and La Pointe, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Windsor, Sun Prairie and Cottage Grove, in the county of Dane, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Madison, Cross Plains, Clarkson, Springfield, Verona, Montrose, Greenfield and Oregon, in the county of Dane, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Rome, Dunkirk, Christiana, Albion and Rutland, in the county of Dane, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Burnett, Chester, Le Roy and Williamstown, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Fairfield, Hubbard and Rubicon, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Hustisford, Asshippan, Lebanon and Emmet, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Elba, Lowell, Portland and Clyman, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Calamus, Beaverdam, Fox Lake and Trenton, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Calumet, Forest, Auburn, Byron, Taycheda and Fond du Lac, in the connty of Fond du Lac, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Alto, Metomona, Ceresco, Rosendale, Waupun, Oakfield and Seven Mile Creek, in the county of Fond du Lac, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Hazle Green, Fairplay, Smelsers Grove and Jamestown, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Plattville, Head of Platte, Centreville, Muscoday and Fennimore, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Pleasant Valley, Potosi, Waterloo, Hurricane and New Lisbon, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Beetown, Patch Grove, Cassville, Mellville and Lancaster, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Greene shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Dallas, Pedlers Creek, Mineral Point and Yellow Stone, in the county of Iowa, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Franklin, Dodgeville, Porter's Grove, Arena and Percussion, in the county of Richland, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Watertown, Aztalan and Waterloo, in the county of Jefferson, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Ixonia, Concord, Sullivan, Hebron, Cold Spring and Palmyra, in the county of Jefferson, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Lake Mills, Oakland, Koskonong, and Farmington, in the county of Jefferson, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Benton, Elk Grove, Belmont, Willow Springs, Prairie and that part of Shellsburgh precinct north of town one, in the county of Lafayette, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Wiota, Wayne, Gratiot, White Oak Springs, Fever River, and that part of Shellsburgh precinct south of town two, in the county of Lafayette, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Marquette shall constitute an assembly district.

The first ward of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly district.

The second ward of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly district.

The third ward of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly distrct.

The fourth and fifth wards of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Franklin and Oak Creek, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Greenfield and Lake, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Granville, Wauwatosa, and Milwaukee, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute an asssembly district.

The county of Portage, shall constitute an assembly district.

The town of Racine, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Norway, Raymond, Caledonia, and Mount Pleasant, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Rochester, Burlington, and Yorkville, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Southport, Pike, and Pleasant Prairie, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Paris, Bristol, Brighton, Salem, and Wheatland, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Janesville, and Bradford, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Beloit, Turtle, and Clinton, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Magnolia, Union, Porter, and Fulton, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Milton, Lima, and Johnstown, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Newark, Rock, Avan, Spring Valley, and Centre, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly dictrict. Pro-

The counties of Fond du Lac and Winnebago, shall constitue the fourth senate district.

The counties of Iowa and Richland, shall constitute the fifth senate district.

The county of Grant, shall constitute the sixth senate district.

The county of Lafayette, shall constitute the seventh senate district.

The county of Greene, shall constitute the eighth senate district.

The county of Dane, shall constitute the ninth senate district.

The county of Dodge, shall constitute the tenth senate district.

The county of Washington, shall constitute the 11th senate district.

The county of Jefferson, shall constitute the 12th senate district.

The county of Waukesha, shall constitute the 13th senate district.

The county of Walworth, shall constitute the 14th senate district.

The county of Rock, shall constitute the fifteenth senate district.

The towns of Southport, Pike, Pleasant Prairie, Paris, Bristol, Brighton, Salem and Wheatland, in the county of Racine, shall constitute the sixteenth senate district.

The towns of Racine, Caledonia, Mount Pleasant, Raymond, Norway, Rochester, Yorkville and Burlington, shall constitute the seventeenth senate district.

The third, fourth and fifth wards of the city of Milwaukee, and the towns of Lake, Oak Creek, Franklin and Greenfield, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute the eighteenth senate district.

The first and second wards of the city of Milwaukee, and the towns of Milwaukee, Wauwautosa and Granville, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constithte the nineteenth senate district.

The county of Brown, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Calumet, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Manitowoc, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Columbia, shall constitute an assembly district.

The counties of Crawford and Chippewa, shall constitute an assembly district.

The counties of St. Croix and La Pointe, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Windsor, Sun Prairie and Cottage Grove, in the county of Dane, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Madison, Cross Plains, Clarkson, Springfield, Verona, Montrose, Greenfield and Oregon, in the county of Dane, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Rome, Dunkirk, Christiana, Albion and Rutland, in the county of Dane, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Burnett, Chester, Le Roy and Williamstown, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Fairfield, Hubbard and Rubicon, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Hustisford, Asshippan, Lebanon and Emmet, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Elba, Lowell, Portland and Clyman, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Calamus, Beaverdam, Fox Lake and Trenton, in the county of Dodge, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Calumet, Forest, Auburn, Byron, Taycheda and Fond du Lac, in the conny of Fond du Lac, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Alto, Metomona, Ceresco, Rosendale, Waupun, Oakfield and Seven Mile Creek, in the county of Fond du Lac, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Hazle Green, Fairplay, Smelsers Grove and Jamestown, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Plattville, Head of Platte, Centreville, Muscoday and Fennimore, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Pleasant Valley, Potosi, Waterloo, Hurricane and New Lisbon, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Beetown, Patch Grove, Cassville, Mellville and Lancaster, in the county of Grant, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Greene shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Dallas, Pedlers Creek, Mineral Point and Yellow Stone, in the county of Iowa, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Franklin, Dodgeville, Porter's Grove, Arena and Percussion, in the county of Richland, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Watertown, Aztalan and Waterloo, in the county of Jefferson, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Ixonia, Concord, Sullivan, Hebron, Cold Spring and Palmyra, in the county of Jefferson, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Lake Mills, Oakland, Koskonong, and Farmington, in the county of Jefferson, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Benton, Elk Grove, Belmont, Willow Springs, Prairie and that part of Shellsburgh precinct north of town one, in the county of Lafayette, shall constitute an assembly district.

The precincts of Wiota, Wayne, Gratiot, White Oak Springs, Fever River, and that part of Shellsburgh precinct south of town two, in the county of Lafayette, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Marquette shall constitute an assembly district.

The first ward of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly district.

The second ward of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly district.

The third ward of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly distrct.

The fourth and fifth wards of the city of Milwaukee shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Franklin and Oak Creek, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Greenfield and Lake, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Granville, Wauwatosa, and Milwaukee, in the county of Milwaukee, shall constitute an asssembly district.

The county of Portage, shall constitute an assembly district.

The town of Racine, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Norway, Raymond, Caledonia, and Mount Pleasant, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Rochester, Burlington, and Yorkville, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Southport, Pike, and Pleasant Prairie, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Paris, Bristol, Brighton, Salem, and Wheatland, in the county of Racine, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Janesville, and Bradford, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Beloit, Turtle, and Clinton, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Magnolia, Union, Porter, and Fulton, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Milton, Lima, and Johnstown, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Newark, Rock, Avan, Spring Valley, and Centre, in the county of Rock, shall constitute an assembly district. Provided, If the legislature shall divide the town of Centre, it may attach such part of it to the district laying north of it, as they may deem expedient.

The county of Sauk, shall constitute an assembly district.

Precincts numbered one, three, and seven, in the county of Sheboygan, shall constitute an assembly district.

Precincts numbered two, four, five, and six, in the county of Sheboygan, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Troy, East Troy, and Spring Prairie, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Whitewater, Richmond, and La Grange, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Geneva, Hudson, and Bloomfield, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Darien, Sharon, Walworth, and Linn, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Delavan, Sugar Creek, Lafayette, and Elkhorn, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Lisbon, Menomonee, and Brookfield, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Warren, Oconomewoc, Summit, and Ottowa, in the county of Waukesha, shall coustitute an assembly district.

The towns of Delafield, Genesee, and Pewaukee, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Waukesha, and New Lisbon, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Eagle, Mukwonago, Vernon, and Muskegon, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Port Washington, Fredonia, and Clarence, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Grafton, and Jackson, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Mequon, and Germantown, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Polk, Richfield, and Erin, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Hartford, Addison, West Bend, and North Bend, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Winnebago, shall constitute an assembly district.

The foregoing districts are subject however, so far to be altered that when any new town shall be organized it may be added to either of the adjoining assembly districts.

Sec. 13. Such parts of the common law as are now in force in the territory of Wisconsin, not inconsistent with this constitution, shall be and continue part of the law of this State until altered or suspended by the legislature.

Sec. 14. The senators first elected in the even numbered senate districts, the governor, lieutenant governor, and other State officers, first elected under the constitution, shall enter upon the duties of their respective offices, on the first Monday of June next, and shall continue in office for one year from the first Monday of January next. The senators first elected in the odd numbered senate districts, and the members of the assembly first elected shall enter upon their duties, respectively, on the first Monday of June next, and shall continue in office until the first Monday in January next.

Sec. 15. The oaths of office may be administered by any judge or justice of the peace until the legislature shall otherwise direct.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the congress of the United States be, and is hereby requested, upon the application of Wisconsin for admission into the Union so to alter the provisions of the act of congress, entitled "an act to grant a quantity of land to the territory of Wisconsin for the purpose of aiding in opening a canal to connect the waters of Lake Michigan with those of Rock River," approved June eighteenth, eighteen hundred and thirty eight; and so to alter the terms and conditions of the grant made therein, that the odd numbered sections thereby granted and remaining unsold, may be held and disposed of by the State of Wisconsin, as part of the five hundred thousand acres of land to which said State is entitled by the provision of an act of congress, entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights," approved the fourth day of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one; and further, That the even numbered sections reserved by congress may be offered for sale by the United States for the same minimum price, and subject to the same rights of pre-emption as other public lands of the United States.

Resolved, That congress be further requested to pass an act whereby the excess price over and above one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, which may have been paid by the purchasers of said even numbered sections which shall have been sold by the United States, be refunded to the present owners thereof, or they be allowed to enter any of the public lands of the United States, to an amount equal in value to the excess so paid.

Resolved, That in case the said odd numbered sections shall be ceded to the State as aforesaid, the same shall be sold by the State, in the same manner as other school lands: Provided, That the same rights of pre-emption as are now granted by the laws of the United States shall be secured to persons who may be actually settled upon such lands at the time of the adoption of this constitution: And provided further, That the excess price over and above one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre absolutely or conditionally contracted to be paid by the purchasers of any part of said sections which shall have been sold by the territory of Wisconsin shall be remitted to such purchasers, their representatives or assigns.

Resolved, That congress be requested upon the application of Wisconsin for admission into the Union, to pass an act whereby the grant of five hundred thousand acres of land, to which the State of Wisconsin is entitled by the provisions of an act of congress entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights," approved the fourth day of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, and also the five per centum of the net proceeds of the public lands lying within the State, to which it shall become entitled on its admssion into the Union by the provisions of an act of congress, entitled "an act to enable the people of Wisconsin territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union," approved the sixth day of August, eighteen hundred and forty-six, shall be granted to the State of Wisconsin for the use of schools, instead of the purposes mentioned in the said acts of congress respectively.

Resolved, That the congress of the United States be, and hereby is requested upon the admission of this State into the Union, so to alter the provisions of the act of congress entitled, "an act to grant certain quantity of land to aid in the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers and to connect the same by a canal in the territory of Wisconsin," that the price of the lands reserved to the United States shall be reduced to the minimum price of the public lands.

Resolved, That the legislature of this State shall make provision by law for the sale of the lands granted to the State in aid of said improvements, subject to the same rights of pre-emption to the settlers thereon, as are now allowed by law to settlers on the public lands.

Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be appended to and signed with the constitution of Wisconsin, and submitted therewith to vided, If the legislature shall divide the town of Centre, it may attach such part of it to the district laying north of it, as they may deem expedient.

The county of Sauk, shall constitute an assembly district.

Precincts numbered one, three, and seven, in the county of Sheboygan, shall constitute an assembly district.

Precincts numbered two, four, five, and six, in the county of Sheboygan, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Troy, East Troy, and Spring Prairie, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Whitewater, Richmond, and La Grange, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Geneva, Hudson, and Bloomfield, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Darien, Sharon, Walworth, and Linn, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Delavan, Sugar Creek, Lafayette, and Elkhorn, in the county of Walworth, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Lisbon, Menomonee, and Brookfield, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Warren, Oconomewoc, Summit, and Ottowa, in the county of Waukesha, shall coustitute an assembly district.

The towns of Delafield, Genesee, and Pewaukee, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Waukesha, and New Lisbon, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns ot Eagle, Mukwonago, Vernon, and Muskegon, in the county of Waukesha, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Port Washington, Fredonia, and Clarence, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Grafton, and Jackson, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Mequon, and Germantown, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Polk, Richfield, and Erin, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The towns of Hartford, Addison, West Bend, and North Bend, in the county of Washington, shall constitute an assembly district.

The county of Winnebago, shall constitute an assembly district.

The foregoing districts are subject however, so far to be altered that when any new town shall be organized it may be added to either of the adjoining assembly districts.

Sec. 13. Such parts of the common law as are now in force in the territory of Wisconsin, not inconsistent with this constitution, shall be and continue part of the law of this State until altered or suspended by the legislature.

Sec. 14. The senators first elected in the even numbered senate districts, the governor, lieutenant governor, and other State officers, first elected under the constitution, shall enter upon the duties of their respective offices, on the first Monday of June next, and shall continue in office for one year from the first Monday of January next. The senators first elected in the odd numbered senate districts, and the members of the assembly first elected shall enter upon their duties, respectively, on the first Monday of June next, and shall continue in office until the first Monday in January next.

Sec. 15. The oaths of office may be administered by any judge or justice of the peace until the legislature shall otherwise direct.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That the congress of the United States be, and is hereby requested, upon the application of Wisconsin for admission into the Union so to alter the provisions of the act of congress, entitled "an act to grant a quantity of land to the territory of Wisconsin for the purpose of aiding in opening a canal to connect the waters of Lake Michigan with those of Rock River," approved June eighteenth, eighteen hundred and thirty eight; and so to alter the terms and conditions of the grant made therein, that the odd numbered sections thereby granted and remaining unsold, may be held and disposed of by the State of Wisconsin, as part of the five hundred thousand acres of land to which said State is entitled by the provision of an act of congress, entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights," approved the fourth day of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one; and further, That the even numbered sections reserved by congress may be offered for sale by the United States for the same minimum price, and subject to the same rights of pre-emption as other public lands of the United States.

Resolved, That congress be further requested to pass an act whereby the excess price over and above one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre, which may have been paid by the purchasers of said even numbered sections which shall have been sold by the United States, be refunded to the present owners thereof, or they be allowed to enter any of the public lands of the United States, to an amount equal in value to the excess so paid.

Resolved, That in case the said odd numbered sections shall be ceded to the State as aforesaid, the same shall be sold by the State, in the same manner as other school lands: Provided, That the same rights of pre-emption as are now granted by the laws of the United States shall be secured to persons who may be actually settled upon such lands at the time of the adoption of this constitution: And provided further, That the excess price over and above one dollar and twenty-five cents per acre absolutely or conditionally contracted to be paid by the purchasers of any part of said sections which shall have been sold by the territory of Wisconsin shall be remitted to such purchasers, their representatives or assigns.

Resolved, That congress be requested upon the application of Wisconsin for admission into the Union, to pass an act whereby the grant of five hundred thousand acres of land, to which the State of Wisconsin is entitled by the provisions of an act of congress entitled "an act to appropriate the proceeds of the sales of the public lands, and to grant pre-emption rights," approved the fourth day of September, eighteen hundred and forty-one, and also the five per centum of the net proceeds of the public lands lying within the State, to which it shall become entitled on its admssion into the Union by the provisions of an act of congress, entitled "an act to enable the people of Wisconsin territory to form a constitution and State government, and for the admission of such State into the Union," approved the sixth day of August, eighteen hundred and forty-six, shall be granted to the State of Wisconsin for the use of schools, instead of the purposes mentioned in the said acts of congress respectively.

Resolved, That the congress of the United States be, and hereby is requested upon the admission of this State into the Union, so to alter the provisions of the act of congress entitled, "an act to grant certain quantity of land to aid in the improvement of the Fox and Wisconsin rivers and to connect the same by a canal in the territory of Wisconsin," that the price of the lands reserved to the United States shall be reduced to the minimum price of the public lands.

Resolved, That the legislature of this State shall make provision by law for the sale of the lands granted to the State in aid of said improvements, subject to the same rights of pre-emption to the settlers thereon, as are now allowed by law to settlers on the public lands.

Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be appended to and signed with the constitution of Wisconsin, and submitted therewith to the people of this territory and to the congress of the United States.

We the undersigned, members of the convention to form a constitution for the State of Wisconsin, to be submitted to the people thereof, for their ratification or rejection, do hereby certify that the foregoing is the constitution adopted by the convention.

In testimony whereof, we have hereunto set our hands, at Madison, the first day of February, A. D. 1848.

MORGAN L. MARTIN, President.

THOMAS MCHUGH, Secretary.

G. W. Featherstonhaugh, James T. Lewis, Daniel G. Fenton, Stoddard Judd, Charles H. Larrabee, Samuel W. Lyman, William H. Fox, Charles M. Nichols, William A. Wheeler, Warren Chase, Samuel W. Beall, Orsamus Cole, George A. Lakin, William Richardson, John H. Rountree, Abraham Ramsey, James Biggs, Charles Bishop, Stephen B. Hollenbeck, Joseph Ward, Charles Dunn, John O'Connor, Allen Warden, Milo Jones, Theodore Prentiss, Jonas Folts, Abram Vanderpool, John L. Doran, Garret M. Fitzgarald, Albert Fowler, Rufus King, Charles H. Larkin, Morritz Schœffler, Silas Stedman, William Kennedy, Albert G. Cole, Frederick S. Lovell, Andrew B. Jackson, S. A. Davenport, Samuel R. McClellan, James Reymert, Theodore Secor, H. T. Sanders, Almerin M. Carter, Joseph Colley, Paul Crandall, Ezra A. Foote, Louis P. Harvey, Edward V. Whiton, Experience Estabrook, George Gale, James Harrington, Augustus C. Kinne, Ezra Mulford, Hollis Latham, Squire S. Case, Alfred L. Castleman, Peter D. Gifford, Eleazer Root, George Scagel, James Fagan, Patrick Pentony, Harvey G. Turner, Harrison Reed.

"A NEW MORMON LION—Beaver Island, in Lake Michigan, has become the chosen spot of the Mormons under J. J. Strang. The Island contains about forty square miles, has been surveyed by government, but is not yet in market. Some 8 or 10 squatters on it have been bought up by Strang, who has issued his orders that the Mormons immediately take up their line of march to their new place of abode. Strang claims to be the Heaven-appointed successor of Joe Smith. Voree, Wisconsin, his present place of residence, contains about 1000 of his followers. His power is almost unlimited. By a bill of excommunication he recently cut off from official standing in the church, his notorious cotemporary, John C. Bennett.—The Reveille, the organ of the Strangites at Voree, speaking of this newly fledged prophet, says there is not his equal on this earth for patience, faith, prudence, wisdom, aptness to teach, and indefatigable perseverance. Poor, weak human nature!

Man's impositions upon man
Makes countless thousands fools."

☞ We clip the foregoing from the Rochester (N. Y.) Daily Advertiser, where we find it credited to the Davenport (Iowa) Gazette. It is perfectly obvious that neither of these papers have any knowledge of our affairs, or any information of our movements beyond mere rumor. We do not charge them with any intention of misrepresenting us, but if they wish to give their readers any information about our affairs it is very easy to exchange for the Herald, and know whereof they speak. As for the imputation contained in the last three lines, it is very well known that in times past christianity was so treated and so regarded by nearly, if not quite, all the politicians of the Roman empire. These editors may not be aware that what christianity then was Mormonism now is. But their preachers do know it, and therefore dare not enter the lists in controversy with us.

☞ He that believes nothing without actual knowledge has a very short creed.

ARREST OF "MODEL ARTISTS."—The New York police made capture of a company of indecent performers on Sunday evening, while they were giving what they called model representations.—Several girls and three men were taken to the police office, having been seized upon the boards in a state of semi-nakedness, "contrary to law and good order."

It seems the company were illustrating the scene of Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden; the story of Hagar in the wilderness, and Jacob in the home of Laban, and all this was attempted to be done in the costume used in Old Testament times. Somebody asks "how could they otherwise do it?"—N. Y. paper.

The correspondent of the Boston Post says:—"Adam and Eve were ready to go, but they objected to a march through Broadway in a fig-leaf attire, and Hagar, and Ruth, and Laban pleaded most lustily for breeches and petticoats, before they could consent to the demands of Signior Dogbery and company. After all had been allowed to put on the attire of the 'moderns' they were marched off to limbo."

☞ We take this to be the Nauvoo endowment, dramatized from the disclosures which we had occasion to notice a few days since. By the way, having looked through the tract, which we will not name more particularly, lest we should help the sale of it, we are more convinced than ever that the author was totally ignorant of what he tried to disclose. The endowment he undoubtedly had, but was too much scared to remember anything about it, more than some of the merest outlines. We are truly sorry that men can be found who are not satisfied with the disgrace which has been brought on the church by the folly and wickedness of apostates, who claim the name of Mormon, and think very poorly of the man who will try to make a speculation out of the exhibition of his own shame. However much these men may gratify their present cupidity and vanity, they will soon find themselves both poor and despised. How singular it is that no man can be found who, when he leaves the church, will let it alone. Why do they all wish to disgrace a community with which the world will forever identify them? Why can they not see that every calumny they heap on the church will always cling to them?

FREE GOSPEL.—The Louisville Examiner tells a story of a church member who had always been more remarkable for opening his mouth to say amen than for opening his purse. On one occasion, after a burst of burning eloquence from the preacher, he clapped his hands, and cried out in a kind of ecstacy, "Yes, thank God! I have been a Methodist for 25 years and it never cost me 25 cents!" "God bless your stingy soul," cried the preacher.—Ex. Paper.

A CURE FOR SLANDER.—Mr. Rowland Hill, on being told that it was expected he should take notice of some unhandsome thing which had been publicly said of him, said that he did not consider it necessary to enter into any vindication of himself; and, he added "I have now lived a great many years in the world, and have passed through much of evil report and good report, and I have arrived at this conclusion, that no man can possibly do me any harm except myself."—Ex. Paper.

CONFERENCE.

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GIDEON WATSON, Clerk.

the people of this territory and to the congress of the United States.

We the undersigned, members of the convention to form a constitution for the State of Wisconsin, to be submitted to the people thereof, for their ratification or rejection, do hereby certify that the foregoing is the constitution adopted by the convention.

In testimony whereof, we have hereunto set our hands, at Madison, the first day of February, A. D. 1848.

MORGAN L. MARTIN, President.

THOMAS MCHUGH, Secretary.

G. W. Featherstonhaugh, James T. Lewis, Daniel G. Fenton, Stoddard Judd, Charles H. Larrabee, Samuel W. Lyman, William H. Fox, Charles M. Nichols, William A. Wheeler, Warren Chase, Samuel W. Beall, Orsamus Cole, George A. Lakin, William Richardson, John H. Rountree, Abraham Ramsey, James Biggs, Charles Bishop, Stephen B. Hollenbeck, Joseph Ward, Charles Dunn, John O'Connor, Allen Warden, Milo Jones, Theodore Prentiss, Jonas Folts, Abram Vanderpool, John L. Doran, Garret M. Fitzgarald, Albert Fowler, Rufus King, Charles H. Larkin, Morritz Schœffler, Silas Stedman, William Kennedy, Albert G. Cole, Frederick S. Lovell, Andrew B. Jackson, S. A. Davenport, Samuel R. McClellan, James Reymert, Theodore Secor, H. T. Sanders, Almerin M. Carter, Joseph Colley, Paul Crandall, Ezra A. Foote, Louis P. Harvey, Edward V. Whiton, Experience Estabrook, George Gale, James Harrington, Augustus C. Kinne, Ezra Mulford, Hollis Latham, Squire S. Case, Alfred L. Castleman, Peter D. Gifford, Eleazer Root, George Scagel, James Fagan, Patrick Pentony, Harvey G. Turner, Harrison Reed.

"A NEW MORMON LION—Beaver Island, in Lake Michigan, has become the chosen spot of the Mormons under J. J. Strang. The Island contains about forty square miles, has been surveyed by government, but is not yet in market. Some 8 or 10 squatters on it have been bought up by Strang, who has issued his orders that the Mormons immediately take up their line of march to their new place of abode. Strang claims to be the Heaven-appointed successor of Joe Smith. Voree, Wisconsin, his present place of residence, contains about 1000 of his followers. His power is almost unlimited. By a bill of excommunication he recently cut off from official standing in the church, his notorious cotemporary, John C. Bennett.—The Reveille, the organ of the Strangites at Voree, speaking of this newly fledged prophet, says there is not his equal on this earth for patience, faith, prudence, wisdom, aptness to teach, and indefatigable perseverance. Poor, weak human nature!

Man's impositions upon man
Makes countless thousands fools."

☞ We clip the foregoing from the Rochester (N. Y.) Daily Advertiser, where we find it credited to the Davenport (Iowa) Gazette. It is perfectly obvious that neither of these papers have any knowledge of our affairs, or any information of our movements beyond mere rumor. We do not charge them with any intention of misrepresenting us, but if they wish to give their readers any information about our affairs it is very easy to exchange for the Herald, and know whereof they speak. As for the imputation contained in the last three lines, it is very well known that in times past christianity was so treated and so regarded by nearly, if not quite, all the politicians of the Roman empire. These editors may not be aware that what christianity then was Mormonism now is. But their preachers do know it, and therefore dare not enter the lists in controversy with us.

☞ He that believes nothing without actual knowledge has a very short creed.

ARREST OF "MODEL ARTISTS."—The New York police made capture of a company of indecent performers on Sunday evening, while they were giving what they called model representations.—Several girls and three men were taken to the police office, having been seized upon the boards in a state of semi-nakedness, "contrary to law and good order."

It seems the company were illustrating the scene of Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden; the story of Hagar in the wilderness, and Jacob in the home of Laban, and all this was attempted to be done in the costume used in Old Testament times. Somebody asks "how could they otherwise do it?"—N. Y. paper.

The correspondent of the Boston Post says:—"Adam and Eve were ready to go, but they objected to a march through Broadway in a fig-leaf attire, and Hagar, and Ruth, and Laban pleaded most lustily for breeches and petticoats, before they could consent to the demands of Signior Dogbery and company. After all had been allowed to put on the attire of the 'moderns' they were marched off to limbo."

☞ We take this to be the Nauvoo endowment, dramatized from the disclosures which we had occasion to notice a few days since. By the way, having looked through the tract, which we will not name more particularly, lest we should help the sale of it, we are more convinced than ever that the author was totally ignorant of what he tried to disclose. The endowment he undoubtedly had, but was too much scared to remember anything about it, more than some of the merest outlines. We are truly sorry that men can be found who are not satisfied with the disgrace which has been brought on the church by the folly and wickedness of apostates, who claim the name of Mormon, and think very poorly of the man who will try to make a speculation out of the exhibition of his own shame. However much these men may gratify their present cupidity and vanity, they will soon find themselves both poor and despised. How singular it is that no man can be found who, when he leaves the church, will let it alone. Why do they all wish to disgrace a community with which the world will forever identify them? Why can they not see that every calumny they heap on the church will always cling to them?

FREE GOSPEL.—The Louisville Examiner tells a story of a church member who had always been more remarkable for opening his mouth to say amen than for opening his purse. On one occasion, after a burst of burning eloquence from the preacher, he clapped his hands, and cried out in a kind of ecstacy, "Yes, thank God! I have been a Methodist for 25 years and it never cost me 25 cents!" "God bless your stingy soul," cried the preacher.—Ex. Paper.

A CURE FOR SLANDER.—Mr. Rowland Hill, on being told that it was expected he should take notice of some unhandsome thing which had been publicly said of him, said that he did not consider it necessary to enter into any vindication of himself; and, he added "I have now lived a great many years in the world, and have passed through much of evil report and good report, and I have arrived at this conclusion, that no man can possibly do me any harm except myself."—Ex. Paper.

CONFERENCE.

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATROUS, Clerk.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Menomonie, [Indian country, near the head of the Mississippi,] January 11th, 1848.

Esteemed Brother James:—It is a long time since I heard from you. I have not received but one letter from you since I left home, and have not heard a word from home since we came here, except one letter from Emeline. I have nothing to say that will interest you, but have an opportunity of sending to a postoffice, (near 200 miles,) and only write to let you know that we are alive and in good health. I am in hopes to hear from you when the bearer of this returns. I feel very anxious to hear the prosperity of Voree.—I hear nothing but the dark side. I have only received one paper from you, but heard from another and could not get it. I have had two papers from Kirtland. By them I learn that there has been a prophet fourteen years, and he did not know it. But if McLellin should succeed in making him believe it himself, our cake would be dough. But I do not think he will, for I consider David Whitmer a man of sense. I am astonished at the course they have taken at Kirtland. I feel a great anxiety to go there again. There are too many good men there to be lost. I am astonished at Aaron. According to his views all the Protestant churches are on good footing, and well enough off. I regret very much that I did not go to England when I could, for if I wait to get as near ready again I shall never go. But it is my determination to do so as soon as I can close my business on Black River.

I should be glad of a long letter from you; but it is so uncertain about getting letters I will not ask it. If brother Brooks is there give my love to him, and to all who inquire after me.

Jan. 25th. We received a package of letters on the 12th inst., and seven numbers of the Gospel Herald. That was a feast of fat things for me. You have no idea how thankful I was, for you never thirsted after Mormonism as I do now. There was cheering news to one in these. The plan of the Temple looks as if the work was commenced, &c. I do not rejoice at apostacy, but do feel glad that the church is rid of three clogs that hung very heavy on her. But I feel bad about brother Gaylord, and hope he will weather. I am glad to hear my old friend J. Blakeslee is there. Give my respects to him. In the forepart I said I would not ask you to write me, but I do request it. There is a way opened that I am in hopes to get letters more regular. Do continue the paper. I do not hear one word of brother Brooks. My heart aches whenever I think of the fate of the English mission, and I never shall feel satisfied till I take it.—But I feel a great anxiety to go to Kirtland. I think I can make McLellinism look small, and I now consider it the most foolish ism extant.

I must close by subscribing myself your brother in the new and everlasting covenant,

MOSES SMITH.

Philadelphia, February 3d, 1848.

Dearly Beloved Brother, Strang:— * * * I intend to give something to the Temple as soon as I can make it convenient. I want you to remember me in your prayers. I have all confidence in you as being Prophet, Seer and Revelator in the church of the living God. I also have confidence in brother George J. Adams, one of your counsellors; he is a man of God in very deed. He is with us in this city and preaches to hundreds. I must say the largest congregations ever assembled in this place to hear a saint preach. It truly appears that a reaction has taken place. The cry is, call and see us. Several have been baptized and many believing.—Some are ready to go forth and obey the gospel. I must say that brother George is one of the master spirits of this dispensation.—May God reward him ten fold for his labor of love. The Brighamites are gasping for breath. They are without a head. In short, they are dead here. I inclose one dollar in this for my paper. My love to you and family, to brother Page and his family, and all inquiring friends.

Believe me, your friend and brother in the new covenant,

JACOB SYFRITT.

Milton says, "Let Truth and Error encounter." It seems, however, to be the practice to regard Truth as a delicate and sickly child who must be kept in the house, lest he should be demolished by the first blast of wind that he encounters in the open air.—Ex. Paper.

On Sunday a lady called to her little boy, who was tossing marbles on the sidewalk, to come into the house. "Don't you know you should'nt be out there, my son? Go into the back yard if you want to play marbles—it is Sunday." "Well, yes. But ain't it Sunday in the back yard, mother?"—Ex. Paper.

☛ He that trifles with his superiors, scarce ever can bear to be trifled with by his inferiors.

☛ He that is sent of God to preach the gospel of Christ, addresses the judgment: the self-sent, addresses the passions.

For the Gospel Herald.

THE ONENESS OF THE SAINTS OF GOD.

Come all ye saints of latter days,
Who seek for wisdom's pleasant ways,
And join yourselves in sacred band,
To keep the law of Zion's land.

The invitation is to all,
Both rich and poor, both great and small;
Come, bring your copper, brass and wood,
Also your silver, gold and goods.

Come all ye saints, the Lord proclaims,
And build a city to my name;
And in your blessings share alike,
And be like ancient saints of light.

I try my saints by faith, saith God,
By prophets I give them my word;
If they alike in all things share,
My spirit on them I will pour.

Voree, Feb. 14, 1848. Almira Sargeant.

ATTACHMENT.

Wisconsin Territory, Walworth County, ss.

Daniel Avery, vs. John W. Crane. } In Justice Court before Daniel Salisbury, Esq.

The defendant in the above entitled cause will please to take notice that an attachment has issued against him, and his property attached to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff, and that unless he appear before the said Daniel Salisbury, Justice of the Peace in and for said county, at his office in Spring Prairie on the 9th day of March next at one o'clock in the afternoon, judgment will be rendered against him and his property sold to pay the debt.

DANIEL AVERY, Plaintiff.

Dated at Spring Prairie, this 3d day of February, 1848. 47m.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Menomonie, [Indian country, near the head of the Mississippi,] January 11th, 1848.

ESTEEMED BROTHER JAMES:—It is a long time since I heard from you. I have not received but one letter from you since I left home, and have not heard a word from home since we came here, except one letter from Emeline. I have nothing to say that will interest you, but have an opportunity of sending to a postoffice, (near 200 miles,) and only write to let you know that we are alive and in good health. I am in hopes to hear from you when the bearer of this returns. I feel very anxious to hear the prosperity of Voree.—I hear nothing but the dark side. I have only received one paper from you, but heard from another and could not get it. I have had two papers from Kirtland. By them I learn that there has been a prophet fourteen years, and he did not know it. But if McLellin should succeed in making him believe it himself, our cake would be dough. But I do not think he will, for I consider David Whitmer a man of sense. I am astonished at the course they have taken at Kirtland. I feel a great anxiety to go there again. There are too many good men there to be lost. I am astonished at Aaron. According to his views all the Protestant churches are on good footing, and well enough off. I regret very much that I did not go to England when I could, for if I wait to get as near ready again I shall never go. But it is my determination to do so as soon as I can close my business on Black River.

I should be glad of a long letter from you; but it is so uncertain about getting letters I will not ask it. If brother Brooks is there give my love to him, and to all who inquire after me

Jan. 25th. We received a package of letters on the 12th inst., and seven numbers of the Gospel Herald. That was a feast of fat things for me. You have no idea how thankful I was, for you never thirsted after Mormonism as I do now. There was cheering news to one in these. The plan of the Temple looks as if the work was commenced, &c. I do not rejoice at apostacy, but do feel glad that the church is rid of three clogs that hung very heavy on her. But I feel bad about brother Gaylord, and hope he will weather. I am glad to hear my old friend J. Blakeslee is there. Give my respects to him. In the forepart I said I would not ask you to write me, but I do request it. There is a way opened that I am in hopes to get letters more regular. Do continue the paper. I do not hear one word of brother Brooks. My heart aches whenever I think of the fate of the English mission, and I never shall feel satisfied till I take it.—But I feel a great anxiety to go to Kirtland. I think I can make McLellinism look small, and I now consider it the most foolish ism extant.

I must close by subscribing myself your brother in the new and everlasting covenant,
MOSES SMITH.

Philadelphia, February 3d, 1848.

DEARLY BELOVED BROTHER STRANG:— * * * I intend to give something to the Temple as soon as I can make it convenient. I want you to remember me in your prayers. I have all confidence in you as being Prophet, Seer and Revelator in the church of the living God. I also have confidence in brother George J. Adams, one of your counsellors; he is a man of God in very deed. He is with us in this city and preaches to hundreds, I must say the largest congregations ever assembled in this place to hear a saint preach. It truly appears that a reaction has taken place. The cry is, call and see us. Several have been baptized, and many believing.—Some are ready to go forth and obey the gospel. I must say, that brother George is one of the master spirits of this dispensation.—May God reward him ten fold for his labor of love. The Brighamites are gasping for breath. They are without a head. In short, they are dead here. I inclose one dollar in this for my paper. My love to you and family, to brother Page and his family, and all inquiring friends.

Believe me, your friend and brother in the new covenant,
JACOB SYFRITT.

Milton says, "Let Truth and Error encounter." It seems, however, to be the practice to regard Truth as a delicate and sickly child who must be kept in the house, lest he should be demolished by the first blast of wind that he encounters in the open air.—Ex. Paper.

On Sunday a lady called to her little boy, who was tossing marbles on the sidewalk, to come into the house. "Don't you know you should'nt be out there, my son? Go into the back yard if you want to play marbles—it is Sunday." "Well, yes, But ain't it Sunday in the back yard, mother?"—Ex. Paper.

☞ He that trifles with his superiors, scarce ever can bear to be trifled with by his inferiors.

☞ He that is sent of God to preach the gospel of Christ, addresses the judgment: the self-sent, addresses the passions.

For the Gospel Herald.

THE ONENESS OF THE SAINTS OF GOD.

Come all ye saints of latter days,
Who seek for wisdom's pleasant ways,
And join yourselves in sacred band,
To keep the law of Zion's land.

The invitation is to all,
Both rich and poor, both great and small;
Come, bring your copper, brass and wood,
Also your silver, gold and goods.

Come all ye saints, the Lord proclaims,
And build a city to my name;
And in your blessings share alike,
And be like ancient saints of light.

I try my saints by faith, saith God,
By prophets I give them my word;
If they alike in all things share,
My spirit on them I will pour.

Voree, Feb. 14, 1848. ALMIRA SARGEANT.

ATTACHMENT.

Wisconsin Territory, }
Walworth County, ss. }

Daniel Avery, }
vs. } In Justice Court before Daniel Salisbury, Esq.
John W. Crane. }

The defendant in the above entitled cause will please to take notice that an attachment has issued against him, and his property attached to satisfy the demands of the plaintiff, and that unless he appear before the said Daniel Salisbury, Justice of the Peace in and for said county, at his office in Spring Prairie on the 9th day of March next at one o'clock in the afternoon, judgment will be rendered against him and his property sold to pay the debt.

DANIEL AVERY, Plaintiff.

Dated at Spring Prairie, this 3d day of February, 1848. 47tn.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1848. [No 50.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

"GENERAL EPISTLE FROM THE TWELVE APOSTLES, TO THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS ABROAD, DISPERSED THROUGHOUT THE EARTH—GREETING:—

(Concluded.)

"Let every Elder keep a journal, and gather historical facts concerning the church and the world, with specific dates, and present the same to the historian; also, let the presiding officer of every emigrating company, immediately on arrival, see that his clerk presents the recorder with a perfect list of the names of every soul, the number of wagons, teams, and every living thing in his camp; and let all the saints organize at, and travel from, the Pottawatamie district, according to the pattern which will there be given them.

"Since the murder of President Joseph Smith, many false prophets and false teachers have arisen, and tried to deceive many; durring which time we have mostly tarried with the body of the church, or been seeking a new location—leaving those prophets and teachers to run their race undisturbed, who have died natural deaths or committed suicide; and we now, having it in contemplation soon to re-organize the church according to the original pattern, with a First Presidency and Patriarch, feel that it will be the privilege of the Twelve, ere long, to spread abroad among the nations, not to hinder the gathering, but to preach the gospel, and push the people (the honest in heart) together from the four quarters of the earth.

"The saints in Western California, who choose, are at liberty to remain; and all who may hereafter arrive on the western coast, may exercise their privilege of tarrying in that vicinity, or of coming to head quaters.

"The saints on the Society and other islands of the Pacific ocean, are at liberty to tarry where they are, for the time being, or until further notice; and we will send them more Elders as soon as we can. But if a few of their young or middle aged, intelligent brethren, wish to visit us at the Basin, we bid them God speed, and shall be happy to see them.

"The saints in Australia, China, and the East Indies generally, will do well to ship to the most convenient port in the United States, and from thence make to this point, and pursue the same course as do others; or, if they find it more convenient, they may ship to Western California.

"We wish the traveling Elders throughout the world to remember the revelations of the Doctrine and Covenants, and say nought to this generation but repentance; and if men have faith to repent, lead them into the waters of baptism, lay your hands upon them for the reception of the Holy Ghost, confirm them in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, comfort their hearts, teach them the principles of righteousness and uprightness between man and man; administer to them bread and wine, in the remembrance of the death of Jesus Christ, and if they want further information, tell them to flee to Zion. There the servants of God will be ready to wait upon them, and teach them all things that pertain to salvation, and any thing beyond this in your teaching cometh of evil, for it is not required at your hands, but leadeth you into snares and temptations which tendeth to condemnation. Should any ask, Where is Zion? tell them in America: and if they ask, What is Zion? tell them the pure in heart.

"It is the duty of the rich saints every where to assist the poor, according to their ability, to gather; and if they choose, with a covenant and promise that the poor thus helped shall repay as soon as they are able. It is also the duty of the rich, those who have the intelligence and the means, to come home forthwith, and establish factories, and all kinds of machinery, that will tend to give employment to the poor, and produce those articles which are necessary for the comfort, convenience, health and happiness of the people; and no one need be at a loss concerning his duty in these matters, if he will walk so humbly before God as to keep the small still whisperings of the Holy Ghost within him continually.

"Let all saints who love God more than their own dear selves—and none else are saints—gather without delay to the place appointed, bringing their gold, their silver, their copper, their zinc, their tin, and brass, and iron, and choice steel, and ivory, and precious stones; their curiosities of science, of art, of nature, and every thing in their possession or within their reach, to build in strength and stability, to beautify, to adorn, to embellish, to delight, and to cast a fragrance over the house of the Lord; with sweet instruments of music and melody, and songs, and fragrance and sweet odors, and beautiful colors, whether it be in precious jewels, or minerals, or choice ores, or in wisdom and knowledge, or understanding, manifested in carved work; or curious workmanship of the box, the fir and pine tree, or any thing that ever was, or is, or is to be, for the exaltation, glory, honor, and salvation of the living and the dead, for time and for all eternity. Come, then, walking in righteousness before God, and your labor shall be accepted; and kings will be your nursing fathers, and queens will be your nursing mothers, and the glory of the whole earth shall be yours, in connection with all those who shall keep the commandments of God; or else the Bible, those ancient prophets, who prophecied from generation to generation, and which the present generation profess to believe, must fail; for the time has come for the saints to go up to the mountans of the Lord's house, and help to establish it upon the tops of the mountains, and the name of the Lord shall be there, and the glory of the Lord will be there, and the excellency of the Lord will be there, and the honor of the Lord will be there, and the exaltation of his saints will be there, and they will be held as in the hollow of his hand, and be hid as in the cleft of the rock, when the overflowing scourge of Jehovah shall go through to depopulate the earth, and lay waste the nations because of their wickedness, and cleanse the land from pollution and blood.

"We are at peace with all nations, with all kingdoms, with all powers, with all governments, with all authorities under the whole heavens, except the kingdom and power of darkness, which are from beneath, and are ready to stretch forth our arms to the four quarters of the globe, extending salvation to every honest soul: for our mission in the gospel of Jesus Christ is from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth; and the blessing of the Lord is upon us; and when every other arm shall fail, the power of the Almighty will be manifest in our behalf; for we ask nothing but what is right, we want nothing but what is right, and God has said that our strength shall be equal to our day; and we invite all presidents, and emperors, and kings, and princes, and nobles, and governors, and rulers, and Judges, and all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people under the whole heavens, to come and help us to build a house to the name of the God of Jacob, a place of peace, a city of rest, a habitation for the oppressed of every clime, even for those that love their neighbor as they do themselves, and who are willing to do as they would be done unto; and this we are determined to do, and we will do, God being our helper: and we will help every one that will help to sustain good and wholesome laws for the protection of virtue and punishment of vice.

"The kingdom which we are establishing is not of this world, but is the kingdom of the Great God. It is the fruits of righteousness, of peace, of salvation to every soul that will receive it, from Adam down to his latest posterity. Our good will is towards all

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 2, 1848. [No 50.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

"GENERAL EPISTLE FROM THE TWELVE APOSTLES, TO THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS ABROAD, DISPERSED THROUGHOUT THE EARTH—GREETING:—

(Concluded.)

"Let every Elder keep a journal, and gather historical facts concerning the church and the world, with specific dates, and present the same to the historian; also, let the presiding officer of every emigrating company, immediately on arrival, see that his clerk presents the recorder with a perfect list of the names of every soul, the number of wagons, teams, and every living thing in his camp; and let all the saints organize at, and travel from, the Pottawatamie district, according to the pattern which will there be given them.

"Since the murder of President Joseph Smith, many false prophets and false teachers have arisen, and tried to deceive many; during which time we have mostly tarried with the body of the church, or been seeking a new location—leaving those prophets and teachers to run their race undisturbed, who have died natural deaths or committed suicide; and we now, having it in contemplation soon to re-organize the church according to the original pattern, with a First Presidency and Patriarch, feel that it will be the privilege of the Twelve, ere long, to spread abroad among the nations, not to hinder the gathering, but to preach the gospel, and push the people (the honest in heart) together from the four quarters of the earth.

"The saints in Western California, who choose, are at liberty to remain; and all who may hereafter arrive on the western coast, may exercise their privilege of tarrying in that vicinity, or of coming to head quaters.

"The saints on the Society and other islands of the Pacific ocean, are at liberty to tarry where they are, for the time being, or until further notice; and we will send them more Elders as soon as we can. But if a few of their young or middle aged, intelligent brethren, wish to visit us at the Basin, we bid them God speed, and shall be happy to see them.

"The saints in Australia, China, and the East Indies generally, will do well to ship to the most convenient port in the United States, and from thence make to this point, and pursue the same course as do others; or, if they find it more convenient, they may ship to Western California.

"We wish the traveling Elders throughout the world to remember the revelations of the Doctrine and Covenants, and say nought to this generation but repentance; and if men have faith to repent, lead them into the waters of baptism, lay your hands upon them for the reception of the Holy Ghost, confirm them in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, comfort their hearts, teach them the principles of righteousness and uprightness between man and man; administer to them bread and wine, in the remembrance of the death of Jesus Christ, and if they want further information, tell them to flee to Zion. There the servants of God will be ready to wait upon them, and teach them all things that pertain to salvation, and any thing beyond this in your teaching cometh of evil, for it is not required at your hands, but leadeth you into snares and temptations which tendeth to condemnation. Should any ask, Where is Zion? tell them in America: and if they ask, What is Zion? tell them the pure in heart.

"It is the duty of the rich saints every where to assist the poor, according to their ability, to gather; and if they choose, with a covenant and promise that the poor thus helped shall repay as soon as they are able. It is also the duty of the rich, those who have the intelligence and the means, to come home forthwith, and establish factories, and all kinds of machinery, that will tend to give employment to the poor, and produce those articles which are necessary for the comfort, convenience, health and happiness of the people; and no one need be at a loss concerning his duty in these matters, if he will walk so humbly before God as to keep the small still whisperings of the Holy Ghost within him continually.

"Let all saints who love God more than their own dear selves—and none else are saints—gather without delay to the place appointed, bringing their gold, their silver, their copper, their zinc, their tin, and brass, and iron, and choice steel, and ivory, and precious stones; their curiosities of science, of art, of nature, and every thing in their possession or within their reach, to build in strength and stability, to beautify, to adorn, to embellish, to delight, and to cast a fragrance over the house of the Lord; with sweet instruments of music and melody, and songs, and fragrance and sweet odors, and beautiful colors, whether it be in precious jewels, or minerals, or choice ores, or in wisdom and knowledge, or understanding, manifested in carved work; or curious workmanship of the box, the fir and pine tree, or any thing that ever was, or is, or is to be, for the exaltation, glory, honor, and salvation of the living and the dead, for time and for all eternity. Come, then, walking in righteousness before God, and your labor shall be accepted; and kings will be your nursing fathers, and queens will be your nursing mothers, and the glory of the whole earth shall be yours, in connection with all those who shall keep the commandments of God; or else the Bible, those ancient prophets, who prophecied from generation to generation, and which the present generation profess to believe, must fail; for the time has come for the saints to go up to the mountans of the Lord's house, and help to establish it upon the tops of the mountains, and the name of the Lord shall be there, and the glory of the Lord will be there, and the excellency of the Lord will be there, and the honor of the Lord will be there, and the exaltation of his saints will be there, and they will be held as in the hollow of his hand, and be hid as in the cleft of the rock, when the overflowing scourge of Jehovah shall go through to depopulate the earth, and lay waste the nations because of their wickedness, and cleanse the land from pollution and blood.

"We are at peace with all nations, with all kingdoms, with all powers, with all governments, with all authorities under the whole heavens, except the kingdom and power of darkness, which are from beneath, and are ready to stretch forth our arms to the four quarters of the globe, extending salvation to every honest soul: for our mission in the gospel of Jesus Christ is from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth; and the blessing of the Lord is upon us; and when every other arm shall fail, the power of the Almighty will be manifest in our behalf; for we ask nothing but what is right, we want nothing but what is right, and God has said that our strength shall be equal to our day; and we invite all presidents, and emperors, and kings, and princes, and nobles, and governors, and rulers, and Judges, and all nations, kindreds, tongues, and people under the whole heavens, to come and help us to build a house to the name of the God of Jacob, a place of peace, a city of rest, a habitation for the oppressed of every clime, even for those that love their neighbor as they do themselves, and who are willing to do as they would be done unto; and this we are determined to do, and we will do, God being our helper: and we will help every one that will help to sustain good and wholesome laws for the protection of virtue and punishment of vice.

"The kingdom which we are establishing is not of this world, but is the kingdom of the Great God. It is the fruits of righteousness, of peace, of salvation to every soul that will receive it, from Adam down to his latest posterity. Our good will is towards all men, and we desire their salvation in time and eternity; and we will do them good so far as God will give us the power, and men will permit us the privilege; and we will harm no man; but if men will rise up against the power of the Almighty to overthrow his cause, let them know assuredly that they are running on the bosses of Jehovah's buckler, and as God lives, they will be overthrown.

"Come then, ye saints; come, then, ye honorable men of the earth; come, then, ye wise, ye learned, ye rich, ye noble, according to the riches, and wisdom, and knowledge of the great Jehovah; from all nations and kindreds, and kingdoms and tongues, and people and dialects on the face of the whole earth, and join the standard of Emanuel, and help us to build up the kingdom of God, and establish the principles of truth, life, and salvation, and you shall receive your reward among the sanctified, when the Lord Jesus Christ cometh to make up his jewels; and no power on earth or in hell shall prevail against you.

"The kingdon of God consists in correct principles; and it mattereth not what a man's religious faith is; whether he be a Presbyterian, or a Methodist, or a Baptist, or a Latter Day Saint or "Mormon," or a Campbellite, or a Catholic, or Episcopalian, or Mohammedan, or even Pagan, or any thing else, if he will bow the knee, and with his tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ, and will support good and wholesome laws for the regulation of society, we hail him as a brother, and will stand by him while he stands by us in these things; for every man's religious faith is a matter between his soul and his God alone; but if he shall deny the Jesus, if he shall curse God, if he shall indulge in debauchery and drunkenness, and crime; if he shall lie, and swear, and steal; if he shall take the name of the Great God in vain, and commit all manner of abominations, he shall have no place in our midst, for we have long sought to find a people that will work righteousness, that will distribute justice equally, that will acknowledge God in all their ways, that will regard those sacred laws and ordinances which are recorded in that sacred book called the Bible, which we verily believe, and which we proclaim to the ends of the earth.

"We ask no pre-eminence: we want no pre-eminence: but where God has placed us, there we will stand; and that is, to be one with our brethren, and our brethren are those that keep the commandments of God, that do the will of our Father who is in Heaven; and by them we will stand, and with them we will dwell in time and in eternity.

"Come then, ye saints of Latter Day, and ye great and small, wise and foolish, rich and poor, noble and ignoble, exalted and persecuted, rulers and ruled of the earth, who love virtue and hate vice, and help us to do this work, which the Lord hath required at our hands; and in as much as the glory of the latter house shall exceed that of the former, your reward shall be an hundred fold, and your rest shall be glorious. Our universal motto is, 'Peace with God, and good will to all men.'

"Written at Winter Quarters, Omaha Nation, west bank of Missouri River, near Oouncil Bluffs, North America, and signed December 23d, 1847, in behalf of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, President,

WILLARD RICHARDS, Clerk."

REMARKS.—We have published this epistle entire, and to those who have treasured up a recollection of the past no answer is necessary. Doubtless the last two years have sufficed for the forgetting of many facts, by many who were then familiar with the state of the church and the movements and professions of the apostate leaders. But a simple allusion to their teachings and pretensions will bring them to mind so fully as to exhibit the folly and falsehood of this epistle in a very strong light. That it contains many principles and exhortations abstractly good, is not to be disputed. But if those things are a mere hypocritical pretension, used for the purpose of bringing victims within their reach, and deceiving those whose integrity is with them a mere matter of scoffing, we conclude that the little truth they thus speak will not excuse their crimes and corruptions.

Without noticing the minor points of this epistle, we shall proceed to briefly notice its leading points. "We arrived near Council Bluffs, on the Missouri river, during the latter part of June, where we were met by Capt. J. Allen, from Fort Leavenworth, soliciting us to enlist five hundred men in the service of the United States. To this call of OUR COUNTRY, we promptly responded; and before the middle of July, more than five hundred of the brethren were embodied in the 'Mormon Battalion,' and on their march for California." All this may sound very pretty, and tell well in a political paper where it is a common thing to boast of love of country. But these same Mormons, thus enlisted in the service of U. S. for the conquest of California, had been called to Council Bluffs by a proclamation of these same apostate leaders requiring them to leave the U. S. because "OUR COUNTRY" was "too persecuting for the saints to live in." In October, 1845, they were commanded to leave the U. S. and go to the distant region of California to get beyond the jurisdiction of so persecuting a power as the U. S. In the winter following they were taken into the Temple and sworn to pursue the U. S., and all who are friendly to her government, with relentless vengeance forever. In February they start to leave the U. S. for California, which, before the first pioneer can possibly arrive there, was conquered and added to the U. S.; so that instead of fleeing out of, they were only trying to flee into the jurisdiction of this same dreaded and hated persecuting power. And as if anxious that their conduct should carry upon its face and front every possible mark of stupidity and folly, in the month of July, less than seven months after they had required all the saints to leave the U. S., in consequence of its oppressions and persecutions, under the advice of these same leaders five hundred of their followers are enlisted in the service of the U. S. for the purpose of conquering this SAME COUNTRY to which they were fleeing, and subjecting to the dominion of this persecuting power, by means of which all refuge was cut off forever. Certainly no folly can go beyond this. And if a worse feature is sought for, it will be found in the wickedness of this transaction in the double deception practised both on their own followers and on the U. S. On the U. S. by pretending that they were attached to their country and willing to fight her battles: on those who enlisted by representing that the destination of the camp was to the place where they would be discharged, and that by enlisting they would get conveyance to their final home, and wages for a year for nothing; and on their scattered followers by bragging that they had overreached the U. S. by getting them to transport their bitterest enemies into the country they intended to conquer, and pay them wages in addition. Heavily did this deception fall on the Mormon battalion, who, after serving the U. S. a year, found themselves destitute of money, and further from the place of their destination than when they started.

Of that five hundred who thus enlisted under the persecuting banner, "leaving hundreds of wagons, teams, and families, destitute of protectors and guardians, on the open prairie, in a savage country far from the abode of civilized life, and farther still from any place where they might hope to locate," how many will ever again see the wives and children thus left destitute? All that is said about responding to the call of the "Pres. (of the U. S.) with all the alacrity that is due from children to a parent," will be properly appreciated by those who know by what means they frightened the saints out of their country. The story was in the mouths of even little children that the British, Indians and Mexicans, led on by Mormon elders, were about to sweep this land with the besom of destruction, giving the cities to the flames, men to the sword, and the captive women to the Indians, whose daughters these same elders were to take as wives to themselves, and by continual crossings make the Indians a white and delightsome race of people, to possess and hold the whole land with them forever.

They even went so far as to send out numerous elders, preaching that the church under them was the woman of Rev. xii. 14 flying in the wilderness; that the Pres. of the U. S. was the dragon or ser-men, and we desire their salvation in time and eternity; and we will do them good so far as God will give us the power, and men will permit us the privilege; and we will harm no man; but if men will rise up against the power of the Almighty to overthrow his cause, let them know assuredly that they are running on the bosses of Jehovah's buckler, and as God lives, they will be overthrown.

"Come then, ye saints; come, then, ye honorable men of the earth; come, then, ye wise, ye learned, ye rich, ye noble, according to the riches, and wisdom, and knowledge of the great Jehovah; from all nations and kindreds, and kingdoms and tongues, and people and dialects on the face of the whole earth, and join the standard of Emanuel, and help us to build up the kingdom of God, and establish the principles of truth, life, and salvation, and you shall receive your reward among the sanctified, when the Lord Jesus Christ cometh to make up his jewels; and no power on earth or in hell shall prevail against you.

"The kingdon of God consists in correct principles; and it mattereth not what a man's religious faith is; whether he be a Presbyterian, or a Methodist, or a Baptist, or a Latter Day Saint or "Mormon," or a Campbellite, or a Catholic, or Episcopalian, or Mohammedan, or even Pagan, or any thing else, if he will bow the knee, and with his tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ, and will support good and wholesome laws for the regulation of society, we hail him as a brother, and will stand by him while he stands by us in these things; for every man's religious faith is a matter between his soul and his God alone; but if he shall deny the Jesus, if he shall curse God, if he shall indulge in debauchery and drunkenness, and crime; if he shall lie, and swear, and steal; if he shall take the name of the Great God in vain, and commit all manner of abominations, he shall have no place in our midst, for we have long sought to find a people that will work righteousness, that will distribute justice equally, that will acknowledge God in all their ways, that will regard those sacred laws and ordinances which are recorded in that sacred book called the Bible, which we verily believe, and which we proclaim to the ends of the earth.

"We ask no pre-eminence: we want no pre-eminence: but where God has placed us, there we will stand; and that is, to be one with our brethren, and our brethren are those that keep the commandments of God, that do the will of our Father who is in Heaven; and by them we will stand, and with them we will dwell in time and in eternity.

"Come then, ye saints of Latter Day, and ye great and small, wise and foolish, rich and poor, noble and ignoble, exalted and persecuted, rulers and ruled of the earth, who love virtue and hate vice, and help us to do this work, which the Lord hath required at our hands; and in as much as the glory of the latter house shall exceed that of the former, your reward shall be an hundred fold, and your rest shall be glorious. Our universal motto is, 'Peace with God, and good will to all men.'

"Written at Winter Quarters, Omaha Nation, west bank of Missouri River, near Oouncil Bluffs, North America, and signed December 23d, 1847, in behalf of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

BRIGHAM YOUNG, President,
WILLARD RICHARDS, Clerk."

REMARKS.—We have published this epistle entire, and to those who have treasured up a recollection of the past no answer is necessary. Doubtless the last two years have sufficed for the forgetting of many facts, by many who were then familiar with the state of the church and the movements and professions of the apostate leaders. But a simple allusion to their teachings and pretensions will bring them to mind so fully as to exhibit the folly and falsehood of this epistle in a very strong light. That it contains many principles and exhortations abstractly good, is not to be disputed. But if those things are a mere hypocritical pretension, used for the purpose of bringing victims within their reach, and deceiving those whose integrity is with them a mere matter of scoffing, we conclude that the little truth they thus speak will not excuse their crimes and corruptions.

Without noticing the minor points of this epistle, we shall proceed to briefly notice its leading points. "We arrived near Council Bluffs, on the Missouri river, during the latter part of June, where we were met by Capt. J. Allen, from Fort Leavenworth, soliciting us to enlist five hundred men in the service of the United States. To this call of OUR COUNTRY, we promptly responded; and before the middle of July, more than five hundred of the brethren were embodied in the 'Mormon Battalion,' and on their march for California." All this may sound very pretty, and tell well in a political paper where it is a common thing to boast of love of country. But these same Mormons, thus enlisted in the service of U. S. for the conquest of California, had been called to Council Bluffs by a proclamation of these same apostate leaders requiring them to leave the U. S. because "OUR COUNTRY" was "too persecuting for the saints to live in." In October, 1845, they were commanded to leave the U. S. and go to the distant region of California to get beyond the jurisdiction of so persecuting a power as the U. S. In the winter following they were taken into the Temple and sworn to pursue the U. S., and all who are friendly to her government, with relentless vengeance forever. In February they start to leave the U. S. for California, which, before the first pioneer can possibly arrive there, was conquered and added to the U. S.; so that instead of fleeing out of, they were only trying to flee into the jurisdiction of this same dreaded and hated persecuting power. And as if anxious that their conduct should carry upon its face and front every possible mark of stupidity and folly, in the month of July, less than seven months after they had required all the saints to leave the U. S., in consequence of its oppressions and persecutions, under the advice of these same leaders five hundred of their followers are enlisted in the service of the U. S. for the purpose of conquering this SAME COUNTRY to which they were fleeing, and subjecting to the dominion of this persecuting power, by means of which all refuge was cut off forever. Certainly no folly can go beyond this. And if a worse feature is sought for, it will be found in the wickedness of this transaction in the double deception practised both on their own followers and on the U. S. On the U. S. by pretending that they were attached to their country and willing to fight her battles: on those who enlisted by representing that the destination of the camp was to the place where they would be discharged, and that by enlisting they would get conveyance to their final home, and wages for a year for nothing; and on their scattered followers by bragging that they had overreached the U. S. by getting them to transport their bitterest enemies into the country they intended to conquer, and pay them wages in addition. Heavily did this deception fall on the Mormon battalion, who, after serving the U. S. a year, found themselves destitute of money, and further from the place of their destination than when they started.

Of that five hundred who thus enlisted under the persecuting banner, "leaving hundreds of wagons, teams, and families, destitute of protectors and guardians, on the open prairie, in a savage country far from the abode of civilized life, and farther still from any place where they might hope to locate," how many will ever again see the wives and children thus left destitute? All that is said about responding to the call of the "Pres. (of the U. S.) with all the alacrity that is due from children to a parent," will be properly appreciated by those who know by what means they frightened the saints out of their country. The story was in the mouths of even little children that the British, Indians and Mexicans, led on by Mormon elders, were about to sweep this land with the besom of destruction, giving the cities to the flames, men to the sword, and the captive women to the Indians, whose daughters these same elders were to take as wives to themselves, and by continual crossings make the Indians a white and delightsome race of people, to possess and hold the whole land with them forever.

They even went so far as to send out numerous elders, preaching that the church under them was the woman of Rev. xii. 14 flying in the wilderness; that the Pres. of the U. S. was the dragon or serpent; that he would send an army after the church to destroy it, which was the waters out of his mouth, and would be swallowed up in the earth by miraculous power, and that then the U. S. would destroy the rest of the Mormons throughout this land in revenge.—Hundreds of sermons of this kind were taught the elders in Nauvoo, and by them spread through the country to frighten off their deluded victims from this devoted country, which they are now so ready to defend.

We next observe the statement that a part of the camp, "full of hope and buoyant with faith," pushed west as far as the Pawnee mission, turned aside to the Running Water, and in the spring of 1847 returned to the camp near Council Bluffs for provisions. If this is to be attributed to the mere accidents of a Godless band, we have nothing to say; but if they pretend to be guided by revelation, will they tell for which of all their sins God has guided them 1000 miles in a period of eight months to the place they started from?—Again, we ask those who promised their brethren an immediate restoration to their old possessions in Missouri under "BAURAK ALE," is this the way God goes before you with his presence?

THE VALLEY.—The description of the valley of the Great Salt Lake is the rarest bundle of improbabilities and contradictions we often see. Indeed we know of nothing but the creed of St. Anthanasius that is any match to it. The valley is bounded by mountains covered with "perpetual SNOW," but has a "WARM climate." It possesses warm, hot and cold springs and streams, the Utah and Salt Lakes, the Western Jordon and Great Bear River, and in addition is "watered by DAILY SHOWERS," and yet will "REQUIRE IRRIGATION" to produce crops. They are going 1000 miles beyond the settlements to find such a valley in the mountains, surrounded by mountains, covered with snow all summer, and have the consolation of being told that though the "valley is destitute of timber," there is a little in the mountains which will do them "UNTIL MORE CAN GROW."

Evidently a great effort is here made to recommend the valley as a desirable location. But facts enough are let out to show that it is a rocky and sandy mountain vale, where nothing can be produced except by watering it from day to day, and in that wilderness, as it is, men must be content to haul all their fuel from 10 to 20 miles, and build mud houses for want of lumber. The mill sites will doubtless be valuable when men raise up forests of timber to saw, or grow large wheat fields all daily sprinkled with a gardener's waterpot. If any body inquires whence comes the water at those mill sites, we can only say we suppose the "daily showers" which fall and still leave the soil too dry to produce vegetation keep up the streams; and the August sun pouring its rays on the "perpetual snow" sends down some torrents of water. We would not insinuate, however, that a wind rushing down these mountains in the heat of harvest would be any way uncomfortable, or have the least tendency to produce consumption or other diseases. That the facts here stated may be appreciated in their full force it should be remembered that this valley is in the same latitude as northern Pennsylvania, and the lowest part of it far higher above the sea than the highest peaks of the Allegany mountains. If both soil and climate are just what one would expect from the description given in this epistle, with first rate markets, it would be a very hard country to live in. If God had chosen such a location for the saints, we should say amen in confidence that he had done it for good reasons. But when men tell of going out and looking up such a place, we think they have exhibited their wisdom, all of it. We cannot well conceive of a country more difficult to live in. Whatever they send to market must go by land 1000 miles, and all they get in return must be brought a like distance. It is difficult to imagine that such a country can afford any thing that will bear exportation except fur and peltry, and we are told a little below that game "was very scarce, and exceedingly poor."

We next notice a long statement of their return journey, and of their horses being stolen, and of their being attacked by a WAR PARTY of SIOUX INDIANS; and reminding the reader that they pretended to be going west in accordance with the commands of God, and professed to be in league with the Indians, &c.; that before going they covenanted to take with them ALL the POOR and leave none of the saints behind, (see Conference minutes Oct., 1845,) and in fact plundered the poor to fit out themselves, and then went off and left them, and continued to leave them from time to time as they got their means away from them. We wish to put along side of these facts a prophecy made on them before they left Nauvoo:—

"The destroyer has gone forth among you and has prevailed.—You are preparing to resign country and houses and lands to him.—Many of you are about to leave the haunts of civilization and of men to go into an unexplored wilderness among savages, and in trackless deserts to seek a home in the wilds where the foot print of the white man is not found. The voice of God has not called you to this. HIS PROMISE has not gone BEFORE to prepare a HABITATION for YOU. THE HEARTS OF THE LAMANITES ARE NOT TURNED UNTO YOU and they will not REGARD you. WHEN the HERD COMES the SAVAGES SHALL PURSUE. The cloud which surrounds by day shall bewilder, and the pillar of fire by night shall consume and reveal you to the destroyer, and the MEN in WHOM YOU TRUSTED when YOU REJECTED the promises of GOD SHALL LEAVE you EARLY AND NOT BE FOUND of you in your GREATEST NEED."—Voree Herald, Jan. 1, 1846.

Thus have they become witnesses of the fulfillment of prophecy on their heads, as spoken by God's anointed. They have driven in their herds, and the very savages with whom they profess to be in league have pursued and taken their flocks. And lest a witness should still be wanting to show that the hearts of the Lamanites were not turned to them, they tell us that they were attacked by a "WAR PARTY of SIOUX INDIANS." It will be remembered that in the proclamation or epistle sent out from the October Conference, 1845, they pretended to be going in accordance with revelations to Joseph. The prophet James in his epistle of Jan. following warned the saints that the "promise of God had not gone before to prepare a habitation for them." (Voree Herald, Jan. 1846.) Well, in this epistle, as if seized with perfect infatuation or compelled by Almighty power to confess their whole falsehood, they unblushingly confess that they started out not knowing whither they went, and when they had got into the wilderness some hundred miles, instead of asking God what land he would give them, went themselves "IN SEARCH of a LOCATION."

As if unwilling that he whom they brand as false prophet should be left wanting one single testimony of the eternal truth of God's word, they have expressly recorded not only the sickness, suffering and want in the camps which they left behind, but say, also, "*In September, 1846, an infuriated mob, clad in all the horrors of war, fell on the saints who had still remained in Nauvoo for want of means to remove, murdered some and drove the remainder across the Mississippi into Iowa, destitute of houses, tents, food, clothing, or money. At that period the saints were obliged to scatter to the north, south, east and west, wherever they could find shelter. And, hard as it is to write it—it must ever remain a truth on the page of history—that while the flower of Israel's camp were sustaining the wings of the American eagle, by their influence and arms in a foreign country, their brothers, sisters, fathers, mothers, and children, were driven by mob violence from a free and independent State of the same national Republic, and were compelled to flee from the fire, the sword, the musket, and the cannon's mouth, as from the pent; that he would send an army after the church to destroy it, which was the waters out of his mouth, and would be swallowed up in the earth by miraculous power, and that then the U. S. would destroy the rest of the Mormons throughout this land in revenge.—Hundreds of sermons of this kind were taught the elders in Nauvoo, and by them spread through the country to frighten off their deluded victims from this devoted country, which they are now so ready to defend.

We next observe the statement that a part of the camp, "full of hope and buoyant with faith," pushed west as far as the Pawnee mission, turned aside to the Running Water, and in the spring of 1847 returned to the camp near Council Bluffs for provisions. If this is to be attributed to the mere accidents of a Godless band, we have nothing to say; but if they pretend to be guided by revelation, will they tell for which of all their sins God has guided them 1000 miles in a period of eight months to the place they started from?—Again, we ask those who promised their brethren an immediate restoration to their old possessions in Missouri under "BAURAK ALE," is this the way God goes before you with his presence?

THE VALLEY.—The description of the valley of the Great Salt Lake is the rarest bundle of improbabilities and contradictions we often see. Indeed we know of nothing but the creed of St. Anthanasius that is any match to it. The valley is bounded by mountains covered with "perpetual SNOW," but has a "WARM climate." It possesses warm, hot and cold springs and streams, the Utah and Salt Lakes, the Western Jordon and Great Bear River, and in addition is "watered by DAILY SHOWERS," and yet will "REQUIRE IRRIGATION" to produce crops. They are going 1000 miles beyond the settlements to find such a valley in the mountains, surrounded by mountains, covered with snow all summer, and have the consolation of being told that though the "valley is destitute of timber," there is a little in the mountains which will do them "UNTIL MORE CAN GROW."

Evidently a great effort is here made to recommend the valley as a desirable location. But facts enough are let out to show that it is a rocky and sandy mountain vale, where nothing can be produced except by watering it from day to day, and in that wilderness, as it is, men must be content to haul all their fuel from 10 to 20 miles, and build mud houses for want of lumber. The mill sites will doubtless be valuable when men raise up forests of timber to saw, or grow large wheat fields all daily sprinkled with a gardener's waterpot. If any body inquires whence comes the water at those mill sites, we can only say we suppose the "daily showers" which fall and still leave the soil too dry to produce vegetation keep up the streams; and the August sun pouring its rays on the "perpetual snow" sends down some torrents of water. We would not insinuate, however, that a wind rushing down these mountains in the heat of harvest would be any way uncomfortable, or have the least tendency to produce consumption or other diseases. That the facts here stated may be appreciated in their full force it should be remembered that this valley is in the same latitude as northern Pennsylvania, and the lowest part of it far higher above the sea than the highest peaks of the Allegany mountains. If both soil and climate are just what one would expect from the description given in this epistle, with first rate markets, it would be a very hard country to live in. If God had chosen such a location for the saints, we should say amen in confidence that he had done it for good reasons. But when men tell of going out and looking up such a place, we think they have exhibited their wisdom, all of it. We cannot well conceive of a country more difficult to live in. Whatever they send to market must go by land 1000 miles, and all they get in return must be brought a like distance. It is difficult to imagine that such a country can afford any thing that will bear exportation except fur and peltry, and we are told a little below that game "was very scarce, and exceedingly poor."

We next notice a long statement of their return journey, and of their horses being stolen, and of their being attacked by a WAR PARTY of SIOUX INDIANS; and reminding the reader that they pretended to be going west in accordance with the commands of God, and professed to be in league with the Indians, &c.; that before going they covenanted to take with them ALL the POOR and leave none of the saints behind, (see Conference minutes Oct., 1845,) and in fact plundered the poor to fit out themselves, and then went off and left them, and continued to leave them from time to time as they got their means away from them. We wish to put along side of these facts a prophecy made on them before they left Nauvoo:—

"The destroyer has gone forth among you and has prevailed.—You are preparing to resign country and houses and lands to him.—Many of you are about to leave the haunts of civilization and of men to go into an unexplored wilderness among savages, and in trackless deserts to seek a home in the wilds where the foot print of the white man is not found. The voice of God has not called you to this. HIS PROMISE has not gone BEFORE to prepare a HABITATION for YOU. THE HEARTS OF THE LAMANITES ARE NOT TURNED UNTO YOU and they will not REGARD you. WHEN the HERD COMES the SAVAGES SHALL PURSUE. The cloud which surrounds by day shall bewilder, and the pillar of fire by night shall consume and reveal you to the destroyer, and the MEN in WHOM YOU TRUSTED when YOU REJECTED the promises of GOD SHALL LEAVE you EARLY AND NOT BE FOUND of you in your GREATEST NEED."—Voree Herald, Jan. 1, 1846.

Thus have they become witnesses of the fulfillment of prophecy on their heads, as spoken by God's anointed. They have driven in their herds, and the very savages with whom they profess to be in league have pursued and taken their flocks. And lest a witness should still be wanting to show that the hearts of the Lamanites were not turned to them, they tell us that they were attacked by a "WAR PARTY of SIOUX INDIANS." It will be remembered that in the proclamation or epistle sent out from the October Conference, 1845, they pretended to be going in accordance with revelations to Joseph. The prophet James in his epistle of Jan. following warned the saints that the "promise of God had not gone before to prepare a habitation for them." (Voree Herald, Jan. 1846.) Well, in this epistle, as if seized with perfect infatuation or compelled by Almighty power to confess their whole falsehood, they unblushingly confess that they started out not knowing whither they went, and when they had got into the wilderness some hundred miles, instead of asking God what land he would give them, went themselves "IN SEARCH of a LOCATION."

As if unwilling that he whom they brand as false prophet should be left wanting one single testimony of the eternal truth of God's word, they have expressly recorded not only the sickness, suffering and want in the camps which they left behind, but say, also, "In September, 1846, an infuriated mob, clad in all the horrors of war, fell on the saints who had still remained in Nauvoo for want of means to remove, murdered some and drove the remainder across the Mississippi into Iowa, destitute of houses, tents, food, clothing, or money. At that period the saints were obliged to scatter to the north, south, east and west, wherever they could find shelter. And, hard as it is to write it—it must ever remain a truth on the page of history—that while the flower of Israel's camp were sustaining the wings of the American eagle, by their influence and arms in a foreign country, their brothers, sisters, fathers, mothers, and children, were driven by mob violence from a free and independent State of the same national Republic, and were compelled to flee from the fire, the sword, the musket, and the cannon's mouth, as from the demon of death. From that time to this the Latter Day Saints have been roaming without home from Canada to New Orleans, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and many have taken up their abode in foreign lands. Their property in Hancock county, Illinois, was little or no better than confiscated; many of their houses were burned by the mob, and they were obliged to leave most of those that remained without sale; and those who bargained, sold almost for a song. A handsome estate seldom realized enough to remove the family comfortably away; and thousands have since been wandering to and fro, destitute, afflicted, and distressed for the common necessaries of life, or unable to endure, have sickened and died by hundreds." Remember that that people trusted in the apostate Twelve as leaders, and the armed men as defenders, and that long before these troubles they were far in the west leaving peril and suffering behind; and put it beside the prophecy, "the men in whom you trusted when you rejected the promises of God shall leave you early, and not be found of you in your greatest need;" and comment is unnecessary.

(Remarks to be continued.)

MUSINGS.

The dog is in the manger. He does not wish to eat the hay, but has no disposition to let the ox eat. What a pity it is that as he don't want the hay he will not let it alone and let the cattle eat it.—A happier world this will be when men are content to let others do what is for their own felicity. A great improvement men will make when misery ceases to love company. The moment a good man proposes any measure for the improvement of his fellow creatures, no matter at what cost to himself, nor how extensive the benefit conferred, almost every one who, for any reason, cannot or will not accept the bounty, sets about to persuade all others to refuse it. The man who rejects matrimony for the purpose of putting off all moral restraint and practicing unbridled lust, always urges others to eschew connubial felicity. He that leaves the church of God because he will not submit to her discipline, is anxious to get as many others out as possible. He who abandons the place of gathering to get rid of doing his part in building up the kingdom of God, does not like that any body else should stay, and will, by falsehood if he cannot by truth, get them away; and the man who will not consent to be made equal with his brethren, is very much troubled for fear some body else will. Ah, that is it. The dog is in the manger. He cannot eat the hay and will not let any body else.

MOTIVES.

There is a very plain set of rules by which all men judge one another's conduct. When we are acquainted with a man's history and conduct we naturally judge that in each case he is actuated by the same motives that usually actuate him. But when we judge of the motives of strangers, we bring into use an entirely different set of rules. Here we judge all men by ourselves. And in judging others we in fact and in truth set an exact value on ourselves. Every scamp supposes that others are scamps like himself. Every swindler looks on all others as swindlers like himself. If he finds one that does not overreach, he says he don't know enough.

Men cannot believe that others act on a higher moral standard than themselves, and consequently the man of unsound principles, when he sees others doing a good deed, immediately looks about for some ill motive which might have induced it. Why? Simply because he himself would not do good for any but an ill motive.

We look on this fact as the worst feature of society at this time. It is melancholy indeed that no man can seek to do good but his motives are suspected, and an effort is immediately made to scandalize him and raise jealousy against him. Yes, jealousy, that worst of all human passions, is forever arrayed against every philanthropist—every lover of his race.

We are young, but are rapidly growing old. We expect to wear out in serving for the relief and salvation of our fellow creatures.—But we expect only to be accused and evilly spoken of by the mass of mankind. In the face of continual sacrifice and suffering, that our motives will be continually impugned. And we expect this because we have constantly suffered it.

EVIL SPEAKING.

We are so in the habit of being evil spoken of by those who spend their lives in working wickedness, as well as those who are devoted to mere selfishness, that if the time should ever come that such men should cease to calumniate us we should really fear that the grace of God had left us. Brethren, if you ever hear evil and selfish men speak well of the prophet, pray God fervently to forgive him his secret sins.

THE POOR.

The poor must be leveled up, not the rich leveled down, till all are made equal. Riches never were enjoyed, and never can be.—But competence can be. Take from the rich the excess that he cannot enjoy, and he is not brought down one whit; give it to the poor and it levels him up by making him an abundance of all things.—Ah, but as the poor have not had economy to get property, will they not squander it? No. You need not employ them at what they have no talent for. The poor are just as smart as any body else.—If they have not the talent to make money, they have some other equally useful in society. Let them use it while some body else counts gold. God has made every man capable of earning wealth. Give them a chance.

Ah, but every man wants to be lord of his earnings, whether he has a faculty of accumulating or not. Very well, no body disputes his privilege. If it is better never to have any thing than to have enough of all things, without the power to waste it, choose. Only don't be troubled because we do good to those that are willing to accept the bounty.

DISCUSSION.

Often as we have attempted to call out discussion from any and all parties, we have just heard a near neighbor express surprise at our saying our paper was open to the discussion of both sides of all religious questions. We wish all men to understand from this day forward forever that we do not consider truth a sickly child, and are perfectly satisfied to trust it out of doors in stormy weather, and have no doubt that in the encounter with error it will prevail. We shall have room in the Herald for our opponents at all times, and intend to set apart a certain space as every body's corner. So come on.

BEAUTY.—Socrates called beauty a short-lived tyranny; Plato called it a privilege of nature; Theophrastus, a silent cheat; Theocritus, a delightful prejudice; Domitia said nothing was more grateful; Aristotle affirmed it was better than any letter of recommendation; Homer called it a glorious gift of nature; and Ovid, a favor bestowed by the Gods.—Ex. Paper.

CONFERENCE

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

demon of death. From that time to this the Latter Day Saints have been roaming without home from Canada to New Orleans, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and many have taken up their abode in foreign lands. Their property in Hancock county, Illinois, was little or no better than confiscated; many of their houses were burned by the mob, and they were obliged to leave most of those that remained without sale; and those who bargained, sold almost for a song. A handsome estate seldom realized enough to remove the family comfortably away; and thousands have since been wandering to and fro, destitute, afflicted, and distressed for the common necessaries of life, or unable to endure, have sickened and died by hundreds." Remember that that people trusted in the apostate Twelve as leaders, and the armed men as defenders, and that long before these troubles they were far in the west leaving peril and suffering behind; and put it beside the prophecy, "the men in whom you trusted when you rejected the promises of God shall leave you early, and not be found of you in your greatest need;" and comment is unnecessary.

(Remarks to be continued.)

MUSINGS.

The dog is in the manger. He does not wish to eat the hay, but has no disposition to let the ox eat. What a pity it is that as he don't want the hay he will not let it alone and let the cattle eat it.—A happier world this will be when men are content to let others do what is for their own felicity. A great improvement men will make when misery ceases to love company. The moment a good man proposes any measure for the improvement of his fellow creatures, no matter at what cost to himself, nor how extensive the benefit conferred, almost every one who, for any reason, cannot or will not accept the bounty, sets about to persuade all others to refuse it. The man who rejects matrimony for the purpose of putting off all moral restraint and practicing unbridled lust, always urges others to eschew connubial felicity. He that leaves the church of God because he will not submit to her discipline, is anxious to get as many others out as possible. He who abandons the place of gathering to get rid of doing his part in building up the kingdom of God, does not like that any body else should stay, and will, by falsehood if he cannot by truth, get them away; and the man who will not consent to be made equal with his brethren, is very much troubled for fear some body else will. Ah, that is it. The dog is in the manger. He cannot eat the hay and will not let any body else.

MOTIVES.

There is a very plain set of rules by which all men judge one another's conduct. When we are acquainted with a man's history and conduct we naturally judge that in each case he is actuated by the same motives that usually actuate him. But when we judge of the motives of strangers, we bring into use an entirely different set of rules. Here we judge all men by ourselves. And in judging others we in fact and in truth set an exact value on ourselves. Every scamp supposes that others are scamps like himself. Every swindler looks on all others as swindlers like himself. If he finds one that does not overreach, he says he don't know enough.

Men cannot believe that others act on a higher moral standard than themselves, and consequently the man of unsound principles, when he sees others doing a good deed, immediately looks about for some ill motive which might have induced it. Why? Simply because he himself would not do good for any but an ill motive.

We look on this fact as the worst feature of society at this time. It is melancholy indeed that no man can seek to do good but his motives are suspected, and an effort is immediately made to scandalize him and raise jealousy against him. Yes, jealousy, that worst of all human passions, is forever arrayed against every philanthropist—every lover of his race.

We are young, but are rapidly growing old. We expect to wear out in serving for the relief and salvation of our fellow creatures.—But we expect only to be accused and evilly spoken of by the mass of mankind. In the face of continual sacrifice and suffering, that our motives will be continually impugned. And we expect this because we have constantly suffered it.

EVIL SPEAKING.

We are so in the habit of being evil spoken of by those who spend their lives in working wickedness, as well as those who are devoted to mere selfishness, that if the time should ever come that such men should cease to calumniate us we should really fear that the grace of God had left us. Brethren, if you ever hear evil and selfish men speak well of the prophet, pray God fervently to forgive him his secret sins.

THE POOR.

The poor must be leveled up, not the rich leveled down, till all are made equal. Riches never were enjoyed, and never can be.—But competence can be. Take from the rich the excess that he cannot enjoy, and he is not brought down one whit; give it to the poor and it levels him up by making him an abundance of all things.—Ah, but as the poor have not had economy to get property, will they not squander it? No. You need not employ them at what they have no talent for. The poor are just as smart as any body else.—If they have not the talent to make money, they have some other equally useful in society. Let them use it while some body else counts gold. God has made every man capable of earning wealth. Give them a chance.

Ah, but every man wants to be lord of his earnings, whether he has a faculty of accumulating or not. Very well, no body disputes his privilege. If it is better never to have any thing than to have enough of all things, without the power to waste it, choose. Only don't be troubled because we do good to those that are willing to accept the bounty.

March 2, '48

DISCUSSION.

Often as we have attempted to call out discussion from any and all parties, we have just heard a near neighbor express surprise at our saying our paper was open to the discussion of both sides of all religious questions. We wish all men to understand from this day forward forever that we do not consider truth a sickly child, and are perfectly satisfied to trust it out of doors in stormy weather, and have no doubt that in the encounter with error it will prevail. We shall have room in the Herald for our opponents at all times, and intend to set apart a certain space as every body's corner. So come on.

BEAUTY.—Socrates called beauty a short-lived tyranny; Plato called it a privilege of nature; Theophrastus, a silent cheat; Theocritus, a delightful prejudice; Domitia said nothing was more grateful; Aristotle affirmed it was better than any letter of recommendation; Homer called it a glorious gift of nature; and Ovid, a favor bestowed by the Gods.—Ex. Paper.

CONFERENCE

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1848. [No 51.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REMARKS ON THE BRIGHAMITE EPISTLE.

(Continued from last week.)

"In the valley (of the Salt Lake) we located a SITE for a CITY, to be called the 'GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, of the Great Basin, North America.'" Well, if that is not a name, we don't know how many lines will make one. But what is there in that region to support a city? Many wild adventurers have located city sites where there were no facilities for either trade or manufactures. Several have been located around Hudsons Bay more than a century since, and not long since some Scotchmen spent immense fortunes in an effort to build up a colony with trading towns on the Red River of the North, in 49° of latitude, where there is both a better soil, a finer climate, and a more permanent market. But such speculations, by men who are totally ignorant of the adaptation of means to results, all have but one ending. From the original scheme of colonizing the Carolinas down to this last attempt to settle the very worst and most undesirable region of North America, no one such project begun by men destitute of experience has ever succeeded. Of all the men on earth we know of none less qualified to select a location than this same company. We know of but one fact that can work favorably with them. And that is, that the rushing in of two or three thousand emigrants destitute of provisions will make high prices a few years, until the population there bears some proportion to that coming in, when there will be a severe revulsion, from which the place can never recover. Some little advantage will doubtless be expected from the fact that the route to California is through the valley. But there is not the remotest possibility of its continuing in that direction. Three years if not twelve months will transfer the California travel many hundred miles to the south of the Salt Lake, leaving only here and there a little scattering travel through the valley. This is inevitable; because to the south is a far better route, no greater in distance, through occasional settlements already in the hands of the U. S., and furnishing all needed supplies to emigrants at the lowest prices. It was well thought of, however, to reserve several blocks of the city for public grounds, in the midst of a prairie 20 miles broad. It will make good training ground when the prairie is so filled with farms that no ground can be found out of the city.

They laid "the foundation of a row of houses around a ten acre block." Reader, what do you suppose induced them to build in that form? Simply to fortify against their friends, the Lamanites. These houses you must understand are built of unburnt brick, or of pounded clay. That is, they are mud houses, inclosing a square with the doors inside, and consequently a tolerable defense against a savage foe, though a regular force will go through them the first shock.

We cannot forbear adding that these same Brighamites seem to be peculiarly unfortunate in their recollections. This epistle only pretends that they nearly completed a row of houses on one side of a ten acre block. Whereas Phineas Young informed us that they had built around three sides of a ten acre block; when being joined by the company from Mississippi, and part of the Mormon battalion, they enlarged it to 36 acres. They had got it inclosed on three sides when the company returned. Gentlemen, commit your falsehoods to memory better, or take the print with you.

"Fifteen of the battalion arrived from California, having suffered much on their return from cold and hunger, with no provisions part of the way but a little horse flesh, of the worst kind." What did these men go to California for? Because Brigham and his coadjutors advised them to go into the service of a nation in which they say they cannot live, to conquer the only place under heaven where they hoped to go to get out of it. And now Brigham coolly tells us that after abandoning their families in the open prairie, destitute of provisions, hundreds of miles from where they can get any, except by yielding themselves to prostitution, they have finally, after a year and a half, made their way back, saved alive on miserable horse flesh. A little below he also tells of some thirty more coming in PENNILESS and DESTITUTE, after devouring the flesh of worn out MULES, on a journey of two or three thousand miles. Brigham had their enlistment bounty—promised to take their families to where they would be discharged, and establish the church there—assured them conveyance to their final resting place, and wages on the way without expense—made their wives prostitutes to him and his, on peril of starvation while they were gone, and then supported them by the killing their own teams and selling their wagons; and now, as he tells it, they have returned PENNILESS and DESTITUTE, polluted with blood, to wives equally PENNILESS and DESTITUTE, and equally polluted with prostitution. The demon of vengeance could not wish them worse, and the compassion of a devil would weep for their fate.

Upon the very heel of this confession falls the assertion, "we love honesty and right, wherever we find them." The very personification of hypocrisy. Doubtless many will believe them, but they never will believe themselves.

The old story of submission to the laws is told in these words "We say to the saints throughout the earth, be submissive to the laws that protect you in your person, rights and property." This all sounds very well, but when it is observed that immediately above they have also said to the saints that the laws of the U. S. do not protect them either in person, rights or property, every man will see that this is only a recommendation to violate the law. Certainly we cannot understand otherwise than that advising to keep the laws under certain circumstances implies that under other circumstances we are to disregard them.

And upon the heel of this, as if seeking to clothe themselves with shame as a garment, and with disgrace as a mantle, they inform us that they intend "to petition for a territorial government in the Great Basin." Petition whom? The U. S. of course; the nation to which they have contributed to add this territory. So that they could go there and live under a government too persecuting for the

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1848. [No 51.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REMARKS ON THE BRIGHAMITE EPISTLE.

(Continued from last week.)

"In the valley (of the Salt Lake) we located a SITE for a CITY, to be called the 'GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, of the Great Basin, North America.'" Well, if that is not a name, we don't know how many lines will make one. But what is there in that region to support a city? Many wild adventurers have located city sites where there were no facilities for either trade or manufactures. Several have been located around Hudsons Bay more than a century since, and not long since some Scotchmen spent immense fortunes in an effort to build up a colony with trading towns on the Red River of the North, in 49° of latitude, where there is both a better soil, a finer climate, and a more permanent market. But such speculations, by men who are totally ignorant of the adaptation of means to results, all have but one ending. From the original scheme of colonizing the Carolinas down to this last attempt to settle the very worst and most undesirable region of North America, no one such project begun by men destitute of experience has ever succeeded. Of all the men on earth we know of none less qualified to select a location than this same company. We know of but one fact that can work favorably with them. And that is, that the rushing in of two or three thousand emigrants destitute of provisions will make high prices a few years, until the population there bears some proportion to that coming in, when there will be a severe revulsion, from which the place can never recover. Some little advantage will doubtless be expected from the fact that the route to California is through the valley. But there is not the remotest possibility of its continuing in that direction. Three years if not twelve months will transfer the California travel many hundred miles to the south of the Salt Lake, leaving only here and there a little scattering travel through the valley. This is inevitable; because to the south is a far better route, no greater in distance, through occasional settlements already in the hands of the U. S., and furnishing all needed supplies to emigrants at the lowest prices. It was well thought of, however, to reserve several blocks of the city for public grounds, in the midst of a prairie 20 miles broad. It will make good training ground when the prairie is so filled with farms that no ground can be found out of the city.

They laid "the foundation of a row of houses around a ten acre block." Reader, what do you suppose induced them to build in that form? Simply to fortify against their friends, the Lamanites. These houses you must understand are built of unburnt brick, or of pounded clay. That is, they are mud houses, inclosing a square with the doors inside, and consequently a tolerable defense against a savage foe, though a regular force will go through them the first shock.

We cannot forbear adding that these same Brighamites seem to be peculiarly unfortunate in their recollections. This epistle only pretends that they nearly completed a row of houses on one side of a ten acre block. Whereas Phineas Young informed us that they had built around three sides of a ten acre block; when being joined by the company from Mississippi, and part of the Mormon battalion, they enlarged it to 36 acres. They had got it inclosed on three sides when the company returned. Gentlemen, commit your falsehoods to memory better, or take the print with you.

"Fifteen of the battalion arrived from California, having suffered much on their return from cold and hunger, with no provisions part of the way but a little horse flesh, of the worst kind." What did these men go to California for? Because Brigham and his coadjutors advised them to go into the service of a nation in which they say they cannot live, to conquer the only place under heaven where they hoped to go to get out of it. And now Brigham coolly tells us that after abandoning their families in the open prairie, destitute of provisions, hundreds of miles from where they can get any, except by yielding themselves to prostitution, they have finally, after a year and a half, made their way back, saved alive on miserable horse flesh. A little below he also tells of some thirty more coming in PENNILESS and DESTITUTE, after devouring the flesh of worn out MULES, on a journey of two or three thousand miles. Brigham had their enlistment bounty—promised to take their families to where they would be discharged, and establish the church there—assured them conveyance to their final resting place, and wages on the way without expense—made their wives prostitutes to him and his, on peril of starvation while they were gone, and then supported them by the killing their own teams and selling their wagons; and now, as he tells it, they have returned PENNILESS and DESTITUTE, polluted with blood, to wives equally PENNILESS and DESTITUTE, and equally polluted with prostitution. The demon of vengeance could not wish them worse, and the compassion of a devil would weep for their fate.

Upon the very heel of this confession falls the assertion, "we love honesty and right, wherever we find them." The very personification of hypocrisy. Doubtless many will believe them, but they never will believe themselves.

The old story of submission to the laws is told in these words: "We say to the saints throughout the earth, be submissive to the laws that protect you in your person, rights and property." This all sounds very well, but when it is observed that immediately above they have also said to the saints that the laws of the U. S. do not protect them either in person, rights or property, every man will see that this is only a recommendation to violate the law. Certainly we cannot understand otherwise than that advising to keep the laws under certain circumstances implies that under other circumstances we are to disregard them.

And upon the heel of this, as if seeking to clothe themselves with shame as a garment, and with disgrace as a mantle, they inform us that they intend "to petition for a territorial government in the Great Basin." Petition whom? The U. S. of course; the nation to which they have contributed to add this territory. So that they could go there and live under a government too persecuting for the saints to live under. One man could not have written this epistle. Such a combination of folly, falsehood and hypocrisy could not have grown in a single brain.

Upon reading what we have just remarked on, we said in our heart, surely this is the end of folly. But a little further along we find a command to the scattered saints to bring with them to the Great Basin "choice shrubbery, trees and every thing that will please the eyes that grows out of the earth." Only think of a people sending out emissaries to beg food through the principal cities of the Union on the allegation that they were in a state of actual starvation; and then directing their own friends in distant parts of the earth to bring up to the Missouri river, ORNAMENTAL TREES and SHRUBBERY, to be transported by land more than 1000 miles, while their brethren are left behind within the nation that killed the prophets, for want of a ride in the wagons that carry the choice trees. When they were projecting the emigration west (at the Oct. Conference, 1845,) Brigham promised to take all the poor along, if he had to take them on wheelbarrows. Now he talks unblushingly to them to work for means to get themselves there, and also bring along trees pleasant to the eye.

"The brethren must recollect that, from this point, they pass through a savage country, and their safety depends on good fire arms and plenty of ammunition; and then they may have their teams run off in open daylight, as we have had, unless they shall watch closely and continually." Ah! who inhabit this savage country? Who will run off your teams? The Lamanites you are going out to deliver. How God has turned their hearts to you! How grateful they are!

The paragraph concerning training up children sounds pretty in the mouths of a community who have brought up their children to whittle and whistle men out of town; habitually swear, men and women together, old and young, as no Algerine ever did, and twit men of being sectarians, who are found guilty of daily prayer in their families. And considering that during the last winter they were in Nauvoo, with a population of 12,000 to 15,000, there was not one school in the place, the long talk about books, maps, &c., may gull a few books out of somebody, but not among their acquaintance.

(To be continued.)

For the Gospel Herald.

WHO IS THE STANDARD EXPOUNDER OF THE LAW UNTO THE CHURCH?

We answer, the President over the whole church. He is like unto Moses. D. & C. sec. iii. p. 42. Moses was a lawgiver unto the children of Israel, and all matters of controversy respecting the law (which could not be settled by the common judges and elders) were brought before him for decision. This is also according to the order of the church.

D. & C. Sec. v. p. 10. "In case of difficulty respecting doctrine, or principle, (if there is not a sufficiency written to make the case clear to the minds of the council,) the president may inquire and obtain the mind of the Lord by revelation."

The church was commanded to give heed unto all Joseph's words as from the Lord's own mouth.

D. & C. Sec. xlvi. p. 2. "Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me: for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you; and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory.

This principle was generally understood by the church during the administration of the prophet Joseph. It was considered heresy to teach contrary to his instructions. But after his martyrdom Brigham Young, Sidney Rigdon and various other usurpers assumed to themselves this prerogative, contrary to the law of God, which resulted in an apostacy unparalleled in the history of the church.—That this right or authority belongs exclusively to the successor of Joseph in the prophetic office, is evident from the following:—

D. & C. Sec. xiv. p. 2. "But verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead: and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the TEACHINGS of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments: and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to TEACH those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed."

It clearly appears from the letter of appointment that the prophet James was thus appointed. That he was ordained to "TEACH" the revelations is also evident from the charge he received from the angel when he was blessed with the greatness of the everlasting priesthood.

Voree Herald, Vol. I. No. 8. Extract from the Church Records. "Thy words shall be like sharp arrows in the hearts of the wicked. Thou shalt rebuke those who pervert the word of thy God. Thou shalt preach righteousness and the SUBLIME MYSTERIES in the ears of many people, and shall bring the gospel to many who have not known it, and to the nations afar off.

"Thou shalt drive backward and put to shame those that do evil, and the workers of iniquity shall fall. They shall be cast down and shall not be able to rise. With purity will the Lord thy God arm thee, and purity and truth shalt thou teach.

* * "With thee is the fountain of truth. In thy light shall the people of thy God see, for thou shalt speak his word unto them, and from thy lips shall they receive it.

"The blessing of their God shalt thou put upon them, and his curse upon evil doers, if, after being oft rebuked, they repent not, and before my people shalt thou go to lead them into my ways, for unto thee has the Lord thy God given salvation."

It is worthy of notice that this qualification has been overlooked by all false pretenders to successorship. No one can successfully counterfeit the work of God. "No one knoweth the things of God except by the spirit of God."

But, says one, there is no necessity for an expounder of the law, because it is so plain that any one can understand it. Then why is it that so few understand it alike? Why was God so particular in commanding the church not to receive the "TEACHINGS" of any except the one who came in at the "gate," and was ordained according to the law, if there is no necessity for a standard expounder of the law? The fact is, without such a standard there is nothing but anarchy and confusion. The present sectarian world is a striking example of this. And that the saints might come to the unity of the faith, learn doctrine, and be perfected, God has placed in the church such officers, and assigned unto them such duties as seemeth unto him good.

We think that we have made it plain to every candid reader that the President over the whole church is the standard expounder of the law, and that we are as much bound to receive his exposition of it as we are bound to receive the word of the Lord through him. We would therefore say unto all who have any faith in the dispensation of the fulness of times, and have a desire for a place in the celestial kingdom, to be subject to the power that is ordained of God, saints to live under. One man could not have written this epistle. Such a combination of folly, falsehood and hypocrisy could not have grown in a single brain.

Upon reading what we have just remarked on, we said in our heart, surely this is the end of folly. But a little further along we find a command to the scattered saints to bring with them to the Great Basin "choice shrubbery, trees and every thing that will please the eyes that grows out of the earth." Only think of a people sending out emissaries to beg food through the principal cities of the Union on the allegation that they were in a state of actual starvation; and then directing their own friends in distant parts of the earth to bring up to the Missouri river, ORNAMENTAL TREES and SHRUBBERY, to be transported by land more than 1000 miles, while their brethren are left behind within the nation that killed the prophets, for want of a ride in the wagons that carry the choice trees. When they were projecting the emigration west (at the Oct. Conference, 1845,) Brigham promised to take all the poor along, if he had to take them on wheelbarrows. Now he talks unblushingly to them to work for means to get themselves there, and also bring along trees pleasant to the eye.

"The brethren must recollect that, from this point, they pass through a savage country, and their safety depends on good fire arms and plenty of ammunition; and then they may have their teams run off in open daylight, as we have had, unless they shall watch closely and continually." Ah! who inhabit this savage country? Who will run off your teams? The Lamanites you are going out to deliver. How God has turned their hearts to you! How grateful they are!

The paragraph concerning training up children sounds pretty in the mouths of a community who have brought up their children to whittle and whistle men out of town; habitually swear, men and women together, old and young, as no Algerine ever did, and twit men of being sectarians, who are found guilty of daily prayer in their families. And considering that during the last winter they were in Nauvoo, with a population of 12,000 to 15,000, there was not one school in the place, the long talk about books, maps, &c., may gull a few books out of somebody, but not among their acquaintance.

(To be continued.)

For the Gospel Herald.

WHO IS THE STANDARD EXPOUNDER OF THE LAW UNTO THE CHURCH?

We answer, the President over the whole church. He is like unto Moses. D. & C. sec. iii. p. 42. Moses was a lawgiver unto the children of Israel, and all matters of controversy respecting the law (which could not be settled by the common judges and elders) were brought before him for decision. This is also according to the order of the church.

D. & C. Sec. v. p. 10. "In case of difficulty respecting doctrine, or principle, (if there is not a sufficiency written to make the case clear to the minds of the council,) the president may inquire and obtain the mind of the Lord by revelation."

The church was commanded to give heed unto all Joseph's words as from the Lord's own mouth.

D. & C. Sec. xlvi. p. 2. "Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me: for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you; and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory."

This principle was generally understood by the church during the administration of the prophet Joseph. It was considered heresy to teach contrary to his instructions. But after his martyrdom Brigham Young, Sidney Rigdon and various other usurpers assumed to themselves this prerogative, contrary to the law of God, which resulted in an apostacy unparalleled in the history of the church.—That this right or authority belongs exclusively to the successor of Joseph in the prophetic office, is evident from the following:—

D. & C. Sec. xiv. p. 2. "But verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead: and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the TEACHINGS of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments: and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to TEACH those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed."

It clearly appears from the letter of appointment that the prophet James was thus appointed. That he was ordained to "TEACH" the revelations is also evident from the charge he received from the angel when he was blessed with the greatness of the everlasting priesthood.

Voree Herald, Vol. I. No. 8. Extract from the Church Records. "Thy words shall be like sharp arrows in the hearts of the wicked. Thou shalt rebuke those who pervert the word of thy God. Thou shalt preach righteousness and the SUBLIME MYSTERIES in the ears of many people, and shall bring the gospel to many who have not known it, and to the nations afar off.

"Thou shalt drive backward and put to shame those that do evil, and the workers of iniquity shall fall. They shall be cast down and shall not be able to rise. With purity will the Lord thy God arm thee, and purity and truth shalt thou teach.

* * * "With thee is the fountain of truth. In thy light shall the people of thy God see, for thou shalt speak his word unto them, and from thy lips shall they receive it.

"The blessing of their God shalt thou put upon them, and his curse upon evil doers, if, after being oft rebuked, they repent not, and before my people shalt thou go to lead them into my ways, for unto thee has the Lord thy God given salvation."

It is worthy of notice that this qualification has been overlooked by all false pretenders to successorship. No one can successfully counterfeit the work of God. "No one knoweth the things of God except by the spirit of God."

But, says one, there is no necessity for an expounder of the law, because it is so plain that any one can understand it. Then why is it that so few understand it alike? Why was God so particular in commanding the church not to receive the "TEACHINGS" of any except the one who came in at the "gate," and was ordained according to the law, if there is no necessity for a standard expounder of the law? The fact is, without such a standard there is nothing but anarchy and confusion. The present sectarian world is a striking example of this. And that the saints might come to the unity of the faith, learn doctrine, and be perfected, God has placed in the church such officers, and assigned unto them such duties as seemeth unto him good.

We think that we have made it plain to every candid reader that the President over the whole church is the standard expounder of the law, and that we are as much bound to receive his exposition of it as we are bound to receive the word of the Lord through him. We would therefore say unto all who have any faith in the dispensation of the fulness of times, and have a desire for a place in the celestial kingdom, to be subject to the power that is ordained of God.

For the violation of this principle Lucifer, the son of the morning, and the third part of the hosts of heaven, were cast down from the presence of God. It has been the true cause of all apostacies from the time our mother Eve partook of the forbidden fruit till the present time. And we venture to predict that every individual who sets himself up to teach principles or doctrine contrary to the instructions of the prophet, and persists therein, will eventually apostatize.—Like causes produce like effects in all ages. G. W.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The Duke of Wellington has recently urged a better state of the national defenses on the British government, and an increase in the military and naval force. This has brought out from the great Industrial Agitator—Mr. Cobden, a manufacturing Eclogue on the new Golden Age in store for us—when the flock shall not fear the lion or the wolf, when snakes and adders shall vanish from the face of the earth, and when deadly poisons shall be no more. To be sure, the color and aspect of the happy time are a good deal changed since Virgil sung. It is not now a lubber-land of idle enjoyment that it is anticipated. The prose prophet of Lancashire dreams not of blushing clusters ripening without culture; nor of spontaneous honey exuding from the oak; nor of such a universal fertility of the soil as will displace commerce; nor of vine trees that require no pruning; nor of fields that can dispense with the tiller's sweat; nor of the office of plough-horse turned into a sinecure; nor of the fleece that needs not the dyer's hand. It is not now the gods that are to bring round the blessed time. No heavenly influence, nor overruling destiny, nor divine decree, nor supernatural grace is imagined or invoked. Not from heaven, but from earth the august consummation is to proceed. Universal peace is to be the result of universal labor; and the prophets of the French Revolution are to see their dreams realized in a comprehensive brotherhood of all men, flowing from a comprehensive selfishness in the breasts of each. Supply and demand, the dependance of nation upon nation, the wider extension of the commercial spirit, and the love of that money which is the root of all evil—these are at last to realize the inspired visions of the Hebrew prophet, the Sybil's predictions, and the Pagan dreams of the Latin bard.

It is not now as Virgil fondly imagined, that every country, clime, nation, district and person are to be self-sufficing; to have all produced for them by the bounty of nature; and to need the help neither of ships nor of commerce. It is not now—"every land shall produce every thing;" but—there is for every land something which it shall not produce; for which it shall be dependant upon others; for which it shall need their help; which it shall lose if it interrupts the operations of daily commerce by the foolish pastime of making war. It is not a universal sufficiency but a universal deficiency from which peace is to proceed; and in spite of signs to the contrary in the East, the West, the North, and the South—this peace is so near at hand that Foreign Secretaries may talk of a general disarmament, and prime ministers of a reduction of naval and military estimates.

It is true, a comparison on the map, of Russia in Europe in 1848 with Russia in Europe in 1748, and the history of the last twenty years do not hold out any powerful hopes that this colossal empire has yet become converted to the doctrines of universal peace. England has never made so many thoroughly unprovoked conquests in the East as within the last ten years; and for aught that we can see, a new career of victory and empire is spread out for her colonies in distant continents and seas. France has been wading in blood since her change of dynasty; and perhaps for a hundred years before the Revolution of 1789 the popular sentiment was never so much disposed to war and conquest and military glory and to the infliction of chastisement for past humiliations. In our own country, too, the pattern Republic, the home of democracy, the nurse of commerce, where God is worshipped in the form of dollars, and that time is supposed to be wasted which is not spent in acquiring a profit—the United States, in the past two years, has for the first time during its brief existence, deliberately undertaken a war of conquest, and emphatically marked its passage from infancy to manhood by the awful ceremony of licking blood. All this, it is true, does not look much like universal peace; still, peace is loudly foretold, and a reduction of the army estimates clamored for, and the clergy are proclaiming an universal millenium.

Upon the other side of the question—the demand for a further outlay in military equipments—we have not much to say. What has been put forth in the name of "the Great Duke" seems unanswerable; the facts true, the reasoning sound, the authority transcendent. In the event of a war of invasion, Great Britain has neither in England, nor easily to be concentrated in there, in opposition to such an army as France could encamp at Boulogne in a fortnight, a military force capable of achieving any thing but laying down its arms.—True, the sea, and an overwhelming naval superiority, are in her favor. But suppose—only suppose—that barrier crossed; suppose a large army, well equipped, and provided in every respect, landed on her shores; suppose London occupied, Downing street transferred to M. Guizot, and the Horse Guards to Marshal Bugeaud; suppose Woolwich and Chatham, Portsmouth and Plymouth, handed over to her enemies; suppose the shipping in the London docks seized and confiscated; suppose the eleven millions of bullion in the cellars of Threadneedle street applied to fortify London against the English; suppose the muskets of Birmingham, and the swords of Sheffield, and the manufactories and forges of the same, transferred to French owners; suppose Liverpool and Manchester treated after a like fashion; suppose the railways and the telegraphs worked by French engineers; suppose—most favorable of all—that "England's infirmity" was really to become "Ireland's opportunity," and that a handful of French soldiers were allowed to become masters of the island, giving protection against England to an indifferent though not disloyal population. From all these calamities—except, perhaps, the loss of Ireland, which might be final—England, no doubt, could recover; just as France saw her chivalry cut to pieces at Agincourt, and an English prince crowned in Paris, but yet contrived in the course of about a century and a half to make an English monarch die of a broken heart through the re-conquest of the last French city held by English arms.

England, we doubt not, could recover; but if by any accident her naval barrier was once forced—these results would be quite possible, and the question is, whether, to save a trifling expense, it is worth her while to place temptations in the way of unscrupulous and angry enemies, and invite them to plunder by placing facilities within their reach. With such an enemy as France at her gates—for even a long peace has not made France her friend—it is surely prudent to have at least two strings to her bow; to make it, even to French comprehension, clear that if an invading army were to effect a landing, they would land only to ensure their ruin, and that, except as prisoners of war, not a man of them would ever return. In the present state of things, Mr. Cobden's talk about reducing the army estimates is wild beyond description.

The only peace that Europe and the rest of Christendom can look for till the great battle of Gog and Magog, before the city of Jerusalem, is the peace of conquest, and her only repose, that of power surfeited. Commerce and the arts, and a steady pursuit of gain, will confirm and increase rather than root out the evil propensities of man's nature. In China, it is true, a large commerce is carried on, and many of the arts are practiced to great perfection. And yet, with a population much larger than that of Europe, there has been general peace for nearly 800 years, interrupted only by a few wars of limited extent and brief duration. But China is eminently patriarchal in her forms of government, and in the social systems which prevail. And by that means she has one of the elements of peace, all-pervading in its influence, which most of the nations of the earth are destitute of. Such another example as her's cannot elsewhere be found. Among all other people conquest is the only peace-maker. The extension of the Roman empire produced a very general peace throughout the world for a time, but no such peace can be enduring. Like soap bubbles, the expansion weakens its strength, though it increases its capacity. Many great empires have grown up keeping peace throughout large territories, where before them were only petty states, constantly at war with each other; but the very institution of the universal police, by which they keep order, produces abuses growing up to unbearable tyranny and ending in general rebellion. The U. S., by the conquest of the Spanish republics, may prevent the wars continually springing up between them, but such an empire has not the elements of perpetuity. All its institutions are founded on selfishness. The very system of the government renders it the interest of every part of the nation to increase its wealth, power and importance at the expense of the rest. And when any part gets a permanent preponderance, all others will unite in rebellion. There can be no peace but the brief truce of conquest till the destruction of the wicked, and the restitution of the ancient patriarchal order. None but for a brief space, which is not founded in truth, natural affection and the knowledge of God,

For the violation of this principle Lucifer, the son of the morning, and the third part of the hosts of heaven, were cast down from the presence of God. It has been the true cause of all apostacies from the time our mother Eve partook of the forbidden fruit till the present time. And we venture to predict that every individual who sets himself up to teach principles or doctrine contrary to the instructions of the prophet, and persists therein, will eventually apostatize.—Like causes produce like effects in all ages. G. W.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The Duke of Wellington has recently urged a better state of the national defenses on the British government, and an increase in the military and naval force. This has brought out from the great Industrial Agitator—Mr. Cobden, a manufacturing Eclogue on the new Golden Age in store for us—when the flock shall not fear the lion or the wolf, when snakes and adders shall vanish from the face of the earth, and when deadly poisons shall be no more. To be sure, the color and aspect of the happy time are a good deal changed since Virgil sung. It is not now a lubber-land of idle enjoyment that it is anticipated. The prose prophet of Lancashire dreams not of blushing clusters ripening without culture; nor of spontaneous honey exuding from the oak; nor of such a universal fertility of the soil as will displace commerce; nor of vine trees that require no pruning; nor of fields that can dispense with the tiller's sweat; nor of the office of plough-horse turned into a sinecure; nor of the fleece that needs not the dyer's hand. It is not now the gods that are to bring round the blessed time. No heavenly influence, nor overruling destiny, nor divine decree, nor supernatural grace is imagined or invoked. Not from heaven, but from earth the august consummation is to proceed. Universal peace is to be the result of universal labor; and the prophets of the French Revolution are to see their dreams realized in a comprehensive brotherhood of all men, flowing from a comprehensive selfishness in the breasts of each. Supply and demand, the dependance of nation upon nation, the wider extension of the commercial spirit, and the love of that money which is the root of all evil—these are at last to realize the inspired visions of the Hebrew prophet, the Sybil's predictions, and the Pagan dreams of the Latin bard.

It is not now as Virgil fondly imagined, that every country, clime, nation, district and person are to be self-sufficing; to have all produced for them by the bounty of nature; and to need the help neither of ships nor of commerce. It is not now—"every land shall produce every thing;" but—there is for every land something which it shall not produce; for which it shall be dependant upon others; for which it shall need their help; which it shall lose if it interrupts the operations of daily commerce by the foolish pastime of making war. It is not a universal *su*fficiency but a universal *de*ficiency from which peace is to proceed; and in spite of signs to the contrary in the East, the West, the North, and the South—this peace is so near at hand that Foreign Secretaries may talk of a general disarmament, and prime ministers of a reduction of naval and military estimates.

It is true, a comparison on the map, of Russia in Europe in 1848 with Russia in Europe in 1748, and the history of the last twenty years do not hold out any powerful hopes that this colossal empire has yet become converted to the doctrines of universal peace. England has never made so many thoroughly unprovoked conquests in the East as within the last ten years; and for aught that we can see, a new career of victory and empire is spread out for her colonies in distant continents and seas. France has been wading in blood since her change of dynasty; and perhaps for a hundred years before the Revolution of 1789 the popular sentiment was never so much disposed to war and conquest and military glory and to the infliction of chastisement for past humiliations. In our own country, too, the pattern Republic, the home of democracy, the nurse of commerce, where God is worshipped in the form of dollars, and that time is supposed to be wasted which is not spent in acquiring a profit—the United States, in the past two years, has for the first time during its brief existence, deliberately undertaken a war of conquest, and emphatically marked its passage from infancy to manhood by the awful ceremony of licking blood. All this, it is true, does not look much like universal peace; still, peace is loudly foretold, and a reduction of the army estimates clamored for, and the clergy are proclaiming an universal millenium.

Upon the other side of the question—the demand for a further outlay in military equipments—we have not much to say. What has been put forth in the name of "the Great Duke" seems unanswerable; the facts true, the reasoning sound, the authority transcendent. In the event of a war of invasion, Great Britain has neither in England, nor easily to be concentrated in there, in opposition to such an army as France could encamp at Boulogne in a fortnight, a military force capable of achieving any thing but laying down its arms.—True, the sea, and an overwhelming naval superiority, are in her favor. But suppose—only suppose—that barrier crossed; suppose a large army, well equipped, and provided in every respect, landed on her shores; suppose London occupied, Downing street transferred to M. Guizot, and the Horse Guards to Marshal Bugeaud; suppose Woolwich and Chatham, Portsmouth and Plymouth, handed over to her enemies; suppose the shipping in the London docks seized and confiscated; suppose the eleven millions of bullion in the cellars of Threadneedle street applied to fortify London against the English; suppose the muskets of Birmingham, and the swords of Sheffield, and the manufactories and forges of the same, transferred to French owners; suppose Liverpool and Manchester treated after a like fashion; suppose the railways and the telegraphs worked by French engineers; suppose—most favorable of all—that "England's infirmity" was really to become "Ireland's opportunity," and that a handful of French soldiers were allowed to become masters of the island, giving protection against England to an indifferent though not disloyal population. From all these calamities—except, perhaps, the loss of Ireland, which might be final—England, no doubt, could recover; just as France saw her chivalry cut to pieces at Agincourt, and an English prince crowned in Paris, but yet contrived in the course of about a century and a half to make an English monarch die of a broken heart through the re-conquest of the last French city held by English arms.

England, we doubt not, could recover; but if by any accident her naval barrier was once forced—these results would be quite possible, and the question is, whether, to save a trifling expense, it is worth her while to place temptations in the way of unscrupulous and angry enemies, and invite them to plunder by placing facilities within their reach. With such an enemy as France at her gates—for even a long peace has not made France her friend—it is surely prudent to have at least two strings to her bow; to make it, even to French comprehension, clear that if an invading army were to effect a landing, they would land only to ensure their ruin, and that, except as prisoners of war, not a man of them would ever return. In the present state of things, Mr. Cobden's talk about reducing the army estimates is wild beyond description.

The only peace that Europe and the rest of Christendom can look for till the great battle of Gog and Magog, before the city of Jerusalem, is the peace of conquest, and her only repose, that of power surfeited. Commerce and the arts, and a steady pursuit of gain, will confirm and increase rather than root out the evil propensities of man's nature. In China, it is true, a large commerce is carried on, and many of the arts are practiced to great perfection. And yet, with a population much larger than that of Europe, there has been general peace for nearly 800 years, interrupted only by a few wars of limited extent and brief duration. But China is eminently patriarchal in her forms of government, and in the social systems which prevail. And by that means she has one of the elements of peace, all-pervading in its influence, which most of the nations of the earth are destitute of. Such another example as her's cannot elsewhere be found. Among all other people conquest is the only peace-maker. The extension of the Roman empire produced a very general peace throughout the world for a time, but no such peace can be enduring. Like soap bubbles, the expansion weakens its strength, though it increases its capacity. Many great empires have grown up keeping peace throughout large territories, where before them were only petty states, constantly at war with each other; but the very institution of the universal police, by which they keep order, produces abuses growing up to unbearable tyranny and ending in general rebellion. The U. S., by the conquest of the Spanish republics, may prevent the wars continually springing up between them, but such an empire has not the elements of perpetuity. All its institutions are founded on selfishness. The very system of the government renders it the interest of every part of the nation to increase its wealth, power and importance at the expense of the rest. And when any part gets a permanent preponderance, all others will unite in rebellion. There can be no peace but the brief truce of conquest till the destruction of the wicked, and the restitution of the ancient patriarchal order. None but for a brief space, which is not founded in truth, natural affection and the knowledge of God.

Kings Mills, February 22d, 1848.

DEAR ——— :—I am at our old friend Mr. Lake's, whom I shall, or expect to, baptize next Sabbath, with some others. The common stock system takes well in this section. I can make two converts with it where I could one without it; and I have a double portion of the spirit to hold it forth. Here are several brethren that want to swap farms or places for places in or near Voree. I never saw the call for preaching more prevalent than it now is. I have baptized 15 already in this place, and all go in for the common stock whole hearted. There is not one exception in these parts; all are for the fullness of the spirit of God. There has been 13 miraculous healings of the sick done here; some of them of long standing. A good feeling reigns in every breast. It seems long to wait till spring before I can see my children and friends, but I will be content. I think that about 22 families will go up to Voree from these parts.

You and I and Blakeslee, and some more, ought never to stay long at home. For the revelation says: Now let every man learn his duty and labor in his own calling; [for our calling is in the world;] and all flesh is in my hands, saith the Lord. Now I believe if you will cease taking medicine, and put yourself wholly into the hands of God, and leave off the use of tobacco or die, I believe the Lord will raise you up so as to go and preach and magnify the calling whereunto you are called. I know God has heard my prayers in giving me health this winter, for I wax fat and hearty. Yes, I thank God that I have been brought to the sense of my duty, although I have had to learn my duty by what I have suffered.—And the Lord has said, let those who have received the priesthood go out and be continual witnesses for him before the world; and he that regards my voice let him obey. So we shall live by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God. And as we are called to a certain calling I will cite you to a revelation, D. & C. sec. civ., and more particularly to the 11 par. 3 or 4 first lines. And if we attempt to steady the ark we shall fall; and God can do and will do his own work by whom he will. And the path that lies among many mountains yet remains for you and me and others to tread; and if we are not active we shall be removed and others planted in our stead. But my prayer is, O Lord, be merciful to our weakness, and harness us for the battle and qualify us for the task. And I for one never will hold my peace until the Lord says come home; my son come home: and thou hast been faithful over a few things, I now make thee ruler over many.

To a Brother in Voree. EBENEZER PAGE.

Black River District, Nov. 25th, 1847.

BROTHER STRANG:—The darkest hour is just before day. I have traveled through deep waters, and amongst false brethren, until I was sickened and disheartened, and ready to say, Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars, and I am left alone, and they seek my life. How true it is that man's extremity is God's opportunity. With my mind weighed down, and deeply depressed, I sought the God of the saints and he hath heard me.—I have baptized and ordained brother Warren Howe, and we have baptized 8 more within three weeks. The great work of the Lord is onward. The saints are enjoying the gifts of God. Our Conference is over, and truth triumphed. Much praise is due to my brethren in the ministry for their untiring exertions to carry on the Conference. Brother Patten and Childs labored like men of God. The saints rejoiced, sectarians growled, and the Devil trembled.—The saints possess much anxiety about Beaver. Your letter has been of great worth to me in preaching the gathering. I expect to come up in the spring with a large number of saints. I and my wife are at brother John Linnell's; a worthy family they are, ever mindful of you. Yours in the everlasting covenant,

GEORGE BRONSON.

Kings Mills, March 1st, 1848.

PHINEAS WRIGHT:—

DEAR BROTHER,—I am in the field and find the harvest so great I feel to call on you and the rest of the Presidents of the Seventies to make a general call for all the members of your several quorums to report themselves to you or us, soon as possible; for help we must have. And now let the weak say I am strong, for the harvest is very great, and the laborers are very few. Please make the call by the Gospel Herald, and let him that is asleep awake. Yes, I say come. Let us work while the day lasts. Yes, I say come boys. Come, come my brethren. Come into the field, in the name of the Lord come. EBENEZER PAGE,

One of the Twelve.

TO ALL THE MEMBERS OF THE SEVERAL QUORUMS OF SEVENTIES:—

Brethren, we call on you to report yourselves for preaching as soon as circumstances will allow. Calls are coming in upon all hands. We wish every member of the Seventies to report themselves, and as many to go out to preach as possibly can.

By the Presidents. WILLIAM SAVAGE,

GILBERT WATSON, Clerk. PHINEAS WRIGHT.

Voree, March 3d, 1848.

☞ The following are the minutes of the Black River Conference, which were mislaid some time since and just discovered. We also publish brother Brownson's excellent letter of the same date.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE HELD AT CLAYTON,

JEFFERSON CO., ON THE 5TH, 6TH AND 7TH OF NOV., 1847.

Organized by appointing George Brownson President, and John Linnell Clerk. Adjourned until evening. Elder Childs preached on the first principles of the gospel, to a large congregation. Adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow. Met and enjoyed the spirit of union. Nearly every member rose and expressed their joy and determination to go to Beaver Island in the spring. Also expressing their great confidence in the prophet James. Preaching at two P. M. by elder Brownson, on the second coming of Christ. Evening, preaching by elder Childs, followed by brother Patten. Sabbath morning, Preaching by elder Patten, followed by elder Childs.—Preaching at evening by elder Childs, on the gathering of Israel, followed by elder Brownson. The people paid strict attention. Bro. and sister Powers are entitled to praise for singing. Prayer by some one of the elders at the commencement and close of each service. A vote of thanks to elder Childs, for his able discourses during the Conference. Peace and union prevailed, and another meeting was desired. Adjourned sine die.

JOHN LINNELL, Clerk. GEORGE BROWNSON, Pres.

CONFERENCE

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

Kings Mills, February 22d, 1848.

DEAR ———— :—I am at our old friend Mr. Lake's, whom I shall, or expect to, baptize next Sabbath, with some others. The common stock system takes well in this section. I can make two converts with it where I could one without it; and I have a double portion of the spirit to hold it forth. Here are several brethren that want to swap farms or places for places in or near Voree. I never saw the call for preaching more prevalent than it now is. I have baptized 15 already in this place, and all go in for the common stock whole hearted. There is not one exception in these parts; all are for the fullness of the spirit of God. There has been 13 miraculous healings of the sick done here; some of them of long standing. A good feeling reigns in every breast. It seems long to wait till spring before I can see my children and friends, but I will be content. I think that about 22 families will go up to Voree from these parts.

You and I and Blakeslee, and some more, ought never to stay long at home. For the revelation says: Now let every man learn his duty and labor in his own calling; [for our calling is in the world;] and all flesh is in my hands, saith the Lord. Now I believe if you will cease taking medicine, and put yourself wholly into the hands of God, and leave off the use of tobacco or die, I believe the Lord will raise you up so as to go and preach and magnify the calling whereunto you are called. I know God has heard my prayers in giving me health this winter, for I wax fat and hearty. Yes, I thank God that I have been brought to the sense of my duty, although I have had to learn my duty by what I have suffered.—And the Lord has said, let those who have received the priesthood go out and be continual witnesses for him before the world; and he that regards my voice let him obey. So we shall live by every word that proceeds from the mouth of God. And as we are called to a certain calling I will cite you to a revelation, D. & C. sec. civ., and more particularly to the 11 par. 3 or 4 first lines. And if we attempt to steady the ark we shall fall; and God can do and will do his own work by whom he will. And the path that lies among many mountains yet remains for you and me and others to tread; and if we are not active we shall be removed and others planted in our stead. But my prayer is, O Lord, be merciful to our weakness, and harness us for the battle and qualify us for the task. And I for one never will hold my peace until the Lord says come home; my son come home: and thou hast been faithful over a few things, I now make thee ruler over many.

To a Brother in Voree. EBENEZER PAGE.

Black River District, Nov. 25th, 1847.

BROTHER STRANG:—The darkest hour is just before day. I have traveled through deep waters, and amongst false brethren, until I was sickened and disheartened, and ready to say, Lord, they have killed thy prophets, and digged down thine altars, and I am left alone, and they seek my life. How true it is that man's extremity is God's opportunity. With my mind weighed down, and deeply depressed, I sought the God of the saints and he hath heard me.—I have baptized and ordained brother Warren Howe, and we have baptized 8 more within three weeks. The great work of the Lord is onward. The saints are enjoying the gifts of God. Our Conference is over, and truth triumphed. Much praise is due to my brethren in the ministry for their untiring exertions to carry on the Conference. Brother Patten and Childs labored like men of God. The saints rejoiced, sectarians growled, and the Devil trembled.—The saints possess much anxiety about Beaver. Your letter has been of great worth to me in preaching the gathering. I expect to come up in the spring with a large number of saints. I and my wife are at brother John Linnell's; a worthy family they are, ever mindful of you. Yours in the everlasting covenant,

GEORGE BRONSON.

Kings Mills, March 1st, 1848.

PHINEAS WRIGHT:—

DEAR BROTHER,—I am in the field and find the harvest so great I feel to call on you and the rest of the Presidents of the Seventies to make a general call for all the members of your several quorums to report themselves to you or us, soon as possible; for help we must have. And now let the weak say I am strong, for the harvest is very great, and the laborers are very few. Please make the call by the Gospel Herald, and let him that is asleep awake. Yes, I say come. Let us work while the day lasts. Yes, I say come boys. Come, come my brethren. Come into the field, in the name of the Lord come. EBENEZER PAGE,

One of the Twelve.

TO ALL THE MEMBERS OF THE SEVERAL QUORUMS OF SEVENTIES:—

Brethren, we call on you to report yourselves for preaching as soon as circumstances will allow. Calls are coming in upon all hands. We wish every member of the Seventies to report themselves, and as many to go out to preach as possibly can.

By the Presidents. WILLIAM SAVAGE,

GILBERT WATSON, Clerk. PHINEAS WRIGHT.

Voree, March 3d, 1848.

☞ The following are the minutes of the Black River Conference, which were mislaid some time since and just discovered. We also publish brother Brownson's excellent letter of the same date.

MINUTES OF A CONFERENCE HELD AT CLAYTON,

JEFFERSON CO., ON THE 5TH, 6TH AND 7TH OF NOV., 1847.

Organized by appointing George Brownson President, and John Linnell Clerk. Adjourned until evening. Elder Childs preached on the first principles of the gospel, to a large congregation. Adjourned till 10 o'clock to-morrow. Met and enjoyed the spirit of union. Nearly every member rose and expressed their joy and determination to go to Beaver Island in the spring. Also expressing their great confidence in the prophet James. Preaching at two P. M. by elder Brownson, on the second coming of Christ. Evening, preaching by elder Childs, followed by brother Patten. Sabbath morning, Preaching by elder Patten, followed by elder Childs.—Preaching at evening by elder Childs, on the gathering of Israel, followed by elder Brownson. The people paid strict attention. Bro. and sister Powers are entitled to praise for singing. Prayer by some one of the elders at the commencement and close of each service. A vote of thanks to elder Childs, for his able discourses during the Conference. Peace and union prevailed, and another meeting was desired. Adjourned sine die.

JOHN LINNELL, Clerk. GEORGE BROWNSON, Pres.

CONFERENCE

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 16, 1848. [No 52.

GOSPEL HERALD,
PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REMARKS ON THE BRIGHAMITE EPISTLE.

(Continued from last week.)

"Thus saith the Lord; cursed be the man that TRUSETH in MAN, and MAKETH FLESH his ARM, and whose HEART DEPARTETH FROM the LORD: for he shall be LIKE the HEATH in the DESERT, and shall NOT SEE WHEN GOOD COMETH; but shall INHABIT the PARCHED PLACES in the WILDERNESS, in a SALT LAND and NOT INHABITED." Jer. xvii. 5, 6.

So far we have examined this epistle as the history of the Brighamite camp, and the description of their new location. Surely after reading the foregoing prophecy, none can doubt that they, or at least many of them, will go to the valley and inhabit the PARCHED PLACES which require irrigation in order to produce crops, and that too in a SALT LAND not before inhabited. That they have trusted in man and made flesh their arm is a proposition so clear that not endeavoring to conceal it they talk about going out of their own land to get out of the reach of persecution, and going to look up a place to establish the kingdom of God, as though God did not condescend to reveal his will to his servants on so unimportant a subject as the delivery of his people from destruction, and the establishment of his everlasting kingdom. No where in an account of some three years of persecution, extreme suffering and murder, do they once tell of appealing to God for deliverance, or of asking him for direction.

That they are like the heath in the desert dried up and perishing, their whole history testifies; for they scarcely speak of any thing but misfortune and calamity, of destitution and want. And they have certainly done enough to satisfy any reasonable man that they will inhabit the PARCHED PLACES of the WILDERNESS in a SALT LAND. But there is a modern prophecy on them, which, in order to its fulfillment, requires them to stop when they get to the valley of the Salt Lake, as this ancient prophecy requires them to go there.—While their preparations were going on most actively, and not four weeks previous to the starting of the first camp, a prophecy went forth that they would never pass the mountains. And now, after some 22 months, they have not only located their settlements without crossing the mountains, but have even authorized the few who have got to California to return; a privilege of which they were rapidly availing themselves without waiting for orders. In all these things they have gone according to the commandments of men—not looking for the word of God. They trusted in the arm of flesh, and did not see when good came unto them. They rejected it and perished.

"We now, having it in contemplation soon to ORGANIZE the CHURCH ACCORDING to the ORIGINAL PATTERN, with a FIRST PRESIDENCY and Patriarch, feel that it will be the privilege of the Twelve ere long to spread abroad among the nations." Here then is a distinct acknowledgment that so far as they are concerned the church has been without a First Presidency and destitute of the true organization ever since the death of Joseph and Hyrum. Here is a confession that, in all their pretensions to the true order, they have been mere impostors. And what is still worse for their cause, here is also an acknowledgment that all the acts which they have been pretending to do by unanimous votes of Conferences, for the purpose of establishing their present order, are invalid, and that they must yet return to the "ORIGINAL PATTERN." On the 8th day of August, 1844, this same people, under the advice of the same leaders, voted unanimously to not have a prophet to lead them.

A meeting was called previous to the return of the quorum of the Twelve to Nauvoo, after the death of Joseph and Hyrum, but they arrived in season to attend it and guide its action. We extract from Times and Seasons, Sept. 2d, 1844, page 637.

"SPECIAL MEETING.

"On the 8th of August, 1844, at a special meeting of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, convened at the stand in the city of Nauvoo, President Brigham Young called the audience to order, and arranged the several quorums according to their standing, and the rules of the church. The meeting had been previously called, as stated, to choose a guardian, or trustee for said church.

"Elder Phelps opened the meeting by prayer, and President Young then proceeded to speak, and give his views of the present situation of the church, now that the prophet and patriarch were taken from our midst by the wickedness of our enemies. For the first time since he became a member of the church; a servant of God, a messenger to the nations in the nineteenth century; FOR THE FIRST TIME in the KINGDOM of GOD the TWELVE APOSTLES of the Lamb, CHOSEN BY REVELATION, in this last dispensation of the gospel for the winding up scene, PRESENT THEMSELVES BEFORE the SAINTS, TO STAND IN THEIR LOT ACCORDING TO APPOINTMENT. While the prophet lived, we all walked by 'SIGHT;' he is taken from us and we must now walk by 'FAITH.' After he had explained matters so satisfactorily that every saint could see that ELIJAH'S MANTLE had truly FALLEN upon the 'TWELVE,' he asked the saints what they wanted. Do you want a guardian, a PROPHET, a spokesman, or what do you want? If you want any of these officers, signify it by raising the right HAND. NOT A HAND WAS RAISED.

"He then gave the saints his views of what the Lord wanted.—Here are the 'Twelve,' appointed by the finger of God, who hold the keys of the priesthood, and the authority to set in order and regulate the CHURCH IN ALL THE WORLD. Here is elder Amasa Lyman and elder Sidney Rigdon; they were counsellors in the first presidency, and they are counsellors to the Twelve still, if they keep their places; but if either wishes to act as 'spokesman' for the prophet Joseph, he must go behind the vail where Joseph is.

"Elder Amasa Lyman followed, and fully seconded with the instructions and views of elder Young. I have been at the back of the prophet Joseph, and I shall be at the back of the 'Twelve.'—There is no need of choosing a guardian or head, the apostles have the power, as they had anciently, and this is the power that turns the key, and will bear off the kingdom of God in all the world triumphantly.

"Elder P. P. Pratt said what had been said, was well said.

"When the whole subject was properly explained and understood, and counsellor Rigdon refused to have his name voted for as a spokesman or guardian, the question was put, 'all in favor of supporting the Twelve in their calling, (every quorum, man and woman,) signify it by the uplifted hand;' and the vote was unanimous, no hand being raised in the negative. The next vote was that the Twelve should select and appoint two bishops to act as trustees for the church, according to law."

Here is the doctrine avowed by Brigham Young, that the Twelve FOR THE FIRST TIME in the dispensation STAND IN THEIR LOT, because the PROPHET'S MANTLE had fallen on them. He is sustained in it by Lyman and Pratt, and finally by an unanimous vote of the meeting, which was probably one of the largest ever assembled in Nauvoo. Here is also a declaration that Rigdon and Lyman, by being "COUNSELLORS IN THE FIRST PRESIDENCY before the death of the prophet," were "COUNSELLORS TO THE TWELVE" afterward, which is indirectly sustained by the acts of the same meeting.

One week after Brigham Young put forth an epistle in behalf of the Twelve, in which he says:

"You are now without a prophet present with you in the flesh to guide you; but you are not without apostles, who hold the keys of power to seal on earth that which shall be sealed in heaven, and to preside over all the affairs of the church in all the world; being still under the direction of the same God, and being dictated by the same spirit, having the same manifestations of the Holy Ghost to dictate all the affairs of the church in all the world, to build up the kingdom upon the foundation that the prophet Joseph has laid, who still holds the keys of this last dispensation, and will hold them to all eternity, as a king and priest unto the most high God, ministering in heaven, on earth, or among the spirits of the departed dead, as seemeth good to him who sent him.

"LET NO MAN PRESUME FOR A MOMENT THAT HIS PLACE will be filled by another; for, remember he stands in his own place, and always will; and the Twelve Apostles of this dispensation stand in their own place and always will, both in time and in eternity, to minister, preside and regulate the affairs of the WHOLE CHURCH."

Here again the doctrine is avowed that "the Twelve" have the supreme power in the church, and authority to dictate all its affairs. And most explicitly do they charge all the saints not to presume that there shall be another prophet in the place of Joseph. No man can but see that the intention of the proceedings of the meeting of Aug. 8th, and the epistle of Aug. 15th, 1844, are that there shall no more be a First Presidency, but that since the death of Joseph and Hyrum "the Twelve," as a quorum, and not a part of them, by some new appointment, stand at the head of the church, having all the powers of the First President and Prophet. This appears not only from their explicit claims of power, and their denunciation of the very thought of having another in place of Joseph, but particularly from their pretension that Rigdon and Lyman, from having been counsellors to them, are de facto counsellors to the Twelve.

Pursuing this same pretension, on the 8th of Sept., 1844, a meeting was held at Nauvoo, under the direction of these usurping apostles, for the trial of Sidney Rigdon for pretending that, as a Counsellor in the First Presidency, he had power above the Twelve. Accusation, prettifogging and testimony are so mixed up in this trial that it is scarcely possible to separate them, but Rigdon's offence was summed up in Brigham's introductory speech in these words;

"I then asked brother Rigdon: 'do you not think, really, that you hold keys and authority above any man, or set of men in this church, even the Twelve?'

"Says he, 'I never taught any such doctrine, did I, brother Soby?'

"Says I, 'brother Rigdon, tell me the truth, do you not think so?'

"He replied, 'yes I do.'

"Says I, 'that tells the whole story.'"

And they actually excommunicated Sidney for no other crime than pretending that, as a Counsellor in the First Presidency, he was above the Twelve in priesthood.—Times and Seasons, Oct. 15th, 1844, page 686.

(To be continued.)

Centreville, Crawford Co., Pa., Feb. 20th, 1848.

BROTHER J. J. STRANG:—Permit me to intrude a little on your time to tell you that I have been very much gratified with the perusal of the "Herald," No. 45, which I have been reading to-day.—Your pastoral letter is as a dew from the Lord, refreshing the thirsty plants. Long have I looked upon Zion, and taken pleasure in the stones of her building. I have felt to rejoice in her prosperity, and to mourn for her afflictions: to cry, O Lord, how long shall Zion be trodden under the feet of the wicked? let the indignation against her cease: are not those who afflict thy saints more wicked than thy people? and when shall their oppressions cease? Let the beast, or wicked men, cease to make war against thy saints and overcome them; but let thy saints take the kingdom and possess it forever. We rejoice that the spirit of God whispers peace, be still, in patience possess your souls; though the vision tarry wait for it, at the end it shall speak; so "fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." The kingdom is sure to all the righteous, and "the wise shall understand."

How thankful we have need to be that we are built on principles, not men. The principles of eternal truth, as revealed to the saints, are those that commend themselves to the heart of every person who loves God, and his brother as himself. God cannot lie, and his promises cannot fail. They have not failed thus far in the church, and will not. All the apparent failures have been on the side of guilty man. Trace the church from its rise to the present time, examine all its principles, in them the King stands revealed in his beauty. They are unrivaled. Though given to us by the disposition of angels, the voice of God, and the instrumentality of prophets, how madly have we walked, and how well have we been paid for all our revolts, heedlessness and backslidings.

The history of the past speaks, and truly wickedness of men has revealed in our ears with a voice louder than thunder their wicked acts. We have done wickedly, and that has overtaken us spoken by the mouth of the prophet: "Behold vengeance cometh speedily upon the inhabitants of the earth; a day of wrath; a day of burning; a day of desolation; of weeping; of mourning, and of lamentation; and as a whirlwind it shall come upon all the face of the earth, saith the Lord. And upon my house shall it begin; and from my house shall it go forth, saith the Lord. First among those among you saith the Lord, who have professed to know my name and have not known me, and have blasphemed against me in the midst of my house, saith the Lord."

The calamities that are to fall upon the nations will as surely come as it is true that the saints were driven from their possessions in Jackson, Clay, Caldwell, Davis and Nauvoo in Hancock. Let us be more wise than we have been, keeping all the commandments of God, and observing his counsels through those whom he appoints to rule in his house; and will we be scattered and driven again like sheep which have no shepherd? Something whispers no. As grave a question as can be propounded in the church arises upon your pastoral letter. It touches the heart and soul (property) of almost every individual. Can I consecrate my property according to the doctrine set forth in that letter? A thousand idle chimeras, frightful ghosts, &c., fill the brain. In this speculating generation, touch a man's substance and you touch the idol of his existence.—He tries to do right, and lay up for a rainy day. He must keep something in his hands to provide for sickness and imaginary want. He could not bear that a cent should be expended upon an unworthy object. In a community there may be lazy men, men who wish to live and grow fat on the earnings of others, who will be drones, feign themselves sick, be extravagant, squander the church property, run away with it, &c., &c. Has not the Lord provided for all of these exigencies? Most certainly every thing is all right. The scheme for the temporal salvation of the saints has been planned by a wise architect. Its like does not exist.

You say come on and live with us, and share with us, &c. When you say so, I suppose you mean just what you say, and for every man to search the law of God and learn his duty. "And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time." D. & C. sec. xviii. p. 12. "And now verily I say, concerning the residue of the elders of my church, the time has not yet come for many years, for them to receive their inheritance in this land; except they desire it through the prayer of faith, only as it shall be appointed unto them of the Lord. For behold they (the horns of Joseph) shall push the people together from the ends of the earth." D. & C. sec. xviii. p. 9. May the people be soon pushed together according to the pattern in the Doctrine and Covenants, "that the wheat may be secured in the garners to possess eternal life, and be crowned with celestial glory;" while hireling priests bind the tares in bundles in the fields, and make their bands strong, so that no man can loose them, preparatory to their being burned with unquenchable fire. I feel that it is still good to work; for "now is our salvation nearer (temporal and spiritual) than when we first believed." There is no such thing as a "dispensation of the fullness of times" without a gathering to it. Who will continue to preach the gospel and to live by it? We shall see. Sixty out of some 250,000 who have at different times joined the church, are now striving to live by its laws in Voree. This is good. What a tremendous blow the stone cut out without hands smites upon the feet of the image. Let the stone soon grow into a great mountain, and fill the whole earth. I suppose our pattern for moving to Zion or any of her stakes to be found in D. & C. sec. xcviii. p. 9, 10. sec. xc. p. 5. sec. ii. p. 26, &c. Has not God set watchmen upon the walls of Zion, who will not hold their peace day nor night, nor give him any rest until he make her a praise in the earth. S. POST.

NOTE.—Yes, and the watchman has said come. [ED.

Potosi, Grant Co., W. T., March 3d, 1848.

BELOVED BROTHER:—Your letter, dated Feb. 14th, arrived here on the 27th. It was received with joy and gladness by all the saints here. The sentiments in it do not try the faith of any; but we are glad that the day has come for the church to commence where they left off—to be one in earthly blessings, that they may be one in Heavenly. Has not the Lord said, if a father having two sons, and clothes one in rags and the other in robes, how can we call him a just father; showing us the principle or regard that we are to have for each other. Your association is something like loving your neighbor as yourself. But I must drop this subject, and will only add, that I long to be in Voree and be heart and hand with you, Brother Benjamin, you know that I am not ashamed of work, and not very particular. You requested me to state to you our circumstances, and also requested us to be in Voree by the first of April. This is not in our power to do, for our circumstances are such that we could not go so soon.

Most all of us are owing some in consequence of sickness. I was sick last fall a long time and only recovered of that spell, when I was taken with a very severe attack of the winter fever, and am not rightly recovered yet. Brother Blair has had considerable sickness. Brother Powel has had a long siege of sore eyes, sometimes almost blind. When docters failed, faith saved. He wishes you to excuse him for not writing; his eyes hindered him, but are now mending very fast. Well, here are long doctor's bills, but we have adopted a new and cheaper rule, and find it far the best. A little cost for oil and a little time in prayer is far the best way. Our neighbors say that I am a curious man, I can get well so quick. They know not the reason and I will not tell them lest it would be casting pearls before ———. Your teams is more than we could expect. Brother Griffith has a team, he says it is ready to move the first family that gets out of debt. There is a door open here for preaching. I have been doing what I could, but you know that an elder has not much honor where he lives or at home. If some talented elder would come here I think good might be done. They are afraid of me, or at any rate they do not attack me much. Some who are men of truth, or have a love for truth, and do not look for popularity, appear to have a spirit of inquiry. With great care they may be lead along. I am requested to inquire of you if stone masons or brick layers are wanted, and if it is a good business in your city or neighborhood; also if a good botanic doctor would be needed in your country.

I will now conclude my lines by saying that the saints all send their love to you, as also to our beloved prophet. Brother Wright, you know that I love you. God bless you.

I remain yours in the bonds of love,

H. H. DEAM.

To B. G. WRIGHT.

Alexander, Genesee Co., N. Y., Feb. 28th, 1848.

PRESIDENT J. J. STRANG:—

BELOVED BROTHER,—I sit down this morning with pen in hand to say to you that I feel somewhat encouraged at what appears among the people in some parts of this district. By brother J. Tyler's request I sent an appointment to Elery, Chatauque Co., where I met with him on the 22d and 23d of Jan. last, where he had preached once, it being the first Mormonism they had ever heard there. I preached Saturday evening, brother Tyler Sunday forenoon, and I in the afternoon and evening, to attentive hearers. In the evening I gave a historical sketch of the rise of the church, and down to the present time, of her persecutions, &c. Some said they should like to hear such preaching often. The people were hospitable and treated us kindly. Brother Tyler left an appointment to preach there in four weeks, and before I parted with him in Fredonia we made an appointment of a Conference on the first Saturday and Sunday of June next. If it will be convenient for you and brother Page to call there on your way to Otsego Conference, please notice in the Gospel Herald; or if on your return, make the appointment to convene yourselves; if you cannot attend please to send an appointment to Alexander, Genesee Co.

I am expecting soon to commence preaching here, as I have had a number of invitations to preach. I preached here two or three times before I moved here. If after a few months acquaintance the people desire more preaching, I feel it right to grant them their request; for they may be hungering and thirsting after righteousness. If that is the case they must have a knowledge of the principles whereby they can attain unto it, or their righteousness may not exceed the righteousness of the sectarian world. I am resolved, the God of Elijah, Joseph and James being my helper, to unfold unto them the principles that God has revealed through these prophets, whereby they may attain unto eternal life, enter into his rest and gaze upon his glory. I am credibly informed that the Brighamite band at Batavia have passed the resolution, and have it on record, to renounce the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants.—Will not the Lord answer the prophets according to their idols? May God bless you all.

Your sincere friend,
R. T. NICHOLS.

NOTE.—Did you make your appointment for a Conference at Fredonia? or where? Brother Page will probably attend; possibly Pres. Strang. In order to do so it may be necessary to change the day, but if so we will give early notice through the Herald. Money received.

Jackson, Jackson Co., Mich., Feb., 1848.

DEAR BROTHER J. J. STRANG:—I rejoice at the prospect for doing good in this country. Brighamism and Rigdonism have had their day, and I find that many are believing, and some are obeying.—Brother E. M. Wait and myself are expecting to visit the capitol next week and preach there. We have traveled some together, and we expect to come to the April Conference. We hope that yourself and brother Page, when you journey east, will come through this State, and visit Albion and Jackson. At either place we think a visit from you or either of you would be acceptable. And at Michigan central college we are sure your teaching would be not in vain. Michigan central rail road route passes through the above places. If you have time and feel disposed to write, direct to Spring Arbor, Jackson Co., Mich.

Your brother in Christ,
S. GRAHAM.

CONFERENCE MINUTES.

A Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, held in the village of Jackson, Jackson Co., Michigan.

Organized Feb. 19th, 1848, at 2 o'clock, P. M. Official members present, 1 High Priest, 2 Seventies, 2 Elders, 1 Priest. After singing, and prayer by Samuel Graham, it was voted unanimously that this Conference sustain President J. J. Strang and his Councellors by our confidence and prayers. 2d. Voted unanimous that we sustain all of the officers in this church in their respective callings by our faith and prayers.

Jackson branch represented by brother John C. Hill, presiding Elder, 16 members, including one Seventy, 2 Elders, 1 Priest. Springport branch represented by Samuel Graham, eight members, including 1 High Priest, 1 Seventy, 2 Elders, all in good standing. Benj. C. Willey was ordained to the office of a Priest, and Chelsey D. Drown chosen Clerk of the Jackson branch. Adjourned until evening. Saturday evening, met for a prayer meeting. The brethren and sisters occupied the evening in prayers and exhortations, as the spirit gave utterance. The sick were anointed with oil, and hands were laid on them, and they were healed as in days of old; and we could truly say it was good for us to be in such a heavenly place in Christ. Conference adjourned by benediction, to meet at the school house at 10 o'clock to-morrow, A. M.

Sabbath morning, Conference met pursuant to appointment.—Singing. Prayer by E. M. Wait. Preaching by S. Graham, text Acts iii. 19 to 21, followed by John S. Comstock. Adjourned to meet at 1 o'clock, P. M. Sabbath afternoon, singing. Prayer by S. Graham. Preaching by S. G., Rev. vii. 3, followed by E. M. Wait and others. Sacrament administered. Preaching in the evening by E. M. Wait, followed by B. C. Willey and others. Conference adjourned to meet at the call of P. H. P.

SAMUEL GRAHAM, President.
JOHN S. COMSTOCK, Clerk.

☞ We have two communications on hand on the lineage of Christ. We could not make room for them till this No., and as this No. finishes the volume, and one of these communications is quite too long for a single paper, we have laid them by to begin the next volume with. They will appear next week.

☞ He that cannot govern himself cannot govern others.

☞ He that loves truth loves it for the sake of it, not merely because others do.

THE CHURCH OF GOD.—TUNE, "LONG AGO."

Where is the church which Christ used to have?
Long, long ago; long, long ago.
Where is the power by which it was saved?
Long, long ago; long, long ago.
Oh! its departed from truth and from right,
And it is fled to the regions of night;
Saints were oppressed, and sects they did fight:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.

Look at the church as it once used to stand:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.
Built on a rock, and not on the sand:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.
God in his church apostles did set;
Next in the order the prophets are met;
Teachers and tongues, and helps, governments:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.

God to the saints his spirit did give:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.
And when they received it, in Christ they did live:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.
Then were the sick healed, and devils cast out;
The lame leap, the blind see, the weak to grow stout;
Receiv'd revelations, t' remove fears and doubts:
Long, long ago; long, long ago.

Voree, Feb. 10th, 1848. H. P. BROWN.

DIED,

In Voree, on the 14th inst., EMMA ALMIRA, daughter of Edward and Almira Whitcomb, aged 1 year, 11 months and 24 days.

Lovely child, thy days are ended,
All thy suffering days below;
Now by angel guards attended,
To the land of spirits go;

Till the resurrection morning,
When the Lord will thee restore
To thy friends who now are mourning,
For thy absence very sore. G. W.

CONFERENCE

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President.
JAMES J. STRANG.
Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. III. No. 1.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 23, 1848. [WHOLE No. 65.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REMARKS ON THE BRIGHAMITE EPISTLE.

(Continued from last week.)

At the October Conference, 1844, the following proceedings were taken:—

"OCTOBER CONFERENCE MINUTES.

"Monday Oct. 7th, 10 o'clock A. M., 1844.

"The first business that we shall attend to, will be to present the several quorums before the conference, for the purpose of taking an expression of the brethren and sisters, whether they will sustain the officers according to their several appointments.

"Elder W. W. Phelps moved that we uphold Brigham Young the president of the quorum of the Twelve, as one of the Twelve and first presidency of the church.

"This motion was duly seconded, and put to the church by Elder John Smith and carried unanimously.

"Moved by President John Smith and seconded, that we receive Elder Heber C. Kimball as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder Orson Hyde as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church.—Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder Parley P. Pratt as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder Wm. Smith as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church.—Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder Orson Pratt as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church.—Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder John E. Page as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder Willard Richards as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder Wilford Woodruff as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder John Taylor as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church.—Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, that we receive Elder George A. Smith as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained as such by the church. Carried unanimously.

"Moved by Elder H. C. Kimball that Elder Amasa Lyman stand in his lot. The motion was seconded.

"President Young said, by way of explanation, that Elder Amasa Lyman is one of the Twelve, just in the same relationship as he sustained to the first presidency. He is one in our midst, and a counselor with us.

"The motion was then presented and carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded, and after some discussion carried unanimously, that Elder Lyman Wight be sustained in his office, to fill the place of Elder D. W. Patten, (martyred,) but not to take his crown, for that, as the Lord has said, no man can take."—Times and Seasons, Nov. 1st, 1844.

This is the beginning of a series of acts by annual and semi-annual Conferences at Nauvoo, for the purpose of establishing the quorum of the Twelve as a quorum, as the First Presidency and supreme leaders of the church. The vote on Brigham Young recognizes him as "one of the Twelve and First Presidency." But at the April Conference following they took a long step further.

"Special Conference of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at Nauvoo, April 6th, 1845; it being the first day of the sixteenth year.

"Present—President Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Orson Hyde, Orson Pratt, George A. Smith, John Taylor, John E. Page, Willard Richards, and Amasa Lyman of the quorum of the Twelve—Father John Smith, president of the stake—Bishops Whitney and Miller—the high council—and about twenty-two thousand persons.

"Elder Phelps moved that this conference accept the Twelve as the first presidency and leaders of the church. Carried unanimously.

"Elder George A. Smith moved, that we acknowledge President Brigham Young as the president of the quorum of the Twelve apostles to this church and generation. Carried unanimously.

"Elder George A. Smith moved that Heber C. Kimball be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office Carried uuanimously.

"Moved and seconded that Orson Hyde be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that Parley P. Pratt be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that William Smith be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that Orson Pratt be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that John E. Page be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that Willard Richards be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that John Taylor be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that Wilford Woodruff be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that George A. Smith be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"Moved and seconded that Amasa Lyman be continued as one of the Twelve, and that he be sustained in his office. Carried unanimously.

"The chairman then observed, concerning the course of Lyman Wight, his feelings are, that we should let him remain for the present, probably hereafter there may be a time that he will hearken to counsel, and do much good which he is capable of—for he is a noble minded man."—Times and Seasons, April 15th, 1845.

It will be perceived that in these proceedings the Twelve are distinctly accepted as "THE FIRST PRESIDENCY and LEADERS of the CHURCH." In this Conference Amasa Lyman was merely sustained as one of the Twelve. Whereas at the Oct. Conference, 1844, they voted that he held the same relation to the Twelve as he formerly did to the First Presidency. Another marvelous inconsistency appears in the proceedings of these Conferences, to wit: that thirteen different persons are by name sustained as members of the Twelve at the same time. But by the Oct. Conference, 1845, they contrived to get rid of William Smith, and got Lyman Wight on the shelf.

"Minutes of the first General Conference, which was ever held by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in the House of the Lord in the city of Joseph, commencing on Monday October 6th 1845, ten o'clock forenoon

"Present—Elder Brigham Young President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles; also Elders Heber C. Kimball, Parley P. Pratt, Willard Richards, John Taylor, George A. Smith, and Amasa Lyman: Patriarchs John Smith and Isaac Morley: Presiding Bishops Newel K. Whitney and George Miller: also the authorities of the church generally.

"President Brigham Young then arose and said: the first business that will come before this conference, will be, to present the authorities of the church, to ascertain whether they are in good standing.

"Father John Smith, the President of the stake, then arose and presented the TWELVE as the PRESIDENTS of the WHOLE CHURCH; which was seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was then moved, that Brigham Young be continued and sustained as the President of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that Heber C. Kimball be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved that Orson Hyde be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that P. P. Pratt be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that Orson Pratt be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that William Smith be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded. Wherepon Elder Pratt arose and said, I have an objection to Brother William continuing in that office. I feel, as an individual, that I cannot, conscientiously, uphold and sustain Brother William as one of the Twelve Apostles, until he thinks different from what he does now. I have many reasons for this, but I will merely mention one or two, which must suffice for the present. In the first place, I have proof positive that he is an aspiring man; that he aspires to uproot and undermine the legal Presidency of the church, that he may occupy the place himself. This he has avowed openly in the east, which I can prove by good and substantial witnesses. In the second place, while Brother William was in the east, to my certain knowledge, his doctrine and conduct have not had a savory influence; but have produced death and destruction wherever he went. This also I am well prepared to prove. I have been waiting in all long suffering, for an alteration in Brother William's course, but up to the present time I have been disappointed. For these two reasons, I would plead for one, that we no longer sustain him in his office, till a proper investigation can be had, and he make satisfaction. I do this individually; I leave others to do as they please. The motion being seconded, a vote was then taken to sustain him but was lost unanimously.

"It was next moved, that John E. Page be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that Willard Richards be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that Wilford Woodruff be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that John Taylor be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that George A. Smith be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; seconded and carried unanimously.

"It was next moved, that Lyman Wight be continued and sustained as one of the Twelve Apostles; whereupon Elder A. W. Babbit said; as Elder Pratt remarked, concerning William Smith, that he could not conscientiously vote to sustain him, so I say in regard to Lyman Wight, I cannot conscientiously give my vote in his favor. My reason is this: if there is a council in this church that ought to be united, and act in unison as one man, it is the council of the Twelve. If the head is sick, the whole body is afflicted."—Times and Seasons, Nov. 1st, 1845.

Again in this Conference the same thing is sedulously pursued, and a unanimous vote is obtained to acknowledge the Twelve as Presidents of the whole church.

(To be continued.)

FIRST FRUITS.

At the close of the pseudo excitement here last summer, when discouragement hung over the church as a pall, and apostacy shrouded us around thick as the blackness of darkness, the hearts of the saints were aroused by the coming forward for baptism of a young man from the Gentiles of exalted moral and intellectual worth, who had stood by and heard all their accusations and seen all their excitement. From that time forward we have received constant accessions, principally young people, and generally from Gentile families; until finally, last Monday, fifteen went down together to White River and were baptized; and we have the best assurance that a greater number will soon follow. A very brief time will suffice to bring in from the Gentiles more than we have lost by apostacy. And with the sanctity which now prevails in the church they will be kept free from the corruptions which have produced the past apostacies. Take courage, for the time to do good to Zion has come. Her children are keeping the commands of God, and the world has taken witness that they are his.

For the Gospel Herald.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

PRESIDENT STRANG:—

SIR,—Having observed in the 48th No. of your Gospel Herald some editorial remarks in relation to certain letters of inquiry on the doctrines of the sonship and lineage of Jesus Christ, wherein you endeavor to maintain that Jesus Christ was the legitimate son of Joseph, I was struck with unusual surprise. I consider this a doctrine that saps the foundation of christianity; a legitimate offspring, or important branch of infidelity. It is a doctrine entirely new to me, as far as regards the faith and teachings of the people called Mormons. I was, however, not more astonished at the doctrine than I was to find that you had stated in your remarks that there is but one solitary text in the entire scriptures that go to prove the opposite side of the question, or the true sonship of Jesus Christ. My mind therefore became somewhat excited on the subject. And having recollected that in some of your former numbers you had very generously opened your columns for the discussion of any subject connected with the christian religion, and as I consider that candid, corteous, honorable and impartial investigation is the best safeguard and dispenser of truth, and the protector of the rights of social society, I concluded in my mind I would as readily accept the privilege offered in your paper, "as it was nobly given."

The light of heaven loses nothing in contact with the bright rays of the noonday sun, as in the case of the vision of Saul of Tarsus; but the darkness of the night disappears at the first approach of its morning beams. So truth loses nothing before the light of fair and candid investigation, or an intimate acquaintance with its pure and holy principles. Not so with error; the more you look at it the more its dark and discordant features appear. The man who is so bigoted or superstitious that he is unwilling to hear his neighbor's opinions, his whys and wherefores on either religious or political subjects, will most assuredly be found in error, and an unsocial, unhappy, isolated being in the midst of the blessings of civil and religious society.

We learn from Josephus that Abraham was a man much beloved of God, of great wisdom and discernment, but generous and liberal in his sentiments and intercourse with mankind. At a certain time when he was minded to go down into Egypt, one of his chief motives was that he might not only teach his own religion, but that he might hear the discourses of the priests of Egypt, and if he found their religion to be best, notwithstanding he had been taught by God himself, he designed to embrace it; that is if he found they had attained to a more perfect knowledge of God and godliness he was willing to profit by an acquaintance with it; but the bigoted Jew, although he had been converted to christianity and commanded of his Lord to teach all nations, yet he was so prejudiced in favor of his own peculiar people that he would not go into the house of one of another nation until the Lord had convinced him of his error by a vision of a great sheet let down from heaven.

But we are digressing from the subject, and will now return.—But first it would be wisdom to examine your strong position, for it would be very bad generalship to rush headlong upon a strongly fortified entrenchment without first knowing the strength thereof, and the best means of attack. You may perhaps have some of Jackson's cotton bags with sharp shooters behind them, but as our trust is not in the "arm of flesh," but in the sword of the spirit which is the word of God, and being well supported by that, we shall not be easily moved from our purpose. And as our object is not victory, but a defence of truth, and although by the superior skill of our opponent he may be able to cast a false glare over the merits of the case, yet with the honest in heart "TRUTH WILL FINALLY PREVAIL."

One of your strong proofs to which you have referred is the 12th chapter of Zechariah; but we find nothing here about Jesus or Joseph, and very little about David, and it would take a lawyer to make it bear in any shape upon the question. All that it says about David reads thus: And the Lord will pour out a spirit of grace and supplication upon the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and they shall look upon him whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him as one mourneth for an only son: and there shall be a very great mourning in the land, like the mourning of Hadad-rimmon in the valley of Megiddon; every family shall mourn apart; the family of David apart, and the family of Levi apart, &c. Now to a man of my discernment this text proves nothing more nor less than that, after the Jews have built up Jerusalem, Christ will appear unto them with power and great glory; and when they behold the print of the nails in his hands and in his feet, and the print of the spear in his side, they will be convinced that he whom their fathers crucified was their true Messiah. And when they reflect that they have still continued in unbelief, thereby justifying the wicked acts of their fathers, they will be exceeding sorrowful and mourn, &c.

Now this mourning was not confined to the house of David, but a general mourning of the whole Jewish nation. Not a mourning for a deceased relative, but a sorrow for sin and unbelief. And the next chapter to which you have referred us tells what will follow. In that day there will be a fountain opened for the house of David and for the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and uncleanness. That is, a fountain opened wherein to baptize for the remission of sins.—Now how these texts can have any possible reference to the point in question, I certainly am at a loss to determine. And as many of the other texts are no more to the point than these, and as all that any or all of them prove is that Christ was to come of the seed of David, and that God had sworn unto David that of the fruit of his loins he would raise up a man to sit on his throne. And as this by no means proves that Jesus is the legitimate son of Joseph, we find as yet no very great scarecrows in your strong entrenchment. But it appears by your remarks that you think he must be begotten by a male descendant of the house of David.

Perhaps we may bring you a case in the line of the kings of England that will illustrate this subject. We find that king George the fourth died leaving no children. His brother William therefore took the throne. He died leaving no heirs, and the throne fell therefore into the hands of Victoria, daughter of the Duke of Kent. She has a son who, at the time of his birth, caused great rejoicing throughout the British empire, because a son was born who was heir to the British crown, or to sit on the throne of his great grandfather.—Now the key of this story, in order to have it bear upon the point in debate, is by whom was he begotten? Not by a male of the line of kings, neither by any man of the British nation, but by a German prince; and yet he is heir to the British crown, and will sit on the throne of his father, king George the third. We will now venture to bring forward some proofs that Jesus was NOT the legitimate son of Joseph.

My object in thus appearing before the public is not to show my talents as a writer or a debater, for of these qualifications I claim but a small share, but to elucidate truth, or preserve it in its purity and simplicity, uncovered, untrammeled and unperverted by the wisdom and sophistry of man, or the attacks and sarcasms of infidelity. The first text we shall introduce may be found in the prophecy of Isaiah, 7th chapter 14th verse, which reads thus: Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign; behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. We next shall present three texts found in the Book of Mormon, second Kirtland edition, page 27: And it came to pass that I looked and beheld the great city of Jerusalem, and also other cities. And I beheld the city of Nazareth; and in the city of Nazareth I beheld a virgin, and she was exceeding fair and white.

And it came to pass that I saw the heavens open; and an angel came down and stood before me; and he said unto me, Nephi, what beholdest thou? And I said unto him, a virgin, most beautiful and fair above all other virgins. And he said unto me, Knowest thou the condescension of God? And I said unto him, I know that he loveth his children; nevertheless, I do not know the meaning of all things. And he said unto me, Behold the virgin whom thou seest is the mother of the Son of God, after the manner of the flesh. And it came to pass that I beheld that she was carried away in the spirit; and after she had been carried away in the spirit for the space of a time, the angel spake unto me, saying, Look! And I looked and beheld the virgin again, bearing a child in her arms. And the angel said unto me, Behold the Lamb of God, yea, even the Son of the Eternal Father.

Also page 23: And it came to pass that the angel spake unto me again, saying, Look! And I looked, and beheld the Lamb of God, that he was taken by the people, yea, the Son of the Everlasting God was judged of the world; and I saw and bear record.

Book of Mosiah, page 198, reads thus: And now Abinadi said unto them, I would that ye should understand that God himself shall come down among the children of men, and shall redeem his people; and because he dwelleth in flesh, he shall be called the Son of God: and having subjected the flesh to the will of the Father, being the Father and the Son: the Father, because he was conceived by the power of God; and the Son, because of the flesh; thus being the Father and the Son: and they are one God, yea, the very eternal Father of heaven and of earth; and thus the flesh becoming subject to the spirit, or the Son to the Father, being one God, suffereth temptation, and yieldeth not to the temptation, but suffereth himself to be mocked, and scourged, and cast out, and disowned by his people. Again, page 255: But behold the spirit hath said this much unto me, saying, Cry unto this people, saying, repent ye, and prepare the way of the Lord, and walk in his paths, which are straight: for behold the kingdom of heaven is at hand, and the Son of God cometh upon the face of the earth. And behold he shall be born of Mary, at Jerusalem, which is the land of our forefathers, she being a virgin, a precious and chosen vessel, who shall be overshadowed, and conceive by the power of the Holy Ghost, and bring forth a son, yea, even the Son of God, &c.

The literal fulfillment of these prophecies, together with others of like nature, we find recorded in the first chapter of Luke, commencing with the 26th verse: And in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth. To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary. And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favored, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou among women. And when she saw him, she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be. And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favor with God. And, behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest: and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man? And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. Also, in the first chapter of Matthew we find the following: Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. Then Joseph, her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily.—But while he thought on these things, behold the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is God with us.—Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife: And knew her not till she had brought forth her first born son; and he called his name Jesus.

Here we find six portions of scripture, instead of one, directly to the point in question, the force of which cannot be destroyed by the sophistry or wisdom of man. And although President Strang has condemned one of them as an interpolation, there is still enough left to prove that Jesus was not the natural son of Joseph, beyond the possibility of doubt. And although President Strang, if he pleases, may condemn the whole of the texts from the Bible, yet we have sufficient testimony in the Book of Mormon not only to prove the doctrine true, but to prove that those texts we have quoted from the Bible are true also; for as the Book of Mormon was written on the one continent and the Bible on the other, the writers could have had no possible intercourse or knowledge of what had been written by each other; therefore they must have been inspired by the Holy Ghost to write the things which we have quoted. And as those from the Book of Mormon were written long before the coming of Christ, it proves definitely that Jesus Christ was the proper son of God, and not the legal son of Joseph; and also that this doctrine is no newly hatched up idea of either Roman Catholics or Protestants, but the true doctrine taught by the prophets, by Jesus Christ and his apostles, both on this continent and also on the other.

We find in these texts, as foretold by the prophets, that a virgin should conceive and bear a son. We find also in Luke 1st chapt. 26th verse that the apostle not only called her a virgin, but that she declares herself that she knew not a man. The angel Gabriel also told her that the Holy Ghost should come upon her, and the power of the Highest should overshadow her; therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. And the text also says that the virgin Mary was espoused, (that is, promised in marriage,) for as yet (the text says) they had not come together. And the text from Matthew says, Joseph knew her not until she had brought forth her first born son. Therefore she was truly a virgin when the child was conceived, and also when it was born; hence it could not be the legitimate son of Joseph. But President Strang has condemned the text in Matthew, which he says is the only one in the entire scriptures which go to prove that Jesus was not the legitimate son of Joseph. Pray, Mr. Strang, what will you do with the other texts we have quoted? They prove the same facts very clearly; yet the story without it is not so perfect and complete.

Will you say that the texts in the Book of Mormon are interpolations or mistranslations? We find the same texts in every edition that has been published since it was translated by the gift and power of God, and that declares that a virgin of the city of Nazareth was the mother of the Son of God. The reader will discover in the first text we have quoted mention made of a sign. In the first clause of the text we find also that good old Simeon, when he took up the child Jesus in his arms and blessed him, declared he should be for the fall and rise again of many in Israel, and for a sign which shall be spoken against. Now it may be very important to the subject to examine the nature and object of these signs. There is no mention made in either of these texts, or any other scripture connected therewith, of a sign like unto that which Samuel the Lamanite foretold should take place on this continent—that at the birth of the Savior there should be two days and a night in the which there should be no darkness. Neither is there any mention made of any uncommon phenomena in the heavens, or convulsions in the earth beneath; but the sign is simply this.—Behold, a virgin shall conceive and bear a son. Now it would be no uncommon occurrence for a young married woman, or even an unmarried woman, to be found with child if she had known man, or lived together as man and wife; but when a virgin should be found in this situation, who had never known man, it certainly would be a very strange circumstance, and unheard of in the history of man.

Therefore, she, having a knowledge of the prophecies, it was a sure sign to her and all that believed her testimony that she was the virgin spoken of by Isaiah and Nephi who was to be the mother of the Son of God, and that her child was to be the true Messiah, and sit on the throne of his father David forever. But Simeon tells us that he shall be a sign that should be spoken against. We find this also was literally fulfilled not only in Jerusalem, but also wherever infidelity has spread its baneful influence.

JOHN GAYLORD,
Member of the Church of Christ.

(To be continued.)

☞ We are informed that D. F. Bottsford is assuming to act as Pres. of the church at Chicago. He has not held that authority for a long time. Some two or three months since he petitioned Pres. Strang for that office but he did not see fit to grant it. We can do nothing with Bottsford without making him a pet pig, and we have no such order in the church. He is one of that class who have doubts of Pres. Strang's authority to lead the church, but no doubt at all of their authority in virtue of appointments made by him.

☞ We have been permitted to peruse three letters from elder J. E. Page to his wife, by which we learn that God is prospering him as of old. His present field of labor is near Lake Koskonong, in the Rock River region. He has commenced baptizing, and has a fine prospect before him of a rich harvest.

DIED,

At Albion, Dane Co., W. T., on the 26th ult., JOHN S. BROWN, son of Isaac D. and Sally Ann Brown, aged two years and nine days, of the inflammation of the lungs.

CONFERENCE

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

JAMES J. STRANG.
By the President.
Voree, Feb. 24th, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. III. No. 2.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, MARCH 30, 1848. [WHOLE No. 66.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

REMARKS ON THE BRIGHAMITE EPISTLE.

(Continued from last week.)

Steadily for a period of nearly two years every Conference in Nauvoo or elsewhere were called upon to sustain "the Twelve as the First Presidency and leaders of the church," and in many places this practice was carried to the extent of calling frequently on all the members to know if they would sustain the Twelve, &c., and to cut off without form or ceremony all who refused so to sustain them. This practice of the branches was only carrying out the same thing that the head apostates had begun in cutting off Rigdon for denying that the Twelve were the head of the church, and claiming that, as a member of the First Presidency, he was above them. What action this band have been taking in the wilderness to build up the Twelve as the head and leaders of the church, we cannot say; but certain it is that they have overrun the church throughout all the land with emissaries sent out to preach that order; have been themselves actively engaged in sustaining it; have taken several thousand through the many of the ceremonies of the endowment, swearing them or most of them to SUSTAIN, SUPPORT, UPHOLD and OBEY "THE TWELVE as SUPREME in all things;" and have, by every declaration, by every act and by every form known to man, set up and insisted on their right as "THE TWELVE" ipso facto to stand at the HEAD of the CHURCH, and dictate all its affairs. In the strongest terms known to the language they enjoin that no man shall think of Joseph's place being filled by another—assume that now for the first time in the dispensation the Twelve apostles of the dispensation stand in their lot according to the appointment God gave them; and tell us that if any one wishes to stand in Joseph's stead he must go behind the vail (that is be murdered) as Joseph did. And after all this they go back to their starting point; virtually confess that they have been wrong all the way; false in all their pretensions; usurpers in all their administrations, and are soon intending to get right by reorganizing the church according to the original pattern. In the black catalogue of man's impositions on his fellow man we know of no other so wickedly begun, so impiously carried out, or so unblushingly confessed, while it is yet persisted in.

But how are they to reorganize the church according to the original pattern? We suppose they will proceed at some Conference or meeting to vote that they will have a prophet, or rescind the vote by which they voted at the meeting of the 8th of Aug., 1844, that they would have no prophet. Then they will doubtless vote some man into that office. By what power will this be done? If by the power of the people, then he who is so appointed will be fully authorized to command, prophecy, baptize, &c., in the name of the people. His priesthood will be precisely like that of most of the latter Protestant churches. He will merely hold his office by the will of those over whom he presides. Some have pretended to justify this measure by saying he would be made prophet by the power of the priesthood in the church. To such let us ask, is that priesthood in the Brighamite church? Have they a prophet who is First President of the church, standing as Moses in Israel? If so, they don't need to make one; if not, by whom can they ordain one? Only by the less; and the greater is not blessed of the less.

In the priesthood in this church it has always been understood that the less was ordained of the greater. Consequently the Prophet ordained Apostles and High Priests, Apostles and High Priests ordained Seventies and Elders, Seventies and Elders ordained Priests, &c. But it was never deemed that the greater could be ordained of the less; consequently there are no instances where Priests ordained Elders, Elders ordained High Priests, High Priests ordained Apostles, or Apostles ordained Prophets. These principles are plain as any other science, they have been in use so long that they ought to be familiar to the saints. To abandon them is to abandon the field of half our victories over the sects, and what is worse, it is to abandon a fundamental truth essential to the unity and prosperity, and no less to the AUTHORITY of the church.

These plain principles of the priesthood are sufficient to establish the fact that a prophet cannot be made by any act of the church.—But as some persons are not capable of applying these principles to a case when it arises, we propose to show by a few plain testimonies and illustrations how a prophet should be made. Just what authority and just what ceremonies it takes to confer on the first man a particular priesthood, the same authority and the same ceremonies it takes to confer on any other man the same priesthood. So whatever authority and ceremonies it took to confer on Joseph the priesthood of a prophet at the head of the dispensation, it will take to confer the same on any other. By what means did Joseph obtain this authority? The Lord spoke to him and gave him commandments, &c., by which he inspired him. D. & C. sec. ii. p. 1 and 2. And sent His angels to ordain him; D. & C. sec. i. p. 2 and 3; as it is said: "——Wherefore marvel not, for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth; ——also with John the son of Zacharias; ——which John (an angel) I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, jr., and Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto this first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordained even as Aaron; ——and also with Peter, and James, and John, (angels,) whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry; and of the same things which I revealed unto them: unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven and which are on earth."

So it appears that the authority by which Joseph obtained that priesthood was a revelation from God, and the form or ceremony of conferring it was an ordination by angels holding that priesthood.—The like will it take to make a successor; that is to confer that priesthood on any other. That is, it will require a revelation from God and an ordination by angels.

But if the Brighamites should appoint a prophet, and he should give commandments, we are EXPRESSLY FORBIDDEN by God to obey them.

D. & C. Sec. xiv. p. 1. "O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you: for behold, verily, verily I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you, to receive commandments and revelations from my hand.—And this ye shall know assuredly, that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me.

2. "But verily, verily I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him, for if it be taken from him he shall not have power, except to appoint another in his stead: and this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments: and this I give unto you, that you may not be deceived; that you may know they are not of me. For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received, and shall receive through him whom I have appointed."

This commandment was given in February, 1831. It will be perceived that three facts must concur before any man can presume to stand in Joseph's stead. 1st. Joseph must either be taken or apostatize. He has been taken. 2d. Another must come in at the gate. 3d. He that thus comes in at the gate must be ordained as God had told Joseph previous to that time. What is the gate? The lawful place of entering. What is the lawful place of entering? An appointment through Joseph. Id. p. 2. "Verily, verily I say unto you (the church) none else (than Joseph) shall be appointed unto this gift, except it be through him," (Joseph.) This appointment must not only be through Joseph, but it must be from God.

D. & C. sec. xi. p. 4. "I have sent forth the fullness of my gospel by the hand of my servant Joseph; and in weakness have I blessed him, and I have given unto him the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed, even things which were from the foundation of the world, and the things which shall come from this time until the time of my coming, if he abide in me, and if not, another will I plant in his stead."

So the gate by which the successor of Joseph must enter to this authority is an appointment by revelation of God through Joseph.—And he must be ordained as God told Joseph before. How had God told Joseph that one should be ordained to stand as Moses in the dispensation previous to the date of Sec. 14? Sec. 14 is dated Feb., 1831. Sec. 50 is dated Sept., 1830, 5 months earlier; and in that God tells Joseph that that ordination is by Peter, James and John, who, it will be recollected, held that authority while on the earth.

"Come then, ye saints; come, then, ye honorable men of the earth; come, then, ye wise, ye learned, ye rich, ye noble, according to the riches, and wisdom, and knowledge of the great Jehovah; from all nations and kindreds, and kingdoms and tongues, and people and dialects on the face of the whole earth, and join the standard of Emmanuel, and help us to build up the kingdom of God.

"The kingdom of God consists in correct principles; and IT MATTERETH NOT what a man's RELIGIOUS FAITH is; whether he be a PRESBYTERIAN, or a METHODIST, or a BAPTIST, or a LATTER DAY SAINT or "MORMON," or a CAMPBELLITE, or a CATAOLIC, or EPISCOPALIAN, or MOHAMMEDAN, or EVEN PAGAN, or ANY THING ELSE, if he will bow the knee, and with his TONGUE confess that JESUS is the CHRIST, and will support good and wholesome laws for the regulation of society, WE HAIL HIM as a BROTHER, and will stand by him while he stands by us in these things; for EVERY MAN'S RELIGIOUS FAITH is a MATTER BETWEEN HIS SOUL and HIS GOD.

"Come then, ye saints of Latter Day, and ye great and small, wise and foolish, rich and poor, noble and ignoble, exalted and persecuted, rulers and ruled of the earth, and help us to do this work."

Such is the last point we extract from the Brighamite epistle. If anything can go beyond it for stupidity or falsehood, it is hard to say what it is. As Mormonism we mean; for it is got up with skill enough for the accomplishment of some wicked design doubtless.—Very likely some of the foolish if none of the wise, many of the poor and some of the rich, will respond to this call, and find when they get too far to return that promises tasted fall to ashes on the lips.

But after the elders of this church have been out near seventeen years proclaiming that the apostolic church had altogether apostatized and departed from God; that the Catholic church was the whore of Babylon, and all the Protestants and other dissenters were her harloting daughters; and that God had finally renewed the priesthood, and established one true and living church, out of which there is no salvation; and that thereby the stone was cut out of the mountain which shall break in pieces all kingdoms and fill the whole earth, it is, to say the least, a little singular to see them turn around and call the old whore and several of her daughter harlots by name, and invoke their aid and assistance in building up the kingdom.—Only think of a Catholic and a Campbellite, a Presbyterian and a Mormon, a Methodist and a Mohammedan, a Baptist and a Pagan, all engaged together in building up the kingdom of God. Truly, their language would need no confounding.

2d Cor. vi. 14. "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers; for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?

15. And what concord hath Christ with Belial? or what part hath he that believeth with an infidel?

16. And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

17. Wherefore, come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you."

This is but the renewing of the pseudo cry for union, which half the sects make themselves hoarse in re-echoing; and in such a union the beholder might rejoice to see Pagans offer buzzards and swine, as well as occasionally a human being for holocausts unto beasts, devils and inanity; the Presbyterians sing old hundred, the Methodists shout halleluiah to the God who dwells beyond the bounds of time and space; the Catholic counting his beads and praying, "hail Mary; ever virgin; mother of God;" and the Mormon denouncing everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord to living and dead, who enter not into the kingdom by the birth of water. The kingdom of God built up by all the sects! What need of a new dispensation? If the apostate churches are good enough material for the kingdom of God, why give a new priesthood and organize a new church? "the only true and living church on earth?" What is this proclamation but a formal renunciation of Mormonism? First a return to the sectarian mode of obtaining priesthood, and then to a sectarian kingdom of God.

(To be continued.)

For the Gospel Herald.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

(Continued from last week.)

We wish the public to realize the great advantage our opponent has, not only on account of his being a practical lawyer and a public lecturer, but also on account of his influence arising from the position he holds in society; as we suppose, many of the readers of this paper believe him to be the real successor of Joseph Smith, or, in other words, Prophet, Seer, Revelator and head of the only true church on the face of the whole earth. And when we realize the reverence Mormons have for the opinions of a prophet, whether they are in conformity with the word of God or not, or as we have been taught in Voree as well as in Nauvoo, that we must stand up to the rack hay or no hay, we can hardly suppose that many of them will take pains to inquire whether we have proved our position or not, and whether our proofs are selected from the scriptures or from Tom Thumb's history. And if the doctrines we are attempting to defend were not of the most vital importance to christianity, the very corner stone of the great plan of salvation, we should not have ventured out against such tremendous odds.

We are well aware that the Son of God, because he claimed to be such according to the flesh, was a sign that was spoken against; and that this doctrine is the centre target at which all the arrows of infidelity have been hurled since the time it was first promulgated by the prophets, but more especially since the time the angel Gabriel informed Mary that she was the virgin prophecied of, who was to be the mother of the Son of God. The idea of miracles of any kind has always been obnoxious to the unbelieving world. But when they are told that a child was conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, they are ready to scoff and deride. Indeed Mary was somewhat astonished at what the angel had told her, but to disperse her doubts he assured her that nothing was impossible with God. These visions of Mary and Joseph, having been published abroad, was a subject of mockery among the unbelieving Jews.

He was supposed by some to be the legal son of Joseph, by others tauntingly called a bastard; and therefore, when he claimed to be the Son of God, the Messiah of the Jews, he was persecuted from city to city, and at length put to the shameful death of the cross.—It is very evident that there is no other sign mentioned in the text except the one we have alluded to, and if she was not a virgin when she brought forth her first born son, the scriptures we have quoted are false. And if she was, then Joseph was not the real father of Jesus, but God was his Father, and he his only begotten Son. It is also shown, by an examination of the genealogy contained in Matthew first and Luke third, that Joseph was not the actual father of Jesus Christ; Matthew begins his genealogy by saying: Abraham begat Isaac, Isaac begat Jacob, and so on down to David.—Matthew continues the genealogy by saying: David begat Solomon, and so on through the line of Solomon's descendants to Jacob. And Jacob begat Joseph, the husband of Mary, of whom was born Christ. Now why did he not say that Joseph begat Christ? The reason is obvious. He knew he was begotten of the Holy Ghost.

Luke begins his genealogy by saying: Now Jesus began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli, and so on through the line of the descendants of Nathan to David. Why did he not say HE was the son of Joseph, as he did in the genealogy which follows? Because he was a believer in the testimony of Joseph and Mary concerning his conception and birth. But those who were unbelievers in their testimony supposed him to be the real son of Joseph, and therefore considered him an impostor.

The infidel will perhaps be ready to say that there is an apparent discrepancy or contradiction in the two genealogies. But when they learn the true state of the case, the difference will be easily reconciled. It was a very common custom among the ancients, and especially among the Jews, for men who had no natural or legitimate heir to adopt some one of the male children of his relatives as his son or heir, and hereby this adopted son became his lawful heir, both as regards property and office. And we find in the case of Joseph that he was the actual son of Heli, but his relative Jacob, who was the father of Mary, adopted Joseph to be his son. Hence Matthew calls Joseph the son of Jacob, and Luke the son of Heli.

We will turn now to the testimony of the Father as contained in Luke 3d chapter, at the time he was baptized. We find that when he came up out of the water the heavens opened, and a voice came from heaven which said: Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased. We next turn to Hebrews 1st chapter 5th verse: For unto which of the angels said he at any time, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee? And again, I will be to him a Father, and he shall be to me a Son? We next refer the reader to the testimony of John, 1st chapter 14th verse: And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth. Again, verse 18th: No man hath seen God at any time; the only begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.—We are aware that President Strang will try to do away the force of these texts where Christ is called the Son of God, by saying that all who are children of God are called sons also; but we wish the reader to take special notice that in all these, and many more we can bring of a like nature, that the definite article the which precedes the expression Son of God, only begotten Son, shows clearly that he must be a particular son, and that he was his son in quite a different sense from what those are who become sons through obedience to the gospel, or the law of adoption. We admit that these were called sons, and are sons by the law of adoption.

But as Jesus, according to Matthew and Luke, was begotten by the Holy Ghost, or, as the angel said to Mary, the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee, therefore also that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God. For this reason he is called not a Son, but the Son of God, because he was begotten by God. For we are plainly told in the text that the reason why he was called the Son of the Highest was not because he became so by the law of adoption, neither as some say that he was called the Son of God before he came into the world, but because he was begotten by the power of the Highest. We turn again to the 1st chapter of Hebrews 1st verse: God, who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds. Now if Jesus Christ was the legitimate son of Joseph, a man in every respect as was Enoch and Moses, and all the ancient prophets through whom God hath spoken to us, why this important distinction between Jesus Christ and the prophets? Why did he call Christ his son in contradistinction from all holy men of God, who have become sons by adoption? The reason is obvious; because he was his legitimate son, being begotten by him.

We will next introduce a text from John's gospel, 5th chapter 15th, 16th and 17th verses: Therefore the Jews sought to kill him, because he had not only broken the Sabbath, but said God was his Father; thereby making himself equal with God. Now it is very evident that the Jews understood that Jesus Christ claimed a different relationship between him and his Father than existed between those who are the adopted sons of God, or they would not have claimed that it made him equal with God. They well understood that he intended to support the facts recorded in Matthew 1st 18th, and Luke 1st chapter 26th to the 35th verse inclusive. There are undoubtedly at least a hundred passages where Jesus Christ calls God his Father. Many where he is called Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. And hundreds where Christ is called the Son of God, the only begotten Son, the only begotten of the Father, &c. When we lay these along side with the proofs that we have brought that he was conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, in the womb of the virgin Mary, born of her before she had known man, we think it is clear that these numerous texts have direct reference to the same facts, and abundantly proves that Jesus Christ was not the legitimate son of Joseph.

But as President Strang has boasted so much of the strength of his position, and the subject is of infinite importance as connected with the plan of salvation, the very foundation and origin of the gospel of the Son of God, and as we have as it were but just commenced discussing the subject and bringing proofs, especially from the scriptures, which have been given in these last days, we beg leave to pursue the subject a little further. There are also many important proofs which may be found in profane history. But as we design to be brief we will only introduce at this time the testimony of Flavius Josephus, and an ancient relic called the Apostles' creed. It will be conceded by all parties that Josephus was one of the most faithful, correct and impartial historians that has ever favored the world with their labors and in this case wholly disinterested; not being a believer in or a persecutor of Christ; and having lived in the same age of the world, and undoubtedly a critical observer of the circumstances connected with the birth of Jesus Christ, we think his testimony in the case can be confidently relied on.

Josephus, page 364: Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with pleasure. He drew over to him both many of the Jews and many of the Gentiles. He was (the) Christ. And when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principal men amongst us, had condemned him to the cross, these that loved him at the first did not forsake him; for he appeared to them alive again the third day, as the divine Prophets had foretold—these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him. And the tribe of Christians, so named from him, are not extinct at this day.

This testimony of Josephus has in it one very peculiar expression—peculiar in two respects, as he was a writer who was very careful to state nothing but what was perfectly agreeable to truth and propriety; but more peculiar on account of the singularity of the expression, if it be proper to call him a man. We understand that Jesus appeared as a man, he ate and drank as a man, and if he was actually the legitimate son of Joseph it would be perfectly proper to call him a man; hence it is evident that Josephus had become tinctured with the strange doctrine that Jesus Christ was the only begotten Son of God.

We will now make a short extract from the Apostles' Creed: "I believe in God the Father Almighty, maker of heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ his only begotten Son, who was conceived by the Holy Ghost, born of the virgin Mary," &c. We have abundant testimony that the prophet Joseph taught that Jesus was the proper Son of God, both plainly and unequivocally, and as he had power to translate the Bible in its original purity he could not be mistaken. If it was an interpolation or mistranslation he certainly would have known it, and have corrected the error; and the doctrine is so clearly and definitely taught in the Book of Mormon it must either be true or he a false prophet. We think we have now abundatly proved our position, and that from testimony which the prophet himself will not attempt to condemn. But we have abundant testimony left to make up a reserve corps. The testimony from the Book of Mormon states definitely that the Son of God should be born of the virgin Mary, and that he should be conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost; and as they so exactly correspond with the texts from Luke and Matthew, and as the translators and publishers of the Bible could have had no knowledge of what the Book of Mormon contained, neither could the writers of the Book of Mormon have had any knowledge of what the Bible contained except by inspiration, it proves that both are true as far as this doctrine is concerned.

JOHN GAYLORD,
Member of the Church of Christ.

LETTER FROM BROTHER BRIGGS.

Beloit, February 18th, 1848.

PRESIDENT STRANG,—Inclosed is one dollar for the Herald. So much for that. In reading the letters to Mr. Rafferty, contained in the 34th, 35th and 36th Nos. of the Gospel Herald, I find an item of doctrine which you think a fundamental principle of christianity, the foundation stone of the christian faith—namely: that Jesus, the Messiah, is the natural son of Joseph and Mary. This doctrine to me sounds new and strange. However I beg to refer you to some texts of scripture, which if you will solve and reconcile with the assumption that Jesus Christ was begotten by human generation you will favor several of us. For there are many reasons I think for doubts on that subject, and as you are the first man that I ever saw or heard of who taught this, I deem you to be the proper person to show that the scriptures do not contradict it. At least you say as much as to say if any disbelieve Jesus having a human father, (after reading your quotations,) they would still do so if all the angels in heaven should testify.

Now to me it seems that the testimony of the angels that have spoken is sufficient to beget such disbelief. Here are the texts: first Matthew says, 18th verse, before they (Joseph and Mary) came together, she (Mary) was found with child of (by) the Holy Ghost, (not Joseph.) What public example could Joseph make of her if he was the father of the child, and be a just man? 19 v. What sense is there in the 20th verse, if Joseph was the father? (what had he to fear?) Could he believe the angel contrary to his own senses? (for it is evident the angel told him something he did not already know, whereupon he altered his mind,) How was Mary a virgin with child, 23 v., if Joseph was the father of Jesus? How can it be true that he knew her not until she had brought forth her first born? 25 v. How can the testimony of the angel Gabriel be interpreted in Luke i. 31 to 35, if Joseph is the father of Jesus?—What has the answer of Gabriel in the 35 v. to do with the question of Mary in the 34 v., if Joseph was to beget the child promised in the 31 v.? Why this circumlocution by the angel? Admitting, however, that Jesus had a human father, does it not appear from Matthew's testimony, 18 to 25 v., that he was not Joseph? If Joseph is the father of Jesus, and Matthew knew it, has he not aimed to deceive us?

Again, if Joseph really be the father of Jesus, was not he (Jesus) born of fornication? (or begotten,) for it is evident they (Joseph and Mary) were not married, only betrothed. What necessity is there (for fulfillment of prophecy) that Jesus should descend from David in the male line? If he did so descend, why was he called the seed of the woman? Why did St. Paul say, Gal. iv. 4, God sent forth his Son made of a woman? What does it signify if he has a human father? Furthermore, if Jesus is the natural son of a Jew and Jewess, wherein does he differ from other Jews? But the Book of Cov. sec. xlii. p. 3. sec. xliv. p. 1, says he is God. Then is Mary not only the mother of God, (see Book of Mormon page 25,) but Joseph is the father of God, (in the same sense.) What right have we to say Jesus was begotten of Joseph, when his witness (John) says he is the begotten of God.

The foregoing scriptures, with many others, are to me inexplicable, upon the supposition that Jesus Christ was begotten by human generation. Will you give us a solution of the difficulty. For I think you will agree that there is a difficulty. For though Matthew proposes to give the genealogy of Jesus, but does not connect him with the list of the fathers, but interposes Mary between them.—Luke has given the genealogy of Jesus (upon the supposition that he was the son of Joseph) running in a different family, for 48 generations; (is not one of these the genealogy of Mary?) Finally, how can I worship as God a creature, a man, a Jew, the son of a Jew. Allowing this, I cannot conceive of his being more than a good man. If there is light on this subject, may we see it, and "truth shall prevail." Respectfully yours in search of truth,

J. W. BRIGGS.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

Above we publish two communications on the lineage of Christ; but containing substantially the same arguments, one written on two brief pages while the other is spun out on twelve. The points of Bro. Briggs' are skillfully taken, modestly and plainly stated, and ably defended. We are satisfied that he has made the most of the side to which he inclines, and if he can be successfully answered no one need go over the ground again. We like such communications, even though not conforming to our own ideas, because we like to have the very best that can be said, and then we like that a man should know enough to stop. As this was sent in more as an inquiry than an attack, it is in every sense proper.—But of the communication which John Gaylord has sent us (commenced in the last No.) the best we can say is, that what it lacks in sense it makes up in words. In a controversy with a church embracing in its communion one fourth of the human race, carried on under the eyes of many of the ablest bishops and prelates on the continent, in the strength of God's truth Pres. Strang ventured to attack them on the fundamental article of their creed, on which they had maintained an unchanging unity of faith for thirteen hundred years; and pausing for a reply, like sheep in the hands of shearers they were dumb; like lambs led to the slaughter they opened not their mouths; when up steps Little John Gaylord, and taking the cause out of their hands says, "let a man speak what can say something."

We refer Bro. Briggs for the answer to some of his points to our answer to the inquiries of Bro. Anderson, &c., in No. 48. To the rest he will find our exposition of the principles and scriptures involved in our remarks on John Gaylord's communication. But any personal remarks in the latter case we do not wish him to, in any sense, take to himself. For he has in a proper and gentlemanly manner addressed his inquiries to his spiritual pastor, and then dropped the matter without disingenuous insinuations, and intermeddling with other mens' discussions, as any gentleman would.—As a simple matter of public discussion, if the Catholics are not able to justify their faith, other people need not try it.

(Remarks to be continued.)

☞ Slanderers are like flies, that leap over all the sound parts of mankind to light on their sores.

CONFERENCE.

The Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held at the school house in Voree April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1848. It is hoped that none will neglect attendance.

By the President. JAMES J. STRANG.

Voree, Feb. 24, 1848. GILBERT WATSON, Clerk.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. III. No. 3.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY. APRIL 6, 1848. [WHOLE No. 67.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

(Continued from last week.)

Passing by the means by which Little John became a party to this discussion, let us examine the manner in which he has carried it on. We shall most readily agree with Little John that he was somewhat excited, or he would not have rushed into a discussion without first knowing what point was to be the subject of debate; without having a regular affirmative and negative, and some understanding at least of the rules by which the discussion was to be conducted. It is very true we have challenged discussion, and thrown down our glove against the world. It is equally true that we have opened our journal for that purpose, and told our opponents that we always had a corner ready for them; but we have not offered them half our paper from week to week to spin out trash and nonsense about Abraham, lawyers and hay racks. Whether Abraham obtained the faith which was accounted for righteousness, and by which he spared not his only son when God spake, of pagan priests, or having it already went down to Egypt to barter it off for the worship of calves and crocodiles in heathen temples, is a matter we are content to leave entirely with Little John.

Doubtless most men, after receiving their religion directly from the mouth of God, as Abraham did, would be content with it and well assured of the truth of it without going to calf worshippers to see if they could tell them better. Still as Little John and most of his brother pseudoes have had several revelations from God in the past two or three years, which they do NOT now believe a word of, perhaps they ought to be excused for thinking Abraham just as big a humbug as themselves. Having tried unsuccessfully for some time to swap off their religion for some other, we don't doubt they really believe Abraham took a journey to Egypt on the same errand. So hard is it for men to believe anybody has better sense than themselves.

For the same reasons we are not the least surprised that Little John should say "he could hardly suppose that many of his readers would take pains to inquire whether he had proved his position or not, and whether his proofs were selected from the scriptures or from Tom Thumb's history." He forgets that his readers are not the New Era readers. Having got among those who don't believe the word of God, go to heathenism to improve their religion, and when they get a revelation have to ask a pagan priest whether it is true or not, he very naturally thinks all of us as stupid as himself.

Now what is the question at issue between John Gaylord and the Herald? Is it whether Christ is a bastard or a legitimate son?—Whether he was begotten in fornication or in lawful wedlock? Whether God prostituted a creature of his hands to unlawful lusts, doing a deed which would overturn thrones even in the most barbarous nations, or the prophets are true? It is not whether Jesus was the son of God. No; my opponent asserts and I affirm that. Is it whether he was conceived of the Holy Ghost? I am as well persuaded of that as was Luke, and I doubt not far better than my opponent; for if even an Egyptian priest should offer me any different system of faith I should not examine to see if it might be better. If I am able to get hold of the question at all, it is "whether Jesus was the son of man." That certainly is what I affirm, and I understand it to be what my opponent denies. He certainly denies that Jesus was the son of Joseph, the lawful husband of his mother; but if I make good that he was the son of any man, I think he will not deny that Joseph was the man.

This being the question, it became my opponent, on taking up this discussion, to review my arguments on that question before he struck out with any thing new. In my answers to Charles Rafferty (Herald Vol. 2 No. 35 and 36, Catholic discussion, p. 34 to 42) I have followed promises and prophecies down through from Adam to Christ, and shown by an array of testimonies, such as for multiplicity, point and clearness is seldom seen on any subject, that Christ, the Messiah, should come of the house of David, lawful heir to David's throne and lawful king of Israel. This argument, which is the heart and core of the whole matter, Little John has never touched. No not even alluded to it. In the same places, I have shown by an abundance of testimony, running through the entire New Testament, that he was declared and acknowledged thus to be the son of David, begotten by Joseph, the husband of Mary, by every party on earth, friends or foes, and by witnesses in heaven also, both during his life and after his crucifixion. This is equally left untouched, and as I do not intend to go over that ground in this article, the reader is respectfully requested to read those arguments as above referred to in this connection.

It will be percieved that Mr. Gaylord claims that Christ is the son of David in the female line, and quotes the English statute of succession to show that this would entitle him to the throne of David. Unfortunately for his cause, that statute was not enacted till near 1500 years after the death of Christ. And being enacted merely by the British Parliament, is not of authority in the court of heaven. We are willing however to try this question by the rule contained in the British statute. The son of Queen Victoria inherits the throne from her, because she could inherit it. She inherited it from her father the Duke of Kent, who, had he been alive, would have taken it as heir to his brother William IV. But he who has no blood of inheritance gives none. So Prince Albert not being in the line of succession cannot create inheritable blood, and his children by a subsequent marriage would not be heirs even to their own brothers, who are in the true line of succession. None inherit unless descended from those who possessed the throne, or would, had they survived. By statute a woman can be King, that is, Queen Regent of Great Britain. But could she of Israel? Ah, there is the test. If Mary was King, that is Queen Regent of Israel, then her son would inherit from her the throne without reference to the blood of his father. But if she was not herself lawful heir, entitled to fill the throne of David, she gave no inheriting blood to her children.

Vol. 3
4

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. III. No. 3.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY. APRIL 6, 1848. [WHOLE No. 67.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

(Continued from last week.)

Passing by the means by which Little John became a party to this discussion, let us examine the manner in which he has carried it on. We shall most readily agree with Little John that he was somewhat excited, or he would not have rushed into a discussion without first knowing what point was to be the subject of debate; without having a regular affirmative and negative, and some understanding at least of the rules by which the discussion was to be conducted. It is very true we have challenged discussion, and thrown down our glove against the world. It is equally true that we have opened our journal for that purpose, and told our opponents that we always had a corner ready for them; but we have not offered them half our paper from week to week to spin out trash and nonsense about Abraham, lawyers and hay racks. Whether Abraham obtained the faith which was accounted for righteousness, and by which he spared not his only son when God spake, of pagan priests, or having it already went down to Egypt to barter it off for the worship of calves and crocodiles in heathen temples, is a matter we are content to leave entirely with Little John.

Doubtless most men, after receiving their religion directly from the mouth of God, as Abraham did, would be content with it and well assured of the truth of it without going to calf worshippers to see if they could tell them better. Still as Little John and most of his brother pseudoes have had several revelations from God in the past two or three years, which they do NOT now believe a word of, perhaps they ought to be excused for thinking Abraham just as big a humbug as themselves. Having tried unsuccessfully for some time to swap off their religion for some other, we don't doubt they really believe Abraham took a journey to Egypt on the same errand. So hard is it for men to believe anybody has better sense than themselves.

For the same reasons we are not the least surprised that Little John should say "he could hardly suppose that many of his readers would take pains to inquire whether he had proved his position or not, and whether his proofs were selected from the scriptures or from Tom Thumb's history." He forgets that his readers are not the New Era readers. Having got among those who don't believe the word of God, go to heathenism to improve their religion, and when they get a revelation have to ask a pagan priest whether it is true or not, he very naturally thinks all of us as stupid as himself.

Now what is the question at issue between John Gaylord and the Herald? Is it whether Christ is a bastard or a legitimate son?—Whether he was begotten in fornication or in lawful wedlock? Whether God prostituted a creature of his hands to unlawful lusts, doing a deed which would overturn thrones even in the most barbarous nations, or the prophets are true? It is not whether Jesus was the son of God. No; my opponent asserts and I affirm that. Is it whether he was conceived of the Holy Ghost? I am as well persuaded of that as was Luke, and I doubt not far better than my opponent; for if even an Egyptian priest should offer me any different system of faith I should not examine to see if it might be better. If I am able to get hold of the question at all, it is "whether Jesus was the son of man." That certainly is what I affirm, and I understand it to be what my opponent denies. He certainly denies that Jesus was the son of Joseph, the lawful husband of his mother; but if I make good that he was the son of any man, I think he will not deny that Joseph was the man.

This being the question, it became my opponent, on taking up this discussion, to review my arguments on that question before he struck out with any thing new. In my answers to Charles Rafferty (Herald Vol. 2 No. 35 and 36, Catholic discussion, p. 34 to 42) I have followed promises and prophecies down through from Adam to Christ, and shown by an array of testimonies, such as for multiplicity, point and clearness is seldom seen on any subject, that Christ, the Messiah, should come of the house of David, lawful heir to David's throne and lawful king of Israel. This argument, which is the heart and core of the whole matter, Little John has never touched. No not even alluded to it. In the same places, I have shown by an abundance of testimony, running through the entire New Testament, that he was declared and acknowledged thus to be the son of David, begotten by Joseph, the husband of Mary, by every party on earth, friends or foes, and by witnesses in heaven also, both during his life and after his crucifixion. This is equally left untouched, and as I do not intend to go over that ground in this article, the reader is respectfully requested to read those arguments as above referred to in this connection.

It will be percieved that Mr. Gaylord claims that Christ is the son of David in the female line, and quotes the English statute of succession to show that this would entitle him to the throne of David. Unfortunately for his cause, that statute was not enacted till near 1500 years after the death of Christ. And being enacted merely by the British Parliament, is not of authority in the court of heaven. We are willing however to try this question by the rule contained in the British statute. The son of Queen Victoria inherits the throne from her, because she could inherit it. She inherited it from her father the Duke of Kent, who, had he been alive, would have taken it as heir to his brother William IV. But he who has no blood of inheritance gives none. So Prince Albert not being in the line of succession cannot create inheritable blood, and his children by a subsequent marriage would not be heirs even to their own brothers, who are in the true line of succession. None inherit unless descended from those who possessed the throne, or would, had they survived. By statute a woman can be King, that is, Queen Regent of Great Britain. But could she of Israel? Ah, there is the test. If Mary was King, that is Queen Regent of Israel, then her son would inherit from her the throne without reference to the blood of his father. But if she was not herself lawful heir, entitled to fill the throne of David, she gave no inheriting blood to her children.

Victoria, Queen of Great Britain, being a woman, gives her regal rights to her children whether male or female. And in defect of sons her daughter would be Queen in her stead. So if Mary was lawful heir to David, so as to be able to give inheriting blood at all, her daughters would, in defect of a son, have succeeded to her rights. That is, had Mary had no son her eldest daughter would have been the Messiah, the King of the Jews. What a man or woman cannot inherit themselves, their children cannot inherit from them. If Christ is entitled to the throne of David, as son of Mary, it is because she was entitled to it, before him as daughter of David. But ridiculous as this theory is in its consequences, it is still more so in its foundations. No woman ever did, and none ever could be king of Israel. Thrones and Priesthood went to sons, not to daughters. And they went to sons of sons, not sons of daughters. A man's children in the male line, from generation to generation, were called his sons, but the son of a daughter never. They were reckoned in the line of their fathers.

And what is still worse for the cause of my opponent, there is not one iota of evidence that Mary was of the house of David at all. Much pains did the New Testament writers take to show that Joseph was of the house of David, but such a thing is no where said of Mary. It was very uncommon for priests to marry out of the tribe of Levi. And as Elizabeth, the cousin of Mary, was the wife of a priest of high rank, the inference is very strong that Mary was of the tribe of Levi. And this inference is strengthened by the fact that all tradition agrees that she was raised in the Temple.

THE PASSAGES FROM JOSEPHUS.—After giving 6 passages from the Bible and Book of Mormon, Little John treats us with the following passage from Josephus: "Antiquities of the Jews," Book xviii. ch. iii. sec 3:—"Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with pleasure.—He drew over to him both many of the Jews and many of the Gentiles. He was (the) Christ And when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principal men amongst us, had condemned him to the cross, those that loved him at the first did not forsake him; for he appeared to them alive again the third day, as the divine prophets had foretold, these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him. And the tribe of Christians, so named from him, are not extinct at this day."

We prefer to take up this passage first because it is a good introduction to the grand question on the first chapter of Matthew. The reader will perceive that this passage does not assert that Jesus had no human father, nor does it assert any fact inconsistent with his having a human father. It simply shows that he was a very good man; a teacher of righteousness, and a doer of wonderful works.—But the grand objection to this testimony is that Josephus never wrote it. It is a gross and self-convicted forgery; an interpolation of those days when pious frauds were justified, and converts to pagan ceremonies under christian names were made by deceit.

It should be remarked that Eusebius, bishop of Coesarea, (of whom hereafter) is the first writer who ever quoted this passage, though he wrote more than 250 years after Josephus. And in a style of impudence which Little John seems to emulate, exclaimed, "wherefore since this Hebrew historian hath of old delivered these things in his own writing concerning our Savior, what evasion can save those who invent arguments against these things!" &c. Gibbon, Ittigius, LeClerc, Vandale, Bishop Warburton, Blondell, Tanaquil, Faber, Chalmers, Lardner, indeed every writer of the least respectability in the present age, as well as the best writers of the last century, reject this as a forgery. Without entering into the circumstances of the forgery at length, suffice it to say that it was committed by Cuis, a priest, in the third century. We proceed to show the evidence that this is a forgery.

1. Flavius Josephus was a Jewish priest of the family of Aaron, and of the rank of a prince; born at Jerusalem about the time of the crucifixion of Christ; growing up to manhood on the very ground where christianity was then becoming formidable; standing in his priesthood when apostles and bishops were holding councils at Jerusalem, and carrying the gospel to all parts of the earth; taken captive in the Roman war, and remaining a prisoner at the siege of Jerusalem, and afterwards writing the history of the Jews, he to the last moment of his life maintains the faith of his fathers, and never for a single instant in any act of his life exhibits the least faith in christianity. But this passage is an acknowledgment of the truth of christianity. Had Josephus believed that Jesus was a teacher of such men as receive THE TRUTH with pleasure; that he WAS THE CHRIST; that he arose from the dead, and did TEN THOUSAND wonderful things WHICH the HOLY PROPHTES FORETOLD CONCERNING HIM, he would have been to all intents and purposes a christian. This is the essence and foundation of the christian faith.—As well might a Methodist or Episcopalian bishop be brought as witness that Joseph Smith was a true prophet, and the Book of Mormon a divine revelation.

2. It interrupts the narrative. Sec 2. (Antiquities, B. xviii. ch. iii.) gives us an account of a great calamity that befell the Jews when Pilate, undertaking to supply the city of Jerusalem with water at the expense of the sacred treasures in the temple, and many of the Jews raising a sedition against it were slain. Section 4 begins, "About the same time also ANOTHER sad calamity put the Jews into disorder," and goes on to tell of certain swindling operations of a few vagabond Jews at Rome, by means of which all were banished from Rome, four thousand driven into the army and many others punished. The reader will readily perceive that this must originally have immediately followed the one sad calamity, otherwise it would not have been called another, unless indeed the coming of the Christ and fulfilling the prophets is a sad calamity. But even then the expression in sec. 4 would not have been "another," but "a third sad calamity."

3. It is not quoted by the christian writers earlier than Eusebius, who were familiar with Josephus, and to whom this would, if true, have been a stanch and much needed testimony. St. Chrysostom, bishop of Constantinople, who died 407, and a writer of high rank in defence of christianity, who frequently quotes Josephus, could not have omitted it had it then been in the text. He never mentions it. Photius, who has three articles concerning Josephus, does not quote it. Neither Justin in his dialogue with Trypho, the Jew, nor Clemens Alexandrius, who made many extracts from ancient authors, nor Origen against Celsus, have ever mentioned this testimony, though it was all-important to them.

4. Two writers of an early age, both perfectly familiar with Josephus and constantly quoting him, have shown expressly that it was not in Josephus in their time. Photius, in his article "Justus of Tiberias," expressly states that "Josephus, being a Jew, has not taken the least notice of Christ." Origen, the most voluminous writer of the christian fathers, in writing against Celsus, Book i. ch. xxxv., openly affirms that Josephus, who had mentioned John the Baptist, did not acknowledge Christ.

5. The article attributed to Josephus contains an express falsehood, to wit: that Christ drew after him many of the Gentiles. It is a well known fact with all Bible readers that the followers of Christ were none of them Gentiles. The gospel was sent to the Gentiles some years after the crucifixion.

To the reader we humbly submit whether these considerations do not show, 1st, that the testimony attributed to Josephus is not in Victoria, Queen of Great Britain, being a woman, gives her regal rights to her children whether male or female. And in defect of sons her daughter would be Queen in her stead. So if Mary was lawful heir to David, so as to be able to give inheriting blood at all, her daughters would, in defect of a son, have succeeded to her rights. That is, had Mary had no son her eldest daughter would have been the Messiah, the King of the Jews. What a man or woman cannot inherit themselves, their children cannot inherit from them. If Christ is entitled to the throne of David, as son of Mary, it is because she was entitled to it before him as daughter of David. But ridiculous as this theory is in its consequences, it is still more so in its foundations. No woman ever did, and none ever could be king of Israel. Thrones and Priesthood went to sons, not to daughters. And they went to sons of sons, not sons of daughters. A man's children in the male line, from generation to generation, were called his sons, but the son of a daughter never. They were reckoned in the line of their fathers.

And what is still worse for the cause of my opponent, there is not one iota of evidence that Mary was of the house of David at all. Much pains did the New Testament writers take to show that Joseph was of the house of David, but such a thing is no where said of Mary. It was very uncommon for priests to marry out of the tribe of Levi. And as Elizabeth, the cousin of Mary, was the wife of a priest of high rank, the inference is very strong that Mary was of the tribe of Levi. And this inference is strengthened by the fact that all tradition agrees that she was raised in the Temple.

THE PASSAGES FROM JOSEPHUS.—After giving 6 passages from the Bible and Book of Mormon, Little John treats us with the following passage from Josephus: "Antiquities of the Jews," Book xviii. ch. iii. sec 3:—"Now there was about this time Jesus, a wise man, if it be lawful to call him a man, for he was a doer of wonderful works, a teacher of such men as receive the truth with pleasure.—He drew over to him both many of the Jews and many of the Gentiles. He was (the) Christ. And when Pilate, at the suggestion of the principal men amongst us, had condemned him to the cross, those that loved him at the first did not forsake him; for he appeared to them alive again the third day, as the divine prophets had foretold, these and ten thousand other wonderful things concerning him. And the tribe of Christians, so named from him, are not extinct at this day."

We prefer to take up this passage first because it is a good introduction to the grand question on the first chapter of Matthew. The reader will perceive that this passage does not assert that Jesus had no human father, nor does it assert any fact inconsistent with his having a human father. It simply shows that he was a very good man; a teacher of righteousness, and a doer of wonderful works.—But the grand objection to this testimony is that Josephus never wrote it. It is a gross and self-convicted forgery; an interpolation of those days when pious frauds were justified, and converts to pagan ceremonies under christian names were made by deceit.

It should be remarked that Eusebius, bishop of Coesarea, (of whom hereafter) is the first writer who ever quoted this passage, though he wrote more than 250 years after Josephus. And in a style of impudence which Little John seems to emulate, exclaimed, "wherefore since this Hebrew historian hath of old delivered these things in his own writing concerning our Savior, what evasion can save those who love at arguments against these things!" &c. Gibbon, Irrigius, LeClerc, Vandale, Bishop Warburton, Blondell, Tanaquil Faber, Chalmers, Lardner, indeed every writer of the least respectability in the present age, as well as the best writers of the last century, reject this as a forgery. Without entering into the circumstances of the forgery at length, suffice it to say that it was committed by Orig, a priest, in the third century. We proceed to show the evidence that this is a forgery.

1. Flavius Josephus was a Jewish priest of the family of Aaron, and of the rank of a prince; born at Jerusalem about the time of the crucifixion of Christ; growing up to manhood on the very ground where christianity was then becoming formidable; standing in his priesthood when apostles and bishops were holding councils at Jerusalem, and carrying the gospel to all parts of the earth; taken captive in the Roman war, and remaining a prisoner at the siege of Jerusalem, and afterwards writing the history of the Jews, he to the last moment of his life maintains the faith of his fathers, and never for a single instant in any act of his life exhibits the least faith in christianity. But this passage is an acknowledgment of the truth of christianity. Had Josephus believed that Jesus was a teacher of such men as receive THE TRUTH with pleasure; that he WAS THE CHRIST; that he arose from the dead, and did TEN THOUSAND wonderful things WHICH the HOLY PROPHTES FORETOLD CONCERNING HIM, he would have been to all intents and purposes a christian. This is the essence and foundation of the christian faith.—As well might a Methodist or Episcopalian bishop be brought as witness that Joseph Smith was a true prophet, and the Book of Mormon a divine revelation.

2. It interrupts the narrative. Sec 2. (Antiquities, B. xviii. ch. iii.) gives us an account of a great calamity that befell the Jews when Pilate, undertaking to supply the city of Jerusalem with water at the expense of the sacred treasures in the temple, and many of the Jews raising a sedition against it were slain. Section 4 begins, "About the same time also ANOTHER sad calamity put the Jews into disorder," and goes on to tell of certain swindling operations of a few vagabond Jews at Rome, by means of which all were banished from Rome, four thousand driven into the army and many others punished. The reader will readily perceive that this must originally have immediately followed the one sad calamity, otherwise it would not have been called another, unless indeed the coming of the Christ and fulfilling the prophets is a sad calamity. But even then the expression in sec. 4 would not have been "another," but "a third sad calamity."

3. It is not quoted by the christian writers earlier than Eusebius, who were familiar with Josephus, and to whom this would, if true, have been a stanch and much needed testimony. St. Chrysostom, bishop of Constantinople, who died 407, and a writer of high rank in defence of christianity, who frequently quotes Josephus, could not have omitted it had it then been in the text. He never mentions it. Photius, who has three articles concerning Josephus, does not quote it. Neither Justin in his dialogue with Trypho, the Jew, nor Clemens Alexandrius, who made many extracts from ancient authors, nor Origen against Celsus, have ever mentioned this testimony, though it was all-important to them.

4. Two writers of an early age, both perfectly familiar with Josephus and constantly quoting him, have shown expressly that it was not in Josephus in their time. Photius, in his article "Justus of Tiberias," expressly states that "Josephus, being a Jew, has not taken the least notice of Christ." Origen, the most voluminous writer of the christian fathers, in writing against Celsus, Book i. ch. xxxv., openly affirms that Josephus, who had mentioned John the Baptist, did not acknowledge Christ.

5. The article attributed to Josephus contains an express falsehood, to wit: that Christ drew after him many of the Gentiles. It is a well known fact with all Bible readers that the followers of Christ were none of them Gentiles. The gospel was sent to the Gentiles some years after the crucifixion.

To the reader we humbly submit whether these considerations do not show, 1st, that the testimony attributed to Josephus is not point, and 2d, that he never gave it.

Book of Mormon.—Three passages are quoted from the Book of Mormon to prove that Jesus was the Son of God, which I do not dispute, but affirm; and that his mother was a virgin, of which hereafter. But of the passage 1st Nephi, ch. iii. v. 16 it is proper to remark that in the 1st edition (Palmyra, 1830, E. B. Grandin printer) it is said, "behold the virgin which thou seest is the mother of God," p. 25, which is corrected in the subsequent editions (stereotype p. 27) so as to read "mother of the Son of God." The error was doubtless a pious fraud of the very religious printers in Grandin's office, intended to make the book ridiculous. Had Little John been so fortunate as to use Grandin's edition, I should doubtless been annihilated with a pseudo application of Grandin's falsehood.

Matt. chap. 1st, verse 18, to the end.—"Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. 19. Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily. 20. But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife; for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. 21. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins. 22. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, 23. Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is, God with us. 24. Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife; 25. And knew her not till she had brought forth her first born son: and he called his name Jesus."

This passage seems to be the strong bulwark, the Gibralter of those who claim that Jesus Christ was not "the son of man."—And though if true it does prove that Joseph was not his father after the flesh, it is very far from proving that God was. If it proves that any body was the father of his flesh, the Holy Ghost was that father. That is, that he was the son of the third person in the Catholic Trinity, instead of the first. Collated with the Apostles' creed which my opponent has quoted, it will not even bear that construction; for in that it is expressly said he was "conceived by the Holy Ghost," and I think my opponent would hardly pretend that he was begotten and conceived by the same individual. That is, that the same individual was both his father and mother. Still we cheerfully concede that whether this passage has any real meaning in it or not, it is against us. And consequently that the main question is whether it is true.

1. Against this passage in the first place we oppose all the Prophets who have spoken of the Messiah, who all concur in this, that he should come in the royal line of king David. (See Herald vol. ii. No. 35, 36. Catholic Discussion, p. 34 to 42.)

2. We oppose, also, to this the word of Mary, the mother of Jesus, who when she and Joseph had found him in the Temple, after three days search, admonished him sharply for deserting his PARENTS, and told him that she and his FATHER sought him sorrowing. Whether this father who sought him sorrowing was his FATHER in the Priesthood or FATHER in the FLESH we leave for those to doubt who don't know what priesthood is, and believe that a spirit without a body (the Holy Ghost) begot a man with a body.

3. Further, we oppose to this some eighty passages of scripture in the evangelists, in which Jesus Christ is denominated "the son of man."

4. To the same effect are all those scriptures calling Christ the root of Jesse, the son of David, the carpenters son, &c.

5. More particularly do we array against it the two genealogies, Matt. i, Luke iii., and the various scriptures in which pains is taken to show that Joseph and not Mary was in the line in which the Messiah should come—the house of David.

The scriptures above referred to make up a chain of divine revelations and apostolic, evangelic and heavenly testimonies, from the times of Nathan the prophet till those of John the revelator, a period of over 1100 years; during all which they are the principal themes of prophecy and history, and enter into the body and minutia of two-thirds of the whole Bible. It is impossible that they should be interpolations; for if stricken out, a skeleton of the book would not remain. The part remaining would be but as occasional scraps of a torn newspaper.

Solitary and alone against all this stands out the single passage in the first chapter of Matthew, ver. 18 to the end. Let us examine it. At the 23d verse we read, "Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, 23d v., 'Behold, a virgin shall be with child and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel.'" The reader will find the prophecy here alluded to in Isaiah vii. 14. And if it should turn out on examination that this prophecy had no allusion whatever to Christ, but was spoken of, and quite fulfilled in the birth of a child during the reign of Ahaz king of Judah, is not falsehood indelibly impressed on the face of this passage interpolated into Matthew? Surely it will not be pretended that God took so great pains to fulfill in Christ a prophecy that his prophet had spoken of somebody else, and which had been fulfilled more than 700 years. And if the reason given for so extraordinary a proceeding falls to the ground, the thing itself will fall with it; especially as the history of the one and the assertion of the other are contained in the same paragraph.

"Murder, though it hath no tongue, will speak with most miraculous organ." Falsehood hath a smoothing oily care for self that tells too much and is detected; and forgery with too much of circumstance of too nice a hand stands signboard of its crimsoned guilt. Had the interpolator in this case made no allusion to the prophet; gave no reason why Jesus was not begotten by Joseph; left out verse 22 and 23, this text would have remained, till God Almighty wiped it out, for the triumphant Jew to point his finger at, saying, "Your Christ the Messiah! His own historians do not so much as pretend that he was of the house of David." But we turn to Isaiah.

(To be continued.)

THE CREED OF St. ATHANASIUS.

"Whosoever will be saved: before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic Faith.

Which Faith except every one do keep whole and undefiled: without doubt he shall perish everlastingly.

And the Catholic Faith is this: That we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity;

Neither confounding the Persons: nor dividing the Substance.

For there is one Person of the Father, another of the Son: and another of the Holy Ghost.

But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is all one: the Glory equal, the Majesty co-eternal.

Such as the Father is, such is the Son: and such is the Holy Ghost.

The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate: and the Holy Ghost uncreate.

The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible.

point, and 2d. that he never gave it.

Book of Mormon.—Three passages are quoted from the Book of Mormon to prove that Jesus was the Son of God, which I do not dispute, but affirm; and that his mother was a virgin, of which hereafter. But of the passage 1st Nephi, ch. iii. v. 16 it is proper to remark that in the 1st edition (Palmyra, 1830, E. B. Grandin printer) it is said, "behold the virgin which thou seest is the mother of God," p. 25, which is corrected in the subsequent editions (stereotype p. 27) so as to read "mother of the Son of God." The error was doubtless a pious fraud of the very religious printers in Grandin's office, intended to make the book ridiculous. Had Little John been so fortunate as to use Grandin's edition, I should doubtless been annihilated with a pseudo application of Grandin's falsehood.

Matt. chap. 1st. verse 18, to the end.—"Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost. 19. Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily. 20 But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife; for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost. 21. And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; for he shall save his people from their sins. 22. Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, 23. Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is, God with us. 24. Then Joseph, being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife; 25. And knew her not till she had brought forth her first born son: and he called his name Jesus."

This passage seems to be the strong bulwark, the Gibralter of those who claim that Jesus Christ was not "the son of man"—And though if true it does prove that Joseph was not his father after the flesh, it is very far from proving that God was. If it proves that any body was the father of his flesh, the Holy Ghost was that father. That is, that he was the son of the third person in the Catholic Trinity, instead of the first. Collated with the Apostles' creed which my opponent has quoted, it will not even bear that construction; for in that it is expressly said he was "conceived by the Holy Ghost," and I think my opponent would hardly pretend that he was begotten and conceived by the same individual. That is, that the same individual was both his father and mother. Still we cheerfully concede that whether this passage has any real meaning in it or not, it is against us. And consequently that the main question is whether it is true.

1. Against this passage in the first place we oppose all the Prophets who have spoken of the Messiah, who all concur in this, that he should come in the royal line of king David. (See Herald vol. ii. No. 35. 36. Catholic Discussion, p. 34 to 42.)

2. We oppose, also, to this the word of Mary, the mother of Jesus, who when she and Joseph had found him in the Temple, after three days search, admonished him sharply for deserting his parents, and told him that she and his father sought him sorrowing. Whether this father who sought him sorrowing was his father in the Priesthood or father in the flesh we leave for those to doubt who don't know what priesthood is, and believe that a spirit without a body (the Holy Ghost) begot a man with a body.

3. Further, we oppose to this some eighty passages of scripture in the evangelists, in which Jesus Christ is denominated "the son of man."

4. To the same effect are all those scriptures calling Christ the root of Jesse, the son of David, the carpenters son, &c.

5. More particularly do we array against it the two genealogies, Matt. i, Luke iii., and the various scriptures in which pains is taken to show that Joseph and not Mary was in the line in which the Messiah should come—the house of David.

The scriptures above referred to make up a chain of divine revelations and apostolic, evangelic and heavenly testimonies, from the times of Nathan the prophet till those of John the revelator, a period of over 1100 years; during all which they are the principal themes of prophecy and history, and enter into the body and minutia of two-thirds of the whole Bible. It is impossible that they should be interpolations; for if stricken out, a skeleton of the book would not remain. The part remaining would be but as occasional scraps of a torn newspaper.

Solitary and alone against all this stands out the single passage in the first chapter of Matthew, ver. 18 to the end. Let us examine it. At the 23d verse we read, "Now all this was done that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, 23d v., 'Behold, a virgin shall be with child and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel.'" The reader will find the prophecy here alluded to in Isaiah vii. 14. And if it should turn out on examination that this prophecy had no allusion whatever to Christ, but was spoken of, and quite fulfilled in the birth of a child during the reign of Ahaz king of Judah, is not falsehood indelibly impressed on the face of this passage interpolated into Matthew? Surely it will not be pretended that God took so great pains to fulfill in Christ a prophecy that his prophet had spoken of somebody else, and which had been fulfilled more than 700 years. And if the reason given for so extraordinary a proceeding falls to the ground, the thing itself will fall with it; especially as the history of the one and the assertion of the other are contained in the same paragraph.

"Murder, though it hath no tongue, will speak with most miraculous organ." Falsehood hath a smoothing oily care for self that tells too much and is detected; and forgery with too much of circumstance of too nice a hand stands signboard of its crimsoned guilt. Had the interpolator in this case made no allusion to the prophet; gave no reason why Jesus was not begotten by Joseph; left out verse 22 and 23, this text would have remained, till God Almighty wiped it out, for the triumphant Jew to point his finger at, saying, "Your Christ the Messiah! His own historians do not so much as pretend that he was of the house of David" But we turn to Isaiah.

(To be continued.)

THE CREED OF St. ATHANASIUS.

"Whosoever will be saved: before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic Faith.

Which Faith except every one do keep whole and undefiled: without doubt he shall perish everlastingly.

And the Catholic Faith is this: That we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity;

Neither confounding the Persons: nor dividing the Substance.

For there is one Person of the Father, another of the Son: and another of the Holy Ghost.

But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is all one; the Glory equal, the Majesty co-eternal.

Such as the Father is, such is the Son: and such is the Holy Ghost.

The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate: and the Holy Ghost uncreate.

The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible.

The Father eternal, the Son eternal: and the Holy Ghost eternal.

And yet they are not three eternals: but one eternal.

As also there are not three incomprehensibles, nor three uncreated: but one uncreated, and one incomprehensible.

So likewise the Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty: and the Holy Ghost Almighty.

And yet they are not three Almighties: but one Almighty.

So the Father is God, the Son is God: and the Holy Ghost is God.

And yet they are not three Gods: but one God.

So likewise the Father is Lord, the Son Lord: and the Holy Ghost Lord.

And yet not three Lords: but one Lord.

For like as we are compelled by the Christian verity: to acknowledge every Person by himself to be God and Lord;

So are we forbidden by the Catholic Religion: to say, There be three Gods, or three Lords.

The Father is made of none: neither created, nor begotten.

The Son is of the Father alone: not made, nor created, but begotten.

The Holy Ghost is of the Father and of the Son: neither made, nor created, nor begotten, but proceeding.

So there is one Father, not three Fathers; one Son, not three Sons: one Holy Ghost, not three Holy Ghosts.

And in this Trinity none is afore, or after other: none is greater, or less than another;

But the whole three Persons are co-eternal together: and co-equal.

So that in all things, as is aforesaid: the Unity in Trinity, and the Trinity in Unity is to be worshipped.

He therefore that will be saved must thus think of the Trinity.

Furthermore, it is necessary to everlasting salvation: that he also believe rightly the Incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For the right Faith is, that we believe and confess: that our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is God and Man;

God, of the Substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds: and Man, of the Substance of his Mother, born in the world;

Perfect God, and perfect Man: of a reasonable soul and human flesh subsisting;

Equal to the Father, as touching his Godhead: and inferior to the Father, as touching his Manhood.

Who although he be God and Man: yet he is not two, but one Christ;

One; not by conversion of the Godhead into flesh: but by taking of the Manhood into God;

One altogether; not by confusion of Substance: but by unity of Person.

For as the reasonable soul and flesh is one man: so God and Man is one Christ;

Who suffered for our salvation: desended into hell, rose again the third day from the dead.

He ascended into heaven, he sitteth on the right hand of the Father, God Almighty: from whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

At whose coming all men shall rise again with their bodies: and shall give account for their own works.

And they that have done good shall go into life everlasting: and they that have done evil into everlasting fire.

This is the Catholic Faith: which except a man believe faithfully, he cannot be saved.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost; As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen."

Beaver Island, February 20th, 1848.

Dear Brother:—We are all well, and really hope that these lines will find you and yours enjoying the same state of health.—Peace and plenty generally prevails on this island at the present time. However I have heard within a few days that there is somewhat of a scarcity among the Indians. There has not been much ice for them to fish on. The weather has been very mild and pleasant here this winter so far. In teaming we have had to often charge from sled to wagon and from wagon to sled. The snow has not been over one foot deep at any one time. The bay has been froze over a number of times, and as often broken up, and no chance of getting the mail from Mackinac as yet. The bearer of this letter to Mackinac is a half breed. He thinks he can get there by making his way to the north shore. He will take a light boat with him.

We are well pleased with our new home. There is many advantages here that there is not elsewhere; wooding, fishing, trading, &c., and I think I may add farming. Any man that will come here and will take a walk with me, shovel in hand, I will show him land that will bear inspection, and plenty of it; and I must say here is the place for you, and you would say so if you was here. Fix your face for the island. Set yourself busily to work preparing to come so as to be ready by the time I come there in the spring. I shall come as soon as there is a chance. Tell brother Strang we are doing something at the mission house, and intend that one building shall be completed as soon as one-tenth of our time can finish it.—We have had no news from the main land since our arrival here.—We have made our claims, but don't be alarmed. There is as good chances yet as have been taken, but this spring is the time.—Don't stand round pondering about it, but get ready. Get up early in the morning and make a double rally to send on good wholesome settlers to the island. Ye Strangites of pure principles, sober habits and good morals, truly religious and law-abiding, come to Beaver Island, and no others. We have not done any thing towards building our dock. The ice has not been stout enough to bear our teams. I must close and tell the rest when I come. Our best respects to all.

M. M. ALDRICH.

Feb. 26th. The man has not gone. The ice has failed, but there is another man going with a boat. I want you to write as soon as you receive this. Your letter will come to Mackinaw and will get here before the steamboats run. Direct your letters to Beaver Island in Lake Michigan, Mackinaw post office. In preparing for the island instead of bringing much pork bring lard, the fish are here. Flour is a prime article. Plenty of sugar here. I forgot to mention Savage's wife. We think she has got the consumption. They have been keeping the N. W. Co.'s house, but will leave in a few days. I am very earnest about your coming. Tell brother Strang to send on a band of good likely fellows. M. M. A.

Crockery Creek, Ottawa Co., Mich., March 5th, 1848.

Dear Sir:—We are strangers, but I trust we are friends, and writing is the only mode of inquiring for what I want to know. I shall trouble you with a few lines. I have once belonged to the Church of Latter Day Saints, but the church is scattered and I am left behind. I have heard that there was a live spark left, and that you was the servant of the most high to blow it into a flame. I am anxious to learn something about the church. I joined the church in Jackson, Jackson Co., Mich., and I received too much of the principles of truth to ever believe any other doctrine. I heard that you printed a paper in Voree, and if you do I want you should send me one of the papers and I will subscribe for the same. If there is any place where the saints of God are gathering, I want to be with them. I am yours with respect, and in the bonds of the everlasting covenant,

James J. Strang. ARZA BARTHOLOMEW.

The Father eternal, the Son eternal: and the Holy Ghost eternal.

And yet they are not three eternals: but one eternal.

As also there are not three incomprehensibles, nor three uncreated: but one uncreated, and one incomprehensible.

So likewise the Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty: and the Holy Ghost Almighty.

And yet they are not three Almighties: but one Almighty.

So the Father is God, the Son is God: and the Holy Ghost is God.

And yet they are not three Gods: but one God.

So likewise the Father is Lord, the Son Lord: and the Holy Ghost Lord.

And yet not three Lords: but one Lord.

For like as we are compelled by the Christian verity: to acknowledge every Person by himself to be God and Lord;

So are we forbidden by the Catholic Religion: to say, There be three Gods, or three Lords.

The Father is made of none: neither created, nor begotten.

The Son is of the Father alone: not made, nor created, but begotten.

The Holy Ghost is of the Father and of the Son: neither made, nor created, nor begotten, but proceeding.

So there is one Father, not three Fathers; one Son, not three Sons: one Holy Ghost, not three Holy Ghosts.

And in this Trinity none is afore, or after other: none is greater, or less than another;

But the whole three Persons are co-eternal together: and co-equal.

So that in all things, as is aforesaid: the Unity in Trinity, and the Trinity in Unity is to be worshipped.

He therefore that will be saved must thus think of the Trinity.

Furthermore, it is necessary to everlasting salvation: that he also believe rightly the Incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ.

For the right Faith is, that we believe and confess: that our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is God and Man;

God, of the Substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds: and Man, of the Substance of his Mother, born in the world;

Perfect God, and perfect Man: of a reasonable soul and human flesh subsisting;

Equal to the Father, as touching his Godhead: and inferior to the Father, as touching his Manhood.

Who although he be God and Man: yet he is not two, but one Christ;

One; not by conversion of the Godhead into flesh: but by taking of the Manhood into God;

One altogether; not by confusion of Substance: but by unity of Person.

For as the reasonable soul and flesh is one man: so God and Man is one Christ;

Who suffered for our salvation: descended into hell, rose again the third day from the dead.

He ascended into heaven, he sitteth on the right hand of the Father, God Almighty: from whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

At whose coming all men shall rise again with their bodies: and shall give account for their own works.

And they that have done good shall go into life everlasting: and they that have done evil into everlasting fire.

This is the Catholic Faith: which except a man believe faithfully, he cannot be saved.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost; As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen."

Beaver Island, February 20th, 1848.

DEAR BROTHER:—We are all well, and really hope that these lines will find you and yours enjoying the same state of health.—Peace and plenty generally prevails on this island at the present time. However I have heard within a few days that there is somewhat of a scarcity among the Indians. There has not been much ice for them to fish on. The weather has been very mild and pleasant here this winter so far. In teaming we have had to often change from sled to wagon and from wagon to sled. The snow has not been over one foot deep at any one time. The bay has been froze over a number of times, and as often broken up, and no chance of getting the mail from Mackinac as yet. The bearer of this letter to Mackinac is a half breed. He thinks he can get there by making his way to the north shore. He will take a light boat with him.

We are well pleased with our new home. There is many advantages here that there is not elsewhere; wooding, fishing, trading, &c., and I think I may add farming. Any man that will come here and will take a walk with me, shovel in hand, I will show him land that will bear inspection, and plenty of it; and I must say here is the place for you, and you would say so if you was here. Fix your face for the island. Set yourself busily to work preparing to come so as to be ready by the time I come there in the spring. I shall come as soon as there is a chance. Tell brother Strang we are doing something at the mission house, and intend that one building shall be completed as soon as one-tenth of our time can finish it.—We have had no news from the main land since our arrival here.—We have made our claims, but don't be alarmed. There is as good chances yet as have been taken, but this spring is the time.—Don't stand round pondering about it, but get ready. Get up early in the morning and make a double rally to send on good wholesome settlers to the island. Ye Strangites of pure principles, sober habits and good morals, truly religious and law-abiding, come to Beaver Island, and no others. We have not done any thing towards building our dock. The ice has not been stout enough to bear our teams. I must close and tell the rest when I come. Our best respects to all.

M. M. ALDRICH.

Feb. 26th. The man has not gone. The ice has failed, but there is another man going with a boat. I want you to write as soon as you receive this. Your letter will come to Mackinaw and will get here before the steamboats run. Direct your letters to Beaver Island in Lake Michigan, Mackinaw post office. In preparing for the island instead of bringing much pork bring lard, the fish are here. Flour is a prime article. Plenty of sugar here. I forgot to mention Savage's wife. We think she has got the consumption. They have been keeping the N. W. Co.'s house, but will leave in a few days. I am very earnest about your coming. Tell brother Strang to send on a band of good likely fellows. M. M. A.

Crockery Creek, Ottawa Co., Mich., March 5th, 1848.

DEAR SIR:—We are strangers, but I trust we are friends, and writing is the only mode of inquiring for what I want to know. I shall trouble you with a few lines. I have once belonged to the Church of Latter Day Saints, but the church is scattered and I am left behind. I have heard that there was a live spark left, and that you was the servant of the most high to blow it into a flame. I am anxious to learn something about the church. I joined the church in Jackson, Jackson Co., Mich., and I received too much of the principles of truth to ever believe any other doctrine. I heard that you printed a paper in Voree, and if you do I want you should send me one of the papers and I will subscribe for the same. If there is any place where the saints of God are gathering, I want to be with them. I am yours with respect, and in the bonds of the everlasting covenant,

JAMES J. STRANG. ARZA BARTHOLOMEW.

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. III. No. 4.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, APRIL 13, 1848. [WHOLE No. 68.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO MR. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from Vol. 2, No. 36.)

1. Now will you please tell us whether you really believe in one God or three?

2. If in one, is that the Father, the Son, or the Holy Spirit?—If the Father, or the Holy Spirit, how is Mary mother of God?—Who made the infinite atonement?

3. If Jesus Christ is the "one living and true God," who filled his place when in the womb of the virgin? Who was the "living God" when he died?

4. If the Father and the Christ are but one being and one God, then is it not evident that what is true of the Father must be true of Christ the Son, Father and Son in this case being but two different names for one and the same God?

5. If the Christ the anointed be God, who anointed him? Did he anoint himself, being at once both the anointer and the anointed? Luke iv. 18. Acts x. 38.

6. If the Father be unbegotten, and the Son begotten, and if they both are one and the same being, then does it not follow that the same being is both begotten and unbegotten, and begot himself?

7. If Christ & the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, be one and the same being, then does it follow that Christ is the God and Father of himself? 2 Cor. xi. 31. Eph. i. 3. 15. Peter i. 3.

8. If the Father and Son be the same individual being, does it not follow that Christ is both the Father and Son of himself; that he sent himself, ascended to himself, and now sitteth at the right hand of himself; that he prayed to himself when he prayed to his Father whom he calls the only true God; John xvii. 5; and submitted his own will to the will of himself, when he prayed to the Father, Luke xxii. 42, "not my will, but thine be done;" and forsook himself, when he prayed to the Father, Matt. xxvii. 46, "my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

9. If Christ be God Almighty, possessed of all power, with what truth could he declare, that of his own self he could do nothing; John v. 19 and 30; and that to set on his right hand and on his left, was not his to give? Matt. xx. 23.

10. Was God Almighty the infinite, eternal, and unchangable Jehovah, once a helpless infant, dependent on the care of one of his own creatures for protection from injury, and for the supplies of animal life; and carried from place to place, at the will of his nurse, in her supporting arms?

11. If Christ be the omniscient God, to whom are perfectly known all times, and all events past, present, and to come, with what truth could he say, "of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the father?" Mark xiii. 32.

12. Can it be true, in any sense whatever, that the very same being could be ignorant of that day, and and at the same time know it; and what language could Christ have used, which would more clearly have expressed both his own ignorance and that of all other beings whatsoever, but the Father concerning that day?

13. If Christ be God, the ever living God, who only hath life and immortality in himself, who was it that expired on the cross, after praying, Luke xxiii. 46, "Father into thy hands I commend my spirit?"

14. Did Christ know that he and his Father were one being, when he said to the Jews, John viii. 17, 18. "It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true; I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me, beareth witness of me?"

15. If that saying of Christ's, John x. 30, "I and my Father are one," prove Christ and his Father to be one being, will not that other saying of his also prove his Father, himself, and his disciples, to be all but one being, when he prays to his Father, John xvii. 11, 21, 22. 23, "that they all may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us; that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me that they may be made perfect in one?"

16. Did Christ know, or mean others to understand, that he was God, when he said to the Jews, John viii. 40, "Ye seek to kill me, A MAN that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God?"

17. Does not the doctrine of the deity or Godship of Christ do away with all the piety and obedience of Jesus to his heavenly Father, and cast unjust reflections on the character of him who came to bear witness of the truth, and in whose mouth was found no guile?

18. Did Peter know that Christ was God, when he called upon the assembled multitude to hear his words, and told them, Acts ii. 22 to 36, that "Jesus of Nazareth was a MAN approved of God, by miracles, &c., which God did by him; and that after the Jews had crucified and slain him, God raised him from the dead, and that the same Jesus whom they had crucified was made by God both Lord and Christ?"

19. If Christ be very and eternal God, is he not the Lord in and of himself, there being in that case no one superior to him to make him Lord? How is he, then, a made Lord, made by God both Lord and Christ, and Lord not of his own glory, but of God the Father?

20. Was he a God, or a crucified man, whom the Jews slew, but whom God exalted to be a Prince (or Leader) and a Savior? Acts v. 30, 31, xiii. 23.

21. If he was a crucified man, does it not follow that Christ the Savior was a man and not a God?

22. Did the apostle Paul understand Christ to be God when he said, 1 Cor. xv. 21, "By man came (or cometh) the resurrection from the dead;" Acts xvii. 31, "God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world by that man whom he hath ordained and raised from the dead;" and 1. Cor. viii. 6, "to us there is but one God the Father;" 1 Tim. ii. 5, "There is one God, and one mediator between God and man, the MAN Christ Jesus;" and again, 1 Cor. xv. 24, 28, "That Christ must deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father, and be SUBJECT to him that put all things under him, that God may be all in (or among) all?"

23. Did the apostle Paul understand Christ to be God, when he says, 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23, "All things are your's, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's, (not God, but God's,) and in 1 Cor. xi. 3, The head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Christ is God?"

24. Did Paul know that Christ was God, or indeed more than man, when he said, Christ was made LIKE his BRETHREN in ALL THINGS, TEMPTED in ALL points as we are, and made PERFECT through SUFFERINGS? Heb. ii. 10, 17, 18. iv. 15.

25. Did the apostle John, (the author of the Revelations,) understand Christ to be God, when in the book of Revelations Christ is described as the lamb which was slain; and when in chap. i. 1. it is said, that God gave the revelation to Jesus Christ; who must have been previously ignorant of it, else how could it have been a revelation to him?

26. Did the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person, actually die on the cross, and in the agonies of expiring nature pray, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do?" Luke xxiii. 34.

27. If the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person,

GOSPEL HERALD.

VOL. III. No. 4.] VOREE, W. T., THURSDAY, APRIL 13, 1848. [WHOLE No. 68.

GOSPEL HERALD,

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED WEEKLY, FOR THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS.

TERMS:

TWO DOLLARS PER ANNUM, PAYABLE, INVARIABLY, IN ADVANCE.

All letters and communications must be directed to JAMES J. STRANG, post paid, or they will not be taken from the post office.

CATHOLIC DISCUSSION.

ANSWER TO Mr. RAFFERTY.—No. 6.

(Continued from Vol. 2, No. 36.)

1. Now will you please tell us whether you really believe in one God or three?

2. If in one, is that the Father, the Son, or the Holy Spirit?—If the Father, or the Holy Spirit, how is Mary mother of God?—Who made the infinite atonement?

3. If Jesus Christ is the "one living and true God," who filled his place when in the womb of the virgin? Who was the "living God" when he died?

4. If the Father and the Christ are but one being and one God, then is it not evident that what is true of the Father must be true of Christ the Son, Father and Son in this case being but two different names for one and the same God?

5. If the Christ the anointed be God, who anointed him? Did he anoint himself, being at once both the anointer and the anointed? Luke iv. 18. Acts x. 38.

6. If the Father be unbegotten, and the Son begotten, and if they both are one and the same being, then does it not follow that the same being is both begotten and unbegotten, and begot himself?

7. If Christ & the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, be one and the same being, then does it follow that Christ is the God and Father of himself? 2 Cor. xi. 31. Eph. i. 3. 15. Peter i. 3.

8. If the Father and Son be the same individual being, does it not follow that Christ is both the Father and Son of himself; that he sent himself, ascended to himself, and now sitteth at the right hand of himself; that he prayed to himself when he prayed to his Father whom he calls the only true God; John xvii. 5; and submitted his own will to the will of himself, when he prayed to the Father, Luke xxii. 42, "not my will, but thine be done;" and forsook himself, when he prayed to the Father, Matt. xxvii. 46, "my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

9. If Christ be God Almighty, possessed of all power, with what truth could he declare, that of his own self he could do nothing; John v. 19 and 30; and that to set on his right hand and on his left, was not his to give? Matt. xx. 23.

10. Was God Almighty the infinite, eternal, and unchangable Jehovah, once a helpless infant, dependent on the care of one of his own creatures for protection from injury, and for the supplies of animal life; and carried from place to place, at the will of his nurse, in her supporting arms?

11. If Christ be the omniscient God, to whom are perfectly known all times, and all events past, present, and to come, with what truth could he say, "of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the father?" Mark xiii, 32.

12. Can it be true, in any sense whatever, that the very same being could be ignorant of that day, and and at the same time know it; and what language could Christ have used, which would more clearly have expressed both his own ignorance and that of all other beings whatsoever, but the Father concerning that day?

13. If Christ be God, the ever living God, who only hath life and immortality in himself, who was it that expired on the cross, after praying, Luke xxiii. 46, "Father into thy hands I commend my spirit?"

14. Did Christ know that he and his Father were one being, when he said to the Jews, John viii. 17, 18. "It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true; I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me, beareth witness of me?"

15. If that saying of Christ's, John x. 30, "I and my Father are one," prove Christ and his Father to be one being, will not that other saying of his also prove his Father, himself, and his disciples, to be all but one being, when he prays to his Father, John xvii. 11, 21, 22. 23, "that they all may be one; as thou Father art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us; that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me that they may be made perfect in one?"

16. Did Christ know, or mean others to understand, that he was God, when he said to the Jews, John viii. 40, "Ye seek to kill me, A MAN that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God?"

17. Does not the doctrine of the deity or Godship of Christ do away with all the piety and obedience of Jesus to his heavenly Father, and cast unjust reflections on the character of him who came to bear witness of the truth, and in whose mouth was found no guile?

18. Did Peter know that Christ was God, when he called upon the assembled multitude to hear his words, and told them, Acts ii. 22 to 36, that "Jesus of Nazareth was a MAN approved of God, by miracles, &c., which God did by him; and that after the Jews had crucified and slain him, God raised him from the dead, and that the same Jesus whom they had crucified was made by God both Lord and Christ?"

19. If Christ be very and eternal God, is he not the Lord in and of himself, there being in that case no one superior to him to make him Lord? How is he, then, a made Lord, made by God both Lord and Christ, and Lord not of his own glory, but of God the Father?

20. Was he a God, or a crucified man, whom the Jews slew, but whom God exalted to be a Prince (or Leader) and a Savior? Acts v. 30, 31, xiii. 23.

21. If he was a crucified man, does it not follow that Christ the Savior was a man and not a God?

22. Did the apostle Paul understand Christ to be God when he said, 1 Cor. xv. 21, "By man came (or cometh) the resurrection from the dead;" Acts xvii. 31, "God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world by that man whom he hath ordained and raised from the dead;" and 1. Cor. viii. 6, "to us there is but one God the Father;" 1 Tim. ii. 5, "There is one God, and one mediator between God and man, the MAN Christ Jesus;" and again, 1 Cor. xv. 24, 28, "That Christ must deliver up the kingdom to God, even the Father, and be SUBJECT to him that put all things under him, that God may be all in (or among) all?"

23. Did the apostle Paul understand Christ to be God, when he says, 1 Cor. iii. 22, 23, "All things are your's, and ye are Christ's, and Christ is God's, (not God, but God's,) and in 1. Cor. xi. 3, The head of every man is Christ, and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of Christ is God?"

24. Did Paul know that Christ was God, or indeed more than man, when he said, Christ was made LIKE his BRETHREN in ALL THINGS, TEMPTED IN ALL points as we are, and made PERFECT through SUFFERINGS? Heb. ii. 10, 17, 18. iv. 15.

25. Did the apostle John, (the author of the Revelations,) understand Christ to be God, when in the book of Revelations Christ is described as the lamb which was slain; and when in chap. i. 1, it is said, that God gave the revelation to Jesus Christ; who must have been previously ignorant of it, else how could it have been a revelation to him?

26. Did the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person, actually die on the cross, and in the agonies of anything, utter pray, "Father, forgive them, they know not what they do?" Luke xxiii. 34.

27. If the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person died, was it a man, or God himself, that died, was laid in the sepulchre, and on the third day was restored to life?

28. Did the Jews in reality crucify God Almighty; was the Creator and upholder of all things put to death by his own creatures; and did the God of the universe actually expire?

29. If the God of the universe had ceased to live, who then could have lived; would not all nature in that instant have wrecked world on world and become a vast chaos?

30. If it was only a man that died, and if the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person, actually died, does not the conclusion necessarily and unavoidably follow, that the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person was only a man?

31. And if Christ was really and truly a man what hinders our believing he was begotten of Joseph the husband of Mary in the true lineage of David?

Well did Paul, looking down through the vista of time to that age when apostles and prophets, called by revelation of God, set apart to that ministry as pastors and leaders of the church, should cease, call you "children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every WIND of DOCTRINE in the wickedness of men, in CRAFTINESS whereby they lie in wait to deceive." How miserable does that mass of absurdities we have been poring over look by the side of the plain system taught by apostles and prophets; that Jesus Christ came according to the prophets, of the lineage of David; that he was a man of like passions with us, Heb. ii. 17, and tempted and tried as we are, Heb. ii. 18, iv. 15, and resisted evil and kept himself unspotted and free from sin, 2 Cor. v. 21; that he is the Son of God by holding the priesthood after the power of an endless life, Heb. vii. 16, 24. i. 5, 9, as were Adam, Enoch, Noah, Elijah, and many others; some of whom wickedly married the daughters of unbelieving men, by means of which they raised up, not giants, but men of might and renown, upon whom they conferred the governing power, which of right pertains to this priesthood, and destroyed the antediluvian world thereby, Gen. vi.; that he is begotten of God, not by any carnal begetting, but by being made an high priest after the order of Melchisedec, that is, made a son by God himself, Heb. i. 9. v. 5, 10. vii. 21, 28; that he is the first begotten of God, as the first raised from the dead to life everlasting, Rev. i. 5, and by the precedence and superiority of his priesthood above all others of the like order, Heb. i. 2. Eph. i. 20, 21, 22. Psa. lxxxviii. (lxxxix. in Prot. version) 28; in accordance with the rule that the first begotten is entitled to a double portion, 2 Chron. alias Para. v. 1, 2, 3. Gen. xlviii. 22; that he is the only begotten, John iii. 16, 18, in that there is no other brought into the same degree of priesthood and jurisdiction, Acts v. 31. John xvii. 2. Heb xi. 17. Rom. ix. 5. 1 Cor. i. 25, 27, 28. Heb. ii. 5 to 10; that he possesses his power by grant from God, Acts x. 38. v. 31. John xvii. 1, 2, 7, 8. Heb. i. 2. 4. v. 4, 5, 6; that he is called an "EVERLASTING FATHER" because by his priesthood he is made the FATHER or SHEPHERD of the true fold FOREVER, Rev. xvii. 14. Isa. ix. 6. Heb. xiii. 20. in that by the oath of God, not man, he has received an everlasting priesthood, Heb. vii. 16, 17, 21; that he is called the mighty God, Isa. ix. 6, because God has GIVEN HIM ALL POWER in heaven and on earth, Matt. xxviii. 18, and placed all things under him, Eph. i. 22. so that in the name of God, by virtue of the priesthood and authority of God, he rules as God.

He HAS BECOME PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERING, Heb. ii. 10. v. 9, obtained the keys of hell and of death, Rev. i. 18, received power from God, John v. 19 to 30. Acts xvii. 31, ascended on high, Acts i. 9, 10, 11, and being perfect as his Father in heaven is perfect, has set down, not in place of God, but at his right hand, Heb. i. 3. Eph. i. 20, as the principal viceroy and highest minister unto him, Heb. i. 4, 9. Eph. i. 20, 21, 22, being one with God, not in person, essence or individuality, nor in any mystical sense, but in the same manner in which the saints are all likewise required to be one with him and each other, John xvii. 11, 21, 22, 23. Gal. iii. 28; that is, one in faith, one in purpose, one in interest and one in possession and enjoyment. And he, as son, being heir of God; that is, as high priest having an inheritance in the power of God's kingdom, seeks to bring us to a like perfection, that we also may be sons, that is, high priests after the power of an endless life, that we may be also heirs of God, joint heirs with him in this inheritance, Rom. viii. 17. James ii. 5, setting down with him on thrones in the kingdom of God, Matt. xix. 28. Luke xxii. 29, 30. 1 Tim. vi. 15. Rev. i. 6. v. 10. xx. 6; retaining to Christ his double portion as first begotten, because whereas we shall be kings, princes and lords, he will be king of kings and Lord of Lords, Rev. xvii. 14, xix. 16. And in this inheritance, as he is so like his father as to be declared the express image of his person, and the brightness of his glory, Heb. i. 3, so we shall be like him, Phil. iii. 21.

Christ constantly spoke of himself personally as "the son of man," Matt. xvi. 13, &c. As the redeemer he is expressly declared to be a "man," 1 Cor. xv. 21. In that greatest treatise on priesthood, the epistle to the Hebrews, it is said that because he loved righteousness (and of course not till he had don so) God exalted him in power above all others, Heb. i. 9; became a son of God by being made an high priest by the oath of God, Heb. v. 5, 6. vii. 21. and it was by the word of the oath, and not by the act of carnal generation, that he became God's Son, Heb. vii. 28.

For what trash have men bartered away the truths of God? All for want of the proper priesthood, which God set therein as a perpetual and unerring standard of truth. JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

(Continued from last week.)

Isaiah vii. 1. "And it came to pass in the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem, to war against it, but could not prevail against it. 2. And it was told the house of David, saying, Syria is confederate with Ephraim. And his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind. 3. Then said the Lord unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, and Shear-jashub thy son, at the end of the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field: 4. And say unto him, Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, neither be fainthearted for the two tails of those smoking firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah. 5. Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying, 6. Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal: 7. Thus saith the Lord God, It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass. 8. For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people. 9. And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established. 10. Moreover the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying, 11. Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God: ask it either in the depth, or in the height above. 12. But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord. 13. And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David; is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? 14. Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. 15. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. 16. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings."

An analysis of the above presents these facts:

1st. That during the reign of Ahaz, king of Judah, Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, (ancient enemies of Judah,) made war against him and approached Jerusalem, for the purpose of subjecting the Jews and making the son of Tabeal their king.

2d. That king Ahaz and his people were greatly alarmed; trembled "as trees of the wood" in the wind.

3d. That in this emergency the Lord sent Isaiah to Ahaz to tell him three things: 1. That Rezin and Pekah should fail in this undertaking. 2. That within 65 years Ephraim (Israel or the ten tribes) should cease to be a people. 3. That unless Judah believed they should not be established; that is they should cease to be a people.

4th. That the prophet offered to king Ahaz whatever sign he should ask that these prophecies on Judah and Ephraim should be performed, in accordance with the law, Deut. xviii. 22, which he declined asking.

5th. That on his declining to ask a sign the prophet offered him this sign, to wit: that a VIRGIN should conceive and bear a SON who should eat butter and honey, and before that son should distinguish between this good food and filth the kings who had invaded Judah should WITHDRAW THEIR ARMIES; and AS SURELY AS THIS WAS ACCOMPLISHED, SO SURELY SHOULD THAT PROPHECY BE FULFILLED.

The only child spoken of was the son to be born in Jerusalem during the war of Reizin and Pekah against Ahaz, and the only died, was it a man, or God himself, that died, was laid in the sepulchre, and on the third day was restored to life?

28. Did the Jews in reality crucify God Almighty; was the Creator and upholder of all things put to death by his own creatures; and did the God of the universe actually expire?

29. If the God of the universe had ceased to live, who then could have lived; would not all nature in that instant have wrecked world on world and become a vast chaos?

30. If it was only a man that died, and if the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person, actually died, does not the conclusion necessarily and unavoidably follow, that the real and very Christ himself, and in his proper person was only a man?

31. And if Christ was really and truly a man what hinders our believing he was begotten of Joseph, the husband of Mary in the true lineage of David?

Well did Paul, looking down through the vista of time to that age when apostles and prophets, called by revelation of God, set apart to that ministry as pastors and leaders of the church, should cease, call you "children tossed to and fro, and carried about with every WIND of DOCTRINE in the wickedness of men, in CRAFTINESS whereby they lie in wait to deceive." How miserable does that mass of absurdities we have been poring over look by the side of the plain system taught by apostles and prophets; that Jesus Christ came according to the prophets, of the lineage of David; that he was a man of like passions with us, Heb. ii. 17, and tempted and tried as we are, Heb. ii. 18, iv. 15, and resisted evil and kept himself unspotted and free from sin, 2 Cor. v. 21; that he is the Son of God by holding the priesthood after the power of an endless life, Heb. vii. 16, 24. i. 5, 9, as were Adam, Enoch, Noah, Elijah, and many others; some of whom wickedly married the daughters of unbelieving men, by means of which they raised up, not giants, but men of might and renown, upon whom they conferred the governing power, which of right pertains to this priesthood, and destroyed the antediluvian world thereby, Gen. vi.; that he is begotten of God, not by any carnal begetting, but by being made an high priest after the order of Melchisedec, that is, made a son by God himself, Heb. i. 9. v. 5, 10. vii. 21, 28; that he is the first begotten of God, as the first raised from the dead to life everlasting, Rev. i. 5, and by the precedence and superiority of his priesthood above all others of the like order, Heb. i. 2. Eph. i. 20, 21, 22. Psa. lxxxviii. (lxxxix, in Prot. version) 28; in accordance with the rule that the first begotten is entitled to a double portion, 2 Chron. alias Para. v. 1, 2, 3. Gen. xlviii. 22; that he is the only begotten, John iii. 16, 18, in that there is no other brought into the same degree of priesthood and jurisdiction, Acts v. 31. John xvii. 2. Heb. xi. 17. Rom. ix. 5, 1 Cor. i. 25, 27, 28. Heb. ii. 5 to 10; that he possesses his power by grant from God, Acts x. 38. v. 31. John xvii. 1, 2, 7, 8. Heb. i. 2. 4. v. 4, 5, 6; that he is called an "EVERLASTING FATHER" because by his priesthood he is made the FATHER or SHEPHERD of the true fold FOREVER, Rev. xvii. 14. Isa. ix. 6. Heb. xiii. 20, in that by the oath of God, not man, he has received an everlasting priesthood, Heb. vii. 16, 17, 21; that he is called the mighty God, Isa. ix. 6, because God has GIVEN HIM ALL POWER in heaven and on earth, Matt. xxviii. 18, and placed all things under him, Eph. i. 22, so that in the name of God, by virtue of the priesthood and authority of God, he rules as God.

He has BECOME PERFECT THROUGH SUFFERING, Heb. ii. 10. v. 9, obtained the keys of hell and of death, Rev. i. 18, received power from God, John v. 19 to 30. Acts xvii. 31, ascended on high, Acts i. 9, 10, 11, and being perfect as his Father in heaven is perfect, has set down, not in place of God, but at his right hand, Heb. i. 3. Eph. i. 20, as the principal viceroy and highest minister unto him, Heb. i. 4, 9. Eph. i. 20, 21, 22, being one with God, not in person, essence or individuality, nor in any mysterious sense, but in the same manner in which the saints are all likewise required to be one with him and each other, John xvii. 11, 21, 22, 23. Gal. iii. 28; that is, one in faith, one in purpose, one in interest and one in possession and enjoyment. And he, as son, being heir of God; that is, as high priest having an inheritance in the power of God's kingdom, seeks to bring us to a like perfection, that we also may be sons, that is, high priests after the power of an endless life, that we may be also heirs of God, joint heirs with him in this inheritance, Rom. viii. 17. James ii. 5, setting down with him on thrones in the kingdom of God, Matt. xix. 28. Luke xxii. 29, 30. 1 Tim. vi. 15. Rev. i. 6. v. 10. xx. 6; retaining to Christ his double portion as first begotten, because whereas we shall be kings, princes and lords, he will be king of kings and Lord of Lords, Rev. xvii. 14. xix. 16. And in this inheritance, as he is so like his father as to be declared the express image of his person, and the brightness of his glory, Heb. i. 3, so we shall be like him, Phil. iii. 21.

Christ constantly spoke of himself personally as "the son of man," Matt. xvi. 13, &c. As the redeemer he is expressly declared to be a "man," 1 Cor. xv. 21. In that greatest treatise on priesthood, the epistle to the Hebrews, it is said that because he loved righteousness (and of course not till he had don so) God exalted him in power above all others, Heb. i. 9; became a son of God by being made an high priest by the oath of God, Heb. v. 5, 6. vii. 21, and it was by the word of the oath, and not by the act of carnal generation, that he became God's Son, Heb. vii. 28.

For what trash have men bartered away the truths of God? All for want of the proper priesthood, which God set therein as a perpetual and unerring standard of truth. JAMES J. STRANG.

(To be continued.)

LINEAGE OF CHRIST.

(Continued from last week.)

Isaiah vii. 1. "And it came to pass in the days of Ahaz the son of Jotham, the son of Uzziah, king of Judah, that Rezin the king of Syria, and Pekah the son of Remaliah, king of Israel, went up toward Jerusalem, to war against it, but could not prevail against it. 2. And it was told the house of David, saying, Syria is confederate with Ephraim. And his heart was moved, and the heart of his people, as the trees of the wood are moved with the wind. 3. Then said the Lord unto Isaiah, Go forth now to meet Ahaz, thou, and Shear-jashub thy son, at the end of the conduit of the upper pool in the highway of the fuller's field: 4. And say unto him, Take heed, and be quiet; fear not, neither be fainthearted for the two tails of those smoking firebrands, for the fierce anger of Rezin with Syria, and of the son of Remaliah. 5. Because Syria, Ephraim, and the son of Remaliah, have taken evil counsel against thee, saying, 6. Let us go up against Judah, and vex it, and let us make a breach therein for us, and set a king in the midst of it, even the son of Tabeal: 7. Thus saith the Lord God, It shall not stand, neither shall it come to pass. 8. For the head of Syria is Damascus, and the head of Damascus is Rezin; and within threescore and five years shall Ephraim be broken, that it be not a people. 9. And the head of Ephraim is Samaria, and the head of Samaria is Remaliah's son. If ye will not believe, surely ye shall not be established. 10. Moreover the Lord spake again unto Ahaz, saying, 11. Ask thee a sign of the Lord thy God: ask it either in the depth, or in the height above. 12. But Ahaz said, I will not ask, neither will I tempt the Lord. 13. And he said, Hear ye now, O house of David; is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also? 14. Therefore the Lord himself shall give you a sign: Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel. 15. Butter and honey shall he eat, that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good. 16. For before the child shall know to refuse the evil, and choose the good, the land that thou abhorrest shall be forsaken of both her kings."

An analysis of the above presents these facts:

1st. That during the reign of Ahaz, king of Judah, Rezin, king of Syria, and Pekah, king of Israel, (ancient enemies of Judah,) made war against him and approached Jerusalem, for the purpose of subjecting the Jews and making the son of Tabeal their king.

2d. That king Ahaz and his people were greatly alarmed; trembled "as trees of the wood" in the wind.

3d. That in this emergency the Lord sent Isaiah to Ahaz to tell him three things: 1. That Rezin and Pekah should fail in this undertaking. 2. That within 65 years Ephraim (Israel or the ten tribes) should cease to be a people. 3. That unless Judah believed they should not be established; that is they should cease to be a people.

4th. That the prophet offered to king Ahaz whatever sign he should ask that these prophecies on Judah and Ephraim should be performed, in accordance with the law, Deut. xviii. 22, which he declined asking.

5th. That on his declining to ask a sign the prophet offered him this sign, to wit: that a VIRGIN should conceive and bear a SON who should eat butter and honey, and before that son should distinguish between this good food and filth the kings who had invaded Judah, should WITHDRAW THEIR ARMIES; and AS SURELY AS THIS WAS ACCOMPLISHED, SO SURELY SHOULD THAT PROPHECY BE FULFILLED.

The only child spoken of was the son to be born in Jerusalem during the war of Rezin and Pekah against Ahaz, and the only virgin was the mother of that son. The sequel of the matter was, that Ahaz would not believe God's word, and offered sacrifices to the false Gods of Samaria and Damascus to appease them and plundered the temple and king's palace of all their ornaments to purchase assistance of the kings of Assyria, and made burnt offerings of his own sons and was overthrown in fight, having 120,000 men of war slain in one day and 200,000 women and children made prisoners. Nevertheless the Lord made good his sign by sending the prophet Oded to deliver them from bondage. The son of Tabeal was not made king; yet Judah were not established, and the invading armies were withdrawn, and before the time elapsed, 2 Chron. xxviii., and in due time, Ephraim was broken that she ceased to be a people, and Judah continued not, according to the sign. Wherefore, as reasonable men, we must conclude that this prophecy had no reference whatever to Christ or to his mother, and by consequence nothing in the begetting or birth of Christ could have happened "that it might be fulfilled." It should not be forgotten that Christ did not eat butter and honey, but was brought up in mere poverty and want. And there was no such fact in his history as the withdrawal of two kings from the land of Judah. Nothing to connect him with this sign or prophecy.

The result then of this examination is, that the paragraph attributed to Matthew is irreconcilable with the rest of Matthew's writings, the whole New Testament and the prophecies, and contains an absolute falsehood, in applying to Christ a prophecy which has no allusion to him whatever. A decent respect to the character of Matthew, and the authority of his works as a standard of religious truth, requires us not to accuse him of writing it. In our opinion these facts alone would justify striking it out, notwithstanding we have no particular account of the exact time when or person by whom it was interpolated. But in defect of that we will proceed to show circumstantially the time, instruments and object of the interpolation.

It should be borne in mind that until quite lately copies of the scriptures were very rare, being found only in the hands of a few ecclesiastics. The canon of scripture was not established by any authority universally acknowledged till about the middle of the sixth century; previous to which time different councils and bishops received and disallowed various books as to them seemed fit, rejecting various books now received, and receiving various books now rejected. No manuscript of the New Testament has come down to us from earlier than the sixth century. Various texts are now found in the scriptures not contained in any of these manuscripts; and various texts which, it appears by the quotations of the christian fathers, were once in the Greek copies are found neither in the present scriptures nor in the ancient manuscripts. Finally, there are many texts now in the scriptures which are not found in any of the known ancient manuscripts, nor quoted by any of the ancient fathers, and consequently are at best founded on MERE CONJECTURE. (Michaelis, Vol. ii. p. 160, 426.)

St. Jerome complained in his time (see preface to his gospel) that no one copy RESEMBLED ANOTHER. (Michaelis, Vol. ii. p. 119.)—At the time of editing the last copies of the Greek text, there were in the manuscript copies of the New Testrment upwards of ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY THOUSAND various readings. Most of these are doubtless merely verbal, but it has been alledged that three thousand, or one in forty-three, change the sense. Emendations of the text were made by Origen more than a century earlier than the oldest copies now in existence, which were taken for a part of the New Testament, though he acknowledged that they were supported by no authority whatever.

The learned Faustus, the Manichean Bishop, in replying to the arguments of St. Augustine, says:—

"Multa enim a majoribus vestris, eloquis Domini nostri inserta verba sunt; quæ nomine signata ipsius cum ejus fide non congruant, præsertim, quia, ut jam sæpe probatum a nobis est, nec ab ipso hæc sunt, nec ab ejus apostolis scripta, sed multo post, eorum, assumptionem, a nescio quibus, et ipsis inter se non, concordantibus SEMI-Judæis, per fabulas opinionesque compertæ sunt; qui tamen omnia eadem in apocryphis Domini conferentes nomina, vel eorum qui secuti apostolos viderentur, errores ac mendacia sua SECUNDUM eos se scripsisse mentiti sunt." Faust, lib. 33, c. 3.

"For many things have been inserted by your ancestors in the speeches of our Lord, which, though put forth under his name, agree not with his faith; especially since, as already it has been often proved by us, that these things were not written by Christ, nor by his apostles, but a long while after their assumption, by I know not what sort of HALF-Jews, not even agreeing with themselves, who made up their tale out of reports and opinions merely, and yet, fathering the whole upon the names of the apostles of our Lord, or on those who were supposed to have followed the apostles; they mendaciously pretended that they had written their lies and conceits ACCORDING to them."

And it is worthy of note that Augustine never attempted to controvert this charge, though the controversies between the church and the Manicheans were as fierce as they ever have been between the Catholics and Protestants.

In addition to all this the gospels have once been censured and altered by order of a Roman Emperor, as Victor, Bishop of Tunis, testifies:—

"Messala V. C. consul, Constantinopoli, jubente Anastasio Imperatore, sancta evangelia, tanquam ab idiotis evangelistis composita, reprehenduntur et emendantur." Victor, Tununensis, Caves Historia Literaria. Vol. i. p. 415.

"The illustrious Messala being Consul, by the command of the Emperor Anastacius, the holy gospels as having been written by idiot evangelists, are censured and corrected." Victor, Bishop of Tunis in Africa.

These facts certainly establish that there is no reliable accuracy in the isolated statements in the New Testament, as it has come down to us; that there is no such thing as a standard copy on earth, and no means of obtaining one short of a direct revelation from God; and that no doctrine can be proved by any single passage of scripture, unless it is also shown to be an essential part of the great body of christian doctrine. If it should be found that any particular doctrine had grown up in the church in a certain age, and that doctrine founded on but one or two texts of scripture, these facts alone would raise a serious presumption that the doctrine originated first, and the texts in its favor were manufactured afterwards.

Now it will be perceived that the doctrine that Christ had no human father is not contained in the apostles' creed, but is strongly stated in that of St. Athanasius; that the New Testament, except this one passage, is barren on the sucject; but the writings of the Catholic Fathers following the establishment of the Christian church by the Roman empire are filled with it. The just conclusion is that this doctrine got footing about the time christianity became a part of the imperial establishment. We want only a motive and means for its adoption at that time, and the array of circumstantial evidence will be stronger by far than any single historic testimony can be.

Constantine, Emperor of Rome, having, in addition to a vast amount of other crimes, murdered his father-in-law Maximian in 310, his brother-in-law Bassianus in 314, his nephew Licinianus, a boy of only 13, in 319, and his wife Fausta in 320, seems to have been struck with horror at the remembrance of such matchless wickedness; and applied to Sopater, a HEATHEN PRIEST and philosopher, to absolve him from his sins. Being told that "there was no kind of purgation sufficient to expiate such enormities," he applied to the christian bishops, who promised him that, "by repentance and baptism, they could cleanse him of all sin." He was accordingly baptized; but whether he repented of his murders or not the reader may judge for himself when we add that, as soon as he was converted, he murdered Sopater, who had refused him absolution, Licinius his brother-in-law in 325, and Crispius his own son in 326, besides some hundred thousand of his subjects; who, perhaps, should not be counted as murdered, but only executed, as they died for the crimes, some of being pagans, and some of being different christians from what he was, such as the Arians.

Every effort that force or fraud could put in use was used to establish the new and abolish the old religions. Besides burning books and writings of the old and dissenting faiths and forging books of his own religion, beheading teachers and followers of the old and setting up those of the new, he resorted universally to that more efficacious mode of converting the heathen by changing their temples into chistian churches, and confiscating the estates of heathen priests to bestow them on christian pastors and bishops.—One thing only was wanting more than this to make the new religion acceptable, and that was a congruity to heathenism. Yes, with all these appliances only one thing more was necessary to convert the Roman empire to christianity, and that one thing was the conversion of christianity to heathenism. Force and fraud can beat no religion into the heart, but they may induce its observance.

The leading trait of the religion of the Roman empire, perhaps, was demi-Godism or the doctrine that Gods begot children on beau-virgin was the mother of that son. The sequel of the matter was, that Ahaz would not believe God's word, and offered sacrifices to the false Gods of Samaria and Damascus to appease them and plundered the temple and king's palace of all their ornaments to purchase assistance of the kings of Assyria, and made burnt offerings of his own sons and was overthrown in fight, having 120,000 men of war slain in one day and 200,000 women and children made prisoners. Nevertheless the Lord made good his sign by sending the prophet Oded to deliver them from bondage. The son of Tabeal was not made king; yet Judah were not established, and the invading armies were withdrawn, and before the time elapsed, 2 Chron. xxviii., and in due time, Ephraim was broken that she ceased to be a people, and Judah continued not, according to the sign. Wherefore, as reasonable men, we must conclude that this prophecy had no reference whatever to Christ or to his mother, and by consequence nothing in the begetting or birth of Christ could have happened "that it might be fulfilled." It should not be forgotten that Christ did not eat butter and honey, but was brought up in mere poverty and want. And there was no such fact in his history as the withdrawal of two kings from the land of Judah. Nothing to connect him with this sign or prophecy.

The result then of this examination is, that the paragraph attributed to Matthew is irreconcilable with the rest of Matthew's writings, the whole New Testament and the prophecies, and contains an absolute falsehood, in applying to Christ a prophecy which has no allusion to him whatever. A decent respect to the character of Matthew, and the authority of his works as a standard of religious truth, requires us not to accuse him of writing it. In our opinion these facts alone would justify striking it out, notwithstanding we have no particular account of the exact time when or person by whom it was interpolated. But in defect of that we will proceed to show circumstantially the time, instruments and object of the interpolation.

It should be borne in mind that until quite lately copies of the scriptures were very rare, being found only in the hands of a few ecclesiastics. The canon of scripture was not established by any authority universally acknowledged till about the middle of the sixth century; previous to which time different councils and bishops received and disallowed various books as to them seemed fit, rejecting various books now received, and receiving various books now rejected. No manuscript of the New Testament has come down to us from earlier than the sixth century. Various texts are now found in the scriptures not contained in any of these manuscripts; and various texts which, it appears by the quotations of the christian fathers, were once in the Greek copies are found neither in the present scriptures nor in the ancient manuscripts. Finally, there are many texts now in the scriptures which are not found in any of the known ancient manuscripts, nor quoted by any of the ancient fathers, and consequently are at best founded on MERE CONJECTURE. (Michaelis, Vol. ii. p. 160, 426.)

St. Jerome complained in his time (see preface to his gospel) that no one copy RESEMBLED ANOTHER. (Michaelis, Vol. ii. p. 119.)—At the time of editing the last copies of the Greek text, there were in the manuscript copies of the New Testment upwards of ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY THOUSAND various readings. Most of these are doubtless merely verbal, but it has been alledged that three thousand, or one in forty-three, change the sense. Emendations of the text were made by Origen more than a century earlier than the oldest copies now in existence, which were taken for a part of the New Testament, though he acknowledged that they were supported by no authority whatever.

The learned Faustus, the Manichean Bishop, in replying to the arguments of St. Augustine, says:—

"Multa enim a majoribus ves- "For many things have been tris, eloquis Domini nostri inser- inserted by your ancestors in the ta verba sunt; quæ nomine sig- speeches of our Lord, which, nata ipsius cum ejus fide non con- though put forth under his name, struant, præsertim, quia, ut jam agree not with his faith; especsæpe probatum a nobis est, nec ially since, as already it has been ab ipso hæc sunt, nec ab ejus often proved by us, that these apostolis scripta, sed multo post, things were not written by Christ, eorum, assumptionem, a nescio nor by his apostles, but a long quibus, et ipsis inter se non, con- while after their assumption, by cordantibus SEMI-JUDÆIS, per fa- I know not what sort of HALF-mas opinionesque comperta sunt; Jews, not even agreeing with si tamen omnia eadem in apos- themselves, who made up their torum Domini conferentes nom- tale out of reports and opinions ina, vel eorum qui secuti aposto- merely, and yet, fathering the los viderentur, errores ac menda- whole upon the names of the cia sua SECUNDUM eos se scrip- apostles of our Lord, or on those sisse mentiti sunt." Faust, lib. who were supposed to have fol-33, c. 3. lowed the apostles; they mendaciously pretended that they had written their lies and conceits ACCORDING to them."

And it is worthy of note that Augustine never attempted to controvert this charge, though the controversies between the church and the Manicheans were as fierce as they ever have been between the Catholics and Protestants.

In addition to all this the gospels have once been censured and altered by order of a Roman Emperor, as Victor, Bishop of Tunis, testifies:—

"Messala V. C. consul, Con- "The illustrious Messala bestantinopoli, jubente Anastasio ing Consul, by the command of Imperatore, sancta evangelia, tan- the Emperor Anastacius, the ho-quam ab idiotis evangelistis com- ly gospels as having been writ-posita, reprehenduntur et emen- ten by idiot evangelists, are cen-dantur." Victor, Tununensis, sured and corrected." Victor, Caves Historia Literaria. Vol. i. Bishop of Tunis in Africa.
p. 415.

